The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 37, the nays are 44. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having not voted in the affirmative, the motion is not agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it is clear to me that this is an idea whose time has not come. I regret that, but I face reality when I find it. I will make no further effort to pursue this matter in this session.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, there are other matters that I would like to take up. There is a conference report here on the Treasury-Post Office appropriations bill and perhaps a Labor-HHS appropriations bill. Mr. President, Treasury-Post Office is a privileged matter and I will consult with those who are concerned about this. But, for the moment, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Will the Senator withhold on that request?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, could the Senator tell me if he has plans to take up the Outer Continental Shelf revenue conference report.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I cannot tell the Senator that yet. What I intend to do now is to try to do as much of the appropriations process as we can. That was the announcement at the beginning of this segment of the Senate after the two conventions, that we would devote this time to appropriation bills.

We have a great deal to do in that respect. I will try to do what I can to accommodate a great number of things. But for the moment, as far as I can see, we have the Treasury-Postal conference report, Labor-HHS, Interior, perhaps MilCon, all appropriation matters, and, of course, the continuing resolution when we receive it.

In addition to that, Mr. President, there will be a cloture vote on Monday on the highway bill and there are perhaps other matters that will be addressed as well. But right now, I have to reserve on that question. I will try to have an answer for the Senator from Louisiana a little later.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I wonder if I might have the attention of my colleagues. As the majority leader has indicated, one of the matters before us is the possibility of considering the Labor, Health, and Human Services appropriations bill. The report and the bill have been made available from the committee. Aside from the final passage vote and a vote on a matter related to abortion, I know of no other controversy surrounding this bill.

I would like to get a feel as to whether or not we can proceed on this appropriations bill. Let me say one thing: If we do not proceed, and if this bill is folded into the continuing resolution, believe me, given what the House has presented in the continuing resolution, many very worthy and well proven programs are going to be hurt in the financial sense.

So, I again repeat my question about a unanimous-consent request; if such a request were propounded—one that would provide that we wrap this bill up in a couple of hours—is there a possibility it would be agreed to? Or do my colleagues believe that such a request would be objected to? If so, it makes little sense to proceed with the matter.

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, if the Senator would yield for a question?

Mr. WEICKER. I yield.

Mr. DENTON. As the Senator knows, we are trying to get some kind of a vote count. About six Senators walked up to me in the last minute, and said, "Have a nice week." They are shoving off.

I think we agree that we ought to have this vote at a time at which the will of the Senate can be properly represented in view of the issue.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I gather from what the Senator is saying that there are several of our colleagues who would not want to see a vote relating to abortion take place this afternoon.

Mr. DENTON. I am making the point that there are more than several Senators who are not going to be here. There are a great many who are not going to be here—a substantial number, and I am not able to obtain a vote count. Were the Senate to hear the motion which will be brought before the body, I am confident that it would not pass. Therefore, I would rather wait until we have a good portion of our Members present.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Alabama a question? Am I to take from what the Senator said that he will object to bringing up Labor-HHS appropriations?

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I was trying to establish a position regarding this. I believe I should say to my friend from New Jersey that I will not be the problem with respect to bringing up the bill. But were it not for some others who are going to object, I would at least not agree to a time limit for debate.

Mr. BRADLEY. So the Senator will not object to bringing it up. But the Senator will not provide any kind of a time agreement. Is that correct?

Mr. DENTON. At least that is true. Yes, sir. I think it is mandatory that we have a good representation of our body here for the particular vote that would be coming up. I think it is only fair.

Mr. BRADLEY. Would the Senator expect then to be willing to allow the bill to come up this afternoon?

Mr. DENTON. Perhaps, but as long as the conditions appear favorable, I would let it come up. I am having trouble getting a count.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, may I ask the distinguished Senator when that count might be made? Some of us would like to be here when this is acted upon. But if the Senator is not going to let it come up, there are other important issues that the Senate, I am sure, can discuss.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

Mr. DENTON. I hope others could be discussed. I am doing my best to find out how many of our colleagues are going to be absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, what I am about to say is certainly not criticism of either Senator engaged in the colloquy. But, as leader, let me point out that we are not always faced with the requirement for unanimous consent. I really from time to time feel that I must remind the Senate we do a great deal by unanimous consent. But there are ways to get bills up that do not involve unanimous consent. So the Senate should not assume, as I sometimes read in the newspaper, that we only can act by unanimous consent. That is not so.

Indeed, we act many times when we do not have unanimous consent. It is perhaps necessary to do that now, and perhaps not. But at the moment, it is clear that I cannot proceed without moving to it. But it is not equally clear that I will not move.

So, Mr. President, for the moment I suggest the absence of a quorum. I will not have it called off for a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DENTON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, just so everyone is fully on board and understands what we are about to do, I wish to explain the procedure in advance before I make certain requests.

To begin with, we are going to the Labor-HHS appropriations bill this afternoon. In order to do that it will first be necessary to adopt a budget waiver which has been reported.

Mr. President, if the budget waiver is adopted, then I will ask consent to lay before the Senate the Labor-HHS appropriations bill. I hope that consent will be given. I believe it will be.

It is understood, however, that while we will do all we can do on the Labor-HHS appropriations bill this afternoon, the last item of business on Labor-HHS today will be the offering but no action taken on a committee amendment dealing with abortion.

At this point it would be the intention of the leadership to go off this bill today and perhaps take up other routine matters that no one needs to worry about. There is no hidden clinker in that. And then to go out until Monday.

Mr. President, on Monday the Senate will vote on cloture on the motion to proceed to the consideration of the highway bill.

I hope—I cannot say I expect—but I hope that we will get cloture on the motion to proceed and indeed adopt the motion to proceed and take up the highway bill and finish it on Monday.

But in any event, it is not the intention of the leadership to ask the Senate to go back to the Labor-HHS bill until Tuesday.

Mr. President, that is the arrangement that has been discussed all around. I have discussed the procedural part of this with the minority leader, that is, the budget waiver, consent to go to this bill, the schedule for this afternoon, and the resumption of the matter on Tuesday. He has indicated through staff that he has no objection to that procedure.

BUDGET ACT WAIVER

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, in accordance with section 904 of the Budget Act I move to waive section 303 of that act with respect to H.R. 6028 and any amendment thereto.

Mr. President, may I say that the reason I do that is that we do not have a first budget resolution at this time and in order to bring the pending appropriation bill before the Senate such a motion is necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Tennessee.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

LABOR-HHS-EDUCATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, 1985

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Chair lay before the Senate H.R. 6028.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 6028) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations ordered printed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank all Senators for their cooperation, and I yield the floor.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments, with the exception of the committee amendment beginning on page 38, line 19, be agreed to en bloc, and that the bill as thus amended be regarded for purpose of further amendment as original text, providing no points of order shall be waived by reason of agreement to this request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments agreed to are as follows:

H.R. 6028

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes, namely:

OCCUPATIONAL SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, [$219,652,000] $220,152,000, including not to exceed $53,091,000, which shall be the maximum amount available for grants to States under section 23(g) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which grants shall be no less than fifty percent of the costs of State occupational safety and health programs required to be incurred under plans approved by the Secretary under section 18 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended for the assessment of civil penalties issued for first instance violations of any standard, rule, or regulation promulgated under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (other than serious, willful, or repeated violations under section 17 of the Act) resulting from the inspection of any establishment or workplace subject to the Act, unless such establishment or workplace is cited, on the basis of such inspection, for ten or more violations: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to prescribe, issue, administer, or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, or order under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 which is applicable to any person who is engaged in a farming operation which does not maintain a temporary labor camp and employs ten or fewer employees: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to prescribe, issue, administer, or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, order or administrative action under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 affecting any work activity by reason of recreational hunting, shooting, or fishing: Provided further, That no funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to administer or enforce any standard, rule, regulation, or order under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 with respect to any employer of ten or fewer employees who is included within a category having an occupational injury lost work day case rate, at the most precise Standard Industrial Classification Code for which such data are published, less than the national average rate as such rates are most recently published by the Secretary, acting through the Bureau of Labor Statistics, in accordance with section 24 of that Act (29 U.S.C. 673), except—

(1) to provide, as authorized by such Act, consultation, technical assistance, educational and training services, and to conduct surveys and studies;

(2) to conduct an inspection or investigation in response to an employee complaint, to issue a citation for violations found during such inspection, and to assess a penalty for violations which are not corrected within a reasonable abatement period and for any willful violations found;

(3) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to imminent dangers;

(4) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to health hazards;

(5) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to a report of an employment accident which is fatal to one or more employees or which results in hospitalization of five or more employees, and to take any action pursuant to such investigation authorized by such Act; and

(6) to take any action authorized by such Act with respect to complaints of discrimination against employees for exercising rights under such Act: Provided further, That the foregoing proviso shall not apply to any person who is engaged in a farming operation which does not maintain a temporary labor camp and employs ten or fewer employees: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended for the proposal or assessment of any civil penalties for the violation or alleged violation by an employer of ten or fewer employees of any standard, rule, regulation, or order promulgated under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 (other than serious, willful or repeated violations and violations which pose imminent danger under section 13 of the Act) if, prior to the inspection which gives rise to the alleged violation, the employer cited has (1) voluntarily requested consultation under a program operated pursuant to section 7(c)(1) or section 18 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 or from a private consultative source approved by the Administration and (2) had the consultant examine the condition cited and (3) made or is in the process of making a reasonable good faith effort to eliminate the hazard created by the condition cited as such, which was identified by the aforementioned consultant, unless changing circumstances or workplace conditions render inapplicable the advice obtained from such consultants: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph may be obligated or expended for any State plan monitoring visit by the Secretary of Labor under section 18 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, of any factory, plant, establishment, construction site, or other area, workplace or environment where such a workplace or environment has been inspected by an employee of a State acting pursuant to section 18 of such Act within the six months preceding such inspection: Provided further, That this limitation does not prohibit the Secretary of Labor from conducting such monitoring visit at the time and place of an inspection by an employee of a State acting pursuant to section 18 of such Act, or in order to investigate a complaint about State program administration including a failure to respond to a worker complaint regarding a violation of such Act, or in order to investigate a discrimination complaint under section 11(c) of such Act, or as part of a special study monitoring program, or to investigate a fatality or catastrophe: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph may be obligated or expended for the inspection, investigation, or enforcement of any activity occurring on the Outer Continental Shelf which exceeds the authority granted to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration by any provision of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, or the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1978.

MINE SAFETY AND HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Mine Safety and Health Administration, $150,550,000, including purchase and bestowal of certificates and trophies in connection with mine rescue and first-aid work, and the purchase of not to exceed forty-five passenger motor vehicles for replacement only; the Secretary is authorized to accept lands, buildings, equipment, and other contributions from public and private sources and to prosecute projects in cooperation with other agencies, Federal, State, or private; the Mine Safety and Health Administration is authorized to promote health and safety education and training in the mining community through cooperative programs with States, industry, and safety associations; and any funds available to the Department may be used, with the approval of the Secretary, to provide for the costs of mine rescue and survival operations in the event of major disaster: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to carry out section 115 of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 or to carry out that portion of section 104(g)(1) of such Act relating to the enforcement of any training requirements, with respect to shell dredging, or with respect to any sand, gravel, surface stone, surface clay, colloidal phosphate, or surface limestone mine.

BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, including advances or reimbursements to State, Federal, and local agencies and their employees for services rendered, [$153,400,000] $148,010,000, of which $1,150,000 shall be for expenses of enhancing service sector activities, and $9,625,000 shall be for expenses of revising the Consumer [Price Index and shall remain available until September 30, 1988, and not to exceed an additional amount of $20,420,000 may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund] Price Index, together with not to exceed $20,420,000 which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund: Provided, That $4,823,000 shall remain available until September 30, 1986.

DEPARTMENTAL MANAGEMENT

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses for Departmental Management, including $2,129,000 for the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, $100,730,000, together with not to exceed $240,000 which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR VETERANS EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

Not to exceed $122,172,000 may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund to carry out the provisions of 38 U.S.C. 2001-08 and 2021-26.

SPECIAL FOREIGN CURRENCY PROGRAM

For payments in foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States, for necessary expenses of the Department of Labor, as authorized by law, $67,000, to remain available until expended. This appropriation shall be available in addition to other appropriations to such agency for payments in foreign currencies.

OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

For salaries and expenses of the Office of the Inspector General in carrying out the provisions of the Inspector General Act of 1978, [$39,465,000] $39,181,000 together with not to exceed $4,300,000 which may be expended from the Employment Security Administration account in the Unemployment Trust Fund.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. Appropriations in this Act available for salaries and expenses shall be available for supplies, services, and rental of conference space within the District of Columbia, as the Secretary of Labor shall deem necessary for settlement of labor-management disputes.

[SEC. 102. None of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to grant variances, interim orders or letters of clarification to employers which will allow exposure of workers to chemicals or other workplace hazards in excess of existing Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards for the purpose of conducting experiments on worker health or safety.]

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. None of the funds appropriated by the title for grants-in-aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the cost of operation of said agencies, including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any State which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office, and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

SEC. 302. Funds appropriated in this Act to the American Printing House for the Blind, Howard University, the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, and Gallaudet College shall be subject to audit by the Secretary of Education.

[SEC. 303. None of the funds provided herein shall be used to pay any recipient of a grant for the conduct of research an amount equal to as much as the entire cost of such research.]

[SEC. 304.] Sec. 303. No part of the funds contained in this title may be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to force on account of race, creed or color the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force the transfer or assignment of any student attending any elementary or secondary school so desegregated to or from a particular school over the protest of his or her parents or parent.

[SEC. 305.] Sec. 304. (a) No part of the funds contained in this title shall be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to require the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force on account of race, creed or color the transfer of students to or from a particular school so desegregated as a condition precedent to obtaining Federal funds otherwise available to any State, school district or school.

(b) No funds appropriated in this Act may be used for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to overcome racial imbalance in any school or school system, or for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to carry out a plan of racial desegregation of any school or school system.

[SEC. 306.] Sec. 305. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home, except for a student requiring special education, to the school offering such special education, in order to comply with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. For the purpose of this section an indirect requirement of transportation of students includes the transportation of students to carry out a plan involving the reorganization of the grade structure of schools, the pairing of schools, or the clustering of schools, or any combination of grade restructuring, pairing or clustering. The prohibition described in this section does not include the establishment of magnet schools.

[SEC. 307. No funds appropriated under this Act may be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.

[(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (8);

[(2) by redesignating clause (9) as clause (10); and

[(3) by inserting after clause (8) the following:

["(9) for the prepayment in full of a loan under this title, provide a discount in an amount determined by the Secretary to be in the best financial interests of the Government, taking into account the yield on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the remaining term of such loan, if (A) the prepayment is made from non-Federal sources, (B) the Secretary has received satisfactory assurances that the housing or other educational facilities financed with the loan will continue to be used for purposes related to the educational institution for the original term of the loan, (C) the prepayment is made prior to October 1, 1985; and".]

SEC. 306. Section 402(c) of the Housing Act of 1950 is amended by striking out in clause (9) "October 1, 1984" and inserting in its place "October 1, 1985".

[SEC. 309. No funds appropriated in any Act to the Department of Education for fiscal years 1984 and 1985 shall be withheld from distribution to grantees because of the provisions of the order entered by the United States District Court for Northern District of Illinois on June 30, 1983: Provided, That the court's decree entered on September 24, 1980, shall remain in full force and effect.]

SEC. 307. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds provided to the Department of Education by this Act shall be used to maintain not less than 5,189 Federal full-time equivalent positions.

TITLE V—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 501. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and available for public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. 502. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be expended by any executive agency, as referred to in the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 401 et seq.), pursuant to any obligation for services by contract, unless such executive agency has awarded and entered into such contract in full compliance with such Act and regulations promulgated thereunder.

SEC. 503. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 but at rates for individuals not to exceed the per diem rate equivalent to the rate for GS-18.

SEC. 504. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for uniforms or allowances therefor as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901-5902).

SEC. 505. Appropriations contained in this Act, available for salaries and expenses, shall be available for expenses of attendance at meetings which are concerned with the functions or activities for which the appropriation is made or which will contribute to improved conduct, supervision, or management of those functions or activities.

SEC. 506. No part of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to provide a loan, guarantee of a loan, a grant, the salary of or any remuneration whatever to any individual applying for admission, attending, employed by, teaching at, or doing research at an institution of higher education who has engaged in conduct on or after August 1, 1969, which involves the use of (or the assistance to others in the use of) force or the threat of force or the seizure of property under the control of an institution of higher education, to require or prevent the availability of certain curricula, or to prevent the faculty, administrative officials, or students in such institution from engaging in their duties or pursuing their studies at such institution.

SEC. 507. The Secretaries of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education are authorized to transfer unexpended balances of prior appropriations to accounts corresponding to current appropriations provided in this Act: Provided, That such transferred balances are used for the same purpose, and for the same periods of time, for which they were originally appropriated.

SEC. 508. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 509. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used, other than for normal and recognized executive-legislative relationships, for publicity or propaganda purposes, for the preparation, distribution, or use of any kit, pamphlet, booklet, publication, radio, television, or film presentation designed to support or defeat legislation pending before the Congress, except in presentation to the Congress itself.

No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of any grant or contract recipient, or agent acting for such recipient, related to any activity designed to influence legislation or appropriations pending before the Congress.

SEC. 510. The Secretaries of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education are each authorized to make available not to exceed $7,500 from funds available for salaries and expenses under titles I, II, and III, respectively, for official reception and representation expenses; the Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is authorized to make available for official reception and representation expenses not to exceed $2,500 from the funds available for "Salaries and expenses, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service"; and the Chairman of the National Mediation Board is authorized to make available for official reception and representation expenses not to exceed $2,500 from funds available for "Salaries and expenses, National Mediation Board".

SEC. 511. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be used to pay for any research program or project or any program, project, or course which is of an experimental nature, or any other activity involving human participants, which is determined by the Secretary or a court of competent jurisdiction to present a danger to the physical, mental, or emotional well-being of a participant or subject of such program, project, or course, without the written, informed consent of each participant or subject, or a participant's parents or legal guardian, if such participant or subject is under eighteen years of age. The Secretary shall adopt appropriate regulations respecting this section.

SEC. 512. None of the funds provided in this Act to any department or agency may be expended for the transportation of any officer or employee of such department or agency between his domicile and his place of employment, with the exception of the Secretaries of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and medical officers and other health personnel on out-patient medical service who [under title 5, United States Code, section 101] are exempted from such limitations under 31 U.S.C. 1344.

SEC. 513. The number of full-time equivalent positions for which amounts are appropriated by this Act shall not be subject to any personnel ceiling or other restriction on permanent, temporary, or intermittent employment unless such ceiling or restriction is explicitly established by statute.

SEC. 514. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act for personnel compensation and benefits shall be available for other object classifications set forth in the budget estimates submitted for the appropriations without the approval of the Committees on Appropriations.

This Act may be cited as the "Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1985".

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I welcome the opportunity to present the recommendations of the Committee on Appropriations for the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies bill for fiscal year 1985. The committee's recommendations were developed after weeks of public hearings, including 6 days of testimony from nearly 200 public witnesses. Sitting with me through most of these sessions was my able and distinguished colleague, Senator PROXMIRE, the ranking member of the Labor-HHS-Education Subcommittee. The bill which we bring before you today is the product of a truly bipartisan effort and I thank my friend from Wisconsin and the other members of the committee for their assistance and cooperation.

The committee recommends total new budget authority of $102,223,426,000, including prior year advances. Of this amount, $94,637,038,000 is for activities which were considered by both the House and Senate and $7,586,388,000 is for activities considered by the Senate only. On a comparable basis, Mr. President—examining those items considered by the committee and the House—the recommendation represents a decrease of $2,771,385,000 from fiscal year 1984 and an increase of $4,864,607,000 from the budget request.

The committee deferred action on three appropriations for which Senate authorization action was not completed. These are refugee assistance, health planning, and developmental disabilities. Since there has now been conference agreement on renewed developmental disabilities legislation, I intend to offer an amendment at the proper time to specifically fund the programs. The remaining deferred programs will be provided for under a continuing resolution.

I ask unanimous consent that a summary of the bill be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SUMMARY OF THE BILL

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

For the Department of Labor, $6,351,379,000 in new budget authority is recommended. This is $9,753,263,000 less than fiscal year 1984 and $208,908,000 more than the budget request, and $226,678,000 over the House allowance. Of the Senate amount, $335,000,000 is for the Older Americans Act jobs programs deferred by the House. Savings from fiscal year 1984 are achieved principally as a result of the improved employment situation eliminating the requirement for advances to the State unemployment trust fund as well as adjustments for employment and training programs and to one-time transition funding for the Job Training Partnership Act provided in fiscal year 1984.

Recommendations for the Department of Labor include:

$1,886,151,000 for the Job Training Partnership Act block grant;

$824,549,000 for the 1985 Summer Youth Employment and Training Program;

$223,000,000 for Dislocated Worker Assistance;

$634,000,000 for Job Corps;

$220,152,000 for Occupational Safety and Health, as well as $150,550,000 for mine safety and health.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

For the Department of Health and Human Services, the Committee recommends current year Federal funds of $69,977,704,000, excluding advances. This is an increase of $3,704,705,000 above the budget estimate; and $8,503,008,000 over the House allowance. Of the Senate amount, $6,581,810,000 is for programs not considered by the House. For comparable activities considered by both House and Senate, the Committee bill is $1,835,525,000 over the House and $4,303,421,000 over the 1984 level. Most of the increases are for entitlement spending, which the House bill underestimates by nearly $1.8 billion.

The recommendations provide the following for key discretionary programs:

$478,000,000 for the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant;

$360,000,000 for Community Health Centers;

$490,000,000 for the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Block Grant;

$247,200,000 for health professions assistance and development programs, an increase of $131,907,000 over the request;

$2,140,000,000 for Low Income Energy Assistance;

$2,700,000,000 for the Social Services Block Grant;

$701,600,000 for Programs for the Aging;

$270,760,000 to maintain the Work Incentive Program;

$382,572,000 for the Community Services Block Grant;

$5,163,597,000 for NIH, including $315,509,000 for research training;

$374,536,000 for alcohol, drug abuse and mental health research and training activities;

$140,000,000 for Family Planning;

$1,075,059,000 for Head Start;

$217,823,000 for Child Welfare Programs; and $93,000,000 for the Preventive Health Services Block Grant.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

For Department of Education programs, $17,199,654,000 is recommended, which is $8,392,000 more than the House and $1,841,146,000 more than the Administration request. Of the Senate amount, $585,000,000 is for Impact Aid not considered by the House.

Increases over 1984 levels are recommended for a number of programs, including:

$216,620,000 for Chapter I, compensatory education for the disadvantaged;

$49,345,000 for the Chapter II block grant;

$79,780,000 for Education for the Handicapped, allowing the State Grants to go to $1,135,145,000;

$425,000,000 for Pell Grants, bringing total appropriations to $3,225,000,000 and allowing maximum individual awards to increase to $2,000;

$97,665,000 for Vocational Rehabilitation, allowing an increase of $79,700,000 for state grants;

$40,349,000 for a number of Higher Education Programs;

$30,000,000 for work study;

$25,000,000 for supplemental grants;

$18,940,000 for capital contributions for National Direct Student Loans; and $63,120,000 for libraries.

For Guaranteed Student Loans, an appropriation of $3,079,477,000 is included, an increase of $824,237,000 over fiscal year 1984.

THE RELATED AGENCIES

For the related agencies, $792,689,000 in new budget authority is recommended for fiscal year 1985. This amount is $25,764,000 more than the fiscal year 1984 appropriation, an increase of $37,177,000 above the budget request, and $4,512,000 over the House allowance. In addition, a fiscal 1987 advance appropriation of $238,000,000 was recommended for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which was not considered by the House.

The recommendations include:

$150,314,000 for the ACTION Agency which adds $2,000,000 to Vista over the FY 1984 appropriation of $15,000,000 and includes $21,000,000 for the Senior Companion Program which provides enough funding to begin the newly authorized program in Home Health Care.

$137,964,000 for the National Labor Relations Board; and

$2,410,000 for the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission.

Mr. President, before yielding to the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin for any opening statement that he might have at this point.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill for fiscal year 1985 as reported by the Senate Appropriations Committee contains $102.2 billion to fund the multitude of domestic social benefit programs falling within its purview. It is a very generous bill, exceeding the President's budget request by $5.8 billion. However in discussing the bill we cannot ignore the fact that approximately $2 out of every $3 it contains are for nondiscretionary entitlement programs.

If we narrow our focus to discretionary spending, the only spending that the Appropriations Committee truly controls, we find that the bill as reported contains $31.5 billion for nonentitlement programs, an impressive 10-percent increase above the President's $28.6 billion budget request for these programs.

The bill includes about $7.6 billion in funding for programs that the House did not consider because they were not fully authorized. If we leave these programs out of our calculations we find that the total in the bill as reported to the Senate for both discretionary and nondiscretionary programs is about $1.8 billion more than the amount approved by the House or a little less than 2 percent above the House.

However it pays to be particularly cautious in trying to make comparisons when programs as complex as those funded by this bill are involved. For example the bill before us today contains $632.5 million more for medicaid payments to the States than the bill as passed by the House. Because this is an entitlement program, the figures should, in theory, be the same. However the House has simply provided the amount requested by the President and his request assumes the enactment of certain entitlement changes that had not been passed by the Congress at the time the Appropriations Committee acted. Consequently the House acknowledges that the amount may be inadequate to fully fund the program and stands ready to provide additional funds in supplemental appropriations legislation.

The House also appears to have understated the fiscal year 1985 costs of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children Program by appoximately $1.3 billion. The administration has projected legislative savings of $633 million which have not materialized yet the House has assumed that those savings will occur. In addition the Senate-reported bill uses the latest Congressional Budget Office estimate in adding $655,975,000 to the administration's request for AFDC benefit payments. The House has ignored that estimate.

If Both of these entitlement programs are taken into account, the Senate bill as reported provides less than the House bill. The House has also provided smaller amounts for other entitlement programs such as part B medicare funding, supplemental security income payments, and child support enforcement. On the other hand, the Senate Appropriations Committee recently recommended that $353 million to make up a fiscal year 1984 shortfall in student financial assistance grants, popularly known as Pell grant funds, be provided in a supplemental appropriations bill while this amount is included in the House version of the fiscal year 1985 bill we have before us today.

What I'm trying to say is that it is extremely difficult to compare House and Senate figures in a bill as complex as the one we have before us today, especially when the bill as reported by the Senate includes funds for a number of unauthorized programs not considered by the House. However when all these puts and takes are balanced off against each other I think my colleagues will find that the House and Senate total are remarkably close.

Where does the bill stand with respect to the Senate-passed budget resolution and the preliminary subcommittee allocations made under this resolution by the Senate Appropriations Committee? The committee dealt only with discretionary spending and the bill before us today contains $1.1 billion less for discretionary programs than the amount allocated to the Labor-HHS-Education Subcommittee for those programs. However we have yet to recommend funding for major initiatives such as the recently passed math-science authorization and the bill does not include appropriations for some unauthorized programs such as refugee resettlement and health planning. Consequently we don't have nearly as much leeway as might at first appear.

Now to the details of the bill. The bill as reported is particularly generous to programs dealing with the Nation's health and education. That is where the Appropriations Committee made its largest increases over last year's levels.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

The bill as reported contains about $6 billion for the Department of Labor exclusive of trust fund support, almost $200 million more than the administration requested. The major component of this increase is an add-on of $100 million for summer youth employment, which will permit next summer's program to be funded at the current level. The House-passed bill includes enough summer youth money to continue the current level of funding through each of the next two summers—the summers of calendar 1985 and calendar 1986. Consequently the bill as passed by the House is $200 million above the budget request of $724,549,000 and $100 million above the Senate reported figure of $824,549,000 for summer jobs.

Other recommended increases in the administration's budget request for the Labor Department include $34 million for the Job Corps, $40.7 million for Trade Adjustment Assistance programs and $5.6 million for the Secretary's discretionary fund. Funding for the Job Training Partnership Act is generally being held at current levels by the bill before us today. The bill as reported from committee does not include $10 million for concentrated employment program grantees although this budget add-on was approved by the House.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

As I indicated earlier, this bill before us today is particularly supportive of dealing with the Nation's health, and this is reflected in the figures recommended for the activities of the Public Health Service. The bill provides $8.2 billion for PHS activities, an increase of over 13 percent—almost $1 billion—above the President's budget for the coming fiscal year.

The bill as reported includes $5,163,597,000 for the National Institutes of Health, almost $600 million above the budget request. Increases in current Institute budgets range from less than 7 percent for the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences to 26 percent for the National Institute on Aging. These funds would be used to support 6,850 new and competing research grants, 1,850 more than the current budget provides for, and 10,100 traineeships as well as 1,365 career development awards. Approximately $61 million of the increase would be used to maintain funding for research centers, other research grants, and research management and support at current service levels.

The bill as reported also deals quite generously with programs funded through the Health Resources and Services Administration. For example, $247,200,000 is recommended for health professions, more than double the President's budget request and an increase of almost 20 percent above the current funding levels. The House-passed bill does not provide support in this area because final authorization legislation has not yet been approved. Both Houses have deferred action on health planning activities.

The bill includes substantial increases in some health block grant programs providing vital dollars to States and territories. Funding for the maternal and child health program would be boosted by the Senate-reported bill to $478 million, an increase of $70.3 million above the President's budget request and a whopping 20 percent above current levels. The alcohol, drug abuse, and mental health block grant program would receive $490 million under the Senate measure, $28 million above the current level of funding and $17.7 million more than the President requested. Both of these items were deferred by the House.

The bill contains $402,730,000 for the Centers for Disease Control, including $207,378,000 for programs not considered by the House such as the preventive health services block grant, venereal disease activities, and the immunization effort. The total recommended in the bill as reported from Committee for CDC activities is $32,866,000 greater than the amount requested in the President's budget.

The committee also provided generously for programs funded through the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration. The budget request of $210,958,000 for mental health activities, exclusive of those supported through the block grant, was increased by almost 27 percent to a total of $267,835,000. The committee concurred with the House in providing funding for clinical training and mental health services demonstrations, two programs the administration planned to terminate, recommending $37 million for those activities, $7 million more than the House endorsed. The drug abuse and alcoholism programs received a modest increase of $5,257,000 above the budget request and the House-approved amount.

HEALTH CARE FINANCING ADMINISTRATION

The Senate-reported bill includes $36.262 billion in fiscal year 1985 funds for the Medicare and Medicaid Programs administered by the Health Care Financing Administration as well as an additional $5.98 billion for advanced medicaid funding to be obligated in fiscal year 1986. This total, which excludes trust fund support, is about $698 million more than the House provided and exceeds the administration's budget request by $601,025,000. The differences are primarily attributable to the committee's decision not to assume legislative savings proposed by the administration that had not been enacted at the time the bill was reported as well as the use of differing cost estimates by the two Houses. It is ironic that although the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 subsequently implemented some savings in this area, the most recent cost estimates indicate that such savings may be largely offset by escalating program costs. Of course the Appropriations Committees have no final control over the cost of the Medicare and Medicaid Programs because of their mandatory nature. It should be noted that the bulk of the costs incurred by HCFA are paid out of the Federal hospital insurance trust fund and are not provided through this bill.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

The bill as reported to the Senate includes $19.3 billion for programs administered through the Social Security Administration plus $4.87 billion in advance funding for fiscal year 1986, exclusive of trust fund payments. The total recommended is $3.2 billion more than the amount contained in the House bill and exceeds the President's budget request by $1.258 billion. The largest part of the committee's increase over the House-passed total for SSA programs is attributable to the decision of the committee to recommend $2.14 billion for low income energy assistance. The House deferred consideration of this item. The amount proposed for this program exceeds the administration's request by $265 million. The remainder of the increase over the House and budget figures represents the refusal of the committee to assume certain legislative savings proposed by the President in his budget submission.

Plus updated, estimates that indicate the aid to families with dependent children, supplemental security income and child enforcement programs will cost more than originally estimated regardless of legislative changes. Both the House and Senate committees have deferred consideration of the Office of Refugee Resettlement's budget pending enactment of the necessary authorizing legislation.

HUMAN DEVELOPMENT SERVICES

The committee has recommended the appropriation of $5.97 billion for human development services programs, including the community services block grant. This represents an increase of about $855 million over the President's budget request, attributable in large part of a decision to reject the administration's proposal to terminate the $380 million community services block grant and the $270 million work incentive program. Other increases include $35 million above both the budget request and the House-approved amount for child welfare assistance to strengthen State efforts to reunite families as well as add-ons to the President's budget of $118 million, almost 12 percent, for Head Start, Child Abuse and Runaway Youth Programs, and $44 million for aging activities. The House put off consideration of these latter two programs pending action on authorizing legislation. Both Houses deferred action on the developmental disabilities program.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

The $17.2 billion included for education represents a "balanced portfolio" of funds for elementary, secondary, and postsecondary education. This total exceeds the administration's budget request by $1.8 billion and is $8.3 million over the House. Spending for chapter 1 of the Education Consolidation and Improvement Act was raised to $3.7 billion, an increase of $216.6 million over the request and $16.6 million over the House. This program is the primary vehicle for providing compensatory educational services to disadvantaged children. Approximately 5.2 million of these youngsters will be served under both bills. The committee was also very supportive of programs to educate the handicapped. The $1.3 billion included in the bill represents increases over current levels for all 13 activities and continues the strong Federal commitment intended by Congress when it authorized the Education for Handicapped Children Act. This total exceeds the request by $106 million and the House by $21.8 million. The committee also included $585 million for impact aid, an unauthorized program not covered in the House bill. Spending for vocational and adult education would continue in both bills at the current level of $831 million. The committee included $500 million for the chapter 2 State Block Grant Program, a slight increase over current level and $185.6 million below the request.

The bill as reported included $4.4 billion for the five major student aid programs, $837 million above the request. The committee rejected the administration's proposal to terminate support for three of these programs, all of which received increases over current levels, by including $400 million for supplementary educational opportunity grants, $180 million for direct student loans, and $76 million for State student incentive grants. The House took similar action although it appropriated $25 million more for supplementary educational opportunity grants and $20 million more for direct student loans. The remaining two programs—Pell grants and college work/study—would be funded at $3.2 billion and $585 million respectively. This is slightly lower than the House. The administration's proposals to maintain Pell grants at the current level of $2.8 billion and raise the college work/study program to $850 million were based on legislative changes not considered by the Congress. The committee also included $3.079 billion for guaranteed student loans, an entitlement program over which the committee has little control. The administration's request of $2.8 billion was based on legislative savings not considered by Congress. This program is expected to cost $3.6 billion next year according to the latest CBO estimate.

The committee did not endorse any of the administration's proposed reductions for postsecondary education. Overall, a total of $449.2 million is included in the bill for these programs, $197 million above the request and slightly lower than the House. Not only did the committee reject the administration's request to terminate support for graduate education but for the first time it included funds for the National Graduate Studies Program.

The $3 million provided in the reported bill will support approximately 200 fellowships next year for graduate study in the arts, humanities, and social sciences. The House provided $2 million. The committee's action in this regard, and that of the House, should be an important step in restoring the national commitment to graduate studies in the arts, humanities and social sciences which has significantly lessened over the past decade. Other increases in postsecondary programs include special programs for the disadvantaged which was raised by $92.5 million over the request to $174.9 million; $32.8 million for international education, another program recommended for termination; and $148 million to aid developing institutions. The committee also rejected the administration's request to end support of libraries and earmarked $50 million of the $150 million included in the bill for library construction. Funds for Gallaudet College were increased by $9.9 million over the request to $56.7 million. This is slightly lower than the House. Both the committee and House adopted the $158.2 million requested by the administration for Howard University.

RELATED AGENCIES

Overall, the committee included $792.6 million for related agencies. This is $25.7 million more than current levels and $37.1 million over the budget request. Included is $238 million for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, exceeding the administration's request by $138 million. This was not included in the House bill. A total of $150.3 million was included for programs administered by ACTION, $30 million over the request and $2.6 million above the House. The Volunteers in Service to America Program (VISTA) received the largest increase of $11.2 million, bringing its fiscal 1985 appropriation to $18.8 million, slightly lower than the House. The increase will permit VISTA to maintain at least 2,200 volunteers in community service projects throughout the Nation. Of the total, the committee recommends $103.7 million for ACTION's Older American Programs, a little more than the House and nearly $16 million over the request. Part of the increase will permit a very modest raise in stipends for the Foster Grandparents and Senior Companion Programs as well as implement the newly authorized Home Care Program. Also included in the bill are trust funds of $2.4 million for the Prospective Payment Commission and additional funds for the Soldiers' and Airmen's Home to continue rehabilitation of its aging facilities.

CLOSING REMARKS

Mr. President, I would be remiss if I did not take a few moments to congratulate my colleague from Connecticut, the chairman of the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriation Subcommittee, Senator WEICKER, for the skilled job he has done once again this year.

I cannot think of a man in either party who is better equipped by intellect, compassion, sympathy, understanding, and intelligence about these programs than Senator WEICKER. He is ideal to make this kind of a fight. He feels it very deeply. He understands the issues thoroughly, and has been very patient in the very long and exhaustive hearings.

Without his efforts to craft a bill that satisfied the most pressing needs of our colleagues yet stayed within the ceilings set by the Senate-passed budget resolution, we would not be taking up this legislation today. If anyone can work with the House to get this bill through the Congress and on the President's desk for his signature, Senator WEICKER can. I'm delighted to be able to join him in this effort.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Wisconsin for his overly generous remarks, and only want to point out that two parties are responsible for getting this legislation out of the subcommittee and through the committee. That task in terms of leadership, as far as the Democrats are concerned, has been on the shoulders of Senator PROXMIRE. Indeed, both from the point of view of being a fiscal watchdog and again having the compassion to address the needs of this Nation, the Democratic Party could have none better than the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

AMENDMENT NO. 4378

(Purpose: To provide fiscal year 1985 appropriations for title II of the Education for Economic Security Act relating to the improvement of instruction in mathematics, science, computer learning, and foreign languages)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the Senator from New Jersey that unless this is an amendment to the remaining committee amendment it requires unanimous consent to be considered at this time.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY], for himself and Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. CHILES, Mr. PELL, Mr. WEICKER, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Mr. DODD, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. HEINZ, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. D'AMATO, proposes an amendment numbered 4378.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

SCIENCE AND MATH EDUCATION

For carrying out the provisions of title II of the Education for Economic Security Act, $200,000,000 to remain available until expended.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this is an amendment to provide $200 million in startup funding for the science and math initiative. Joining me in cosponsoring the amendment are Senators DOMENICI, STAFFORD, CHILES, PELL, WEICKER, HOLLINGS, MATSUNAGA, DODD, MOYNIHAN, LAUTENBERG, BURDICK, HEINZ, HAWKINS, LEVIN, KENNEDY, and D'AMATO.

On June 27, 1984, the Senate passed the Education for Economic Security Act, which authorizes crucial funding for teacher training and retraining programs in math, science, and computer literacy. It is now time for us to meet our commitments by providing funding for this effort. Our amendment provides $200 million for title II of this legislation, which provides grants to schools and colleges. Seventy percent of these funds will be used by local schools principally for the improvement and expansion of inservice training and retraining of existing teachers in elementary and secondary schools. The remaining 30 percent of the funds will be used by colleges for inservice training of elementary and secondary teachers, retraining of mathematics and science teachers at the secondary level, and traineeships for prospective teachers who intend to specialize in teaching mathematics or science at the secondary level.

Many New Jersey schools currently have severe shortages of math and science teachers. It will take time—perhaps several years—to correct this problem, but I am confident that this legislation will be part of the solution.

Mr. President, it should be pointed out that this amendment does not bust the budget. This year's Senate-passed budget resolution assumed an increase of $1.3 billion for education, including funding for the science and math bill. My understanding is that there is still room in the Appropriations Committee allocation for this endeavor.

Mr. President, our economic security depends upon the education of our people. In order to effectively compete internationally, the American work force must be second to none. Presently, in many fields, we have been slipping. We need to make sure that there is an ample supply of teachers in the technical fields. To help schools adapt to change, we need to strengthen our present instructional programs and improve teacher training and retraining programs. The science and math legislation that we recently adopted is a step in the right direction. It will be an empty promise, however, if we fail to fund the programs it authorizes. I urge my colleagues to support this startup funding.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, it is a great pleasure to join Senator BRADLEY and others from both sides of the aisle in sponsoring this amendment to provide initial funding for the math-science-foreign language program.

The approximately $200 million will enable us to get the part of the program administered by the U.S. Department of Education off the ground. I understand in 1984 about $50 million in funds were made available for the National Science Foundation scholarships and teacher training programs. Through leftover 1984 funds and new 1985 moneys there will be about $80 million available for NSF math-science activities. I am really glad to see us move here to support that with approximately $200 million for the State and local education agencies and institutions.

The Department of Education is working on regulations now to implement the program. We will have the State and local planning and assessment mechanism I advocated to determine their highest needs in these subjects. With passage of this amendment, there will be startup funds to improve the teacher supply and qualifications, curriculum, and equipment, and provide better access for underserved groups like minorities, women, and the handicapped to participation in these subjects.

I am excited about the potential of this program. It is just a beginning, and I think we are going to have to look at a sustained, growing Federal effort over a number of years to complement what States and locals are doing to upgrade instruction in these critical subjects.

But it is a good beginning: We avoided the tendency to dump general Federal aid on a problem by identifying the national priorities in the legislation and setting up a means States and locals can use to see where they stack up in each need area. We certainly are not throwing money at this problem, since $200 million is less than Florida alone is spending on their new math-science and secondary school improvement program. But we will have to evaluate each year the impact the money is having and refine and extend the program to maximize that effect. I certainly hope this foundation, and the outcomes of it, will be taken into account when reauthorization comes up for 1986.

I would like to thank Senator BRADLEY for his leadership here and chairman and members of the appropriations and authorizing subcommittees that helped us in this.

SCIENCE AND MATH EDUCATION APPROPRIATION

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today with my colleague from New Jersey to offer an amendment that will provide the first appropriations for the new science and math education program which was enacted into law this summer.

I have taken the floor of the Senate several times over the past few years to voice may concerns about the quality of math and science education in America's schools, the shortage of qualifed science and math teachers, and the serious implications these conditions hold for America's ability to compete in an increasingly technological world.

Humbly, I have to admit that although my voice was one of the first to be raised in concern, I was certainly not crying alone in the wilderness. Many of my colleagues, including the chairman of the Education Subcommittee, Senator STAFFORD of Vermont; the chairman of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, Senator HATCH of Utah; the chairman of the Labor-Health and Human Services-Education Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator WEICKER of Connecticut; my good friend and colleague on the Budget Committee, Senator CHILES of Florida, the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island, Senator PELL; as well as the Senator from New Jersey, Senator BRADLEY, also shared these concerns.

For this reason, we support an appropriation of $200 million for the first year of the new science and math education program. These funds will be available for title II of this new law which is administered by the Department of Education. The Department, I note, has made considerable progress in drafting regulations and preparing to implement this new program. For this reason we can move confidently to appropriate funds for this next year.

I regret to inform my colleagues that the National Science Foundation has not made quite as rapid progress. The administrators of that organization are still at the discussion stage. It is my hope that they will work quickly toward implementation of this new program, particularly the merit scholarship program, so that the Congress can also appropriate funds in this area.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. It fits amply within the budget resolution and within the $139.8 billion cap on domestic appropriations by which the Senate intends to abide.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I commend the distinguished Senator from New Jersey for the amendment he has offered, and I can assure him the full support of the chairman on the matter of the math science which he has before the Chamber at this time, and I urge its passage.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

The amendment (No. 4378) was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I express my appreciation to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut for his tenacity and leadership on this issue and for his consideration, and I salute him for his work in the Senate in the areas of education and health.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank my distinguished colleague from New Jersey.

AMENDMENT NO. 4379

(Purpose: To provide $75 million for the magnet schools program)

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk and I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in order.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay the committee amendment aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. EAGLETON], for himself, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. HATCH, Mr. PELL, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. DODD, Mr. GORTON, and Mr. CRANSTON, proposes an amendment numbered 4379.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment reads as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

For carrying out the provisions of title VII of the Education for Economic Security Act, relating to magnet schools assistance, $75,000,000: Provided, That not more than $5,000,000 in the fiscal year may be paid to any single eligible local educational agency: Provided further, That amounts appropriated under this sentence shall be available October 1, 1984.

Mr. EAGLETON. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment on behalf of myself, Senators MOYNIHAN, STAFFORD, HATCH, PELL, CHAFEE, DURENBERGER, BRADLEY, DANFORTH, LAUTENBERG, DODD, GORTON, and CRANSTON, to provide $75 million in funding for the recently authorized program of assistance to magnet schools in districts which are undergoing an approved desegregation plan. As my colleagues will remember, the magnet school program authorization was adopted as an amendment to the so-called math-science bill by a vote of 86 to 3 on June 6 of this year.

As a result of the enactment of the elementary and secondary education block grant, the so-called chapter 2 programs, in 1981, Federal funding specifically targeted to school districts undergoing voluntary or court-ordered desegregation was eliminated. As a result, school districts from Boston to Seattle that received multimillion-dollar desegregation grants have been left without sufficient funds to support their desegregation activities. In my own State of Missouri, both the cities of St. Louis and Kansas City received emergency school assistance prior to 1982. In academic year 1981–82, the year prior to implementation of the block grant, St. Louis received $4.7 million of ESAA money. The total amount allocated to the St. Louis school district under the block grant was $650,000. That, Mr. President, is a 91.6-percent decrease in funds between the 1980–81 and 1982–83 school years. Similarly, in Kansas City, prior to the implementation of the block grant, the Kansas City school district received $3.3 million in annual funding under the ESAA program. The amount allocated under the block grant to Kansas City was $450,000. That, Mr. President, is a 90-percent decrease in Federal assistance to the school district of Kansas City.

Missouri is not the only State in which schools undergoing desegregation activities, primarily urban districts, suffered a disproportionate reduction in Federal funding as a result of enactment of the chapter 2 block grant. Buffalo, NY, suffered an 85.8-percent decline in funding between 1980 and 1982; Cleveland, OH, suffered an 87-percent loss; Dallas suffered a 79.5-percent loss; Los Angeles suffered a 63.4-percent loss; Seattle suffered an 89.6-percent loss; San Francisco suffered a 69.2-percent loss; and Toledo, OH, suffered a 67.6-percent loss.

The amendment we are offering today—and I am delighted Senator MOYNIHAN is on the floor because he is a principal author of this measure—will fund a far more targeted program than was in effect under the Emergency School Assistance Act. Under the program, there are three categories of school districts eligible to receive these funds: Districts which lost $1 million or more in the first fiscal year after the repeal of the ESAA; districts which are operating under an approved voluntary desegregation plan; and districts which are operating under a court-ordered desegregation plan. The actual funds could be used only in magnet school programs for development of courses of academic instruction, the purchase of books, materials, and equipment, including computers, and the payment of, or subsidization of, salaries of elementary and secondary school teachers teaching in magnet schools.

The amendment also limits the amount any eligible district can receive under this program in fiscal year 1985 to no more than $5 million, and assures that funds will be made available this October 1.

Federal desegregation assistance has long been a critical lever in promoting equal educational opportunity. This amendment we are offering today will renew the Federal Government's commitment to school desegregation as a means for providing millions of American schoolchildren with better educational opportunities. I urge all of my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to support the amendment offered by the distinguished and, if I may say, valiant Senator from Missouri who has, through a long and distinguished career in this body, championed just such measures as we have before us now.

The case can be made succinctly, Mr. President. One of the true achievements of the executive branch in our time has been the collective decision taken in 1970 to see to the implementation of the historic Supreme Court decision in Brown versus Board of Education, handed down in 1954.

I was a member of the President's Cabinet at the time. We had approached something like a constitutional crisis, as year after year, the unambiguous ruling of the Court with respect to the plain purpose of the Constitution was being avoided in one jurisdiction after another. Finally, the decision was made to enforce the Court's ruling nationally. And the Executive and the Congress agreed that this should be supported by specific funds to the school districts which, under the Court's order, in effect, would have to do things they had not done. Many localities had argued, and in some cases with reason, that they were not always in a position to carry out the integration of the public schools mandated by Brown versus Board of Education, for the simple reason of insufficient funds.

This school assistance, emergency school assistance, was in place for the very longest while. It worked. It is working, Mr. President. The numbers, and the results are there to be seen. It is not completed. It was not expected to be completed immediately. It will be some time before it is. In the consolidation of educational grants this program was put in and then left out—as the Senator from Missouri has explained in the most explicit terms there have recently been the reductions made in the amount of funds available for a constitutionally required action by school boards. This proposal to restore the necessary funding has received the support of Members on both sides.

I see the distinguished Senator and manager from Connecticut has risen. I have no more to say than to thank all those concerned, and hope this will be agreed to, as I am sure it will.

Subsequently, it became clear that this would have results. In a startling social change, a startling measure of acceptance of the decision taken by the constitutional Government—the segregated dual school systems of the United States started to disappear. One of the reasons it happened was that Federal funds became available.

Two years later it became clear that the greater need at this point was to continue the programs in the former dual-school-system States and to extend the program to the de facto segregated school districts of the North, of the West, and of the East. In 1972, Congress established the Emergency School Aid Act as a separate and distinct program. It was only secondarily an educational program. It was primarily a constitutional one.

And it worked well. It became something people were committed to, depended on; and as these things go, considerable progress was made, and great commitments were made.

In 1981 the identity and separateness of purpose of this legislation got lost in the Education Consolidation and Improvement Act, and the funding necessary to carry out over several years the desegregation of many large school systems has not been provided since.

In my own State of New York, funding for school desegregation has dropped precipitously, from more than $20 million in fiscal year 1981 to about $2.9 million in fiscal year 1983—an 86-percent cut, without taking into account the effects of inflation. The Buffalo public schools received $6.57 million for desegregation purposes in 1981, but only $1.29 million in 1983. I would also note that school systems in New York City, Rochester, West Irondequoit, Syracuse, Newburgh, and Mount Vernon also experienced dramatic reductions in Federal support. Four of these districts—Buffalo, Rochester, Newburgh, and Syracuse—used 100 percent of their chapter II State formula moneys in 1982 for desegregation.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I rise as a cosponsor of this amendment to appropriate $75 million in funding for the newly authorized program of assistance to magnet schools. This amendment would reverse the decision made 3 years ago to terminate the Emergency School Aid Act—ESAA—and consolidate it into the chapter II block grant.

As a result of that decision made 3 years ago, many school districts were left without sufficient funds to adequately support their desegregation activities. Nineteen schools in my own State of New Jersey received over $5 million in 1981 for ESAA. When the program was terminated in 1981, these schools suffered a disproportionate reduction in Federal funding.

Mr. President, ESAA should never have been included in the block grant in the first place. The loss of ESAA funding has hampered local efforts to provide an adequate education to students. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I want to commend the distinguished Senators from Missouri and New York for proposing the amendment before the body, and it has my whole-hearted support, and that of the committee. We will see to it that we carry it through to its proper conclusion. So I urge passage of the amendment.

Mr. PROXMIRE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I support the amendment. I congratulate the distinguished Senator from Missouri. It is an excellent amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. EAGLETON].

The amendment (No. 4379) was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I as the author of the original authorization thank the managers of the bill for their succinct and direct presentation.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank my good friend, the chairman of the subcommittee.

I want to say to the Senate that I think we ought to do everything we can to get this bill passed. There may be a couple of issues to argue over. But we ought to get on with it and get to conference with the House. Actually, last year we had a bill. This year we ought to have one, and we will see some real rewards. We need a full appropriation bill in this complex and complicated part of Government.

I commend the distinguished managers, Democratic and Republican, for what they have been able to accomplish. There is no doubt in my mind that this bill in terms of its substance, its numbers—but for the dispute that might arise on abortion—and on all other matters clearly is the kind of bill we ought to pass. It is within budget targets. It is within those dollar numbers that were agreed upon among the White House, the Appropriations Committee, and the budget resolution. I think it is a real credit. We walk around wondering whether we can get things done. If we can get on with this one and a few others, we can set a new pattern for appropriations in the U.S. Congress that we have not had in a couple of decades.

I commend the Senator, and hope we can get on with passage.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank my distinguished colleague from New Mexico, who had a tremendous input into many aspects on this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay the committee amendment aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4380

(Purpose: To add $2,000,000 to the Program Management account within the Health Care Financing Administration for surveying Intermediate Care Facilities for the Mentally Retarded)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4380. On page 28, line 16——

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 27, line 16, strike "96,781,000" and insert in lieu thereof "98,781,000".

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, this amendment adds $2 million to the Health Care Financing Administration [HCFA] appropriation to provide for increased monitoring of intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded [ICMFR's], in order to improve the quality of care provided to the residents of these institutions.

This $2 million would enable HCFA to hire 45 additional developmental disability and health care personnel who would be responsible for surveying ICFMR's on an annual basis to ensure that Federal certification standards are being met.

Earlier this year, members of my staff visited seven ICMFR's nationwide, and found substandard conditions, including overuse of medication and physical restraints, lack of active treatment, physical surroundings that were barren at best and life threatening at worst, residents living in institutions who appropriately belong in the community, and, at every institution, superintendents reported abuse of patients.

In July, Secretary Heckler testified before my joint Handicapped and Labor-HHS-Education Subcommittee's hearing that recent HHS visits to 17 ICFMR's found everyone operating under substandard conditions.

At the conclusion of the hearing, I requested that Secretary Heckler determine how much in the way of financial resources and personnel would be necessary to survey these institutions in order to obtain compliance with certification standards. HHS now estimates $2 million is necessary to accomplish these surveys.

With these additional funds, HCFA will be able to survey all institutions with 300 or more residents, 40 percent of institutions with 16 to 299 residents, and 20 percent of ICFMR's with 15 or fewer individuals.

Our Nation's institutionalized mentally retarded deserve the highest quality of care that we can provide, and this amendment would be a first step toward ensuring that they receive that level of care.

I urge adoption of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER].

The amendment (No. 4380) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay the committee amendment aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4381

(Purpose: To add appropriations for the Developmental Disabilities program to the Human Development Services account)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4381.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 32, line 15, after the second comma insert the following: "the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act.".

On page 32, line 17, strike out "$1,928,004,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,003,704,000".

DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES ACT AMENDMENT

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, this amendment would provide $75,700,000, the amount recently agreed to by conferees on the legislation to extend the Develpmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act. Funding for these programs was not considered in the Senate-reported appropriations bill, since renewed legislation had not passed the Senate at that time. All other programs where renewed legislation has either passed the Senate or been agreed to in conference with the House is already contained in this appropriations bill.

Specifically, this amendment provides: $50,250,000 for the State grant program; $13,750,000 for the protection and advocacy program; $9,000,000 for the university-affiliated facilities program; and $2,700,000 for special projects.

Mr. President, I urge adoption of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER].

The amendment (No. 4381) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily lay aside the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4382

(Purpose: Provides reimbursement to community health centers for retention of national health service corps personnel)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4382.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Provided further, That such funds as may be necessary shall be transferred from the National Health Service Corps to the Community Health Center program to pay for the salaries, benefits and other expenses associated with the private placement assignment of Corps personnel:

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, my amendment does not increase the Community Health Center appropriation, but rather allows funds not used to pay the salaries of Federal assignees under the NHSC to be used instead to make supplemental grants to health centers to help them meet the cost of hiring the NHSC obligees. Without such language, the complete burden of payment rests with the health centers, who too often in the past have had to cut back on health and preventive services in order to meet NHSC conversion costs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4382) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily lay aside the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4383

(Purpose: To assure that of the funds appropriated for the Education of the Handicapped Act adequate amounts be expended for activities authorized by Part D of that Act)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4383.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 45, line 25, strike out "and" and insert in lieu thereof a comma.

On page 45, line 26, after "section 619" insert a comma and the following: "and $61,000,000 for Part D of such Act, including special education supervision, administration and research, special projects, and State education agency programs under existing grants and contracts as well as new grants and contracts as authorized by such Part D,".

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the special education personnel development amendment does not add any additional money to the committee's mark for this program. This amendment merely ensures that appropriated funds will be allocated for those activities authorized for awards in doctoral and postdoctoral support, State educational agency programming, special projects, and specialized training of regular educators.

The need for additional and better trained special education personnel is critical, and the committee wants to make clear that all priorities must be funded. The importance of efforts to both increase the number of qualified teacher candidates and improve the proficiency of teachers who are already on the job cannot be overemphasized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4383) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily lay aside the committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4384

(Purpose: To assure $500,000 is spent for the Theater of the Deaf)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4384.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unamimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 46, line 2, before the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That $500,000 of the amounts available under this heading for part F of the Education of the Handicapped Act shall be available for the Theater of the Deaf".

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the opportunity for handicapped people to be exposed to the arts is extremely important. This amendment prevents the elimination of funding for the American Theater of the Deaf which has provided a great service to the handicapped population. This amendment adds no funds to the committee mark, but, rather, ensures that funds will be allocated by the Department for this purpose at the same rate as previous years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4384) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4385

(Purpose: To provide funding for an expanded 9-member Benefits Review Board and support staff)

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, on behalf of my senior colleague, Senator RANDOLPH, and myself, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the committee amendment will be temporarily set aside. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. BYRD], for himself and Mr. RANDOLPH, proposes an amendment numbered 4385.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 15, line 13, strike "$100,730,000," and insert in lieu thereof "102,330,000"

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the amendment I offer today will provide an additional $1.6 million in funding to support the expansion of the Benefits Review Board from the current three-member Board to nine members.

The Senate and the House of Representatives have passed the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act Amendments of 1983, S. 38, which includes provisions to expand the Board by two permanent members and by four temporary members who would serve for 1-year terms.

With the adoption of this amendment, adequate funding will be provided in this bill to support 157 FTE's for the Benefits Review Board and the required support personnel.

We are experiencing an intolerable situation in the length of time it takes to review a black lung claim at the Benefits Review Board level. In fiscal year 1980, the backlog of cases at the Benefits Review Board was 102. In 4 years, that backlog has grown to over 6,000 cases and it is estimated that the backlog will reach over 7,000 cases at the end of fiscal year 1985. Obviously, the delays on appeals processing will continue to grow if some action is not taken to reduce this backlog.

During budget oversight hearings on the fiscal year 1985 budget request for the Department of Labor, I questioned Secretary Donovan about these backlogs. In response to my question about this serious problem, Secretary Donovan replied, and I quote:

It is a major problem and a major backlog. It is almost like putting your finger in one portion of a dike and having more water flow out of the other.

The Secretary of Labor further had these comments to make in response to my questions as to whether he would support expansion of the Benefits Review Board.

I believe the answer lies in moving to increase the productivity, and increasing the size of the Benefits Review Board higher than it is.

To put this backlog in perspective, individuals who filed for black lung benefits in 1977, 1978, and 1979 have still not had a final determination if their claim was appealed to the Benefits Review Board. That is 7 years—it is a long time to wait when you are sick—and—even sadder still—there have been cases where individuals have died before their appeals could be heard by the Benefits Review Board.

This amendment would address that backlog by providing the necessary funding to allow for expansion of the Board.

In all fairness to the individuals who have filed for these benefits, I would urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my distinguished colleague and good friend, the Democratic leader, Senator BYRD, in offering this amendment to add $1.6 million to the Department of Labor appropriation for fiscal year 1985 to expand the Benefits Review Board. It is our intention that the resources be used for expanding the Board and providing adequate support staff.

One might question why we need to add money at this time. I think I can answer that concern by a simple statement, "Justice delayed is justice denied."

S. 38, the Longshore Reform Act, passed the House of Representatives by a voice vote on September 18, and was approved by the Senate by a voice vote September 20. The conference agreement includes language to authorize expansion of the Benefits Review Board. S. 38 increases the permanent membership of the Board from three to five members and authorizes the Secretary of Labor to appoint up to four administrative law judges as temporary members for terms up to 1 year.

The Benefits Review Board of the Department of Labor has the important responsibility of reviewing administrative law judges' decisions on claims filed under the Black Lung Act and the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act. Congress created the Board in 1972 in an attempt to streamline review of these claims. The Board performs the same judicial appellate review function which the U.S. district courts exercised prior to 1972.

I believe that individuals who have filed claims under the Black Lung Act and the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (LHCA) have a right to expect expeditious handling of those claims through the adjudication process. Unfortunately, that has not been the situation in recent years. In fact, claimants are facing a 5-year wait for final action by the Board.

The Board is now facing an enormous backlog of cases which developed as a result of the 1977 amendments to the Black Lung Act. The 1977 amendments required that the Department of Labor review all existing claims as well as accept new claims, which has added approximately 350,000 cases under their consideration. This one-time increase has been working its way through the adjudication process and will continue to cause a backlog at the Board.

In spite of the enormous increase in cases, the three-member Board and support staff has remained the same. Consequently, the backlog of cases has continued to grow. At the present time the three-member Board has an estimated backlog of cases of more than 9,000 which includes 3,000 new appeals docketed. The caseload is projected to continue increasing so that by fiscal year 1986, the Board would face nearly 11,000 cases. Working at optimum productivity, a three-member Board is able to dispose of 1,440 cases per year. Clearly, this rate of disposition falls far short of what is needed, and I am pleased that the Longshore Reform Act provides for a nine-member Board.

We must also note that the caseload before the Board breaks down as 80 percent black lung claims and 20 percent longshore claims. Many of the black lung claimants in particular are of advanced years and a 5-year wait for a final decision on their claims is simply unacceptable. By the same token, in cases where a claimant has been placed into "interim pay" from the black lung disability trust fund following an initial determination of eligibility by the Department of Labor, it is important that a responsible operator be able to fully adjudicate a case as expeditiously as possible.

The black lung compensation program for disabled miners and their families is extremely important in our State of West Virginia. As one of the authors of the original Black Lung Act of 1969 and subsequent amendments, I believe that we must compensate individuals who have become disabled in our coal mines, and we must provide for the widows and children of miners who have lost their health and their lives to the disabling lung diseases. Pneumoconiosis, or black lung, robs a miner of his breath and eventually his health and is caused principally by the inhalation of coal dust. We have a responsibility to compensate the victims of this terrible disease. In West Virginia, there are 88,536 individuals receiving black lung compensation.

I emphasize, this amendment makes no changes in the black lung program, but it will provide resources to the Department of Labor for expansion of the Benefits Review Board, which has been authorized in the Longshore Reform Act so that claimants and operators may have their claims adjudicated in an expeditious and reasonable period.

I urge my colleagues to accept this amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the distinguished managers of the bill have studied this amendment. I hope they will accept it and that the Senate will adopt it.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I am prepared to accept this amendment to reduce the backlog of black lung appeal cases by expanding the Benefits Review Board.

The Labor Department should take immediate action to prepare for hiring the additional staff called for by this amendment, without making offsetting reductions in FTE's of any other agency.

I commend the minority leader and the senior Senator from West Virginia for their input on this particular matter. I think it is a fine thing and deserves our serious consideration.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4385) was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I want to thank the manager of the bill for his kind remarks and also for this acceptance of this amendment. He has always been very considerate of the problems that we have with respect to this matter.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, prior to yielding to my good friend from Pennsylvania, I would like to alert my colleagues that I intend to close this discussion in a matter of a few minutes. Those who have amendments should come to the floor to present them. Both the majority and minority leadership of the committee are in a good mood this afternoon. As these moments are very rare indeed, I suggest that Senators take advantage of them.

With those comments, I now yield the floor to my good friend from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, first, I thank my good friend from Connecticut for yielding. It is, indeed, a great privilege as well as a pleasure to see the amicable feeling that exists on both sides of the aisle this afternoon. Let us hope this becomes the rule always and never the exception.

AMENDMENT NO. 4386

(Purpose: To provide fiscal year 1985 appropriations for title VI of the Education for Economic Security Act relating to Excellence in Education Program)

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the committee amendment will be temporarily set aside. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. HEINZ], for himself, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. CHILES, proposes an amendment numbered 4386.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

EXCELLENCE IN EDUCATION PROGRAM

For carrying out the provisions of title VI of the Education for Economic Security Act, $10,000,000 to remain available until expended.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. CHILES. It provides $10 million to fund the establishment of the Excellence in Education Program which the Senate authorized some months ago. It is my understanding that the distinguished manager of the bill, Senator WEICKER, and the committee have closely scrutinized the amendment and are prepared to accept the amendment.

I ask if my understanding is correct that the chairman of the committee is amenable to the amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. The chairman is amenable to the amendment and wants to compliment the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania for his foresight on this matter. I would hope that we could take this to conference and come out in a way that would be pleasing to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. HEINZ. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. PROXMIRE. We have been notified there are two amendments by the Senator from Pennsylvania. A hospice study amendment is one and the $10 million Excellence in Education Program is the other.

Mr. HEINZ. This is the excellence in education amendment.

Mr. President, I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for their comments and support of this amendment.

Mr. President, I will take 60 seconds to note that this amendment which funds the Excellence in Education initiative comes a year and a half after the issuance of the President's report, A Nation at Risk, a very dramatic report by our National Commission on Excellence in Education.

In the interim, the Secretary of Education has been trying to maintain the momentum for school improvement by rewarding schools, including many in Pennsylvania, with "excellence" flags.

Well, I think that is a step in the right direction, Mr. President. As nice as flags are, though, I think what we have done here today is to give a very tangible incentive for teachers, for parents, for school administrators to do still more.

Mr. President, it is time Congress took action to give the Secretary more with which to work. It is time for Congress to ensure that last year's outpouring of concern about "the rising tide of mediocrity" is sustained into 1985 and beyond.

Mr. President, education must stay at the top of this Nation's political agenda. In poll after poll, the American public has reaffirmed that the quality of education is one of the most important issues we face in the 1980's.

My amendment provides funds to enable the Secretary to promote excellence. By recognizing and rewarding selected public schools with incentive grants for school improvement activities recommended by the President's National Commission, we can rekindle the sense of urgency we all shared last year when we were confronted by that sobering assessment of the American educational system.

Mr. President, the Excellence in Education Act, which I introducted in June of 1983, became law this summer as title VI of the Education for Economic Security Act, better known in Congress as the math/science education bill. Title VI authorized $16 million in fiscal year 1984 and again in fiscal year 1985 for a program to be administered by the U.S. Secretary of Edcuation in conjunction with State and local education agencies.

With the $10 million the Senate is providing for the establishment of the excellence program, the Secretary shall be able to award grants of up to $25,000 for 1 year and $40,000 over 2 years to several hundred local schools across the country. The schools will be selected on a competitive basis by local school districts, chief state school officers and the Secretary of Education.

The small incentive grant strategy for promoting school improvement is one being pursued in Pittsburgh, San Francisco, and other urban areas by local, privately supported, public education funds and by the Ford Foundation on the Nation level. Typical of this approach was the announcement by the Washington Post last year of annual awards of $2,000 to outstanding teachers and a $25,000 sum for special projects. To encourage further public/private partnerships in public education, my legislation sets aside 20 percent of the award money for schools that match Federal funds with private contributions from businesses and individuals in the local community.

The excellence in education legislation is unique among Federal education programs because rather than targeting specific curriculum areas or specific groups of children, it is designed to allow local educators to use Federal seed money to fashion their own plans for improving the total school environment. I urge my colleagues to join me in passing this important legislation.

Mr. President, again, I thank my good friend from Connecticut, the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. WEICKER] and his most able ranking member, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE].

● Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I am happy to join Senator HEINZ in supporting this amendment to provide startup funding for the excellence demonstrations program that was authorized as part of the math-science program.

It is a very modest program. Though the cost is not great, I think the impact of direct Federal support—in the form of competitive grants—for good schools models and other efforts to implement the recommendations of these excellence reports will be positive. It will complement what States and locals are already doing. It will serve as an incentive to try new things and compete with other schools for improvement. And the results of the successful demonstrations will be disseminated and replicated.

I believe the Federal Government, in the coming years, needs to take an effective, comprehensive, and ongoing role in supporting the restoration of excellence to our Nation's schools. As we seek a consensus and the development of a complete package of programs to achieve this, I think we should act now, with programs like this, to provide the incentives and the various supports for what we know works.●

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I am delighted to join with Senator HEINZ today in offering an amendment to provide startup funds for the Excellence in Education Program.

Authorized earlier this year as title VI of the Education for Economic Security Act, this legislation establishes a first-of-its-kind program to encourage efforts to improve schools across our Nation. It establishes a competitive program of grants to local schools which submit plans for improving the learning environment.

The Excellence in Education Program authorizes the Secretary of Education to award grants to schools across the United States over the next 2 years. The schools would be selected on a competitive basis by local school districts, State education officials and the Secretary of Education. Awards would be made to schools which demonstrate a commitment to improvement, through such activities as—

Modernization and improvement of curricula;

Increasing graduation requirements in basic subjects;

Strengthening attendance policies to reduce absenteeism and tardiness;

Experimentation with a longer school day or year;

Providing incentives to teachers for outstanding performance; and Development of new models of school-community relationships and business-education partnerships.

While it is more important than ever to maintain a strong national commitment to quality education, Americans recognize that solution to many of our problems must originate at the local level, in response to local problems and priorities. The Excellence in Education Program does not prescribe a single solution for the challenges facing American education, but encourages local educators to concentrate on those strategies best suited to their schools.

Although the amount of funding sought in the amendment is modest, it will permit the Department of Education to establish this competitive grant program during fiscal year 1985. This program can play a key role in promoting school improvement activities throughout the United States. I urge my colleagues to join me today in supporting the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I think we are ready to put the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4386) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4387

(Purpose: To provide a grant to the University of Hawaii for the planning, development, establishment, and operation of a project to train and provide appropriate health professionals for American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands)

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk in behalf of Mr. INOUYE and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HECHT). The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE], for Mr. INOUYE, proposes an amendment numbered 4387.

On page 17, line 22, insert the following after the colon:

Provided further, That $5,000,000 shall be available to make grants to the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii, to plan, develop, and operate a program for the training of medical officers to serve in American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, under Section 301 of the U.S. Public Health Service Act. These funds may be used for alteration and renovation of facilities, travel, and student stipends, among other costs as necessary, for the training program, and shall remain available until expended.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment in behalf of the senior Senator from Hawaii [Mr. INOUYE]. Senator INOUYE is necessarily absent in Hawaii, which is a long way away. He wanted to be sure the Senate would take action on this matter.

This amendment is an outgrowth of the Honolulu, HI, subcommittee hearings. Dean Terry Rogers of the University of Hawaii's School of Medicine highlighted their plan to ensure that there would be sufficient health manpower to serve the pressing needs of the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and American Samoa; that is, the Pacific Basin.

Presently, the backbone of health care delivery are 35 Fiji-trained medical officers who will all be retiring in the near future. That school no longer trains such personnel; the region has never been able to obtain sufficient nursing or medical personnel from the mainland United States. In August 1984, GAO issued a report highlighting the pressing need for adequately trained health manpower for the Pacific Basin and pointed out that:

There is little indication that sufficient Micronesian physicians will be available in the near future to alleviate the shortage. Few Pacific Basin students are entering the health field, because the education systems in the region do not adequately prepare them for the rigors of U.S. medical schools. Those that do successfully complete a medical program, however, usually opt for stateside careers. In addition, the Guam and Fiji medical officer programs no longer exist. Health care officials express concern over the impending loss of their medical officers, yet no effective program currently exists to provide future medical officers.

There is a unique Federal responsibility involved. The U.S. presence in Micronesia is the result of a deliberate policy to protect our own national security; that is, national defense interest. We have historical and treaty obligations to provide health care. There are truly unique health care needs: The infant mortality rate in the Trust Territory is 30:1,000 or nearly twice that of the United States; in the Marshall Islands, nearly half those over 50 have diabetes; the incidence of childhood leukemia in Ponape and Kosrae is 10 times that which should be expected.

This project would be established for 10 years and would then be phased out. It would train 70 new Micronesian medical officers to provide primary health care for the next 25 years. The Department has legislative authority to fund the program, both under section 301 of the U.S. Public Health Service Act and the health manpower legislation; $1 million of private funds have already been committed, if Federal funds are appropriated. Interior has already committed $130,000 for planning funds. The cost is $10 million over 10 years.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment as offered by the Senator from Wisconsin in behalf of the distinguished Senator from Hawaii. I urge its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4387) was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I inquire if there are other Senators who have amendments at this time.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescined.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so order.

AMENDMENT NO. 4388

(Purpose: To prohibit the expenditure of funds for the making or execution of any contract to administer a Civilian Conservation center of the Job Corp)

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of the distinguished senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS] and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the committee amendment will be set aside.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE], for Mr. BUMPERS, proposes an amendment numbered 4388.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no funds appropriated by this Act may be used to execute or carry out any contract with a non-governmental entity to administer or manage Civilian Conservation center of the Job Corps which was not under such a contract as of September 1, 1984."

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, this amendment is a simple one. It is intended to prevent the Labor Department from taking action, which they now intend to take, which would do serious damage to the Civilian Conservation Centers of the Job Corps. All Members of this body, I am sure, know of my long-standing commitment to the Job Corps, and particularly to the Civilian Conservation Centers which are operated in the National Forests by the Department of Agriculture and in the National Parks by the Department of the Interior. These centers, Mr. President, have been among the most successful Federal programs ever offered in the job training area. Moreover, the drastic reductions which have occurred in domestic spending since 1981 have left the Job Corps as perhaps the only effective such program for severely economically disadvantaged youth. It provides training in basic skills in a number of areas in a residential setting which is secure and which provides adequate housing and nutrition.

The Job Corps costs money, and there have been concerns expressed that costs could be reduced in the Civilian Conservation Centers. But what the administration is now about to do amounts to throwing the baby out with the bath water. The Labor Department has recently initiated a procedure under OMB Circular A-76 which would likely result in removing the CCC's completely from the Forest Service and the Park Service, and placing them in the hands of private contractors. The money spent on the Job Corps, Mr. President, is well spent, and it would be completely contrary to congressional intent to turn these centers over to private hands.

The funding level in this bill assumes that these important centers will continue to be run by these agencies. In addition, the late Chairman PERKINS attempted to make clear Congress' intent in this regard in a colloquy on the House floor on August 1, 1984. Chairman NATCHER and Representative CONTE agreed with Representative PERKINS that it was not congressional intent that the management of these centers could be contracted out. At the same time, they made it equally clear that the Forest Service and the Parks Service could continue, as they have for some time, to contract out for specific services in the centers, such as food service, if doing so would save money.

The Department of Labor has proceeded to simply ignore these rather clear statements of congressional intent by initiating the A-76 proceedings with both the Departments of Agriculture and Interior. My amendment simply makes clear through a restriction on funding that Congress means business when we say that we like the Job Corps, and we do not intend that the CCC's be sold to the highest bidder.

I might add, Mr. President, that we in Arkansas are particularly proud of the Ouachita and Cass Civilian Conservation Centers, which have been selected by the Labor Department as the two most outstanding Job Corps Centers in the United States for the past 2 years, based on quality of student achievement and other factors. These centers have exemplary records. They have done outstanding jobs, and I want them to be able to continue to function exactly as they have for the last 2 years.

I should also add, Mr. President, that Congressman PAT WILLIAMS of Montana should be listed as a cosponsor of this amendment. It was he and his excellent staff which brought to my attention the Labor Department's intentions in this regard, and they have worked closely with me and my staff in formulating this amendment in attempting to bring the administration back into line.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the amendment that is pending before the Senate has been discussed with the manager of the bill. I understand it is acceptable.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, we accept the amendment. We can take it to conference.

This amendment merely preserves the status quo whereby 30 Job Corps centers will remain operated by the U.S. Forest Service and U.S. Park Service. There is no change in the Job Corps appropriation. I recommend adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. BUMPERS].

The amendment (No. 4388) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4389

(Purpose: To increase appropriations for school assistance in federally affected areas to assure the continuation of "B" students under that Act, and for other purposes)

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. ABDNOR] proposes an amendment numbered 4389.

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 44, line 6, strike out "$565,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$675,000,000".

On page 44, line 7, strike out "$20,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$22,000,000".

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I think both managers of the bill are aware of the amendment that I am offering. After due consideration, we think we have arrived at the proper figures. We have lowered the figures that we put in our original amendment so they are more in line with the subcommittee's budget allocation.

Mr. President, my amendment increases funding for school assistance in federally affected areas by $110 million, and continues support for category "B" payments. Mr. President, I understand the managers of the bill are familiar with the amendment and are prepared to accept it. I move its adoption.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the amendment of Senator ABDNOR is one with which certainly the committee wants to work. We are obviously confronted with overall totals. This amendment should not exceed those totals in conference.

The Senator has my assurance that we will try to bring about the best possible results.

I urge acceptance of the amendment.

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, I have all the confidence in the world that the chairman will do exactly that. The Senator from Connecticut has been most kind and understanding of the problems confronting federally impacted school systems, and I am extremely grateful to both he and the distinguished ranking member of the subcommittee, Mr. PROXMIRE, and their staffs for the consideration they have given us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4389) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, that concludes all the amendments that have come to the cognizance of the committee.

There is one more amendment, by the distinguished Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], which will be presented on Tuesday. There is still the matter of the committee amendment that relates to abortion. Those are matters that it is hoped will be resolved on Tuesday.

At this time, I intend to request a quorum call. It had occurred to me that this also might be the time to obtain unanimous consent that there be no further amendments, except those to which I have referred, but that might prove to be a greater hindrance than a help, and I will restrain from doing that at this time.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AIDS RESEARCH COLLOQUY

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as my good friend from Connecticut, the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related agencies [Mr. WEICKER] is aware, I, together with Senators KENNEDY, MOYNIHAN, and RIEGLE, originally intended to propose an amendment to add $46.41 million to the Appropriations Committee's reported bill for AIDS research and related activities. A major portion of the difference between that amount and the amount of the add-on we are actually proposing is attributable to the fact that included in the $5,163,597,000 proposed in the bill for the National Institutes of Health is at least $15.431 million more for AIDS research than the administration has requested. I had indicated in my September 7, 1984, letter to the subcommittee chairman that, if it could be clarified what amount of the add-on for NIH would be spent for AIDS research, I would gladly reduce the total dollar figure of our amendment by that amount.

I have discussed this matter with the chairman, who has been a steadfast champion of adequate Federal funding for AIDS research, and now understand that out of the NIH funds that would be appropriated in the bill as reported the Department of Health and Human Services has advised that NIH intends to spend at least $15.431 million more for AIDS research than the $45.663 million the administration proposed in its budget for NIH to use for AIDS.

Mr. President, I would like to ask the chairman whether my understanding is correct.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I certainly share the deep concern of the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON] that we remain committed to the goal of finding the means to treat and ultimately prevent AIDS, and I am pleased to reassure the Senator that his understanding is correct. I have been advised by the Department of Health and Human Services that out of the NIH appropriation in the bill NIH would use at least $15.431 million more for the AIDS research than the $45.663 million originally planned for that purpose in the administration's fiscal year 1985 budget. Thus, under the committee bill there is a total of at least $61.094 million in the NIH appropriation for AIDS.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I would like to thank the Senator from Connecticut for that reassurance. I also want to express my appreciation for the cooperation of the Senator—and of the appropriation subcommittee staff assisting him—on this amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of the amendment of the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], I also would like to express my appreciation for the assurance given by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER]. In April of this year, it was announced that the probable cause of this disease had been isolated and, according to Assistant Secretary for Health, Dr. Edward Brandt, with additional funding a means to treat AIDS could be within our sights. I am very pleased that an additional $15.431 million will be used by the NIH for AIDS research, and also would like to thank the subcommittee chairman and his staff for their assistance in this matter.

Mr. HATCH. There is a matter that I would like to raise at this point with the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies. On August 20, I sent, in collaboration with the five other principal sponsors of the amendment—No. 3421—adopted by the Senate on July 26, 1984, relating to the so-called Baby Doe issue, a letter to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut expressing our concerns about an amendment adopted in the House which added $1 million to the appropriation for the Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Health and Human Services for the purpose of "pursuing Baby Doe complaints." I will not reiterate all the points made in the letter but simply state that each of the principal sponsors of the Baby Doe legislation passed on July 26 continues to be deeply concerned about some of the misunderstandings which have arisen as a result of the House's adoption of this appropriations amendment and joins with me in attempting to rectify these misunderstandings.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this letter be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND HUMAN RESOURCES,
Washington, DC, August 20, 1984.

Hon. LOWELL WEICKER,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR LOWELL: We are writing with regard to the House version of the FY 1985 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Appropriations bill (H.R. 6028) and an amendment which added $1,095,000 to the appropriation for the activities of the HHS Office for Civil Rights (OCR) in order to restore the FY 1984 funding level.

The purpose of the amendment, according to its sponsor, was to allow that office to "pursue 'Baby Doe' complaints with sufficient resources." The discussion in the August 1, 1984, Congressional Record (H 8151), with regard to OCR enforcement activities, made reference to a House bill "setting up a procedure under which the States and the Federal Government will investigate complaints of mistreatment or nontreatment" and further stated that the Senate had passed a "similar bill." While we are unable to offer an authoritative interpretation of the House legislation, as the principal sponsors of the Senate measure we can state authoritatively that the House sponsor's interpretation of the Senate provision is incorrect.

The Senate, on July 26, 1984, adopted by a vote of 89–0, the provisions of S. 1003 as amended, the "Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment and Adoption Reform Act." S. 1003 was designed to address situations of withholding of medical treatment to disabled infants by relying upon existing state child protective services systems. Throughout the statutory language and accompanying explanatory material, we refer to authority under state law as the mechanism for pursuing legal remedies under our amendment. This legislation does not itself authorize direct federal involvement in individual cases.

An important element of this compromise was that S. 1003 is neutral with regard to the on-going controversy over the applicability of a federal remedy to Baby Doe situations under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. This policy of neutrality is expressly set forth in section 205(a) of the Senate-passed Baby Doe amendment as follows:

"No provision of the Act or any amendment made by this Act is intended to affect any right or protection under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973."

Lowell, our principal concern is that the House appropriations amendment, by linking OCR funds to "Baby Doe" complaints and to H.R. 1904 and S. 1003, violates the policy of neutrality we intend for that legislation and jeopardizes the broad coalition supporting the Baby Doe amendment.

As you know, S. 2836, the Senate Labor-HHS-Education Appropriations Act, as reported, does not include the additional OCR add-on. We are writing to ask that, if you recede to the House OCR add-on in conference, the Statement of managers provide expressly that the add-on is for a purpose other than that of the House amendment. We would also ask that, if you do not recede, you not agree to include any Statement of Managers language that would deal with Baby Doe questions.

In order to clarify Congressional intent, we would like to enter into a colloquy with you when the Senate takes up the Appropriations Act. The purpose of the colloquy would generally be to secure your agreement to ensure that any legislative history underlying action on HHS appropriations would be silent as to the questions surrounding the authority of HHS to pursue Baby Doe complaints under section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973. We know that you, as Chairman of the Subcommittee on the Handicapped of the Labor and Human Resources Committee as well as Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor/Health and Human Services/Education, understand very well the great delicacy of this matter and the legal disputes surrounding it.

Senate adoption of the Baby Doe compromise was possible only because it was endorsed by a broad coalition of disability, pro-life, and health groups. Enclosed is a copy of an August 6, 1984, letter to Chairman Hatch, from six of the disability, pro-life groups that endorsed the compromise and also were listed in the House debate as endorsing the House OCR add-on amendment, expressing support for our efforts to make the clarification described in this letter.

We wish to make clear that we are writing this letter as partners in the authorship of the Senate Baby Doe measure. Although individually we may differ on the merits of the policy underlying the House amendment, we are united in the positions expressed in this letter. We look forward to working together with you to develop an appropriate colloquy.

Sincerely,

ORRIN G. HATCH,
Chairman.
JEREMIAH DENTON,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Family and Human Services.
DON NICKLES.
NANCY LANDON KASSEBAUM.
CHRISTOPHER DODD,
Ranking Minority Member, Subcommittee on Family and Human Services.
ALAN CRANSTON.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, let me respond to the Senator from Utah by saying that I have carefully read the August 20 letter. I assure the Senator that I will defend the Senate position on the Office for Civil Rights, keeping in mind the concerns expressed in the letter. We have appropriated $17,850,000 for the Office which is the same amount requested in the President's budget. This includes a reduction of 50 FTE positions, and the committee report asks the Office to provide the committee with a report describing the effects of the change.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I have listened with great interest to the discussion between the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Connecticut. As one of the principal Senate sponsors of the amendment adopted by the Senate on July 26, I appreciate the commitment made by my colleague from Connecticut regarding the issue, as I know does the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], who is also a principal sponsor of the amendment and shares my deep concern about this particular issue.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee for his assistance in this matter. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. DENTON], the Senator from California [Mr. NICKLES], and the Senator from Kansas [Mrs. KASSEBAUM], the other three principal Senate sponsors, also share our concerns about this matter, and I know that they are very appreciative for the Senator's help.

DENTAL RESEARCH INSTITUTES AND CENTER

● Mr. EVANS. As the Senator from Connecticut is undoubtedly aware, the National Institute of Dental Research [NIDR] has proposed in its fiscal year 1985 budget request a plan to phaseout the five Dental Research Institutes and Centers [DRIC]. I would like to point out to my colleagues that the DRIC's have been an exceptionally effective mechanism for strengthening the scientific base through which we have taken great strides in improving the oral health of our Nation. The DRIC mechanism links the most advanced research in molecular biology, immunology, biochemistry, biophysics, and computer science with pursuit of improved methodologies in health care. This comprehensive approach has produced an exemplary record of achievement in the biomedical sciences, as currently demonstrated through scientific peer review and by the reports to the Congress from NIDR.

Although I favor competition among research institutions, as proposed, the phaseout plan would interrupt ongoing research programs which have already been subjected to scientific peer review and have been approved with the highest recommendations. I am informed, Mr. Chairman, that the committee has not endorsed this administrative procedure. Is that correct?

● Mr. WEICKER. The Senator is correct.

● Mr. EVANS. I believe that there is a question of fairness here concerning the treatment of these universities who have planned their long-term research programs in accordance with the 5-year grant they were awarded. Does the Senator agree that a fairness question arises in this matter?

● Mr. WEICKER. Yes; I agree with the Senator from Washington State. I too am concerned with the fairness of the early termination of these grants. I am also concerned, however, that Congress not interfere unnecessarily with the NIDR's internal policy decisions.

● Mr. GORTON. I would like to ask the manager of the bill if it is not true that the House has rejected the proposed phaseout and directed that NIDR fully satisfy its current commitments to the DRIC programs. At the same time, the committee supported the concept of open competition and directed that planning for such competitive procedures continue with a view to maintaining the strengths of the DRIC programs. This language appears to address the fairness question while allowing the procompetition policy to go forward. Although I respect the Senator's desire not to involve himself unnecessarily in the management of the Institute, I would hope he could agree that this is a case where some congressional direction is desirable, and hence could support the House language.

● Mr. WEICKER. I can assure the Senators that I am sympathetic with their concerns about the issue of fairness and will address that concern in conference.

● Mr. GORTON. I thank the Senator.

● Mr. EVANS. I also want to thank the manager of the bill for his attention to our concern.●

Mr. KENNEDY. I commend Senator WEICKER for his work on this bill. I know the multitudinous pressures he was operating under in preparing this legislation.

There were several important initiatives we undertook in the Labor and Human Resources Committee this year that were not funded in this bill. These initiatives are very small in dollar terms but very important in terms of people's lives.

I understand that the committee failed to fund these programs not because of any negative judgment on their merits but because the authorizing legislation has not been signed into law. I rise to request the subcommittee chairman's assurance that he will do his best to accommodate these programs by supporting their inclusions in a future supplemental if they are in fact enact.

I refer specifically to the following new programs:

First, our committee's prevention bill included a $5 million authorization for grants to States to assist them in developing comprehensive prevention strategies and data systems to track progress toward achievement of prevention goals.

Since the days when I first attempted to place health promotion and disease prevention at the center of our national health agenda, there has been a growing recognition that a comprehensive, aggressive prevention strategy can be our most effective weapon in the struggle to secure health and well-being for the American people. As Assistant Secretary Brandt recently stated:

> The time has come for us to turn our attention as a nation to the preservation of good health, the promotion and enhancement of healthful life-styles, and the prevention of disease and disability.

As a result of a series of reports beginning with the 1979 Surgeon General's report, "Healthy People," the knowledge base for rapid improvements in the health of the American people through an effective prevention strategy is now in place. This roadmap of a prevention strategy can not be successful, however, without effective implementation. The major missing ingredient in our national prevention strategy has been the lack of an effective Federal-State partnership to assure comprehensive prevention planning and service delivery at the State and community level where people can be most effectively reached.

A number of States, including my own State of Massachusetts, Utah, and Texas have already gone through this process of establishing comprehensive State prevention plans and developing a measurement and reporting system to ensure the plan objectives are achieved. Funding of this small grant program would encourage these vital State efforts.

Second, the prevention bill included a small $2 million demonstration program to improve pediatric emergency services. We have made great strides in developing an emergency medical system in recent years, but the special needs of children—for whom accidents are the leading cause of mortality—have not always been met by this system. This small program will help fill that gap.

Third, our committee's ADAMHA block grant reauthorization bill included authorization for support for a similar planning activity out of general PHS support funds. We assumed a support level of around $5 million annually. The mentally ill—particularly the chronically mentally ill—are one of the most disgracefully treated of all our dependent populations.

This is partly a result of inadequate commitment of resources, but an even more important factor may be poor use of large existing resources.

ADAMHA block grant expenditures are a tiny proportion of total national treatment expenditures for chronic mental illness. Medicaid and State-only mental health expenditures on the chronically mentally ill were $5.4 billion in 1983, compared to less than $.3 billion for ADAMHA block grant funds. But non-PHS funds were overwhelmingly spent on institutional rather than community-based care, and, in the case of medicaid, cannot even be tracked to services for the chronically mentally ill except through special studies.

Other populations that have been neglected in our current mental health service delivery system are the elderly, children, and those residents in underserved areas. The elderly receive community services at a lower rate than the population as a whole, even though an estimated 10–25 percent in the community have some degree of mental impairment and the suicide rate of the elderly is 1½ times the rate for all ages. Of 3 million seriously disturbed children, an estimated two-thirds are not getting the treatment they need.

Assistance to encourage States to develop good planning and tracking systems for the total network of available funds and services can make a real difference in meeting these needs with only modest increases in resources.

Fourth, our ADAMHA block grant bill included a $20 million authorization for our new research, demonstration and technical assistance authority. Built on the Community Support Program model—which the Appropriations Committee has dealt with generously in the past—this new authority would enhance the Federal role in helping States deal with these severely deprived populations.

Fifth, our Family Violence Prevention Act provides for the Secretary of HHS to make grants to public agencies and nonprofit organizations in order to assist in the prevention of family violence.

This critically needed program is the result of many years of work in this Senate and represents the Federal Government's acknowledgement of its responsibility to address the issue of family violence.

It is a small beginning in the struggle to prevent this major societal problem, a tragedy for everyone it touches.

A final program that will need an appropriation once it is authorized is the National Summit Conference on Education. This program, which would be authorized for $500,000, provides for a national conference among policymakers, educators and citizens to discuss the present and future direction of education in the United States and to facilitate intergovernmental and intragovernmental cooperation among these groups. The National Summit Conference is scheduled to meet in January 1985.

I know the Senator from Connecticut is committed to the goals of these small but vital initiatives. Can I count on his efforts to secure funding for these programs on the first appropriate vehicle if and when these new authorities are enacted?

Mr. WEICKER. I thank the Senator for his interest in these matters. Indeed, as the ranking member of the Committee on Labor and Human Resources, the Senator from Massachusetts has provided great leadership on health and education related issues and it has been my pleasure to serve with him on that committee.

I very much appreciate the Senator's concerns for funding these new initiatives. The Committee on Appropriations, with few exceptions, recommended funding for existing programs where the Senate has passed an authorization. This was done, very frankly, so as not to prejudice the actions of the authorization committees. Funding for new programs will therefore have to be considered at a later time on an appropriate bill. I, of course, welcome the opportunity to work with my colleague from Massachusetts for these programs.

PARALYSIS RESEARCH

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I want especially to congratulate the distinguished chairman of the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Subcommittee on Appropriations [Mr. WEICKER] on the provision in the pending measure that would provide $5 million in fiscal year 1985 appropriations to establish five "Senator Jacob Javits Centers of Excellence in Neuroscience" under the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke.

These centers, dedicated to intensive research to increase the understanding of neurological function and to finding the cause, means of prevention, and cure for neurological diseases, represent a relatively new and increasingly successful concept in research design. Over the last few decades, scientists have approached the neurosciences from a reductionist perspective—that is, they have sought to understand how the brain and nervous system work by looking at them piece by piece. The body of knowledge we have gained from this work has now advanced to the point where synthesis into broader concepts and principles and application in other fields is demanded.

The centers would provide a unique opportunity for scientists from diverse fields to combine their expertise to address fundamental issues of nervous system structure and function. Such multidisciplinary research centers would provide the best possible training of future neuroscientists, particularly clinician-scientists who must possess an interdisciplinary outlook in order to capitalize on current research and to accelerate the pace of new research without duplicating efforts.

In order to produce maximum efficiency and effectiveness for this research program, I believe it is important that each center be able to focus its research on central, critical questions in neuroscience. I strongly believe that one such focused area is paralysis research and that the development of a multidisciplinary research center to address this problem would greatly enhance our understanding of paralysis and accelerate our progress toward the day when we may be able to reverse this cruel disability and prevent its occurrence.

Recent breakthroughs in the neurosciences have led to a better understanding of spinal cord injury research. We now know that the initial injury to the spinal cord does not in itself cause paralysis unless the nerve fiber protected by the vertebrae are physically severed. Most paralyzing injuries begin with a severely bruised or stretched cord, and the body's response to this trauma sets off a chain reaction which produces paralysis. What this means is that research is ready to move into the area of intervention—to prevent paralysis by interfering with the paralyzing process or to restore already lost function through either nerve bypass, regeneration, reconnection, new growth of nerve tissue, or relearned or substituted functions.

The development of such a multidisciplinary center, the National Research Institute for Neural Injury, is already underway in San Francisco. This center, which has an in-house research capability at the University of California and the use of laboratories at the San Francisco Veterans' Administration Medical Center [VAMC] has as its goals the prevention of paralysis resulting from central nervous system injury and the reversal of chronic paralysis through the support and conduct of basic scientific research. It would fill a critical gap in current research efforts into the problem of paralysis by integrating paralysis research in the areas of spinal cord injury, head trauma, and stroke, into a comprehensive study of all symptons of reduced or lost functional control due to a severe injury to the central nervous system.

The center has already been successful in attracting major scientific talent as well as substantial private funding. In addition to its affiliation with UCSF and the San Francisco VAMC, the center has available substantial clinical support through UCSF's Moffit and Long Hospitals and the San Francisco General Hospital, the principal neural trauma center for the area. In addition, the center has established a network for neural injury, a national network and clearinghouse which provides up-to-date information and coordinates informal conferences in order to form a community of scientists around the world who can collaborate on research related to the reversal and prevention of paralysis.

Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Connecticut if the design of the "Senator Jacob Javits Centers of Excellence" Program would incorporate the specific research approach to paralysis that I have just described and whether a center such as the National Institute for Neural Injury would be eligible to apply for funding under the program.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I certainly share the deep-felt commitment of the Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON] to improving the quality of life for the 4 million Americans disabled by paralysis and preventing this catastrophic condition from afflicting many millions more in the future.

I understand that recent research findings about the progression of events, occurring from the molecular to the systemic level, which lead to paralysis are rapidly changing our perception about the cause and effect relationship between neural injury and paralysis and bringing about a view that neural injury and paralysis should be considered as a neurological function disorder which can be treated and, it is hoped, prevented.

The "Senator Jacob Javits Centers of Excellence" are to be designed so that multidisciplinary teams of the most capable scientists would address fundamental biological issues of nervous system structure and function. These centers of excellence would provide broad research freedom and funding stability over longer periods of time. I assure the Senator from California that paralysis research is an important area of research which the centers could address. I believe a center such as the National Research Institute for Neural Injury would be eligible to apply for funding under the center's program and I would certainly encourage them to do so once NINCDS begins its application process.

ARTS FOR THE HANDICAPPED PROGRAM

Mr. KASTEN. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment that will increase funding for the Arts for the Handicapped Program by $500,000, and bring the Senate's recommendation for this program in line with the House of Representative's figure.

The Arts for the Handicapped Program brings together the arts community with disabled students and adults throughout the Nation. This successful venture has increased public awareness about the value of arts in the education and lives of the disabled, and it has led to the successful integration of formerly neglected potential into the mainstream of cultural and social activities.

Through the very special arts festivals in each State, year-round activities have been made available to disabled individuals in communities across the country. The program also provides assistance for the development of model arts projects which expand opportunities for the disabled.

The Arts for the Handicapped Program started on a shoestring budget in 1976, supporting seven very special arts festivals around the country. By 1982, the program had reached 25 States. This year, there are State level programs operating year round nationwide, including Puerto Rico. In just 8 years, the Arts for the Handicapped Program has evolved into a full-time operation serving the disabled in every State.

The program is now expanding its base to reach more than 4.5 million handicappped students who have been indentified by the Department of Education. To accomplish this goal, the program needs adequate support.

In 1981, funding for the Arts for the Handicapped Program was cut from $1.5 million to $1.35 million, and that funding remained constant until 1984, when it was increased by $100,000. I believe that the success of this program coupled with the unmet needs of the disabled justifies an increase, and I urge adoption of this amendment to ensure the fulfillment of the program goals.

The $500,000 is quite a small increase, but it will have a tremendous impact on the ability of the arts program to reach more disabled individuals throughout the Nation. First, it will allow increases in grants to States, which will produce greater State matching funds. It will also allow increased challenge grants that match Federal dollars with private sector funds. As the number of program participants increases, the potential for inkind contributions will grow as well. Finally, this increase will support the development of materials to be used in arts programs nationwide. No doubt this relatively small increase will have a multiplicative effect on the program's ability to generate additional support.

To the chairman's credit, the Appropriations Committee has already increased funding for the Arts for the Handicapped Program by a little over $500,000. But I believe that an additional $500,000 will make a substantial difference in the ability of the program to reach even more handicapped individuals. I am aware of the obstacles we face in moving this bill and of the competing demands faced by the chairman. I have reduced my request to meet those concerns and I hope that the Senate will lend its support to this amendment.

I would just like to add, Mr. President, that there are few here in this body who have worked as long or as hard for the advancement of the disabled as the distinguished Senator from Connecticut. Indeed, few would challenge the statement that he is the strongest advocate in Congress for the handicapped population. I know that the Senator recognizes the important role this program has played in the development of the disabled and that he shares my support. Having said that, I would again urge the Senator to look favorably upon my amendment and to try to accommodate this request within our budgetary limits.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank the Senator from Wisconsin for his comments and commend him for his commitment to programs serving the handicapped. The Appropriations Committee has indeed demonstrated its support for this program by providing a fiscal year 1985 increase of $550,000 for a total for arts for the handicapped of $2 million. This amounts to a 38-percent increase in just 1 year, representing one of the largest single percent increases for any program in the Department of Education.

I am aware that the level approved by the House for this program is $2.5 million and that this issue, therefore, will be among those items to be worked out in conference. As my friend from Wisconsin is aware, however, the Arts for the Handicapped Program is one of those funded out of the Secretary of Education's discretionary fund. It would not be wise, therefore, to increase this one program through a floor amendment because of the larger questions which need to be resolved in conference. And since our recommendations add up to the full 6 percent set-aside allowable by law, any increase in the program at this time would either violate the underlying statute or come at the expense of one of the other programs in the set-aside. I am certain that the Senator would not wish to do either. Therefore, I ask that the Senator withdraw his amendment and await the outcome of the conference where we will give this matter full consideration.

Mr. KASTEN. Again, I thank the Senator for his consideration and I praise him for his outstanding leadership on this bill. He has done an excellent job of balancing the needs of many competing interests. Given the conflicting pressures of a limited budget and my interest in securing passage of this bill, I will withdraw my amendment and ask for the Senator's continued support for the Arts for the Handicapped Program and for my request during the conference.

NATIONAL LONGITUDINAL SURVEYS

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am concerned that in 1985 the Department of Labor is expected to reduce funding for the NLS—the national longitudinal surveys of labor market experience—by over 50 percent from fiscal 1984.

The NLS was begun in 1966. These surveys follow five nationally representative cohorts totaling 33,000 individuals who are now age 19 to 78. Information is collected from these individuals (assuring their anonymity) about their employment and unemployment, education and training, income, socioeconomic status, and family structure, as well as about their health, work attitudes, fertility, alcohol and drug use, and views about military service. These data are unique because the same individuals are surveyed each year.

Hundreds of researchers in academic and private institutions across the country make use of NLS data. Their studies address an enormous variety of policy-related questions, including what causes youth unemployment; how well Government training programs work; why young people enlist in the military; what causes race and sex differences in earnings; how Social Security and disability affect the retirement decisions of older men; as well as issues surrounding adolescent fertility, family formation, and the health of older Americans.

Findings from the NLS have been used extensively in the development of public policy. Special tabulations of NLS data have been asked for by the Departments of Labor, Defense, Education, Energy, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, and Transportation; the Congressional Budget Office; the Council of Economic Advisers; the Government Accounting Office, and a variety of congressional committees. Most recently, in May, the NLS provided primary data on the labor force characteristics of youth for the House Subcommittee on Employment Opportunities.

The NLS annually receives over $4 million from the Department of Labor and over $1.5 million from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Department of Defense and the armed services. It is more efficient to gather data about a variety of interrelated issues than to pay for studies designed to answer just one question. The expected cuts would seriously impair the usefulness of these unique and valuable data.

Would the Senator from Connecticut agree, that this source of information should not be imperiled and possibly lost?

Mr. WEICKER. Yes; the Senate Appropriations Committee added sufficient resources to the Labor Department's training and employment services appropriation to permit maintaining current funding for the National longitudinal surveys throughout program year 1985, without adversely affecting other congressional priorities or budgeted projects within the national activities line item. I might add that Senator GLENN recently wrote to me in support of the NLS, which is conducted at Ohio State University.

Mr. GLENN. I appreciate the comments of my two distinguished colleagues on this matter. The national longitudinal surveys, which have been conducted at Ohio State University, have contributed immeasurably to our ability to understand the changes taking place in America and to formulate appropriate public policy. I believe that it is vitally important to maintain this public resource. I am pleased to know that the Appropriations Committee has added sufficient funds to ensure the continuation of this program.

DISPLACED HOMEMAKERS

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I wish to clarify the Appropriations Committee's intentions regarding the Displaced Homemakers Network in the Department of Labor. Like other national programs of proven effectiveness such as OIC, 70001 Ltd., and HRDI, the Displaced Homemakers Network is intended to receive expanded funding in 1985 Labor Department appropriations. When the Senate Appropriations Committee appropriated $1 million in contract funding for the Women's Bureau Model Demonstration Program, we in effect transferred $400,000 from national activities to make up a part of the $1 million. This provides sufficient funds for expanded funding for the Displaced Homemakers Network. We intend that the network be supported with these funds.

I understand that the House of Representatives has passed a bill with similar report language. The House bill also appropriates $1 million for Women's Bureau model demonstration programs.

We did not intend to reduce or in any way diminish the Department of Labor's effort on behalf of the Displaced Homemakers Network and the constituents it serves. We simply wished to provide a supportive administrative environment for this vital program.

Mr. WEICKER. The Senator is correct. By doubling the funding for Women's Bureau special projects, I would certainly expect the Displaced Homemakers Network to share in the increase. It is my understanding that the Labor Department has finally extended funding for the Displaced Homemakers Network through program year 1984, at $200,000. It is my hope that the Women's Bureau will expeditiously work out funding for program year 1985, as soon as fiscal 1985 appropriations are available, in order to retain the forward funded nature of this program.

EMPLOYMENT SERVICES PROGRAMS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have a matter of concern that I would like to raise with my distinguished colleague, Senator WEICKER. The House-passed bill includes an additional $37 million for employment services and an additional $15 million for administration of the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit Program. I would hope that the Senate conferees would look favorably on the higher funding levels.

West Virginia continues to have double-digit unemployment, and, in fact, still has the highest unemployment rate in the Nation. Because of the budgetary cutbacks over the past couple of years, seven employment service offices have already been closed in my State. With the funding levels in the Senate bill, two more offices will have to be closed.

Certainly every consideration given the House funding level for employment services will be beneficial to my State and greatly appreciated.

Mr. WEICKER. The Senate version of the bill maintains current funding levels of $740 million and $20 million for employment service and targeted jobs tax credit activities, respectively, which are the amounts requested in the President's budget. Nevertheless, I will keep an open mind when we go to conference, with respect to the House increases for these programs. I would certainly not want to see States forced to close any more employment service offices.

PLAGUE

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I would like to bring an important public health problem that affects my State to the attention of the Senator from Connecticut. Plague, commonly known as bubonic plague, has been increasing in New Mexico. A total of 26 human plague cases were reported in New Mexico in 1983 and New Mexico consistently accounts for two-thirds of the Nation's plague cases.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask the Senator, Is it true that this problem is not just confined to New Mexico? How widespread is the problem?

Mr. BINGAMAN. A record number of 40 cases were reported in 1983 with six deaths. The bacteria that cause plague are carried by rodents and their fleas. Plague infected rodents have been found not only in 30 of New Mexico's 33 counties, but in areas of 15 Western States. Thus, there is a potential for human plague cases to originate in large areas of the American West. Although the plague can be cured with antibiotics, plague can be spread from one person to another if a complication known as pneumonic plague develops. When this occurs, the plague bacteria causes an infection in the lungs and when a person with pneumonic plague coughs, the bacteria are distributed in the air and can be inhaled by another person, resulting in additional cases of pneumonic plague. This form of the disease is highly fatal and can spread very rapidly.

Mr. WEICKER. Do I understand the Senator then that even a single pneumonic plague case has the potential to cause a major epidemic of pneumonic plague with many deaths?

Mr. BINGAMAN. Yes. Health officials are concerned because the proportion of plague cases that have developed pneumonic plague has been increasing. From 1949 to 1976, 5 of 68 patients or 7.4 percent developed pneumonic plague. Since 1974, 32 of 188 patients or 17 percent nationwide developed pneumonic plague. Pneumonic plague is of potential concern for the entire country because of the speed of moden travel. Because the disease is rare outside the West, physicians in other parts of the country may not make the correct diagnosis, increasing the chance of the patient developing pneumonic plague and setting the stage for spread to other persons. For example, last year a 13-year-old girl was infected with plague in New Mexico, became ill in South Carolina and died with pneumonic plague.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I share the Senator's concern for not only his State, but for citizens in other areas of the country. To what extent is the Centers for Disease Control [CDC] actively involved in a program to remedy this public health problem?

Mr. BINGAMAN. The Fort Collins Colorado office of CDC currently conducts a limited amount of plague research and there is still the additional need for research on preventive strategies. I would therefore suggest that it would be appropriate that the Federal Government make additional resources available to perform research on plague prevention now rather than wait until the problem is of such a magnitude that it is unmanageable.

Since 57 percent of all U.S. plague cases—and 65 percent of last year's cases—originate in New Mexico, New Mexico would be an ideal place to conduct such research. Five counties in north central New Mexico account for 61 percent of all cases in New Mexico, and because these counties are one of the highest risk plague areas in the country, that research specifically directed there could produce significant results. I believe that the Centers for Disease Control and the New Mexico Health and Environment Department have the necessary expertise to conduct such research and would suggest that a cooperative effort between these agencies, funded through the Federal Government, will be of benefit to the entire country.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I concur and pledge my support in achieving this worthwhile effort.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I appreciate the chairman's support and I would propose that Congress direct the Centers for Disease Control to conduct, cooperatively with the State of New Mexico Department of Health and Environment, a study in the Upper Rio Grande Valley and adjacent areas where plague is known to be hyperendemic to: First, confirm—or reject—the observed increase in reservoir rodent populations due to land use as practiced in the region; second, measure the increase in rodent populations relative to populations in undeveloped areas; third, determine the environmental factors responsible for any rodent population increases observed; fourth, define human risk of plague exposure in terms of environmental factors; and fifth, develop integrated control strategies, emphasizing environmental management to prevent human exposure to plague. For this purpose CDC should provide funding which would be appropriated out of existing moneys.

The ultimate responsibility for pursuing the strategies developed by the project belongs to the State of New Mexico and its local entities; therefore, their input and local knowledge in planning and implementing it are essential. At the same time, the expertise and perspective of CDC with regard to plague are unique and vital to the success of the project.

I would hope the Senator will join with me in writing to the Director of CDC and the Secretary of HHS in calling for such an effort.

Mr. WEICKER. I would be happy to join with the Senator from New Mexico in writing such a letter and I commend him for his initiative in this area.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I thank the Senator from Connecticut for his leadership, guidance, and cooperation.

COMPLIANCE AUDIT PROGRAM

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, since our committee held its hearings on the Labor Department budget in early March, the Departmental Inspector General's Office has issued a report that calls into very serious question the utility of positions which have been granted to the Department over the past 2 years for new compliance audit programs in the Labor Management Services Administration. While Secretary Donovan has reduced staffs for safety and health and wage and hour enforcement by more than 20 percent, he has repeatedly requested substantial staff increases in the Labor Management Services Administration to concentrate on audits and criminal investigations of labor unions almost to the exclusion of its other responsibilities.

The Inspector General's office has now concluded that the enforcement strategy for which these positions were requested and granted was developed without adequately defining the need for such an effort or clearly defining the strategy. It has led to ineffective compliance programs and an inadequate enforcement of the reporting and disclosure mandates of both and Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act [LMRDA] and the Employee Retirement Income Security Act [ERISA].

The report finds that the compliance audit progam has not achieved its objectives. It has not been successful in uncovering criminal activity, resolving many civil violations, nor meeting its enforcement presence or technical assistance goals. And it has drawn needed resources from other areas. The Inspector General's review of these audits shows a success rate of less than 1 percent and further shows that many of the cases claimed as successes were not really attributable to the efforts of the program.

Over 100 new compliance unit positions have been provided in the past 2 years. The Inspector General recommended that the compliance audit program be limited until such time as a full evaluation is conducted of the concept behind the program. I believe that the Department of Labor should follow the Inspector General's lead and that the Department should reallocate these positions to other more useful activities within the mandates of the LMRDA and ERISA.

Mr. WEICKER. I expect the Department to address the recommendations contained in the Inspector General's March 22 report. Since the Inspector General has recommended that the Labor-Management Standards Enforcement Program limit compliance audit detection efforts until an enforcement strategy evaluation has been completed, the Department should seriously consider shifting positions currently devoted to compliance audits to more productive uses within the mandates of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act. The Department should also be prepared to discuss the steps it has taken to implement the Inspector General's findings when it appears before the committee to justify its fiscal year 1986 request next spring and I have directed staff to obtain a progress report from the Department on its implementation efforts by January 1 of next year.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I congratulate the chairman of the Labor-HHS Education Appropriations Subcommittee and his staff for their excellent work on the appropriations legislation this year.

Because of the importance of cancer research, I would like to point out that in the bill report, language has been provided which reads:

The Committee has provided an additional $12,410,000 over the administration's request for NCI research centers. This amount would support one additional center, for a total of 60, and restore close to full estimated costs for research centers in 1985. Cancer center core grants are essential for the stability and continued excellence of cancer centers, and directly enhance the effectiveness of research grants at the centers. The committee is aware that during the past year such core grants have been treated differently from other grants and have been decreased on the average of 15 percent below the peer review levels, and desires that these core grants be funded at full peer review levels.

Research activities in the field of cancer have produced tremendous breakthroughs recently and the role of the cancer centers is extremely important in continuing and expanding this trend.

I am very hopeful that when a conference is held on this legislation with the House, that the conferees agree on the funding of cancer centers at the peer review levels.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I want to thank my distinguished colleague, Senator WEICKER, for his support of the cancer center at West Virginia University. The $4.5 million included in this bill is the first of 4 years of funding, which is projected to be $16,092.000. This center will bring comprehensive cancer education, detection and treatment to West Virginians.

Mr. WEICKER. I, too, am pleased that we were able to provide the first of 4 years of funding for the cancer center at West Virginia University, and look forward to working with you on this center.

CIRIDS

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I would like to congratulate the distinguished Senator from Connecticut for the work he and his committee have done on this important legislation. I would also like to inquire about a program sponsored by a member institute of the National Institutes of Health, the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases. The Institute funds the highly regarded Centers for Interdisciplinary Research in Immunological Diseases [CIRIDS].

These centers enable academic medical institutions to pool their research talent from many fields to explore one of the most exciting frontiers in biomedical research—the relationship of the body's immune system to disease. This work is expected to lead to advances in the cure and prevention of a wide range of serious illnesses, including arthritis, asthma, allergies and immune complex—the bubble boy syndrome. The CIRIDS also play an important role in the translation and dissemination of information regarding the treatment of these illnesses to physicians, patients and their families.

The National Institutes of Health currently supports five CIRIDS. However, none of the existing centers is located in the South or Southwest. I would like to ask the Senator from Connecticut whether this bill provides the flexibility to allow the allergy institute to establish new CIRIDS in areas where they do not currently exist.

Mr. WEICKER. I appreciate the Senator's kind words and I am delighted to have the opportunity to discuss the CIRIDS. This is a congressionally mandated program that the committee feels has been highly successful and should continue to receive strong support. In answer to the Senator's inquiry, the committee believes that its bill does provide the latitude for the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases to create new CIRIDS. The committee recognizes that the frequency and characteristics of immunologic diseases vary among different regions of the country and among different ethnic groups. The committee also believes dissemination of information in the area served by a CIRID is a vital function of these centers. The committee would therefore be pleased if the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases found that it would be appropriate to establish new CIRIDS, with consideration given to geographic distribution of the centers.

MAGNETIC RESONANCE

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I would like to clarify a matter of research in the imaging modality called magnetic resonance. The budget for the National Cancer Institute has been increased over the previous year and over the administration's request. My understanding is that the purpose of these increases is not only to allow maintenance of the current number of new research projects but to increase them to levels that provide stability in the research community.

Am I correct in understanding that the committee would agree that support of research in the promising new imaging modality called magnetic resonance would be appropriate?

Mr. WEICKER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is correct.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the chairman for this clarification and his time.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, in 1984 the National Institute of Arthritis, Diabetes and Digestive and Kidney Diseases expended in excess of $3.4 million on research on osteogenesis imperfecta. Brittle bone disease, as it is commonly known, is a devastating condition affecting children that causes bones to break at the slightest pressure; a sneeze can result in multiple fractures. The committee is pleased with the research efforts of the Institute and has provided an additional $500,000 to the Institute for an intensified research effort into the causes and treatment of osteogenesis imperfecta.

BLS STUDY TO COLLECT INFORMATION ON MASS LAYOFFS AND PLANT CLOSINGS

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I understand the House of Representatives has included $6.5 million in its appropriations bill to fund a project initiated by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information on individuals who are unemployed due to permanent mass layoffs and plant closings. BLS has initiated a limited pilot project to collect such data but they do not have the money to extend this survey beyond two or three States. The funds in the House bill would allow this important project to gather data from every State.

While the unemployment rate has receded from the record high levels of last year, the number of workers who are still jobless remain at unacceptable levels. Many of these workers will never return to their former jobs because the plants have closed.

Under title III of the Job Training Partnership Act we have begun to retrain these workers, but our knowledge and experience in dealing with the problem of dislocated workers is extremely limited. This study is extremely important in order to better inform Congress and policymakers at all levels of Government, not only on the dimensions of the problem but on the experiences of these workers once they have lost their jobs.

My question to the Senator from Connecticut, is whether he supports this study and would be willing to accept the provisions in the House bill in conference?

Mr. WEICKER. I appreciate the interest of the Senator from Massachusetts in this matter and I agree with him that the data to be collected in this study will be very useful. There is also a great deal of interest in this study in my own State of Connecticut. I understand that the BLS may not need the full $6.5 million to expand this project, but I am hopeful we can reach agreement with the conferees from the House on the appropriate level of funding. I welcome your support in this matter and will let you know the result of our discussions with the House.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank my good friend from Connecticut for his interest and help.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I know that all of us have our moments of frustration from time to time in the legislative process, and we find ourselves with what seems to be interminable delays and unnecessary delays.

I just want to express a few frustrations at this point, because I know what is going to happen to the entire Senate, come September 30, about a quarter to 12 midnight. We are going to have people coming up to members of the Senate Appropriations Committee and saying, "Why are we having to push to beat a deadline, push the appropriations process? It seems we always are pushing against a midnight deadline, with the threat that all of Government is going to come to a standstill if we don't get action." That, of course, is a fact of political life.

Mr. President, I believe the record will show that for at least 20 years, from about the late 1970's until about 1982, the high-water level so far as the appropriations process was concerned, Congress enacted about four appropriations bills by the start of the final year. I think that was the highest number they were able to enact during that period of more than two decades.

Beginning in 1982, the Appropriations Committee set about the task of putting the whole appropriations process onto track and making it function. In fact, it had failed to function for so long that that was one of the triggering actions that gave rise to the Budget Act.

I am not going to get into a lot of history on the matter of the appropriations process, but I merely want to say that we have enacted in this Congress, last year, 10 bills and had them signed into law. This year, we have reported 12 of the 13 bills from the Appropriations Committee. This bill, Labor-HHS, chaired by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] and ably assisted by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE], was reported to the Senate on June 29.

Mr. President, I think we probably have the most extraordinary staff of any committee in the U.S. Senate. I will match our workload and I will match the efficiency of our operation against that of any other committee staff.

There have been occasions when our staff has not gone to bed for 2 nights and 2 days in a row because they were pushing up against the deadlines and had to do the paperwork for the Senate to finalize its action. While we went to bed, the staff began its new phase of activity to complete the Senate appropriations process.

I have often said that this would be the greatest area for unions to organize for working conditions—at least for working conditions. I would say for wages, too, but at least for the working conditions to which we subject our staffs. I do not think there is a trade union in this country that would not call a strike within 10 hours after it found the conditions to which our staffs are subjected to, and that is unnecessary.

But I merely wanted to remind the Senate that come next whatever on September 30 if the appropriations process has not been completed and everyone is weary and everyone is short tempered and everyone is trying to find some reason to explain why we are in such a mess, I just want all of the Senate to be reminded that we have had this particular bill since June 29 reported to this floor; we have a conference report on other Senate appropriations matters, and we have other Senate appropriatioins bills waiting for action and have been waiting for action for week upon week.

I am not here today to assess or point fingers as to why or who is to blame or whatever. I am just merely making an observation that we are in this circumstance today.

The chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking minority member of that subcommittee have been ready since June 29 and they are sitting here today on September 21.

So it is not a matter of recrimination that I raise this point. It is not a matter of anger or disgust. It is sort of a combination of all of them, but it is really a frustrating experience to do our best and the whole committee work and to have our staff pushing to their limit and doing an extraordinary job they do and come and sit and wait, not that we are not going to complete the process; we will complete it. We will complete it probably on September 30. That is not the way to conduct the Nation's business.

Many of us have heard it said that the Senate can only seemingly function under two conditions, one from unanimous consent and the other from exhaustion, and I suppose we are headed for exhaustion at this point on September 30.

I merely wanted to make the record, wanted to vent my frustration, and I only do so because there are so few in the Chamber and few will read the RECORD and therefore perhaps it will fall on deaf ears, but at least I have had the satisfaction and therapeutic value at this moment as chairman of the committee of expressing some of the thoughts in my mind.

I commend the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Wisconsin again for an absolutely outstanding job and for extraordinary staff work that has brought this very complex, very difficult bill before the Senate.

I can remember when we spent days on this one bill. This staff and this committee have crafted a bill that is so finely tuned, so totally comprehensive that if we had the body here we could have probably put this bill through final vote within an hour. That is a record, that is an achievement that is worthy of recognition by historians of this country. Yet instead of an hour we are going to be delaying around here at last under the understanding, and I understand the circumstances that gave rise to it. Again I point no finger and I raise no focus of criticism. I am just wanting the history to be made on this day on this occasion on this subject.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, will the Chair please state the pending question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is agreeing to the committee amendment on page 38, lines 19 through 20.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I remind my colleagues that that is the question that will be pending when we return to the consideration of this bill.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business until not later than 3 p.m. in which Senators may speak for not more than 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Tom Imeson, of my staff, be given the privilege of the floor during the debate and discussion on a possible bill relating to forestry that may be raised within the period remaining in this session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until the hour of 1 p.m. on Monday next.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, would the distinguished majority leader like to do the other request at the same time?

Mr. BAKER. All right. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that consent be vitiated for the moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1984

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the minority leader and I have consulted on the language that I am about to put in respect to an adjournment and have agreed unofficially, but let me put it now for his consideration and that of the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent that, if the Senate adjourns today, when it convenes on Monday, September 24, the reading of the Journal be dispensed with, that no resolutions come over under the rule, the call of the calendar be dispensed with, and following the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, there be special orders in favor of Senator PROXMIRE and Senator BENTSEN for not to exceed 15 minutes each, to be followed by a period for the transaction of routine morning business to extend not past 1 hour after the convening time with Senators permitted to speak therein for not more than 10 minutes each, and provided further that the morning hour be deemed to have expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 1 P.M. ON MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1984

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today it stand in adjournment until the hour of 1 p.m. on Monday next.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, could I inquire of the minority leader if he has anything else to address the Senate?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I have nothing else. I thank the distinguished majority leader, however, for bringing the Senate in on Monday at the hour stated. The convening hour will accommodate most of the Members on my side of the aisle.

The distinguished majority leader did not feel that he could have the cloture vote occur late in the day for reasons that are best known to him and to me and, therefore, realizing that by using the adjournment motion as a tool, he could have brought the Senate in earlier and could, under rule XXII, have forced the cloture vote earlier than 2 p.m., I have no objection. I thank him again.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the minority leader.

Let me say now to the minority leader that there are certain other matters that appear to be cleared for action routinely and if the minority leader is prepared at this time to consider them, I will identify those items.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am prepared.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the minority leader.

TITLE AMENDMENT TO H.R. 3398

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order to amend the title of H.R. 3398, which passed the Senate on yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. I send the amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

Amend the title so as to read "An Act to amend the trade laws, authorize the negotiation of trade agreements, extend trade preferences, change the tariff treatment with respect to certain articles and for other purposes."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

INDIAN FINANCING ACT AMENDMENTS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 2614.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Strike out all after the enacting clause, and insert:

That this Act may be cited as the "Indian Financing Act Amendments of 1984".

SEC. 2. Section 101 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1461) is amended by striking out "which are not members of or eligible for membership in an organization which is making loans to its members".

SEC. 3. Section 105 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1465) is amended by striking out "United States: Provided, That proceedings pursuant to this sentence shall be effective only after following the procedure prescribed by the Act of July 1, 1932 (47 Stat. 564; 25 U.S.C. 386a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "United States".

SEC. 4. Section 201 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1481) is amended by striking out "who are not members of or eligible for membership in an organization which is making loans to its members".

SEC. 5. Section 204 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1484) is amended—

(1) by striking out "$100,000" in the fourth sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "$350,000",

(2) by inserting the following sentence after the first sentence: "The Secretary shall review each loan application individually and independently from the lender.".

SEC. 6. Section 211 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1491) is amended by striking out "sections: Provided, That proceedings pursuant to this sentence shall be effective only after following the procedure prescribed by the Act of July 1, 1932 (47 Stat. 564; 25 U.S.C. 386a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section".

SEC. 7. Section 217 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1497) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year beginning in fiscal year 1985 such sums as may be necessary to fulfill obligations with respect to losses on loans guaranteed or insured under this title. All collections shall remain until expended.".

SEC. 8. Section 302 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1512) is amended to read as follows:

"There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1985, and for each fiscal year thereafter, an amount which does not exceed $5,500,000 for purposes of making interest payments authorized under this title. Sums appropriated under this section, shall remain available until expended.".

SEC. 9. Section 402(a) of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1522) is amended to read as follows:

"No grant in excess of $100,000 in the case of an Indian and $250,000 in the case of an Indian tribe, or such lower amount as the Secretary may determine to be appropriate, may be made under this title.".

SEC. 10. Section 403 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1523) is amended to read as follows:

"There are authorized to be appropriated not to exceed the sum of $10,000,000 per year for fiscal year 1986 and each fiscal year thereafter for the purposes of this title.".

SEC. 11. The Secretary, in his discretion, may require security other than bonds required by the Miller Act (40 U.S.C. 270a) when entering into a contract with an Indian-owned economic enterprise pursuant to the provisions of the Act of June 25, 1910 (25 U.S.C. 47), for the construction, alteration, or repair of any public work of the United States: Provided, That, the alternative form of security provides the United States with adequate security for performance and payment.

SEC. 12. Section 501 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1541) is amended to read as follows:

"Prior to and concurrent with the making or guaranteeing of any loan under subchapters I and II of this chapter and with the making of a grant under subchapter IV of this chapter, the purpose of which is to fund the development of an economic enterprise, the Secretary shall insure that the loan or grant applicant shall be provided competent management and technical assistance for preparation of the application and/or administration of funds granted consistent with the nature of the enterprise proposed to be or in fact funded.".

SEC. 13. Section 503 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1543) is amended to read as follows:

"For the purpose of entering into contracts pursuant to section 502 of this title in fiscal year 1985, the Secretary is authorized to use not to exceed 5 per centum of any funds appropriated for any fiscal year pursuant to section 302 of this Act. For fiscal year 1986 and for each fiscal year thereafter, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.".

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to reauthorize and amend the Indian Financing Act.".

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for S. 2614, a bill to amend the Indian Financing Act, and to urge its adoption by the Senate. This legislation is needed to reauthorize the Bureau of Indian Affairs loan guarantee and interest subsidy programs. These programs are rapidly becoming the cornerstone of economic development for the American Indian people.

In April, I joined with Senator MARK ANDREWS, chairman of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs, in cosponsoring S. 2614, which passed the Senate on June 8, 1984. The bill we now have before us is a perfected version of that legislation which was developed through close consultation between the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Essentially, Mr. President, S. 2614 adjusts the funding mechanics for the BIA's loan guarantee and interest subsidy programs so that these benefits instruments can continue to be used in a cost-effective manner to assist the expanding economic development which is occurring throughout Indian country. The Loan Guarantee Program reauthorized by this bill is particularly important because it will play an increasingly central role in the economic progress of Indian tribes. This shift in emphasis is being brought about by an encouraging change in the nature of tribal business undertakings. In the past, tribes saw few alternatives but to turn to the Federal Government for the direct financing of their development projects. In large part, this was due to a tribe's lack of business experience and uncertainty about the involvement on the reservation of non-Indian business and lending organizations.

Today, tribes are rapidly gaining solid business experience and expertise. As their knowledge grows, their awareness of the economic potential of their reservations also grows, and, increasingly, they are making the entrepreneurial commitment to grasp those opportunities. Most importantly, these tribal ventures are sound business propositions that can stand on their own without the need of direct Federal financial assistance.

Although the trend is only beginning, it is heartening to see the Indian business community moving away from reliance on Federal loans and subsidies for its success. With confidence and know-how, tribes are turning to banks and other customary lending institutions for financing, and banks, finding tribal development proposals solid and well planned, are responding positively.

As the tribes are finding their way into the field of business finance, the financial institutions are being exposed, often for the first time, to tribal governments, their lands, their people, and the unique relationship between tribes, tribal lands, and the Federal Government. These special circumstances can pose certain hindrances to private lenders who customarily expect their loans to be secured through some accessible collateral interest which is owned by the loan recipient. If the rights essential to tribal recognition also prevent private lenders from realizing a true security interest for their loans, private finance and tribal economic development could seem at an impasse, despite the desire of each side to work together.

It is Federal guarantees for private loans to tribes that resolves this difficulty and opens up the capabilities of lending institutions to tribal borrowers. Without the guarantees, the tribes would have almost no alternative but to rely solely on the direct Federal assistance to address the growing economic development requirements of the American Indian people. The BIA's loan guarantee program, with a default rate of 5 percent on $90 million worth of guaranteed loans to date, is a success not often emulated among private lenders. Tribal loan applications must not only be accepted by the lending banks, but must also be approved by the BIA guarantors, who are responsible to both the tribes for protecting their interests and the Congress for properly administering the program. As a result, it is a program with high standards and reflects well on the tribes, their economic ventures and the private lenders which finance them.

Mr. President, I cosponsored this legislation because I believe it contains an element, the BIA loan guarantee program, which is essential to the future prosperity and self-sufficiency of the Indian people. I appreciate this opportunity to expand on the reasons for my support, and I urge my colleagues to join with me in passing S. 2614.

AMENDMENT NO. 4390

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments with a further amendment which I send to the desk on behalf of Senator ANDREWS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BAKER] on behalf of Mr. ANDREWS proposes an amendment numbered 4390.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment reads as follows:

In section 503 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (as amended by section 13 of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the House Representatives to the text of the bill), strike out "5 per centum" and insert in lieu thereof "6 percent".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the motion is agreed to.

NATIONAL PEARL HARBOR REMEMBRANCE DAY

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I now ask that the Chair lay before the Senate House Joint Resolution 392.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 392) to designate December 7, 1984 as "National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day" on the occasion of the anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on third reading and passage of the joint resolution.

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 639) was ordered to a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

NARCISO ARCHILA NAVARRETE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 5343) for the relief of Narciso Archila Navarrete.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I want to express my support for H.R. 5343, a private bill for the relief of Narciso Archila Navarrete and Juan Archila Navarrete. This legislation will permit Narciso, now 17 years old, to be classified as a child within the meaning of the Immigration and Nationality Act so that he may be legally adopted by my constituents David and Susanna Yoder. Narciso and his brother Juan have been orphaned since 1978, at which time they entered an orphanage in El Salvador operated by the Yoders. It is my understanding that tensions in that country have forced the closing of the orphanage, and all the other children residing there have been placed at this time. The Navarrete brothers have been a part of the Yoder family for nearly 2 years, and the couple is very anxious to bring them home to Kansas. The home study conducted of the family was extremely positive in its assessment of the environment provided for the boys by the Yoders.

This legislation has been carefully reviewed by the House Judiciary Committee and its Subcommittee on Immigration, and the State Department has submitted a favorable report. I would like to express my sincere thanks to Senators THURMOND, SIMPSON, and BIDEN of the Senate Judiciary Committee for their cooperation and assistance I bring in this measure promptly to the Senate floor. The assistance of Senators BAKER and BYRD in assuring expedited consideration of this measure is also greatly appreciated.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOSEPH KAREL HASEK

The bill (H.R. 1362) for the relief of Joseph Karel Hasek was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TEODORO N. SALANGA, JR.

The bill (H.R. 1150) for the relief of Teodoro N. Salanga, Jr., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW AND JULIA LUI

The bill (H.R. 1236) for the relief of Andrew and Julia Lui was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VARIABLE INTEREST RATES FOR INDIAN FUNDS HELD IN TRUST

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives on S. 2000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 2000) entitled "An act to allow variable interest rates for Indian funds held in trust by the United States", do pass with the following amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the first section of the Act of February 12, 1929 (25 U.S.C. 161a), is amended to read as follows: "That all funds held in trust by the United States and carried in principal accounts on the books of the United States Treasury to the credit of Indian tribes shall be invested by the Secretary of the Treasury, at the request of the Secretary of the Interior, in public debt securities with maturities suitable to the needs of the fund involved, as determined by the Secretary of the Interior, and bearing interest at rates determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration current market yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States of comparable maturities.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

THE CALENDAR

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I say to the minority leader there are three resolutions that are cleared on this side for action by unanimous consent. They are Calendar Nos. 1209, 1210, and 1211. Will the minority leader permit me to consider those en bloc?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader.

The three messages have been cleared on this side.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the minority leader.

NATIONAL OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE WEEK

The joint resolution (S.J. Res. 310) to designate the week beginning September 16, 1984, as "National Osteopathic Medicine Week," was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

The joint resolution, with its preamble, is as follows:

S.J. RES. 310

Whereas osteopathic medicine has been practiced in the United States since 1874 and is based upon the philosophy that every patient should receive complete personal health care;

Whereas the osteopathic profession is dedicated to providing comprehensive health services to entire families, while stressing the uniqueness of each individual;

Whereas more than twenty thousand osteopathic physicians practice throughout the United States, emphasizing primary health care while also representing all medical specialties, caring for more than thirty-five million Americans;

Whereas over two hundred osteopathic hospitals are located in thirty-one States with more than twenty-five thousand beds, providing comprehensive care to approximately eight hundred and seventy-seven thousand patients, and annually accounting for some six and one-half million patient-days of care to the American public; and

Whereas fifteen colleges of osteopathic medicine located throughout the United States currently enroll nearly six thousand students engaged in an education emphasizing a holistic approach to health, focusing (both in didactic and clincal training) on family, community, and preventative medicine, and inceasingly, providing a biomedical and behavioral research component: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the week beginning September 16, 1984, is designated "National Osteopathic Medicine Week". The President is requested to issue a proclamation calling upon all Government agencies and people of the United States to observe this week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE NAVAL WAR COLLEGE

The resolution (S. Res. 436) to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Naval War College in Newport, RI, was considered.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of Senate Resolution 436, a resolution commemorating the 100th anniversary of the world's foremost center of military study, the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, RI. I introduced Senate Resolution 436 on September 6 with my distinguished colleague, Senator CHAFEE. The resolution was ordered reported by the Judiciary Committee on September 20 and has won the cosponsorship of 42 of my colleagues.

The State of Rhode Island has been honored to serve as the home for the War College, which was not only the first such institution in the United States, but the first Naval War College anywhere in the world. From its earliest years, the War College has been renowned throughout the world for its leadership in military affairs and for its highly motivated student body and superb faculty. Each year the Navy entrusts to the War College the most promising of its midcareer officers, the greatest single asset it possesses for the future. My State is proud to serve as a temporary home to the more than 500 students annually attending the War College, and we take further pride in the fact that so many War College graduates have chosen to make Rhode Island their permanent home upon completion of their naval careers.

It would be difficult to overestimate the impact the War College has had on our military history. Early in this century our emergence as a global power was greatly influenced by the Naval War College lectures of Alfred Thayer Mahan. Our victory over the Japanese in World War II was greatly aided by the simulated war games enacted at the War College by Admirals King, Nimitz, Halsey, Spruance, and many others. Today, with increased emphasis on decisionmaking skills and an expanded curriculum, the War College has been an imaginative participant in the strengthening of our naval forces and is dedicated to building the Navy of the 21st century.

I urge my colleagues to join in supporting this resolution saluting the many achievements and contributions of the U.S. Naval War College.

The resolution was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, is as follows:

S. RES. 436

Whereas in naval circles, both in the United States and throughout the world, the United States Naval War College is one of our best known institutions, highly respected, and eagerly sought after by officers competing for admission to its highly selective ranks;

Whereas the Naval War College from its very inception has had a singular impact on naval planning and wartime strategy, particularly on the buildup of United States naval forces at the beginning of this century as a result of the influence of Alfred Thayer Mahan and subsequently in the development of United States planning for the War in the Pacific (1941-45);

Whereas in the complexities of the post World War II environment and the nuclear age the Naval War College has continued to have a major impact on United States military and strategic thinking;

Whereas the Naval War College throughout its existence has attracted the very highest caliber students and faculty, and has contributed to international understanding through courses of study for officers from allied nations; and

Whereas the Naval War College, as the oldest college of its kind in the world, continues to face the challenge of providing inspiring leadership and innovative thinking to the naval affairs of our Nation, and dedicates itself to building the Navy of the twenty-first century: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate commemorates the Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island, on the occasion of its 100th anniversary.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

WOMEN IN AGRICULTURE WEEK

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 554) to designate the week of November 11, 1984, through November 17, 1984, as "Women in Agriculture Week," was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MEASURE RETURNED TO CALENDAR—SENATE RESOLUTION 66

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, Senate Resolution 66 would be pending once more, when the present measure is disposed of; that is to say, the Labor-HHS appropriations bill. I have no desire to do that.

As I indicated earlier, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senate Resolution 66 be returned to the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I say to the minority leader that we have a few items on today's Executive Calendar which appear to be cleared for action routinely.

Is the minority leader in a position to clear all, or any part, of the Executive Calendar today?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the minority leader is ready to proceed with all nominations, beginning on page 6, under the Air Force, continuing through page 7, page 8, page 9, and page 10, nominations thereon, and page 10 having to do with those placed on the Secretary's desk.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the minority leader.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate go into executive session to consider nominations on today's Executive Calendar beginning with item 978, the first item under the Air Force; continuing through all of the items on page 7, page 8, page 9, and those nominations placed on the Secretary's desk.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The nominations will be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Saunders, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session, the Acting President pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

ANNUAL REPORT ON MANUFACTURED HOUSING—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 169

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, transmitting, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs:

To the Congress of the United States:

In accordance with Section 626 of the National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974, as amended, I am transmitting the Sixth Report on Title VI of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (Manufactured Housing).

RONALD REAGAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE, September 21, 1984.

ANNUAL REPORT ON PROGRESS IN SPACE AND AERONAUTICS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 170

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

To the Congress of the United States:

I am pleased to transmit the report of the Nation's progress in space and aeronautics during calendar 1983, Aeronautics and Space Report of the President, 1983 Activities. It is provided in accordance with Section 206 of the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2476).

The quest for knowledge about and beyond the earth, as well as profitable use of that knowledge, advanced in 1983. In the 25th anniversary year of the formal founding of the Nation's space program, four operational flights of the Space Shuttle expanded service to the government for civil use and for national security. They also served the private sector for commercial advantage and for university research. The first Shuttle flight of the reusable laboratory Spacelab was, in addition, a triumph of international cooperation. Built by the European Space Agency and flown by NASA, Spacelab carried both U.S. and European scientific experiments and crew; the largest crew yet launched into space included among its six members the first European to orbit in a U.S. spaceraft. On an earlier mission, the first American woman astronaut in space helped launch two satellites from the Shuttle.

Twenty-seven satellites launched during 1983, five of them from the Shuttle, went to work in communications, navigation, weather forecasting, and space science. One of these made numerous discoveries about the universe as it surveyed the entire sky.

Aeronautical research continued to develop technology to maintain the preeminence of civil and military aviation and the predominance of U.S.-built aircraft in the world's commercial fleet.

The Nation can be proud of 25 years of achievements, as well as these and others reported for 1983.

RONALD REAGAN.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

At 10:35 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Berry, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions:

S. 277. An act for the relief of Marlon Dolon Opelt;

S. 301. An act for the relief of Kim Hae Ok Heimberger;

S. 435. An act for the relief of Joseph Antonio Francis;

S. 514. An act for the relief of Seela Jeremiah Piula;

S. 598. An act to authorize a land conveyance from the Department of Agriculture to Payson, Arizona;

S. 692. An act for the relief of Charles Guadencio Beeman, Paul Amado Beeman, Elizabeth Beeman, and Joshua Valente Beeman;

S. 798. An act for the relief of Grietje Rhea Pietens Beumer, Johan Christian Beumer, Cindy Larissa Beumer, and Cedric Grant Beumer;

S. 1060. An act for the relief of Samuel Joseph Edgar;

S. 1140. An act for the relief of Patrick P. W. Tso, Ph.D.;

H.R. 71. An act to authorize and direct the Secretary of the Interior to engage in a special study of the potential for groundwater recharge in the High Plains States, and for other purposes; and H.J. Res. 453. Joint resolution designating the week of September 30 through October 6, 1984, as "National High-Tech Week".

The enrolled bills were subsequently signed by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

At 11:40 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Berry, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House disagrees to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5899) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes; it agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. DIXON, Mr. NATCHER, Mr. STOKES, Mr. WILSON, Mr. LEHMAN of Florida, Mr. SABO, Mr. WHITTEN, Mr. COUGHLIN, Mr. GREEN, Mr. ROGERS, and Mr. CONTE as managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bill:

H.R. 3755. An act to amend titles II and XVI of the Social Security Act to provide for reform in the disability determination process.

The message further announced that the Speaker appoints Mr. TAUKE as an additional conferee in the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 4164) entitled "An Act to amend the Vocational Education Act of 1963 to strengthen and expand the economic base of the Nation, develop human resources, reduce structural unemployment, increase productivity, and strengthen the Nation's defense capabilities by assisting the States to expand, improve, and update high-quality programs of vocational-technical education, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the House has passed the following joint resolutions, without amendment:

S.J. Res. 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984 as "National Quality Month";

S.J. Res. 333. Joint resolution to designate September 21, 1984, as "World War I Aces and Aviators Day"; and

S.J. Res. 340. Joint resolution to designate the week of September 23, 1984 as "National Historically Black Colleges Week".

The message further announced that the House has passed the following bills and joint resolution, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2671. An act for the relief of Edgar Gildardo Herrera;

H.R. 3880. An act to amend the Energy Policy and Conservation Act with respect to the strategic petroleum reserve by requiring testing of drawdown and distribution of the reserve;

H.R. 4025. An act to authorize the Administrator of General Services to transfer to the Smithsonian Institution without reimbursement the General Post Office Building and the site thereof located in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H.R. 5164. An act to amend the National Security Act of 1947 to regulate public disclosure of information held by the General Intelligence Agency, and for other purposes;

H.R. 5655. An act to amend the Controlled Substances Act to strengthen the authority to prevent diversion of controlled substances, and for other purposes;

H.R. 5959. An act to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act;

H.R. 6064. An act to change the tariff treatment with respect to certain articles, and for other purposes; and H.J. Res. 649. Joint resolution changing the date for the counting of the electoral votes in 1985.

The message further announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolutions, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 42. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to honorary South African consulates in the United States; and

H. Con. Res. 298. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to recent actions by the South African Government to rescind the Namibian Supreme Court's jurisdiction to hear an application for the release of prisoners held in the interment camp near Mariental, Namibia.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

At 2:21 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Berry, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolutions:

S. 2155. An act to designate certain national forest system lands in the State of Utah for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System to release other forest lands for multiple use management, and for other purposes;

S.J. 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984, as "National Quality Month";

S.J. Res. 333. Joint resolution to designate September 21, 1984, as "World War I Aces and Aviators Day";

S.J. Res. 340. Joint resolution to designate the week of September 23, 1984 as "National Historically Black Colleges Week"; and

H.J. Res. 545. Joint resolution designating the week of September 16 through 22, 1984 as "Emergency Medicine Week."

The enrolled bill and joint resolutions were subsequently signed by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills were read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

H.R. 2671. An act for the relief of Edgar Gildardo Herrera; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H.R. 3880. An act to amend the Energy Policy and Conservation Act with respect to the strategic petroleum reserve by requiring testing of drawdown and distribution of the reserve; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

H.R. 4025. An act to authorize the Administrator of General Services to transfer to the Smithsonian Institution without reimbursement the General Post Office Building and the site thereof located in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

H.R. 5656. An act to amend the Controlled Substances Act to strengthen the authority to prevent diversion of controlled substances, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H.R. 6064. An act to change the tariff treatment with respect to certain articles, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

The following concurrent resolutions were read, and referred as indicated:

H. Con. Res. 42. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to honorary South African consulates in the United States; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

H. Con. Res. 298. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of the Congress with respect to recent actions by the South African Government to rescind the Namibian Supreme Court's jurisdiction to hear an application for the release of prisoners held in the internment camp near Mariental, Namibia; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The Committee on Armed Services was discharged from further consideration of the following bill; which was placed on the calendar:

H.R. 4968. An act to provide for the conveyance by the Secretary of Energy of surface rights to certain parcels of land located on National Petroleum Reserve Numbered 2 in the State of California on which private residences are located.

The Committee on the Judiciary was discharged from the further consideration of the following joint resolution; which was placed on the calendar:

H.J. Res. 606. Joint resolution to designate the week of October 14, 1984, through October 21, 1984, as "National Housing Week."

The following bills were read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and placed on the calendar:

H.R. 5164. An act to amend the National Security Act of 1947 to regulate public disclosure of information held by the Central Intelligence Agency, and for other purposes.

H.R. 5959. An act to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary reported that on today, September 21, 1984, he had presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 277. An act for the relief of Marlon Dolon Opelt;

S. 301. An act for the relief of Kim Hae Ok Heimberger;

S. 435. An act for the relief of Joseph Antonio Francis;

S. 514. An act for the relief of Seela Jeremiah Piula;

S. 598. An act to authorize a land conveyance from the Department of Agriculture to Payson, AZ;

S. 692. An act for the relief of Charles Guadencio Beeman, Paul Amado Beeman, Elizabeth Beeman, and Joshua Valente Beeman;

S. 798. An act for the relief of Grietje Rhea Pietens Beumer, Johan Christian Beumer, Cindy Larissa Beumer, and Cedric Grant Beumer;

S. 1060. An act for the relief of Samuel Joseph Edgar;

S. 1140. An act for the relief of Patrick P. W. Tso, Ph.D.;

S. 2155. An act to designate certain national forest system lands in the State of Utah for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System to release other forest lands for multiple use management, and for other purposes;

S.J Res. 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984, as "National Quality Month";

S.J. Res. 333. Joint resolution to designate September 21, 1984, as "World War I Aces and Aviators Day";

S.J. Res. 340. Joint resolution to designate the week of September 23, 1984, as "National Historically Black Colleges Week".

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. STAFFORD, from the Committee on Environment and Public Works, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute:

S. 2892: A bill to amend the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (Rept. No. 98-631); pursuant to the order of September 21, 1984, referred to the Committee on Finance for the consideration of title II.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. GORTON (for himself, Mr. EVANS, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. TRIBLE, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, and Mr. HEFLIN):

S. 3013. A bill to provide that certain activities performed in space and certain articles produced in space shall be treated as activities performed and articles produced within the United States for purposes of any tax or customs law of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. BENTSEN):

S. 3014. A bill to amend the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980; to the Committee on Finance.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. GORTON (for himself, Mr. EVANS, Mr. ROTH, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. TRIBLE, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, and Mr. HEFLIN):

S. 3013. A bill to provide that certain activities performed in space and certain articles produced in space shall be treated as activities performed and articles produced within the United States for purposes of any tax or customs law of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

SPACE DEVELOPMENT ACT

● Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, today I am introducing, along with my colleagues, Senators HEFLIN, EVANS, TRIBLE, ROTH, ANDREWS, HEINZ, and BOSCHWITZ, the Space Development Act of 1984, a bill which would give to U.S. commercial space activities the same tax and customs treatment enjoyed by U.S. commercial terrestrial activities.

Our Nation's space program is maturing to the point that companies, many of which have never participated in any space ventures, are now seriously considering the opportunities that exist in space-based research and development and space-based manufacturing. These opportunities are made possible by the airless and weightless environment of space, which will allow certain products to be developed more efficiently in space than is possible on Earth. In fact, two companies are already experimenting aboard the space shuttle to develop greater and purer quantities of a hormone to treat diseases. Other potential benefits that are likely to materialize from space commerce are the development of ultra/pure semiconductor crystals for the computer industry, stronger and lighter alloys, and advanced communications technologies.

However, the private sector is faced with certain unintentional barriers which have delayed their entry into these long-term, high-risk space ventures. In particular, the tax and customs laws contain provisions which were written before commercial space activities were even envisioned. Now, with the emergence of commercial space activities, the interpretation of these provisions has been inappropriately extended to cover these activities. To clarify these revenue regulations and to assist the private sector in the commercial development of space, the President has announced the national policy on the commercial use of space. This policy includes several economic and regulatory initiatives to encourage private sector investment and involvement in space activities.

Mr. President, this bill that I am introducing would implement two of these initiatives. The intent of this bill is to provide commercial space entrepreneurs with tax and customs treatment that is equal, not preferential, to that treatment enjoyed by those who do business on Earth.

This legislation would:

First, permit the use of investment tax credits [ITC] and accelerated depreciation [ACRS] for U.S. investments in space as if on Earth; and Second, permit products manufactured in space on U.S. spacecraft by U.S. companies to enter the United States without paying an import duty.

The future of U.S. private sector investment in space depends on eliminating the current unintentional and unforeseen discriminations in tax and customs laws and regulations. If our Nation expects to realize the benefits of space manufacturing and space-based research and development, we must clarify our laws so that they do not discriminate against U.S. commercial space activities.

Mr. President, this bill has been approved by the Treasury Department and by the International Trade Commission. I look forward to working with the members of the Finance Committee on this legislation, which is critical to the success of commercial space activity. I am hopeful that our efforts will lead to the creation of an investment climate that is conducive to the growth of this enterprising new era of commercial space development.●

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. BENTSEN):

S. 3014. A bill to amend the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980; to the Committee on Finance.

HAZARDOUS SUBSTANCE RESPONSE ACT

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce, along with my distinguished colleague Senator BENTSEN, a bill to amend the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act [CERCLA] to establish a new tax on the disposal and long-term storage of hazardous waste. This tax would serve two purposes. It would provide an additional revenue source to finance an expanded Superfund, and it would provide a new incentive for better hazardous waste management practices.

The Superfund Program was created in 1980—by the CERCLA law—to fund the cleanup of the Nation's abandoned hazardous waste dump sites. CERCLA establishes a tax on 42 chemical feedstocks, crude oil, and imported petroleum products to finance the $1.6 billion Superfund. The tax was designed to collect 86 percent the $1.6 billion trust fund, with the remaining 14 percent coming from appropriated funds.

The current Superfund tax expires on September 30, 1985, and we are now in the process of considering legislation to reauthorize the program for 5 additional years. The Committee on Environment and Public Works, on which I serve, voted 17 to 1 on September 13, 1984, to reauthorize the Superfund Program for 5 years at a total funding level of $7.5 billion. The bill that I am introducing today would establish a so-called waste-end tax—that is, a tax on the disposal and long-term storage of hazardous waste—to take effect on January 1, 1986. The tax rates in the bill are designed to raise $1.5 billion over 5 years, or about $300 million per year.

Mr. President, as we once again address the issue of how best to finance the Superfund Program—and we look to new sources of revenue—I think it most reasonable and wise to look at this type of tax on the disposal of hazardous waste. I hope my colleagues would agree and I urge them to join me in support of such a tax.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill and a summary of the legislation be printed in the RECORD in full.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3014

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 101. Short Title, This Act may be cited as the "Hazardous Substance Act of 1984".

SEC. 102. Title II of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 is amended adding a new subtitle as follows:

"Subtitle D—Imposition of Tax on Disposal or Long-Term Storage of Hazardous Waste

"SEC. 241. Chapter 38 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding the following new subchapter:

"SUBCHAPTER D—TAX ON DISPOSAL OR LONG-TERM SHORTAGE OF HAZARDOUS WASTE

"Section 4691. Imposition of Tax
"Section 4692. Definitions
"Section 4693. Records, Statements and Returns

"SEC. 4691. IMPOSITION OF TAX.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—There is hereby imposed a tax on (1) the receipt of a hazardous waste for disposal at a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility or (2) long-term storage of a hazardous waste in a qualified hazardous waste storage facility.

"(b) AMOUNT OF TAX.—The amount of the tax imposed by subsection (a) shall be:

"(1) $45 for each ton of hazardous waste which is disposed of by landfill, in waste piles, or by surface impoundment;

"(2)b $25 for each ton of hazardous waste which is disposed of by ocean dumping or land treatment;

"(3) $5 for each ton of hazardous waste which is disposed of by underground injection;

"(4) $45 for each ton of hazardous waste which is placed in long-term storage.

"(c) ALTERNATIVE COMPUTATION OF TAX.—Under regulations provided by the Secretary, if the owner or operator of a qualified hazardous waste disposal or qualified hazardous waste long-term storage facility can establish the amount of water of the hazardous waste deposited for disposal or for long-term storage, then such owner or operator may elect to pay a tax of $50 per ton on the amount of waste deposited for disposal or storage, reduced by the weight of water, in lieu of the taxes that would otherwise be paid under this section.

"(d) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN WASTES.—The tax imposed by subsection (a) shall not apply to the following:

"(1) The disposal or long-term storage of wastes which are, as of the date of enactment of this Act, exempt from regulation as a hazardous waste under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act, as amended. In the event that any such waste is determined by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, following studies as required under Section 8002 of such Act, to pose a potential danger to human health and environment, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency promulgates regulations for the disposal of such waste, then the Administrator shall transmit to both Houses of Congress, along with such regulations, his recommendation for imposing a tax, if any, on the disposal or long-term storage of such waste. A tax shall be imposed under subsection (a) on such waste only when authorized by Act of Congress.

"(2) The disposal or long-term storage of wastes which are not, as of the date of enactment of this Act, identified or listed under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act. A tax shall be imposed under subsection (a) on such waste only when authorized by Act of Congress.

"(3) The disposal or long-term storage of wastes in a surface impoundment which (a) contains treated waste water during the secondary or tertiary phase of a biological treatment facility subject to a permit issued under section 402 of the Clean Water Act (or which hold such treated waste water after treatment and prior to discharge), and (b) is in compliance with generally applicable ground water monitoring requirements for facilities with permits under section 3005(c) of the Solid Waste Disposal Act.

"(4) The disposal or long-term storage of (a) any waste by any person in the course of carrying out any removal or remedial action under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 if such disposal is carried out in accordance with a plan approved by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency or the State, (b) any waste removed from any facility listed on the National Priorities List (NPL), or (c) any waste removed from a facility for which notification has been provided to the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency pursuant to the provisions of Section 105 or 103(c) respectively, Title I, of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980.

"(e) LIABILITY FOR THE TAX.—The tax imposed by this section shall be imposed on the following:

"(1) The owner or operator of the qualified hazardous waste disposal facility or qualified hazardous waste storage facility at which the hazardous waste is disposed of or stored.

"(2) In the case of hazardous waste that is required by regulation to be disposed of or stored at a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility or a qualified hazardous waste storage facility but is disposed of or stored for a long term at other than a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility or a qualified hazardous waste storage facility, the person disposing of the hazardous waste.

"(f) CREDIT FOR PRIOR TAX.—(1) A credit shall be allowed in the computation of any tax due under this section on the disposal of a hazardous waste for any tax previously paid under this section by the disposer on the long-term storage of such hazardous waste.

"(2) In the event that a person who has paid a tax under this section on the long-term storage of a hazardous waste causes such hazardous waste to be delivered to and received by another person who is the owner or operator of a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility, then such person who paid the tax on the long-term storage shall be allowed a credit for such tax in the computation of any tax subsequently due on the long-term storage or disposal of a hazardous waste.

"(3) For purposes of determining any credit allowances for fungible waste under the provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2), it shall be presumed that the last of such waste placed in a qualified hazardous waste storage facility shall be the first to be removed from such facility.

"(g) FRACTIONAL PART OF TON.—In the case of a fraction of a ton, the tax imposed by this section shall be the same fraction of the amount of such tax imposed on a whole ton.

"(h) PROSPECTIVE APPLICATION OF TAX.—The taxes imposed in this section shall not apply to the hazardous waste which is received for disposal or placed into long-term storage prior to the effective date of this Act.

"(i) TERMINATION.—The taxes imposed in this section shall not apply after September 30, 1990.

"SEC. 4692. DEFINITIONS.

"(a) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subchapter:

"(1) DISPOSAL.—The term 'disposal' means the discharge, deposit, injection, dumping or placing of any hazardous waste into or on any land or water so that such hazardous waste may enter the environment. 'Disposal' shall not include the treatment or reclamation of hazardous wastes or the storage of hazardous wastes in a facility described in the definition of 'Qualified Hazardous Waste Storage Facility' below.

"(2) LONG-TERM STORAGE.—The term 'long-term storage' means remaining within the confines of a qualified hazardous waste storage facility for one year or more. For the purpose of determining the length of time in storage, it shall be presumed in the case of fungible waste that the last waste placed in a qualified hazardous waste storage facility shall be the first to be removed from such facility.

"(3) QUALIFIED HAZARDOUS WASTE STORAGE FACILITY.—The term 'qualified hazardous waste storage facility' means any storage facility, waste pile or surface impoundment, permitting of accorded interim status under Section 3005 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act 'Qualified hazardous waste storage facilities' shall not include any hazardous waste treatment facilities.

"(4) WASTE PILE.—The term 'waste pile' is a quantity of hazardous waste heaped together as a means of storage as defined under regulations promulgated by the Administrator or the Environmental Protection Agency pursuant to Section 3005 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act.

"(5) SURFACE IMPOUNDMENT.—The term 'surface impoundment' is an impoundment in which quantities of hazardous wastes are collected as a means of storage as defined under regulations promulgated by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency pursuant to Section 3005 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act.

"(6) QUALIFIED HAZARDOUS WASTE DISPOSAL FACILITY.—The term 'qualified hazardous waste disposal facility' means any disposal facility permitted or accorded interim status under Section 3005 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act or under Section 102 of the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act, or Part C of the Safe Drinking Water Act. 'Qualified hazardous waste disposal facility' shall not include any hazardous waste treatment facilities.

"(7) HAZARDOUS WASTE TREATMENT FACILITIES.—The term 'hazardous waste treatment facilities' means any facility employing any method, technique, or process designed to change the physical, chemical, or biological character or composition of any hazardous waste so as to convert such waste to a non-hazardous waste.

"(8) TREATMENT.—The term 'treatment', when used in connection with hazardous waste, means a method, technique or process designed to change the physical, chemical or biological character or composition of any hazardous waste so as to convert such a waste to a non-hazardous waste; except that there may be a byproduct or residue from such method, technique or process that would be considered a hazardous waste under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act.

"(9) HAZARDOUS WASTE.—The term 'hazardous waste' means any waste:

"(A) identified or listed under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act, other than waste the regulation of which has been suspended by Act of Congress, and

"(B) subject to the recording or record-keeping requirements of Section 3002 and 3004 of such Act.

"(10) TON.—The term 'ton' means 2000 pounds.

"(11) RECEIPT.—The term 'receipt' means the act of the owner or operator of a qualified hazardous waste disposal facility by which such owner or operator, at an off-site facility, signs, or is required by regulation to sign, the manifest or shipping paper accompanying the hazardous waste, or at an on-site facility, enters, or is required to do so by regulation, the description and quantity of the hazardous waste in the qualified hazardous waste disposal facility operating record.

"(12) NON-HAZARDOUS WASTE.—The term "non-hazardous waste" means any waste that is not identified or listed as hazardous waste under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act. Non-hazardous waste shall include the air and water effluents permitted by the federal government or by delegated state agencies under the Clean Air Act or Clean Water Act.

"(13) RECLAMATION OF HAZARDOUS WASTES.—The term 'reclamation of hazardous waste' means any hazardous waste that is processed to recover a usable product or any such waste that is regenerated. The term also includes hazardous wastes that are employed as an ingredient (including use as an intermediate) in an industrial process to make a product. The term also includes hazardous wastes that are employed in a particular function or application as an effective substitute for a commercial product. The term does not include hazardous wastes that are reused in a manner analagous to land disposal or incineration, including but not limited to, hazardous wastes that are used to produce products that are applied to the land hazardous wastes burned for energy recovery used to produce a fuel or contained in fuels.

"SEC. 4693. RECORDS, STATEMENTS, AND RETURNS.

"Every person who disposes of, or stores hazardous wastes for one year or more subject to taxation under this subchapter shall keep records, render such statements, make such returns, and comply with rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe to ensure proper assessment, payment, and collection of the taxes imposed by Section 4691. The Secretary shall consult with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to ensure that records, statements, and returns required to be kept, rendered, and made under this section shall be consistent, to the extent possible, with the reports required to be submitted to the Administrator under the Solid Waste Disposal Act. The Secretary may require any person who generates, transports, disposes of, or stores hazardous wastes for one year or more and who is required to maintain records under the Solid Waste Disposal Act, the Marine Protection, Research and Sanctuaries Act or the Safe Drinking Water Act, to submit copies of such reports or make such reports available to the Secretary as required."

"Sec. 242. The Table of Subchapters for Chapter 38 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding the following at the end thereof:

"SUBCHAPTER D—TAX ON DISPOSAL OR LONG-TERM STORAGE OF HAZARDOUS WASTE"

"SEC. 243(a). EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this Act, unless otherwise provided, shall take effect January 1, 1986.

"(b) STUDY.—Not later than January 1, 1987, and annually thereafter, through 1989, the Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall submit to Congress a report on the amount of revenues being collected in accordance with this subchapter and his recommendations, if any, for changes in the tax imposed under this subchapter in order to—

"(1) raise an amount of revenue equivalent to the anticipated amount of revenue from the tax originally imposed under this subchapter,

"(2) ensure that the tax is discouraging the disposal of waste in an environmentally unsound manner, and

"(3) ensure that the tax is being collected with maximum administrative feasibility."

SEC. 103. Section 221(b)(1) of the Comprehensive, Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 is amended by adding a new sub-paragraph as follows:

"(F) the amounts received in the Treasury under section 4691 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

OBJECTIVES

1. To provide an additional source of revenue to supplement the feedstock tax in financing an expanded Superfund.

2. To provide an incentive for better hazardous waste management practices.

TAXABLE EVENT

Receipt of hazardous waste for disposal or long-term storage (one year or more) at a qualified hazardous waste disposal or storage facility regulated under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA).

Disposal includes use of landfills, ocean dumping, deep well injection, land treatment, and surface impoundments. Each of these events involves the placement of hazardous waste in or on the land or water.

Long-term storage of hazardous waste for one year or more would also be taxed. This provision is included to close a potential tax loophole—that is, to discourage the placement of hazardous waste in storage as a way of avoiding the tax on disposal.

Treatment that renders hazardous waste non-hazardous and recycling waste are not taxable events.

TAXPAYER

The owner or operator of the RCRA regulated disposal or storage facility. It is the owner or operator of the facility who performs the taxable event and is currently obligated under RCRA to maintain disposal and storage records.

In the case of hazardous waste not disposed of or stored in a RCRA regulated facility, the person who disposes of the waste is required to pay the tax. This provision is included to discourage "midnight" or illegal dumping of hazardous waste—that is even a midnight dumper would be liable to pay the tax, or suffer the penalties that the IRS would impose for non-payment.

TAXABLE MATERIAL

Hazardous waste which is, at the time of enactment of this amendment, listed or defined as hazardous under the provisions of the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

Any wastes removed from the RCRA list will no longer be subject to the tax.

Any wastes added to the RCRA list after the date of enactment of this amendment will not be subject to the tax unless there is an Act of Congress specifying their taxation.

TAX IMPOSITION

The tax rates shall be as follows: $45 per ton for disposal by landfill, waste pile or surface impoundment; $25 per ton for disposal by ocean dumping or land treatment; $5 per ton for disposal by underground injection; and $45 per ton for long-term storage.

Note. These rates differ by method of disposal in order to take into consideration, to some extent, the water content generally found in wastes disposed of by such methods. The amendment also includes an alternative tax computation method whereby the taxpayer would also be allowed the option of calculating a dry weight tax (at $50 per ton of dry weight) with submission of proof of water content.

REVENUE

The tax is structured to raise just over $300 million annually, or about $1.5 billion over five years.

EFFECTIVE DATE AND TERMINATION

The tax would take effect on January 1, 1986 and end on September 30, 1990.

REPORTS AND RECORDS

The amendment provides for the use, to the maximum extent possible, of existing records and reporting requirements. The RCRA requirements, ocean dumping and Underground Injection Control (UIC) regulations together provide for recordkeeping which, either as it currently exists or with slight modification, provide the necessary data and records for assessing the tax.

TAX EXCLUSIONS

High Volume, Low Toxic Wastes. Wastes currently exempted from regulation under Section 3001 of the Solid Waste Disposal Act, e.g. fly ash, mine tailings, drillings fluids, etc., are not subject to the tax under this amendment. Such wastes could only be taxed by a future Act of Congress.

Superfund Sites. Wastes removed from Superfund sites are not subject to the tax under this amendment.

Waste Water Treatment. Waste disposed of or stored in surface impoundments that are part of certain waste water treatment facilities permitted under section 402 of the Clean Water Act are not subject to tax under this amendment.

TAX CREDIT PROVISIONS

A person who has paid a tax on the long-term storage of a hazardous waste, which is subsequently disposed of and subject to the disposal tax, would be entitled to a credit for the tax paid on the storage of such waste.●

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 2456

At the request of Mr. BRADLEY, the name of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY] was added as a cosponsor of S. 2456, a bill to establish a commission to study the 1932-33 famine caused by the Soviet Government in Ukraine.

S. 2716

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

RADIO AND TELEVISION COVERAGE OF SENATE PROCEEDINGS

BYRD AMENDMENT NO. 4350 THROUGH 4359

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. BYRD submitted 10 amendments intended to be proposed by him to an amendment to the resolution (S. Res. 66) to establish regulations to implement television and radio coverage of proceedings of the Senate; as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 4350

At the end of the amendment, insert the following:

AMENDMENT No. 4351

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

AMENDMENT No. 4352

At the end of the amendment, insert the following:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted, insert the following:

That (a) the Senate hereby authorizes and directs that there be both television and radio broadcast coverage (together with videotape and audio recordings) of proceedings in the Senate Chamber.

(b) Such broadcast coverage shall be—

(1) provided in accordance with the provisions of this resolution,

(2) provided from the hours of 12 noon until 3 o'clock p.m. for television and continuously at all times for radio when the Senate is in session (or is meeting in Committee of the Whole), except for any time when a meeting with closed doors is ordered, and

(3) provided subject to the provisions pertaining to the Senate gallery contained in the following Standing Rules of the Senate: rule XIX, paragraphs 6 and 7, rule XXV, paragraph 1(n), and rule XXXIII, paragraph2.

SEC. 2. The radio and television broadcast of Senate proceedings shall be—

(a) supervised and operated by the Senate,

(b) made available on a "live" basis and free of charge to (1) any accredited member of the Senate Radio and Television Correspondents Gallery, (2) the coaxial cable system of the Architect of the Capitol, and (3) such other news gathering, education, or information distributing entity as may be authorized by the Committee on Rules and Administration to receive such broadcast.

SEC. 3. The television broadcast of Senate proceedings shall follow the Presiding Officer and Senator who are recognized to speak by the Presiding Officer (including Senators who are so recognized with the consent of another Senator to interrupt such other Senator).

SEC. 4. (a) The broadcast coverage by radio and television of the proceedings of the Senate shall be implemented as provided in this section.

(b) The Architect of the Capitol, in consultation with the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, shall—

(1) construct necessary broadcasting facilities for both radio and television (including a control room and the modification of Senate sound and lighting fixtures),

(2) employ necessary expert consultants, and

(3) acquire and install all necessary equipment and facilities to (A) produce a broadcast-quality "live" audio and color video signal of such proceedings, and

(B) provide an archive-quality audio and color video tape recording of such proceedings:

Provided, That the Architect of the Capitol, in carrying out the duties specified in clauses (1) through (3) of this subsection, shall not enter into any contract for the purchase or installation of equipment, for the employment of any consultant, or for the provision of training to any person, unless the same shall first have been approved by the Committee on Rules and Administration.

(c) The Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate shall (1) employ such staff as may be necessary, working in conjunction with the Senate Recording and Photographic Studios, to operate and maintain all broadcast audio and color video equipment installed pursuant to this resolution, (2) make audio and video tape recordings of Senate proceedings, (3) make copies of such recordings, available, upon payment to him of a fee fixed therefor by the Committee on Rules and Administration, to Members of the Senate and to each person described in subsection (b) (1) and (3) of section 2 of this resolution, and (4) retain for ninety days after the day any Senate proceedings took place such recordings thereof, and as soon thereafter as possible, transmit to the Librarian of Congress and the Archivist of the United States copies of such recordings: Provided, That the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, in carrying out the duties specified in clauses (1) and (2) of this subsection, shall comply with appropriate Senate procurement and other regulations.

(d) The Librarian of Congress and the Archivist of the United States shall each receive, store, and make available to the public, at no cost for viewing or listening on the premises where stored and upon payment of a fee equal to the cost involved through distribution of taped copies, recordings of Senate proceedings transmitted to them by the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

SEC. 5. (a) As soon as practicable after the necessary equipment has been installed, there shall begin a test period during which tests of radio and television coverage of Senate proceedings shall be conducted by the staffs of the Committee on Rules and Administration and of the Office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate. Such test period shall end on such date as may be agreed upon by the majority leader, the minority leader, the chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, and the ranking minority member of such committee.

(b) During such test period—

(1) final procedures for camera direction control shall be established,

(2) coverage of Senate proceedings shall not be transmitted, except that, at the direction of the chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, such coverage may be transmitted over the coaxial cable system of the Architect of the Capitol, and

(3) recordings of Senate proceedings shall be made and retained by the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

SEC. 6. The use of tape duplications of broadcast coverage of the proceedings of the Senate for political or commercial purposes is strictly prohibited; and any such tape duplication furnished to any person shall be made on the condition that it not be used for political or commercial purposes.

SEC. 7. Any changes in the regulations made by this resolution shall be made only by Senate resolution. However, the Committee on Rules and Administration may adopt such procedures and such regulations, which do not contravene the regulations made by this resolution, as it deems necessary to assure the proper implementation of the purposes of this resolution and S. Res. 20, Ninety-seventh Congress.

SEC. 8. Such funds as may be necessary (but not in excess of $3,500,000) to carry out this resolution shall be expended from the contingent fund of the Senate.

AMENDMENT NO. 4353

At the end of the amendment, insert the following:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted insert the following:

That (a) the Senate hereby authorizes and directs that there be both television and radio broadcast coverage (together with videotape and audio recordings) of proceedings in the Senate Chamber.

(b) Such broadcast coverage shall be—

(1) provided in accordance with the provisions of this resolution,

(2) provided from the hours of 12 noon until 3 o'clock p.m. for television and continuously at all times for radio when the Senate is in session (or is meeting in Committee of the Whole), except for any time when a meeting with closed doors is ordered, and

(3) provided subject to the provisions pertaining to the Senate gallery contained in the following Standing Rules of the Senate: rule XIX, paragraphs 6 and 7, rule XXV, paragraph 1(n), and rule XXXIII, paragraph 2.

SEC. 2. The radio and television broadcast of Senate proceedings shall be—

(a) supervised and operated by the Senate,

(b) made available on a "live" basis and free of charge to (1) any accredited member of the Senate Radio and Television Correspondents Gallery, (2) the coaxial cable system of the Architect of the Capitol, and (3) such other news gathering, education, or information distributing entity as may be authorized by the Committee on Rules and Administration to receive such broadcast.

SEC. 3. The television broadcast of Senate proceedings shall follow the Presiding Officer and Senators who are recognized to speak by the Presiding Officer (including Senators who are so recognized with the consent of another Senator to interrupt such other Senator).

SEC. 4. (a) The broadcast coverage by radio and television of the proceedings of the Senate shall be implemented as provided in this section.

(b) The Architect of the Capitol, in consultation with the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, shall—

(1) construct necessary broadcasting facilities for both radio and television (including a control room and the modification of Senate sound and lighting fixtures),

(2) employ necessary expert consultants, and

(3) acquire and install all necessary equipment and facilities to (A) produce a broadcast-quality "live" audio and color video signal of such proceedings, and

(B) provide an archive-quality audio and color video tape recording of such proceedings:

Provided, That the Architect of the Capitol, in carrying out the duties specified in clauses (1) through (3) of this subsection, shall not enter into any contract for the purchase or installation of equipment, for the employment of any consultant, or for the provision of training to any person, unless the same shall first have been approved by the Committee on Rules and Administration.

(c) The Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate shall (1) employ such staff as may be necessary, working in conjunction with the Senate Recording and Photographic Studios, to operate and maintain all broadcast audio and color video equipment installed pursuant to this resolution, (2) make audio and video tape recordings of Senate proceedings, (3) make copies of such recordings available, upon payment to him of a fee fixed therefor by the Committee on Rules and Administration, to Members of the Senate and to each person described in subsection (b) (1) and (3) of section 2 of this resolution, and (4) retain for ninety days after the day any Senate proceedings took place such recordings thereof, and as soon thereafter as possible, transmit to the Librarian of Congress and to the Archivist of the United States copies of such recordings: Provided, That the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, in carrying out the duties specified in clauses (1) and (2) of this subsection, shall comply with appropriate Senate procurement and other regulations.

(d) The Librarian of Congress and the Archivist of the United States shall each receive, store, and make available to the public, at no cost for viewing or listening on the premises where stored and upon payment of a fee equal to the cost involved through distribution of taped copies, recordings of Senate proceedings transmitted to them by the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

SEC. 5. (a) As soon as practicable after the necessary equipment has been installed, there shall begin a test period during which tests of radio and television coverage of Senate proceedings shall be conducted by the staffs of the Committee on Rules and Administration and of the Office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate. Such test period shall end on such date as may be agreed upon by the majority leader, the minority leader, the chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, and the ranking minority member of such committee.

(b) During such test period—

(1) final procedures for camera direction control shall be established,

(2) coverage of Senate proceedings shall not be transmitted, except that, at the direction of the chairman of the Committee on Rules and Administration, such coverage may be transmitted over the coaxial cable system of the Architect of the Capitol, and

(3) recordings of Senate proceedings shall be made and retained by the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

SEC. 6. The use of tape duplications of broadcast coverage of the proceedings of the Senate for political or commercial purposes is strictly prohibited; and any such tape duplication furnished to any person shall be made on the condition that it not be used for political or commerical purposes.

SEC. 7. Any changes in the regulations made by this resolution shall be made only by Senate resolution. However, the Committee on Rules and Administration may adopt such procedures and such regulations, which do not contravene the regulations made by this resolution, as it deems necessary to assure the proper implementation of the purposes of this resolution and S. Res. 20, Ninety-seventh Congress.

SEC. 8. Such funds as may be necessary (but not in excess of $3,500,000) to carry out this resolution shall be expended from the contingent fund of the Senate.

This resolution shall only take effect when a procedure has been adopted to allow the Senate to waive the 3-day rule on written reports, and when a procedure has been adopted by which the time during televised sessions of the Senate is divided equally and is under the control of the Majority and Minority Leaders or their designees, and when a procedure has been adopted by which amendments can be required to be germane to the measure or matter to which they are offered, and when a procedure has been adopted by which Senate committees are precluded from meeting during televised sessions, and when the Senate has restricted the unlimited debate allowed on a motion to proceed to any measure or matter not a measure or matter to amend the Standing Rules of the Senate, and when the Senate has provided after cloture for a Senator to be able to yield back 1 hour of time, thereby reducing the 100 hour cap by 1 hour.

AMENDMENT No. 4354

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when the Senate has provided after cloture for a Senator to be able to yield back one hour of time, thereby reducing the 100-hour cap by one hour.

AMENDMENT No. 4355

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when a procedure has been adopted to allow the Senate to waive the 3-day rule on written reports.

AMENDMENT No. 4356

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when the Senate has adopted a procedure by which amendments can be required to be germane to the measure or matter to which they are offered.

AMENDMENT No. 4357

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when the Senate has adopted a procedure by which the time during televised sessions of the Senate is divided equally and is under the control of the Majority and Minority Leaders or their designees.

AMENDMENT No. 4358

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when the Senate has adopted a procedure by which Senate committees are precluded from meeting during televised sessions.

AMENDMENT No. 4359

At the end of the amendment, add the following:

This resolution shall only take effect when the Senate has restricted the unlimited debate allowed on a motion to proceed to any measure or matter not a measure or matter to amend the Standing Rules of the Senate.

NATIONAL OCEANIC AND ATMOSPHERIC ADMINISTRATION OCEAN AND COASTAL PROGRAM AUTHORIZATION ACT

PACKWOOD AMENDMENT NO. 4375

Mr. BAKER (for Mr. PACKWOOD) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 2538) to consolidate and authorize certain ocean and coastal programs and functions of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration under the Department of Commerce, and for other purposes; as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: That this Act may be cited as the "National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Ocean and Coastal Program Authorization Act".

TITLE I—NONLIVING MARINE RESOURCES

SEC. 101. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Commerce to enable the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to carry out its nonliving marine resource duties under law, $2,500,000 for fiscal year 1985. Moneys appropriated pursuant to this authorization shall be used to fund those duties relating to nonliving marine resources specified by the Act entitled "An Act to define the functions and duties of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and for other purposes", approved August 6, 1947 (33 U.S.C. 883a et seq.), and any other law involving such duties. Such duties include research, development, and licensing responsibilities pertaining to ocean thermal energy conversion and the seabed mining of manganese nodules, and polymetallic sulfide analyses and research.

(b) The authorization provided for under subsection (a) of this section shall be in addition to moneys authorized under the Deep Seabed Hard Minerals Resources Act (30 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.), and the Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9101 et seq.), for the purpose of carrying out such duties relating to nonliving marine resources.

TITLE II—NATIONAL SEA GRANT COLLEGE PROGRAM ACT

SEC. 201. (a) For the purpose of enabling the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to carry out its duties under the National Sea Grant College Program Act (33 U.S.C. 1121 et. seq.), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Commerce $42,000,000 for fiscal year 1985.

(b) Section 3(c) of the Sea Grant Program Improvement Act of 1976 (33 U.S.C. 1124a(c)) is amended by adding immediately after paragraph (3) the following:

"(4) For fiscal year 1985, not to exceed $1,000,000 in such fiscal year appropriated pursuant to section 212 of the National Sea Grant College Program Act may be available to carry out this section.".

TITLE III—OCEAN THERMAL ENERGY CONVERSION ACT

SEC. 301. For the purpose of enabling the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to carry out its duties under the Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9101 et seq.), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Commerce $630,000 for fiscal year 1985.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS

SEC. 401. The Act entitled "An Act to provide for a comprehensive, long-range, and coordinated national program in marine science, to establish a National Council on Marine Resources and Engineering Development, and a Commission on Marine Science, Engineering and Resources, and for other purposes", approved June 17, 1966 (80 Stat. 203) is amended, in paragraph (1) of subsection (c) of section 307 (16 U.S.C. 1556(c)(1)), by striking "directly" and inserting in lieu thereof "significantly'.

SEC. 402. There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Commerce to enable the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to carry out its duties indicated under the Act, such additional sums as may be necessary for increases in salary, pay, and other employee benefits authorized by law.

TITLE V—NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON OCEANS AND ATMOSPHERE ACT OF 1977

SEC. 501. For the purpose of enabling the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to carry out its duties under the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere Act of 1977 (33 U.S.C. 857-13 et seq.), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Commerce $630,000 for fiscal year 1985.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS AUTHORIZATION ACT

PACKWOOD AMENDMENT NO. 4376

Mr. BAKER (for Mr. PACKWOOD) proposed an amendment to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 5172) to authorize appropriations to the Secretary of Commerce for the programs of the National Bureau of Standards for fiscal years 1984 and 1985, and for related purposes; as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

TITLE I

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 101. This title may be cited as the "National Bureau of Standards Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1985".

AUTHORIZATION FOR PROGRAM ACTIVITIES

SEC. 102. There are authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1985 to the Secretary of Commerce to carry out activities performed by the National Bureau of Standards the sums set forth in the following line items:

(1) Measurement Research and Standards, $52,030,000.

(2) Engineering Measurements and Standards, $23,194,000.

(3) Computer Science and Technology, $10,000,000.

(4) Center for Fire Research, $5,827,000.

(5) Core Measurement Research for New Technologies, $12,168,000.

(6) Technical Competence Fund, $8,598,000.

(7) Central Technical Support, $13,728,000.

EXCESS FOREIGN CURRENCY

SEC. 103. In addition to the sums authorized to be appropriated by section 102 of this title, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce $600,000 for fiscal year 1985 for expenses of the National Bureau of Standards incurred outside the United States, to be paid for in foreign currencies that the Secretary of the Treasury determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States.

OFFICE OF PRODUCTIVITY, TECHNOLOGY, AND INNOVATION

SEC. 104. (a) In addition to the sums authorized to be appropriated by sections 102 and 103 of this title, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce $3,371,000 for fiscal year 1985 for the activities of the Office of Productivity, Technology, and Innovation.

(b) Of the sum authorized to be appropriated in subsection (a) of this section, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Productivity, Technology and Innovation is authorized and directed to expend $500,000 for the purpose of substantially increasing the availability of Japanese science and engineering literature to United States scientists and engineers through increased accessibility, monitoring, screening, translation, abstracting, indexing, dissemination, awareness, and marketing. In the conduct of this activity, the Assistant Secretary is authorized to make grants and, to the extent provided in advance by appropriations Acts, contracts with private for profit, nonprofit, and educational organizations and to provide funds to other government organizations, to coordinate with other government organizations, and to utilize (for all or part of this effort) the Director, staff, and facilities of the National Technical Information Service.

SALARY ADJUSTMENTS

SEC. 105. In addition to the sums authorized to be appropriated by sections 102, 103, and 104 of this title, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Commerce for fiscal year 1985 such additional sums as may be necessary to make any adjustments in salary, pay, retirement, and other employee benefits which may be provided for by law.

AVAILABILITY OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 106. Appropriations made under the authority provided in this title shall remain available for obligation, for expenditure, or for obligation and expenditure for such period or periods as may be specified in the Acts making such appropriations.

COST RECOVERY AUTHORITY

(1) by striking "first"; and

(2) by inserting immediately before the period at the end thereof the following: ", and to ensure the availability of working capital necessary to replace equipment and inventories".

(b) Fees for calibration services, standard reference materials, and other comparable services provided by the National Bureau of Standards shall be at least sufficient to meet the requirements set forth in the amendments made by subsection (a) of this section, and any funds recovered in excess of such requirements shall be returned to the Treasury of the United States.

COMPENSATION OF DIRECTOR

SEC. 108. (a) Section 5 of the Act of March 3, 1901 (15 U.S.C. 274) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "The director shall be compensated at the rate now or hereafter in effect for level IV of the Executive Schedule, pursuant to section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.".

(b)(1) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"Director, National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.".

(2) Section 5316 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking the following item:

"Director, National Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.".

STRUCTURAL FAILURES

SEC. 109. The National Bureau of Standards, on its own initiative but only after consultation with local authorities, may initiate and conduct investigations to determine the causes of structural failures in structures which are used or occupied by the general public. No part of any report resulting from such investigation shall be admitted as evidence or used in any suit or action for damages arising out of any matter mentioned in such report.

TITLE II

AMENDMENTS TO THE ACT OF MAY 10, 1950

SEC. 201. (a)(1) Section 3(a)(1) of the Act of May 10, 1950 (42 U.S.C. 1862(a)(1)) is amended—

(3) by inserting "the National Academy of Engineering," immediately after "National Academy of Sciences,", and by inserting ", engineering," immediately after "scientific" in the third sentence.

(g) The first sentence of section 10 of such Act (42 U.S.C 1869) is amended by striking "scientific study or scientific work in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering, social, and other sciences" and inserting in lieu thereof "study and research in the sciences or in engineering".

(h) Section 11 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1870) is amended—

(1) by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "scientific" each place it appears in subsections (c) and (i); and

(2) by inserting ", engineering," immediately after "scientific" where it first appears in subsection (g).

(i) Section 12 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1871) is amended by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "scientific".

(j) Section 13 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1872) is amended—

(1) by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "scientific" each place it appears; and

(2) by inserting "or engineers" immediately after "scientists" in subsection (a).

(k) Section 14 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1873) is amended—

(1) by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "scientific" each place it appears in subsection (f); and

(2) by striking "technical" in subsection (g) and inserting in lieu thereof "engineering".

(l) Section 15(b) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1874(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking "technical" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "engineering"; and

(2) by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "scientific" in paragraph (2).

(m) Section 2(b) of the Act of August 9, 1975 (42 U.S.C. 1869a(b)) is amended by inserting "or engineering" immediately after "science" each place it appears.

TITLE III

SHORT TITLE

SEC. 301. This title may be cited as the "Manufacturing Sciences and Robotics Research and Development Act of 1984".

FINDINGS

SEC. 302. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) manufacturing contributes significantly to the Nation's gross domestic product and employs more than one-fifth of the Nation's workforce;

(2) transportation and delivery of manufactured goods are vital components of the Nation's interstate commerce;

(3) while manufacturing industries are essential to the economic well-being of the Nation, many manufacturing processes and methods are no longer capable of producing goods as reliable and cost competitive as those produced by foreign industries which utilize modern manufacturing methods and processes;

(4) domestic manufacturing is increasingly threatened by external competition and the development by foreign countries of more efficient manufacturing processes and technologies;

(5) outdated manufacturing methods and processes result in higher costs and in goods and services of inferior quality, to the detriment of consumers of such goods and services;

(6) outdated and inefficient manufacturing processes hinder domestic commerce;

(7) a decline in consumption of domestic manufactured goods due to outdated manufacturing processes produces a resultant decline in transportation;

(8) various sectors of private industry, the Federal Government, and the United States research establishment have not devoted sufficient attention to research on developing new processes and methods to improve the Nation's capability to manufacture goods;

(9) domestic manufacturers have not sufficiently utilized such recent technological changes in manufacturing as programmable automation, robotics, advanced sensors, and computer-assisted design and manufacturing; and

(10) a program to conduct research in more advanced manufacturing processes and methods and to encourage research utilization would strengthen commerce and be beneficial to the Nation's consumers.

(b) The Congress further finds that—

(1) the widespread implementation of robotics and automated manufacturing technology and other practices and activities to implement improved manufacturing methods and processes, including new metallurgical technology, and processes for new nonmetallic materials, including composite materials and ceramics, can improve productivity, enhance quality, and increase competitiveness in a wide variety of domestic manufacturing industries;

(2) because robotics and automated manufacturing systems and other practices and activities to implement improved manufacturing methods and processes, including new metallurgical technology, and processes for new non-metallic materials, including composite materials and ceramics, affect widely divergent segments of industry, a program fostering these technologies should be of broad benefit to domestic manufacturing firms;

(3) a national program of research and information dissemination in robotics and automated manufacturing systems and other practices and activities to implement improved manufacturing methods and processes, including new metallurgical technology, and processes for new non-metallic materials, including composite materials and ceramics, is essential to ensure the timely and widespread implementation of these technologies; and

(4) to ensure the success of this program, the active participation and support of industry, universities, labor, and government are required.

PURPOSE

SEC. 303. It is the purpose of this title to establish a program for conducting research and other activities which will produce more advanced manufacturing technologies and for conducting research on utilization activities to encourage widespread adoption of these technologies.

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 304. As used in this title—

(1) the term "Advisory Committee" means the Manufacturing Sciences and Technology Enhancement Advisory Committee established under section 309;

(2) the term "consortium" means a group of institutions consisting of a nonprofit research institution and such other entities as a State, or a subdivision thereof, an individual firm or industry association, any other nonprofit research institution, and a university and any other higher education institution (including a two- and four-year college);

(3) the term "Center" means a Center for Manufacturing Research and Technology Utilization established under section 305(c);

(4) the term "Office" means the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Productivity, Technology, and Innovation within the Department of Commerce;

(5) the term "robot" means a programable multifunction manipulator designed to move material, parts, tools, or specialized devices through variable programed motions for the performance of a variety of tasks;

(6) the term "robotics" means the study of robots or the practice of using robots;

(7) the term "automated manufacturing system" means two or more operating stations of robots or fixed sequence automatic machines interconnected by a transport system, where both the operating stations and the transport system are controlled by a computer which performs such functions as production planning, task scheduling, and control of part and tool movement;

(8) the term "technology-sensitive industrial sector" means an industry whose productivity, efficiency and competitiveness, particularly in the world marketplace, is or is likely to be dependent upon the utilization of more advanced manufacturing processes and methods, as that term is used in section 305(a); and

(9) the term "secretary" means the Secretary of Commerce.

GRANTS, CONTRACTS, AND COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS

SEC. 305. (a) PURPOSES.—The Secretary, through the Office, may award grants and enter into contracts and cooperative agreements in accordance with the provisions of this section to provide for research on advanced manufacturing processes and methods, including—

(1) computer-assisted design;

(2) automated materials handling, processing, and assembly;

(3) automated testing;

(4) machine adaptive learning;

(5) integrated manufacturing systems, including interface of automated machines with automated and nonautomated machines, with production and design personnel, and with other systems (including testing devices, design systems, and inventory control systems);

(6) machine and process control strategies;

(7) automated sensing for machine and process control and product testing;

(8) new metallurgical technology;

(9) processes for new non-metallic materials, including composite materials and ceramics;

(10) practices and activities to implement improved manufacturing methods; and

(11) such other research as the Secretary determines to be consistent with the purpose of this title.

(b) GRANTS.—(1) The Secretary, through the Office, may make grants to provide for research to increase the amount of fundamental scientific and technological knowledge in fields relevant to manufacturing methods and processes. Such grants shall be made on a competitive basis to applicants who comply with such criteria as are specified in this title and as the Secretary shall establish, consistent with the purpose of this title.

(2) A recipient of such a grant may be affiliated with a nonprofit research institution, a private firm or industry association, a university or college, a Center established pursuant to subsection (c), or any other institution which the Secretary considers appropriate. Any such recipient shall not be required to provide any part of the costs of such research, unless the recipient desires to expand the scope of the research to be conducted. In such a case, the Secretary may enter into an agreement which provides for cost sharing by the recipient.

(3) Grants made under this subsection shall be based on the findings of the competitiveness study under section 308 to the extent practicable and on the recommendations of the Advisory Committee established under section 309.

(4) There are authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this subsection not to exceed $20,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and not to exceed $30,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1988. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

(c) COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS.—(1) The Secretary, through the Office, may enter into cooperative agreements with consortia for the purpose of establishing and supporting Centers for Manufacturing Research and Technology Utilization. Such agreements shall be made with applicants who comply with such criteria as are specified in this title and as the Secretary shall establish, consistent with the purpose of this title.

(2) Such Centers shall conduct research of a more applied nature than the research conducted under subsection (b). Centers shall conduct research on methods of increasing the utilization by the Nation's industries of those modern manufacturing methods which may result in lower production costs or improved product quality or reliability. Such research may be directed toward problems or processes and methods appropriate to a specific industrial sector, including aerospace, microelectronics, apparel mechanical assembly, basic materials, new materials, and transportation.

(3)(A) In addition to funds received by means of a contract or cooperative agreement entered into under this subsection, a consortium may also receive funds from other Federal agencies and from public and private institutions.

(B) A consortium which enters into such a cooperative agreement shall provide support and participation in a dollar amount at least equal to the amount of the Federal contribution to be made under this subsection. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "support and participation" includes cash or equipment contributions, industry personnel to conduct research, and access by persons in the research institutions to modern manufacturing equipment in the participating industry for research and other appropriate purposes. Any such consortium shall provide a cash or equipment contribution in an amount equal to at least 50 percent of the Federal Government's share. Contributions from the nonprofit participants of the consortium may consist of inkind contributions.

(4) In entering into agreements under this subsection, the Secretary shall consider (with respect to each such agreement)—

(A) the quality of the research which is to be undertaken as a result of the agreement;

(B) the extent of participation by industry in the research to be undertaken as a result of the agreement;

(C) the size of the industrial sector involved and the potential impacts on the productivity of that industrial sector as a result of successful research undertaken through the agreement, as well as the subsequent development and utilization of the manufacturing methods and processes to be studied as part of such research; and

(D) the extent to which entering into the agreement would be likely to increase the number of scientific and technical personnel capable of utilizing modern manufacturing methods and processes.

In addition, the Secretary shall consider the extent to which the industrial sector involved is presently competitively disadvantaged as a result of foreign technological advances and shall ensure diversity among the industrial sectors which are the subject of the research conducted under any such agreement, as well as geographic dispersion of the Centers established and supported under this subsection.

(5) Cooperative agreements entered into under this subsection shall be based on the findings of the competitiveness study under section 308 to the extent practicable and on the recommendations of the Advisory Committee established under section 309.

(6) There are authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this subsection not to exceed $15,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and not to exceed $25,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1988. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

(d) CONTRACT AUTHORITY.—To the extent provided in advance by appropriations Acts, the Secretary, under such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe, may enter into contracts with applicants to effectuate the purpose of this title.

(e) FEDERAL RESEARCH CENTER ON ROBOTICS AND AUTOMATED MANUFACTURING.—(1) There shall be a Federal Research Center on Robotics and Automated Manufacturing at the National Bureau of Standards. The Research Center shall focus its research and development on (A) measurements and standards required in robotics and automated manufacturing systems, including interface standards for integrated robot systems, and (B) systems integration, reliability, and performance.

(2) The Research Center shall coordinate its research activities with the Centers established under subsection (c) and shall share information through meetings, exchange of scientists, and network computer systems.

(3) The Director of the Research Center shall meet at least annually with the directors of the Centers established under subsection (c) to exchange specific plans and programs for the upcoming year to coordinate activities.

ROBOTICS AND AUTOMATED MANUFACTURING

SEC. 306. (a) SUPPORT.—The Secretary is authorized to support the education and training of scientists, engineers, and technicians needed for the theoretical understanding, design, construction, installation, use, and maintenance of robots and automated manufacturing systems. Such support may include, but need not be limited to, providing funds for the following: Graduate fellowships and traineeships, undergraduate scholarships, instructional equipment, the development of curricula for intramural or extramural use at undergraduate and graduate levels, and postdoctoral fellowships. Such support shall be provided on a matching basis with other sources of support, whenever possible.

(b) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated for purposes of this section not to exceed $5,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, not to exceed $7,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, and not to exceed $10,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1988. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

ADVANCED MANUFACTURING METHODS RESEARCH UTILIZATION PROGRAM

SEC. 307. (a) ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary shall establish a program to identify the impact on workers of enhanced utilization of technologically advanced manufacturing methods, including the potential for retraining workers who might otherwise be displaced. The Secretary may, to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts contract with any appropriate person or institution (including States and consortia established under section 3b(c) to carry out such program.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report on such program.

(c) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this section not to exceed $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

COMPETITIVENESS STUDY

SEC. 308. (a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall select specific domestic technology-sensitive industrial sectors, and shall analyze such sectors' long-term capability for remaining competitive and identify technological advances which might be needed to keep such sectors competitive, especially with industries in foreign countries. In making such selection, the Secretary shall consider industrial sectors which are or are likely to be vulnerable to foreign competition, as well as sectors which are likely to experience rapid and significant growth.

(b) SUBJECTS OF STUDY.—As part of such study, the Secretary shall consider—

(1) the adequacy of technologies utilized to produce the goods and services of the sectors involved;

(2) the existence of superior foreign technologies or unique resources which yield a competitive advantage to industries in foreign countries over comparable domestic industries;

(3) the anticipated scientific and technical personnel requirements for such sectors;

(4) the adequacy of Federal laws and regulations, and the enforcement of such laws and regulations, in promoting technological innovativeness and commercial competitiveness by such sectors; and

(5) the need for changes in such laws and regulations, or enforcement of such laws and regulations, in order to promote technological innovation and competition in such sectors and to safeguard the wellbeing of the Nation and the public.

(c) CONSULTATION.—As part of such study, the Secretary shall consult with and solicit comments from both management and labor representatives of the industrial sectors which are the subject of such study.

(d) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated for purposes of this section not to exceed $2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985, September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, and September 30, 1988. Such funds shall remain available until expended.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

SEC. 309. (a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary shall establish a Manufacturing Science and Technology Enhancement Advisory Committee to advise the Secretary concerning the activities to be conducted under this title. The Advisory Committee shall have 12 members and shall include at least 3 representatives each from the manufacturing research community, from labor, and from management of technology-sensitive industrial sectors identified under the terms of this title. Such member shall receive no compensation and shall be appointed for terms of 6 years, except that of the members first appointed four shall be appointed for terms of 2 years, shall be appointed for terms of 4 years, three shall be appointed for terms of 5 years, and three shall be appointed for terms of 6 years. Any such member shall, in accordance with section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, be entitled to reimbursement for travel or transportation expenses incurred in the performance of responsibilities as a member of the AdvisoryCommittee.

(b) FUNCTIONS.—The Advisory Committee shall—

(1) recommend to the Secretary policies and selection criteria for individual industrial sectors in need of assistance under section 30b of this title;

(2) review the progress of the Secretary in meeting all the requirements of this title;

(3) assess the effectiveness of the activities funded pursuant to this title; and

(4) submit to the Secretary, at least annually, evaluations and recommendations regarding activities carried out under this title.

(c) REPORT.—The Advisory Committee shall submit to the Congress an annual report on its activities under this title.

(d) APPLICABILITY.—The Advisory Committee shall be subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App. 1 et seq.)

NATURAL GAS PIPELINE SAFETY ACT AND HAZARDOUS LIQUID PIPELINE SAFETY ACT AUTHORIZATION ACT

DANFORTH AMENDMENT NO. 4377

Mr. BAKER (for Mr. DANFORTH) proposed an amendment to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 2688) to amend the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 and the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 to authorize appropriations for fiscal years 1985 and 1986, and for other purposes; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment, insert the following:

That (a) section 17(a) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684(a)) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) $3,472,000, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.".

(b) Section 17(b) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1684(b)) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) $3,728,000, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.".

SEC. 2. (a) Section 214(a) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2013(a)) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) $900,000, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.".

(b) Section 214(b) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2013(b)) is amended by—

(1) striking "and" at the end of paragraph (1);

(2) striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(3) adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) $500,000, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.".

SEC. 3. (a) Section 16(a) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1683(a)) is amended by—

(1) striking "to the President for transmittal"; and

(2) striking "June 15" and inserting in lieu thereof "April 15".

(b) Section 213(a) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2012(a)) is amended by—

(1) striking "to the President for transmittal"; and

(2) striking "June 15" and inserting in lieu thereof "April 15".

SEC. 4. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall study issues relating to the transportation of methanol through the interstate liquid pipeline system in the United States and shall make recommendations for the safe and efficient transportation of methanol through such pipeline system.

(b) Such study shall include an examination of—

(1) the feasibility of such transportation;

(2) the economics and engineering of such transportation; and

(3) any environmental, health and safety problems associated with such transportation.

(c) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report detailing the results of such study and setting forth the Secretary's recommendations no later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5. Section 210 of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2009) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall study the feasibility of and costs connected with requiring various methods of testing and inspecting hazardous liquid pipeline facilities subject to the provisions of this title. In carrying out such study, the Secretary shall evaluate any new technologies available for monitoring, from the outside or the inside, the condition of such facilities.

"(2) The Secretary shall make recommendations, based on the study undertaken under this subsection and on consultations between the Secretary and the Technical Hazardous-Liquid Pipeline Safety Standards Committee established under section 204 of this title, as to the frequency and type of testing and inspection of pipeline facilities which should be required, taking into account—

"(A) the location of the pipeline facilities;

"(B) the type, age, manufacturer, method of construction, and condition of the pipeline facilities;

"(C) the nature of the materials transported through the pipeline facilities, the sequence in which such materials are transported, and the pressure at which they are transported;

"(D) the climatic, geologic, and seismic characteristics of, and conditions (including soil characteristics) associated with the areas in which the pipeline facilities are located, and the existing and projected population and demographic characteristics associated with such areas;

"(E) the frequency of leaks, if any;

"(F) the costs of the various available methods; and

"(G) any other factors the Secretary determines to be relevant to the safety of the pipeline facilities.

"(3) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report detailing the results of the study undertaken under this subsection and setting forth the recommendations made under paragraph (2) no later than one year after the date of enactment of this subsection.".

SEC. 6. (a) Each person who owns or operates interstate transmission facilities shall, within 180 days after the date of enactment of this section, submit a report to the Secretary of Transportation which—

(1) identifies the location and condition of all such pipeline facilities owned or operated by such person, the construction of which was completed before January 1, 1940; and

(2) includes the most recent leak survey information compiled by such owner or operator with respect to the pipeline facilities so identified.

(b) The Secretary shall, within 90 days after the expiration of the 180-day period referred to in subsection (a) of this section—

(1) identify, on the basis of information contained in reports submitted under subsection (a) of this section, any pipeline facilities which may be hazardous to life and property within the meaning of section 12(b) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1679b(b)); and

(2) inspect the pipeline facilities so identified.

(c) The Secretary shall, within 120 days after the expiration of the 180-day period referred to in subsection (a) of this section, report to the Congress on—

(1) any actions taken under subsection (b) of this section; and

(2) the recommendations of the Secretary for any additional action the Secretary considers necessary with respect to the pipeline facilities referred to in subsection (a)(1) of this section, together with an estimate of the time and resources necessary for undertaking such actions.

(d) As used in this section, the term—

(1) "interstate transmission facilities" shall have the meaning given to such term in section 2(8) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1671(8));

(2) "person" shall have the meaning given to such term in section 2(1) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1671(1)); and

(3) "pipeline facilities" shall have the meaning given to such term in section 2(4) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1671(4)).

SEC. 7. (a) Section 14(a) of the Natural Gas Pipeline Safety Act of 1968 (49 U.S.C. App. 1681(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "In conducting training activities for State or local government personnel in the enforcement of regulations issued under this Act, the Secretary may not assess any charge or fee in the nature of tuition.".

(b) Section 211(a) of the Hazardous Liquid Pipeline Safety Act of 1979 (49 U.S.C. App. 2010(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "In conducting training activities for State or local government personnel in the enforcement of regulations issued under this Act, the Secretary may not assess any charge or fee in the nature of tuition.".

DEPARTMENTS OF LABOR, HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, AND EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATION, 1985

BRADLEY (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4378

Mr. BRADLEY (for himself, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. CHILES, Mr. PELL, Mr. WEICKER, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. MATSUNAGA, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. LEVIN) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 6028) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

SCIENCE AND MATH EDUCATION

For carrying out the provisions of title II of the Education for Economic Security Act, $200,000,000 to remain available until expended.

EAGLETON (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4379

Mr. EAGLETON (for himself, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. STAFFORD, Mr. HATCH, Mr. PELL, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. BRADLEY, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. DODD, Mr. GORTON, and Mr. CRANSTON) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

For carrying out the provisions of title VII of the Education for Economic Security Act, relating to magnet schools assistance, $75,000,000: Provided, That not more than $5,000,000 in the fiscal year may be paid to any single eligible local educational agency: Provided further, That amounts appropriated under this sentence shall be available October 1, 1984.

WEICKER AMENDMENT NOS. 4380 THROUGH 4384

Mr. WEICKER proposed five amendments to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4380

On page 27, line 16, strike "96,781,000" and insert in lieu thereof "98,781,000".

AMENDMENT NO. 4381

On page 32, line 15, after the second comma insert the following: "the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act.".

On page 32, line 17, strike out "$1,928,004,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,003,704,000".

Page 18, line 21, after the colon, insert the following:

Provided further, That such funds as may be necessary shall be transferred from the National Health Service Corps to the Community Health Center program to pay for the salaries, benefits and other expenses associated with the private placement assignment of Corps personnel:

AMENDMENT NO. 4383

On page 45, line 25, strike out "and" and insert in lieu thereof a comma.

On page 45, line 26, after "section 619" insert a comma and the following: "and $61,000,000 for Part D of such Act, including special education supervision, administrator and research, special projects, and State education agency programs under existing grants and contracts as well as new grants and contracts as authorized by such Part D,".

AMENDMENT NO. 4384

On page 46, line 2, before the period, insert a colon and the following: Provided, That $500,000 of the amounts available under this heading for part F of the Education of the Handicapped Act shall be available for the Theater of the Deaf".

BYRD (AND RANDOLPH) AMENDMENT NO. 4385

Mr. BYRD (for himself and Mr. RANDOLPH) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

On page 15, line 13, strike "$100,730,000," and insert in lieu thereof "102,330,000".

HEINZ (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4386

Mr. HEINZ (for himself, Mr. CHAFEE, and Mr. CHILES) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

On page 43, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

EXCELLENCE IN EDUCATION PROGRAM

For carrying out the provisions of title VI of the Education for Economic Security Act, $10,000,000 to remain available until expended.

INOUYE AMENDMENT NO. 4387

Mr. PROXMIRE (for Mr. INOUYE) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

On page 17, line 22, insert the following after colon: Provided further, That $5,000,000 shall be available to make grants to the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, Hawaii, to plan, develop, and operate a program for the training of medical officers to serve in American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, under Section 301 of the U.S. Public Health Service Act. These funds may be used for alteration and renovation of facilities, travel, and student stipends, among other costs as necessary, for the training program, and shall remain available until expended.

BUMPERS AMENDMENT NO. 4388

Mr. PROXMIRE (for Mr. BUMPERS) proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, no funds appropriated by this Act may be used to execute or carry out any contract with a non-governmental entity to administer or manage a Civilian Conservation center of the Job Corps which was not under such a contract as of September 1, 1984."

ABDNOR AMENDMENT NO. 4389

Mr. ABDNOR proposed an amendment to the bill H.R. 6028, supra; as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 4389

INDIAN FINANCING ACT AMENDMENTS

ANDREWS AMENDMENT NO. 4390

Mr. BAKER (for Mr. ANDREWS) proposed an amendment to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (H.R. 2614) to amend the Indian Financing Act of 1974; as follows:

In Section 503 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (as amended by section 13 of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the House of Representatives to the text of the bill), strike out "5 per centum" and insert in lieu thereof "6 percent".

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS

Mr. ROTH. Mr. President, the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs will hold a hearing on the Relationship Between Congress and the Executive in the Formulation and Implementation of Foreign Policy on Wednesday, September 26, at 10 a.m. in SD-342 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building. For further information, please contact Bill Scully at 224-4751.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, October 2, at 2 p.m., to hold a hearing on tender offers, and securities.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

WATER RESOURCES LEGISLATION

● Mr. WARNER. On Monday of this week, the leadership of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee introduced a substitute for S. 1739, "The Water Resources Development Act of 1984." I was pleased to work with them in the formulation of this important piece of legislation, and I commend them for their efforts. The bill is now pending on the Senate Calendar, and we are continuing to work with other Senators with respect to their particular States' interests. I, myself, am considering offering an amendment.

Despite the efforts of a number of Senators, water resources legislation has not been considered by the full Senate since 1976—nearly a decade. I, like so many of my colleagues, have introduced ports improvement legislation in every Congress in which I have served.

The delay is due to the significant changes proposed in the traditional funding patterns for navigation improvements under which the costs would be allocated between the Federal taxpayers and users of the facilities. Historically, Federal taxpayers paid all.

With regard to harbor projects, the debate is primarily between small and large ports. Understandably, ports are, always have been, and will continue to be competitive. Accordingly, the debate is along these lines rather than partisan political differences.

Indeed, within my own State, there are no partisan differences on this issue. The entire Virginia Congressional Delegation favors water resources legislation.

Once this most recent compromise was formalized and drafted into the pending bill, I solicited from the Governor of Virginia his views. Governor Robb appropriately addressed his response in support of the legislation to Chairman STAFFORD.

The private sector and the Virginia Port Authority joined the Governor and me in endorsing the legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of these three letters be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of this statement.

I urge the Senate to act on this important legislation in the short time remaining before adjournment.

The letters follow:

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Richmond, September 18, 1984.

Hon. ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Chairman, Environment and Public Works Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I write to you today on a subject of much importance to the Commonwealth of Virginia and particularly to our important coal industry, the deepening of the harbor channels of Hampton Roads.

As you know, Congress has not authorized a new major deepening project since 1976 and our own proposed Hampton Roads 55-foot channel project, the subject of Congressionally-authorized study since 1969, remains unauthorized and thus ineligible for federal funding. It has been over the past three years, however, that the need for deeper American harbors has been most clearly recognized, only to be met with the inability of the Administration, Congress, and Industry groups to reach a consensus on the form of new omnibus dredging legislation. A stalemate and frustration have resulted.

More than frustration, however, there is growing fear that as this situation continues, America's position as a major supplier in world coal markets becomes increasingly precarious. Because coal export is a major industry in Virginia, the erosion of our markets abroad could have serious economic consequences here. In 1983, activity at Hampton Roads generated 18,500 jobs in the coal mining industry. Every 955 tons of coal moving through the port generates one job in the Commonwealth outside of the coal mining industry itself.

With this background, we have analyzed the new substitute version of S. 1739, The National Harbors Improvement Act of 1984, as the most promising vehicle for harbor deepening legislation. The bill contains two provisions that we have deemed of greatest importance to our state and necessary for our support of any such legislation—Congressional authorization of the Hampton Roads 55-foot project, and a significant federal role in the funding of both operation and maintenance and deepening itself. A third provision, allowing the authorized 55-foot project to be constructed in segments, will allow local sponsors flexibility to deepen only to the depths the marketplace requires at that time. While the bill, as I am sure you will agree, certainly does not address all of our concerns satisfactorily, especially in its treatment of Hampton Roads vis-a-vis Baltimore, it does not appear to, in any way, lessen our competitive advantage among ports of this country and will allow us to meet more strongly the competition of ports (and coal suppliers) abroad.

The legislation will finally provide a signal to the coal-buying nations abroad, and our miners here, of America's commitment to supplying the world's energy needs with our rich, abundant reserves and deeper harbors.

Your continued support of S. 1739, The National Harbors Improvement Act of 1984, will be most appreciated.

Sincerely,

CHARLES S. ROBB.

HAMPTON ROADS
MARITIME ASSOCIATION, INC.,
Norfolk, VA, September 14, 1984.

Hon. JOHN W. WARNER, Jr.,
Washington, DC.

DEAR JOHN: This will confirm the telephone conversation this morning with Susan McGill when she outlined a substitute ports bill to be introduced on Monday, September 17, 1984.

Features of the substitute bill are:

(1) A port may not be required to undertake construction of an entire authorized project, but rather segmented construction of it when justified.

(2) The cost of a 50-foot channel project in Hampton Roads is $163,500,000, of which $72 million represents non-federal cost.

(3) The cost of a 50-foot channel project for the Port of Baltimore is $358,000,000, of which $100.5 million represents non-federal cost.

The Hampton Roads Maritime Association finds that the above features of a substitute ports bill are acceptable and we fully support your efforts in this matter.

Hopefully, this substitute bill will snowball and passage by Congress prior to October 5th will be possible. As in the past, we appreciate your office keeping us advised on developments.

Best wishes,

Sincerely,

JACK W. MACE,
Executive Vice President.

COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA,
September 19, 1984.

Hon. JOHN W. WARNER,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR WARNER: I write to you today on the subject of harbor deepening legislation, as time again wanes for action on this matter.

Three years ago, 160 ships sat at anchor in Hampton Roads, the world's largest coal port, waiting to load American coal. Three years ago, over 50 million tons of American coal were loaded in Hampton Roads. Today, few ships wait. We may load 35 million tons of coal this year in our port. While undoubtedly a worldwide recession and strong American dollar have dampened demand for our coal, it is inescapable that a factor that continues to saddle the United States with the role as a marginal coal supplier is the high cost of our product. More than ever, it is apparent that a means of reducing the delivered cost of our coal is to provide deeper channels to our harbors and loading facilities for the larger, more economical coal ships. We are convinced that America can no longer wait for legislation to enable those deeper channels to be dug, for even today new competitors with lower costs enter world markets and trading patterns shift toward producers with deeper channels already.

This sense of urgency would never compel us, however, to support legislation that would disadvantage our port vis-a-vis other or so shift the burden onto us, via user fees, as to make dredging infeasible. It is from this perspective that I have had an in-depth staff examination of S. 1739 as a potential legislative means for the deepening of Hampton Roads.

The bill has as a basis three provisions that we consider absolutely essential—authorization of the Hampton Roads 55-foot project, 50/50 local/federal cost sharing for new construction and incremental maintenance, and a sanction for authorized projects to be built in segments as commercially required. These last two provisions are especially to the financial feasibility of major dredging problems. We find fault with the bill in its favored treatment of the port of Baltimore, although it will not impair to any degree our competitive position vis-a-vis that port. We are also concerned that a five year authorization may be impractically limiting, and place an impossible and unfair burden on three major projects singled out and that, in any event, commitment of a percentage of funding by either federal or local partner should be sufficient to toll this 'statute of limitations.'

While we would hope that these problems can be remedied, the strengths of S. 1739 and the need to break finally this stalemate that burdens our export markets lead the Virginia Port Authority to ask for your favorable consideration of the bill.

Sincerely,

J. ROBERT BRAY,
Executive Director.●

SUPERFUND

● Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, the Senate Finance Committee today heard testimony on legislation pending before the Senate to reauthorize and substantially strengthen the Superfund program to clean up the worst abandoned hazardous waste sites in our country.

There are more than 17,000 known abandoned toxic waste sites in America and these sites threaten our lives and the lives of our children. My own State of New Jersey leads the Nation with the greatest number of sites which pose an immediate and dangerous threat to the well-being of our communities.

Concern about this threat is very real in New Jersey and there is great public awareness about this life-threatening problem. Rarely does a day go by without a New Jersey newspaper, television, or radio station reporting yet another story about one of these sites; or worse—its latest victim.

In recent weeks two major newspapers in New Jersey, the Record and the Sunday Times, published articles relating to the Superfund program. If we are to pass a stronger, more effective Superfund program and eliminate the threat these sites pose to our well-being, then we must move ahead on Superfund this year.

Mr. President, I commend these articles to the attention of our colleagues and urge their support on this most important legislation.

The articles follow:

SUPERFUND—4 YEARS OF TOXIC CLEANUP ONLY A DROP IN THE BARREL

(By Michael J. Spataro)

Four years later, the problem remains more overwhelming than first imagined, the red tape thicker and the tangible results practically invisible.

That's the consensus of many New Jersey officials on the benefits of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, commonly known as the Superfund, act, now in its final year and awaiting a new lease on life from Congress.

When New Jersey speaks about toxic waste, most people listen. For it is the Garden State that has become the toxic waste capital of the country, if not the world.

The Environmental Protection Agency's national priority list contains 546 Superfund sites, 85 of which are in New Jersey, 37 mores sites than runner-up Michigan and 46 more than third-place Pennsylvania.

"In four years, only six sites have been cleaned up out of the EPA list of 22,000 hazardous waste dump sites in the nation," says Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., who helped write the original legislation and was the floor leader of the reauthorization that passed the House Aug. 10.

"The first 2½ years the people in the EPA had a do-nothing attitude and they have been floundering ever since," said Florio, upset that most of the original Superfund money has been spent but very little cleanup work started.

"A lot of engineers and consultants made a whole lot of money. There were a lot of administrative expenses, but the bottom line is that these sites were suppose to be cleaned up and they haven't."

The Camden Democrat said the problem was compounded by the firing last year of Rita Lavelle, the EPA's assistant administrator for solid waste and emergency response and unofficial chief of the toxic waste cleanup program.

The Superfund act does not expire until 1985, but Florio and his colleagues on Capitol Hill are working hard on reauthorization, calling for a stronger version and a $10.2 billion fund.

According to federal officials, long-term cleanup work has begun at 315 sites and emergency work is underway at 328 dumps cited by local environmental officials and the EPA.

The EPA says as many as 1,500 more sites could be added to the 22,000 already identified and environmentalists estimate that at least $16 billion will be needed to make a dent in the rapidly growing toxic waste dilemma.

In New Jersey, where the state government also has a Spill Compensation Fund designed to help clean up non-Superfund sites, the problem is more than enormous.

Superfund sites can be found in 19 of New Jersey's 21 counties, and those are only the ones considered serious enough to make the list.

Ocean County leads the list with 11 sites, five in Plumsted Township alone. Morris County, with 10 dump sites, and Middlesex and Burlington counties, with nine apiece, are next on the list.

The state Department of Environmental Protection is not only dealing with individual dumps, but rather complicated forms of contamination never before encountered.

Each of the New Jersey sites is ranked from one to 85, with the Lipari Landfill in Mantua Township in Gloucester County being first on the list and the PJP Landfill in Jersey City last.

In addition, each site is grouped with other sites in the nation giving them a national priority. The groups range from one to nine.

"The New Jersey sites are up against sites in the rest of the country," said EPA spokesman Richard Cahill.

"We use a model which ranks the sites by hazard, the amount of hazard to the public and the population at risk. For instance, Price's Pit Landfill (in Egg Harbor Township, Atlantic County) ranks high on the list (No. 3) because there is a significant threat to a water supply."

A site's ranking is extremely significant and the source of much discontent at the local level. Because of its position at No. 85, the PJP Landfill is not slated for any cleanup work until 1988 at the earliest.

"Our administration feels that Superfund is working," said Carl Golden, spokesman for Gov. Thomas Kean. One of the complaints is why aren't sites being cleaned up. The major problem is we have to study the best ways to accomplish that. This is not the type of process which develops quick-hit solutions."

Lipari, a private dumping site, contains cleaning solvents, paint thinners, paints, phenols, resins and other waste residues.

Mantua Mayor Nancy Thorp said she is content with the amount of work done at Lipari, noting, "They are going right along the timetable."

Florio, however, argues that it will take nearly $6 million to clean up Lipari and that the EPA "will use the remainder of the $1.6 billion (Superfund money) before they get to any other New Jersey sites."

Except for Lipari, Kin-Buc Inc. Landfill in Edison (No. 26) and Chemical Control in Elizabeth (No. 37), actual cleanup work has been almost nonexistent in New Jersey.

Preliminary work has started at about a dozen other sites.

"We expect to have about 20 cleanups underway by the end of fiscal 1986 (June 30, 1986)," DEP spokesman George Klenk said.

Just recently, the EPA announced that it had "secured" the threat of PCB contamination at the 20-acre Kin-Buc site.

"The process has not moved as quickly as anticipated," said John Frisco, chief of the Hazardous Remediation Section of the EPA.

"About one-third of the New Jersey sites are in the enforcement stage, one-third in the process of negotiating funding and one-third have not been addressed yet," Frisco added, noting it takes up to 18 months to complete investigative work on a site to determine the extent of contamination.

Despite this, Frisco still believes New Jersey has benefitted the most from the Superfund legislation.

"We have a head start here," he said. "They have funded a lot more sites in New Jersey than in other states."

New Jersey has also enjoyed success, although limited, in convincing some firms responsible for the sites to fund the work. Such is the case in Bound Brook in Somerset County, where American Cyanamid Co. is cleaning up the state's 28th worst Superfund site.

Other local officials remain angry over delays.

"No work is being done. That's my complaint," said Mayor Russell Azzarello of Old Bridge, site of the state's No. 4 Superfund site, CPS-Madision Industries.

Dumping has occurred at the site since 1967 and contamination has resulted in the closing 32 municipal drinking-water wells. It's estimated the site contains 400 tons of hazardous materials.

The landfill is still in operation and the mayor has been pressing state and federal environmental officials to close the site.

A number of other sites on the Superfund list are causing considerable concern.

Pepe Field in Boonton is a swamp that contains an unknown quantity of pesticides and emits hydrogen sulfide, a gas that smells like rotten eggs. Pepe Field is No. 78 in the EPA's Group 7 nationally, one of the lowest-priority categories.

"We've closed a baseball field, but that's about it," says Boonton Mayor Anthony Bucco.

In Hamilton Township, Atlantic County, the 1-Acre D'Imperio Property, which is inactive, contains exposed and buried drums. Contamination threatens 6,000 people served by groundwater within a three-mile radius, including students in a high school.

"No work has started and we'd like to see things move a lot faster," said Hamilton Mayor Barbara Sorrentino.

One of the major complaints has been over use of the state's Spill Compensation Fund, which generates $10.5 million a year by a 1-cent-per-barrel tax on the petrochemical industry. Currently, there is $17 million in the fund.

The fund was nearly depleted for cleanup work after the disastrous 1980 fire at Chemical Control, which ranks as the state's worst environmental disaster.

Robert Hunt, administrator of the spill fund office in the DEP, says the fund is not designed to "use money for the same expenditures on the Superfund sites."

According to federal officials, one of the reasons New Jersey has so many sites on the superfund list is that the state has acted far quicker than others in identifying its toxic problems.

But some environmentalists charge the state has an ulterior motive in such quick action.

"The state has been trying to get sites on the superfund list and then by doing that says there is nothing further it can do at the site," said Madelyn Hoffman, head of the Grass Roots Environmental Organization, a group representing several thousand people.

"Everyone knows that there is not enough money in the Superfund legislation to clean up all of the sites on the national list."

Republican leaders in the Senate have promised they will take up the $10.2 billion Superfund reauthorization when the Senate comes back from recess early in September.

Both parties admit presidential politics is involved in the issue.

Democrats want to get the fund increased before the election, fearing President Reagan would let the Superfund die if not faced with a re-election battle. Reagan and EPA chief William Ruckelshaus said earlier this year the reauthorization should wait until next year, after the current legislation expires.

House Republicans were successful in eliminating a provision that would have allowed victims of hazardous waste polluters to sue for damages, but the bill ultimately passed by a lopsided vote of 323-to-33.

[From the Record, Aug. 30, 1984]

TOXIC WASTE: LET'S GET BUSY

There are 18,000 present or former toxic-waste dumps in the United States—552 of them dangerous enough to be placed on a "national priority" cleanup list. In four years, only six of the 552 sites have been cleaned up. For those sites low on the priority list, the record is even more discouraging.

Ask Gail Van Dyken of Wayne, Ms. Van Dyken lives near the site of an old radioactive-thorium dump. She and her neighbors have waited two years just for a plan to clean it up. Now there's a proposal to bury the thorium in town, rather than remove it or store it in concrete bunkers, and residents worry that it doesn't provide enough safeguards from future exposure.

Or ask Mary Ann Vuocolo of Newark's Ironbound section, where concentrations of the lethal chemical dioxin were found last year. The Ironbound is still mired in debate over how great the danger is. Ms. Vuocolo fears that government experts are underestimating the hazards and needlessly delaying cleanup plans.

In his recent visit to New Jersey, William D. Ruckelshaus, administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, acknowledges that cleanups were too slow and that the government "isn't giving clear answers." But when asked how he would speed up the process, Mr. Ruckelshaus shook his head, offered no new ideas, said his agency was doing the best it could, and accused Congress of trying to give him too much to do. Clearly, he is not a man on fire to solve this problem.

It's true that the national cleanup task is overwhelming. Lack of money is one major obstacle, which is why the Senate should speedily approve House-passed legislation increasing the environmental "Superfund" sixfold, to $10.1 billion. But money isn't the only answer. Here are three things that can be done without large expenditures of cash:

Streamlining the process: If you discover a toxic-waste dump in your community, who's responsible for cleaning it up? You'd think the answer would be simple and straightforward, but state and federal agencies frequently disagree where to dispose of the waste and who will do it. In the end, many towns are forced to turn to their representatives in Congress, as Wayne, Maywood, and Rochelle Park did when they discovered thorium.

Although such congressmen as Robert Roe of Wayne and Robert Torricelli of New Milford should be commended for stepping in, the intrusion of politics into the process sets a dangerous precedent. In many cases, only those communities with a well-organized lobby get help, while those lacking political savvy or aggressive representatives are ignored. When dangerous levels of dioxin were found in Missouri, the federal government directed most of its financial aid to the town of Times Beach, even though other communities reported higher levels. The reason: Times Beach had more political support and could lobby for the most money.

What we need are uniform, national standards for cleaning up waste, as well as agreement on which agencies are responsible for what. The present practice of judging each case separately results in too much wasted time, too much politics, and too much repetitive debate over cleanup procedures.

Free flow of information: After the discovery of a toxic dump, townspeople need accurate, comprehensive information on health problems and cleanup plans. But neither federal nor state agencies supply much information. It took a lawsuit by an unlikely alliance of environmentalists and chemical firms to force the federal government to establish the Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry in Atlanta, a national clearinghouse for health information on toxic waste—something it was required to do by law. Still missing at this new agency is information on the most effective, up-to-date cleanup methods. The agency's duties could easily be expanded to take on this function.

In addition, federal and state agencies should form more teams of experts to answer questions about toxic waste. Right now the agencies often treat fearful residents like children, presumably on the theory that to tell them anything would instill panic. The lack of information just leads to more fear and anger. In Newark, for example, local residents became so embittered at how little they knew that they refused to go to "information trailers" that were finally set up by the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Strict follow-up: Merely beginning a cleanup doesn't ensure that it will be completed. In South Jersey, a contractor hired to pump water from a former toxic dump quit after six months on the job when the weather turned cold. When the weather improved, the contractor didn't return to the job. In Lodi, officials announced in 1978 that they would repair a sewer that leaked industrial waste into the Saddle River. But the job was never completed, and in 1982 the DEP took up the matter at the request of the Passaic Valley Sewerage Commissioners. Two more years passed before the DEP could convince Lodi of its responsibility to repair the leaky sewer. The job was completed only two weeks ago. "The buck passes," said one Lodi official.

The national movement to clean up toxic waste will never succeed without aggressive leadership in Washington. So far, the closest thing we have to a leader is Rep. James Florio of Camden County, who led the fight for the Superfund. But Mr. Florio, however effective, is only one member of Congress. The leader in this movement has to be somebody with national stature and national reach—somebody like William Ruckelshaus.

In many ways, Mr. Ruckelshaus' position is like that of Robert F. Kennedy, who as attorney-general was faced with the overwhelming task of investigating civil-rights violations in the early Sixties. Kennedy didn't lament that the task was too big; he dispatched teams of aggressive investigators to the South. These investigators didn't solve the civil-rights problem by themselves. But they helped spark the nation's energy to do it.

Mr. Ruckelshaus could do the same by turning loose his own investigators and igniting a new public spirit to clean up toxic dumps. Unlike Kennedy, he is lucky because he has public opinion—and the law—on his side.

Instead, he has taken an indecisive stance. He appears to follow the dictums of the White House—not wanting to spend too much tax money, trying to persuade the chemical industry to shoulder more of the burden for cleaning up hazardous wastes. Yet he also seems to want to please environmentalists and the fearful neighbors of toxic-waste dumps by saying the wastes should be removed promptly. In short, he's treating toxic waste as some kind of political football—and he's fumbling the solution.

[From the Record, Aug. 17, 1984]

TWO VIEWS ON A LARGER "SUPERFUND"

(By Jenny Scott)

William D. Ruckelshaus yesterday defended the Reagan administration's opposition to a $10.1-billion expansion of the "Superfund," saying the bills now before Congress could overburden and bog down the toxic-waste cleanup program.

Ruckelshaus, the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, said setting deadlines for cleanup, raising cleanliness standards, and allowing citizens to sue the EPA could keep the program from achieving its goals.

"We're concerned that in the process of reauthorization we not give the agency so many additional responsibilities and claims on the money that it slows down," said Ruckelshaus, speaking at The Record in Hackensack.

Meanwhile, Rep. James J. Florio made an appearance yesterday at one of North Jersey's worst toxic dumps in an attempt to pressure the Senate to reauthorize the Superfund before the November elections.

Against the smoldering backdrop of the former PJP Sanitary Landfill, which has burned steadily since 1981, Florio held a press conference in Jersey City to promote passage of a Senate version of his bill to expand the Superfund sixfold to $10.1 billion.

"The symbolism of this site is that it's on the national priority list . . . yet here we are, four years after the program started, and nothing has been done," said Florio, a Democrat from Camden, whose bill passed the House last week.

Florio said the Senate must pass a similar bill when it returns to Washington in September "so four years from now we're not back here lamenting that nothing has been done."

The EPA's Superfund priority list consists of 552 sites, including 85 in New Jersey, that are believed to be among the worst toxic-waste dumps in the country.

Ruckelshaus was in New Jersey to announce the appointment of Christoper J. Daggett, an aide to Governor Kean, as administrator of the EPA regional office that covers New Jersey and New York.

Ruckelshaus also defended the administration's position that more study is needed before taking steps to reduce the acid rain damaging forests and lakes in the Northeast, Canada, and in the South.

He conceded that enough may already be known to warrant moderate legislation to gradually reduce the sulfur emissions believed to cause acid rain. But he accused Congress of considering only more sweeping remedies that he said are not yet justifiable.

Asked about delays in Superfund implementation, Ruckelshaus said it is wrong to measure the program's success by the fact that only six sites have been cleaned up and removed from the national priority list.

"Some of them will never come off the list," he said, saying that some will be monitored for 20 to 30 years. "To say that's all that have been cleaned up is a fallacy."

He said the program has covered more than 120 "removal actions to alleviate an immediate hazard," 170 cleanups of sites not on the list, and preliminary assessments of 10,000 of the country's 18,000 potential Superfund sites.

Some 125 to 150 new sites are to be added to the priority list in the coming weeks, Ruckelshaus said. He denied charges made by supporters of reauthorization that the administration has been "sitting on" the new list so as not to stir up support for reauthorization.

Ruckelshaus said the administration, too, supports reauthorization. But he said it wants to see the results of studies of the program now being done before deciding how to expand the program.

Under Florio's bill, the EPA would be required to begin cleanups of priority-list sites at a rate of 150 a year, and eventually to expand the lost to include at least 1,600 sites. The bill also provides for studies of the health effects of toxic-waste exposure, relocation of citizens under some circumstances, and lawsuits by citizens to force cleanups.

31-059 O-87-18 (Pt. 19)

Ruckelshaus, who won respect from environmentalists when he served as the first EPA administrator in the early 1970's, returned to the job in May 1983 after 12 high agency officials resigned or were fired.

Yesterday, Ruckelshaus said the agency's budget for the 1985 fiscal year represents a 53-percent increase over the administration's submission for the 1984 fiscal year. He said the Superfund staff has doubled since May 1983.

Florio said yesterday that the Superfund program is threatened by procrastination, not overt opposition.

"I suspect that after the election is over, there will be a reversion to that mentality that brought us Mrs. Burford, Ms. Lavelle, and Mr. Watt, that believes that the prime source of pollution is trees," Florio said.

Florio was referring to former EPA Administrator Anne McGill Burford and Rita Lavelle former Superfund program head, who resigned last year after allegations of political manipulation of cleanup money. He was also referring to James G. Watt, Reagan's first Secretary of the Interior, and to a comment Reagan once made that trees caused pollution.

Florio's press conference was held in the yard of Spear Trucking Corporation next to the 75-acre landfill, because owners of the site denied Florio permission to go on the landfill, an aid said.

As Florio spoke against a chainlink fence topped with razor ribbon, wisps of smoke rose amid the tiny yellow flowers growing out of the landfill.

"SUPERFUND" LIST RESTOKES CONTROVERSY

(By Robert Kravitz)

WASHINGTON, DC.—The Environmental Protection Agency yesterday restoked the controversy over its handling of the "Superfund" toxic-waste cleanup program by announcing what it claimed was an addition of 128 sites to the priority list for cleanup action.

Environmentalists and congressional critics immediately pointed out that none of the 128 sites were in fact "new," since the EPA had named the sites more than a year ago and proposed that they be added to the priority list.

Superfund administrator Lee Thomas said the sites were a step closer to being cleaned up by being added to the list, rather than being merely proposed.

But Blake Early, a spokesman for the Sierra Club, said the EPA announcement was "an election year hoax" and represented "absolutely no fresh or original work on adding new Superfund sites."

The EPA also drew fire for announcing that a list of another 200 to 250 sites that it has concluded should also be added to the priority list will not be ready for another "two to four weeks."

Rep. James J. Florio, a Camden County Democrat who is leading the push in Congress to expand and extend the Superfund program, said the second list was already a month overdue from the time the agency was required to announce it under the Superfund law.

He also charged that the EPA already has the new list prepared, but is withholding it to prevent pressure from building for passage of the Superfund expansion by the Senate and to keep the spotlight off the administration's Superfund record before the November election.

"They are allowing American citizens to sit next to these sites and are refusing to reveal the locations for blatantly political reasons," Florio said.

"Mrs. Burford was not even this blatantly political," he added, referring to former EPA Administrator Anne Burford, who was forced to resign after Congressional allegations that she manipulated Superfund grants for political reasons.

Thomas denied that the new list of sites was being held up for political reasons. He said the agency had to review many more sites than it had originally anticipated.

Nearby sites on the list released yesterday include the Diamond Alkali Company in Newark, which has contaminated its neighborhood with dioxin; the thorium waste on land owned by W.R. Grace & Company in Wayne, and the contamination of the Hudson River with polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCB's.

Radiation Technology Inc. in Rockaway Township, Morris County, is another of the 18 New Jersey sites on the new list.●

S. 1739—THE LEGISLATION MUST BE STRENGTHENED

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the majority leader could still call up S. 1739, the Water Resource Development Act, for Senate debate within the next several days.

We need to act on a water resource bill during this Congress, if at all possible.

But we need to act responsibly.

And we need to act to develop a bill the President will sign.

Frankly, I am concerned that we may pass legislation that is so overloaded with costs that it will be impossible to come out of the conference committee with a bill that can—or should—be signed by President Reagan.

S. 1739 calls for construction spending of approximately $13 billion, more than enough to carry the program through 1997, without considering any work that is already authorized.

The House bill, by contrast, would carry the program through 2002.

Have we forgotten that our Nation has a $174 billion deficit?

To give us any chance at all to get a law, the Senate must pass a bill that includes cost levels no greater than those in the committee-reported version of S. 1739.

Certainly we need to improve our inland waterways, our infrastructure. But we also must ask ourselves, where will the money come from, other than from some sort of cost-sharing with beneficiaries, users, and shippers?

The focus of this debate, of course, is title 5, the portion of the bill involving inland navigation. Some Members of this body wish to spend taxpayers' dollars in what can only be termed an unrestrained way to benefit of commercial waterway operators, asking nothing significant in return from those commercial beneficiaries.

That is wrong. It is shortsighted. It misrepresents reality to the American public. It misrepresents reality because it creates false promises.

The language my good friend from South Dakota [Mr. ABDNOR] has proposed to be included in amendment 4251 to S. 1739 is a sound approach, if not so fiscally responsible as language I believe we need to pass. But is something.

In fact, it is very generous.

It authorizes $900 million in new inland lock projects.

It imposes no new taxes.

It creates no mechanism for new, responsible user charges.

It requires no user contribution toward waterway operations or maintenance.

It requires no user contribution toward projects now being built.

Rather, amendment 4251 simply takes existing law—the tax now being collected—and dedicates that tax to the construction of new projects, those not now under construction.

Such a proposal creates no responsible restraint on Federal spending during the remainder of this decade. Early in the next decade, however, it would require that Congress either raise the fuel tax in order to increase fund income, or to slow project development, or find some other source of spending on the new projects.

But that still means no restraint until the 1990's. Yet I will support the bill, so long as there is no retreat from that dedication of revenues, and so long as we set the stage for more rationally addressing those issues.

I understand that some Members of the Senate seek commitments that the Senate, or certain Members of the Senate, agree in advance to accede to the House in conference on this issue, to accept the cosmetic "reforms" passed by the House.

I want to place my colleagues on notice that I will agree to no time agreement on S. 1739 if there are any such understandings or expectations of such an understanding.

We must go to conference with the House in strong support of the views of amendment 4251—at a very minimum.

I also wish to announce my intention to offer an amendment on this bill, an amendment that reflects the need to hold down Federal spending and bring non-Federal funds into the program.

For the benefit of my colleagues and to place this issue in perspective, I ask that a copy of the administration's bill on inland waterways (S. 1554) be printed at this point in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 1554) follows:

S. 1554

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Inland Waterway Improvement and Cost Recovery Act of 1983".

SEC. 2. As used in this Act:

(4) the Apalachicola River and its tributaries upstream from its junction with the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway;

(5) the Columbia River and its tributaries upstream from a point immediately downstream of the Bonneville lock and dam project;

(6) the Pearl River and its tributaries upstream from the junction of the West Pearl River with the rigolets;

(7) the Mobile River and its tributaries, including the Tennessee Tombigbee Waterway project, upstream from the Mobile Harbor project;

(8) the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway between Norfolk, Virginia, and Miami, Florida, via both the Albemarle and Chesapeake Canal and Great Dismal Swamp Canal routes; and

(9) the portions of the Willamette River and its tributaries with authorized depths of fourteen feet or less.

(d) "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Army.

SEC. 3. (a) The Secretary in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall levy ton-mile fees on commercial waterway transportation on the inland waterway system as follows:

(1) Systemwide fees, adequate to recover annually 70 per centum of anticipated operation and maintenance expenditures of the Tennessee Valley Authority and of the corps, irrespective of the source of such funds, assigned to commercial waterway transportation. Fees will be set at an initial rate of 1.1 mills per ton mile on shipments originating after September 30, 1983.

(2) Segment-specific fees, starting after September 30, 1984, to provide for the recovery of 70 per centum of the capital expenditures of the Tennessee Valley Authority and of the corps, irrespective of the source of such funds, assigned to commercial waterway transportation on projects, or physically separable project features or activities, as determined by the Secretary, for which construction is initiated after September 30, 1983. Expenditures to be recovered for such work shall be limited to funds appropriated for fiscal year 1984 and thereafter, with interest, over the economic life of the improved facility, but not to exceed a period of fifty years from the date of (A) through traffic for construction of new waterways; and (B) completion of the work for other improvments or modifications including, but not limited to, rehabilitation or replacement of existing structures.

(b) The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, shall adjust fees authorized under this section at least every five years on the basis of (1) anticipated Tennessee Valley Authority and corps expenditures for the inland waterway system and segments thereof; (2) corrections for actual expenditures and amounts recovered; (3) the expected volume of commercial traffic; and (4) any other factors that the Secretary finds reasonable and equitable.

(c) The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretaries of Agriculture and Transportation, is authorized to levy congestion fees, on all users of specific facilities, designed to reduce delays in order to improve the efficiency of the inland waterway system.

(d) Fees collected under this section shall be credited to the Inland Waterways Trust Fund established by section 203 of the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-502). Amounts in the trust fund shall be available as provided by appropriations Acts for making capital improvements and operation and maintenance expenditures on the inland waterway system as defined in this Act.

SEC. 4. (a) For the purposes of developing or assisting in the development of any schedule of fees and determining whether any person is in violation of any requirement of this Act—

(1) the Secretary may require any person engaged in commercial waterway transportation, who is subject to the requirements of this title, to establish and maintain such records, submit such reports, and provide such other information, as the Secretary may reasonably require;

(2) the Secretary may utilize any documents or other information obtained under section 11 of the Act of September 22, 1922 (33 U.S.C. 555); and

(3) upon presentation of credentials, the Secretary or an authorized Federal representative shall have a right of entry to, upon, or through any vessel or any other premises owned or operated by any person engaged in commercial waterway transportation, who is subject to the requirements of this title, and may, at reasonable times, have access to, and make copies of, any records.

(b) Section 11 of the Act of September 22, 1922 (33 U.S.C. 555), is amended by inserting "no more than $200,000" in lieu of "$100".

SEC. 5. (a)(1) Whenever, on the basis of any information available and after opportunity for a hearing, the Secretary finds that any person or entity is in violation of any requirement of this Act, the Secretary shall order the person or entity to comply with the Act, including payment, with interest, of any fees which the Secretary determines to have been wrongfully withheld. Thirty days after the date of an order from the Secretary to a person or entity to be in compliance with this Act, it shall be unlawful for that person or entity to engage in commercial waterway transportation during any period when that person or entity is in violation of any requirement of this Act.

(2) The interest rate used in computing the payments required by this section shall be determined annually by the Secretary of the Treasury as a rate equal to 150 per centum of the average interest rate on thirteen-week Treasury bills auctioned during the preceeding three months.

(b) Upon request of the Secretary, the Attorney General may bring a civil action for a permanent or temporary injunction, to assess and recover a civil penalty of not more than $200,000, or both, whenever any person or entity violates any requirement of this Act or fails or refuses to comply with any order issued under subsection (a) of this section. Such penalty shall be deposited in the general fund of the Treasury.

(c) Any action under this section may be brought in the United States district court for the district in which the defendant resides, does business, or is engaged in commercial waterway transportation. Such courts shall have jurisdiction to require compliance, assess appropriate fees or civil penalties, and grant injunctive or other equitable relief. Any vessel or watercraft on account of which any user fee shall have accumulated shall be liable for such fees and may itself be arrested and proceeded against upon principles applicable to Admiralty actions in rem.

SEC. 6. Expenditures for operation and maintenance and for construction and rehabilitation of inland waterway projects subjects to recovery in accordance with section 3 of this Act shall be as follows:

(1) for projects authorized only for navigation, costs assigned to commerical navigation will be 100 per centum of costs remaining after subtracting any specific costs for recreation;

(2) for multiple-purpose projects for which costs have been assigned to navigation, costs assigned to commercial waterway transportation will be in accord with that assignment or any subsequent reassignment;

(3) for other multiple-purpose projects providing navigation benefits but for which there have been no cost assignments, costs assigned to commerical waterway transportation will consist of all specific navigation costs, plus 10 per centum of joint-use costs;

(4) for the Mississippi River and tributaries projects, harbor improvement features shall be considered as individual projects pursuant to the above provisions of this section. For other features of the Mississippi River and tributaries project, cost assigned to commerical waterway transportation will consist of (A) all specific navigation costs of the channel improvement feature consisting of: (i) maintenance dredging, and (ii) construction and maintenance of dikes, and (B) one-third of the joint-use costs consisting of: (i) construction dredging and contruction, operation and maintenance of revetments of the channel improvement feature, and (ii) construction, operation and maintenance of the Old River control feature. Expenditures on construction and rehabilitation for the Mississippi River and tributaries project, except for harbor improvement features, will be considered maintenance; and

(5) costs assigned pursuant to this section may be adjusted to reflect project modifications or other work for which reimbursement is provided under other provisions of law.

SEC. 7. Title II of the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978 (92 Stat. 1696) is amended by deleting section 204 and renumbering sections 205 and 206 as sections 204 and 205, respectively, and by amending the table of contents to be consistent with this section.

SEC. 8. Except as otherwise provided in section 5(a), the interest rate used pursuant to this Act shall be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the average market yields on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States with remaining periods to maturity comparable to the reimbursement period of the project, during the month preceding the fiscal year in which funds for the construction of the project are first disbursed.

SEC. 9. (a) After coordination with affected Federal agencies and non-Federal public interests, the Secretary, acting through the Chief of Engineers, is authorized to study, plan, design, construct, and operate and maintain such new improvements and rehabilitations and modifications of existing improvements on the inland waterway system as the Secretary determines to be reasonable and desirable for commercial waterway transportation.

(b) Capital and operation and maintenance expenditures of the corps for work undertaken pursuant to this section, irrespective of the source of such funds, shall be subject to recovery through fees levied on commercial waterway transportation pursuant to section 3 of this Act.

(c)(1) Before the Secretary, acting through the Chief of Engineers, may initiate construction on a plan of improvement authorized by subsection (a) of this section the Secretary shall submit to Congress—

(A) a final environmental impact statement for the plan of improvement, if the Secretary determines that the statement is required by the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969; and

(B) a statement of the Secretary's compliance, at that time, with the Clean Water Act, the Fish and Wildlife Coordination Act, and other statutory requirements applicable to the improvement.

(2) The statements required under paragraph (1) of this subsection and any other actions required by the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and other applicable statutes shall be completed on an expedited basis pursuant to schedules, established by the Secretary after consultation with other Federal and State officials having responsibilities therewith. Thereafter, these officials shall make any necessary decisions and provide data and comment, as they deem appropriate, in accordance with the Secretary's schedules.

(3) A plan of improvement, addressed by an environmental impact statement that is submitted to Congress, in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection, shall be eligible for construction appropriations and implementation, under subsection (a) of this section, and may be undertaken unless Congress passes and the President approves a joint resolution disapproving the environmental impact statement within one hundred and eighty calendar days of its receipt by the Congress.

(d) An environmental impact statement, which is submitted to Congress in accordance with subsection (b)(1) of this section and is not disapproved pursuant to subsection (b)(3) of this section, shall be deemed to satisfy the requirements of section 102(2) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1069.

(e) Claims, alleging that work authorized by this section will deny rights under the Constitution of the United States or that the work is beyond the scope of authority conferred by this section, shall be filed only in a United States district court for a district where the work is located or to be located, or where the alleged injury occurs. Such courts shall have original jurisdiction over the proceedings and shall assign them for hearing at the earliest possible date. Such courts shall not have jurisdiction to grant any injunctive relief against any actions pursuant to this section except—

(1) in conjunction with a final judgment entered in a case involving a claim filed under this section, or

(2) where the petitioner presents a clear and convincing showing that the petitioner is likely to prevail on the merits, that without such an injunction the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm, and that issuance of an injunction will not lead to unreasonable harm to other parties and is in the public interest.

SEC. 10. The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretaries of Commerce, Transportation, Treasury, Energy, and Agriculture, the Attorney General of the United States, the Administrator of the Environmental Pretection Agency and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget, may promulgate, and may from time to time revise, regulations and guidelines to govern the programs authorized by this Act, including but not limited to the determination of inland and intracoastal segments and associated harbors for purposes of establishing a system of segment-specific fees implemented pursuant to section 3(a)(2).

SEC. 11. There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary such sums as are necessary to carry out ths Act.●

PRESIDENT REAGAN'S VETO OF THE CPB AUTHORIZATION BILL (S. 2436) AND SENATE PASSAGE OF A REVISED AUTHORIZATION BILL (S. 607)

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to express my dismay over President Reagan's veto of S. 2436, the bill authorizing appropriations for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting [CPB] for fiscal years 1987, 1988, and 1989.

The President's veto exhibits a certain disregard, I would venture, for the broad support this bill enjoys in Congress. S. 2436 had 52 cosponsors, was reported unanimously by the Commerce Committee, and was passed by voice vote. The bill also enjoyed strong support in the House, which approved it by a vote of 302 to 91.

The President has claimed that S. 2436 would increase Federal support for public broadcasting too much, too fast. The President argues that S. 2436 would increase fiscal year 1987 funding for CPB 49 percent over fiscal year 1986 levels. But what the President fails to explain is that such an increase is necessary because of deep cuts made in CPB's funding under this administration. CPB's authorization for the current fiscal year was fully 33 percent lower than in the 1983 fiscal year: $145 million instead of $220 million.

Moreover, CPB's authorization for the next 2 fiscal years will rise from this new low level by only about 6 percent each year, reaching $153 million in fiscal year 1985 and $162 million in fiscal year 1986. In this light the authorizations for fiscal year 1987 represents only an 8-percent increase over the funding level for fiscal year 1983.

I am particularly troubled by the large gap between the President's recent statements and the impact of this veto, if sustained. In his veto message, the President acknowledged that, "Public broadcasting constitutes an important national resource and contributes to the diversity of news, information, and entertainment choices available to the public." Yet the bill the President has vetoed would barely permit CPB to meet the goals we in Congress have set for it; namely, quality programming.

Only last month, the President commented on the importance of television in our daily lives. He said,

> We watch a lot of television, seeking continuity and reassurance in the regular and predictable appearance of our TV stars and programs. They visit us, as if they were a friend or relative coming by for the evening.

Indeed, the President concluded that television "is increasingly becoming the American neighbor * * *." Yet Mr. Reagan's veto would make it harder to invite such distinguished guests as the "Morning Edition" to breakfast, "The MacNeil-Lehrer News Hour" to dinner, or "Upstairs, Downstairs" for an evening at home. Without these and other guests from CPB, I might be tempted to say, "There goes the neighborhood."

Earlier this year in his State of the Union message, the President pledged his commitment to excellence in education. The President said,

> Our children come first. Schools are reporting progress in math and reading skills. But we must do more . . ."

Who can deny the role CPB's programming for children has played in promoting learning among our children. Such programs as "Electric Company," "Mr. Roger's Neighborhood," and "Sesame Street" have charmed and educated our young, teaching not only the three R's but about American values as well.

Mr. President, yesterday the Senate passed S. 607, a revised CPB authorization. The bill reflects the President's veto and authorizes less funding than we provided in S. 2436. That is unfortunate. However, S. 607 does not scale back the CPB authorization to the inadequate levels sought by the President. Thus, while I continue to favor the level of support contained in the funding bill we passed earlier this year, given the pressing need to approve adequate forward funding for public broadcasting in this Congress, I believe S. 607 represents an acceptable compromise—one that the President should sign.●

SENATOR SARBANES WELCOMES AMERICAN LEGION COMMANDER BACON

● Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, on Tuesday, September 18, Clarence Bacon of Hyattsville, MD, made his first appearance before the Veterans' Affairs Committee in his capacity as national commander of the American Legion, a post to which he was elected at the 66th Annual National Convention of the Legion on September 5. Although this was his initial appearance before the Congress as national commander, I am certain many of my colleagues already know Clarence Bacon through his fine work on the Legion's National Legislative Commission.

Clarence Bacon served faithfully in the U.S. Navy during World War II and Korea, leaving active duty to direct the automated business and logistics systems of the Navy Department until retiring from Government service in February 1980. Since that time, he has operated his own computer logistics and management consulting firm.

An extremely active member of the American Legion for over 30 years, Clarence Bacon served as our Maryland State commander in 1974-75, as a national executive committeeman in 1979-80, and on a number of national commissions for the Legion, including a term as chairman of the National Legislative Commission. In addition to all of his other responsibilities, Mr. Bacon has also served on the board of directors of the Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, and as treasurer of the Southern Maryland District Youth Camp.

Clarence Bacon has assumed the leadership of the largest of our veterans organizations at a time of increasing change in our national veterans population. The average age of our veterans is steadily climbing and as it does, the medical needs to which the Veterans' Administration must respond have also grown. There have also been increasing problems with employment and training programs for our veterans, as well as for changes in educational benefits for those returning to the campus after military service.

Mr. President, as you know, Abraham Lincoln once spoke of the responsibility of the Federal Government to those whom he said, "had borne the battle, and his widow and children." The American Legion has continued to serve the interests of all of our veterans since its inception, in war and peace, during active duty years and beyond, throughout the Nation and here in the Congress. These interests have continually increased and the responsibility of the national commander has grown along with those of the organization.

I am certain that the members of the American Legion had this in mind when they selected Clarence Bacon as their national commander. His statement before the Veterans' Affairs Committee contained many constructive approaches to the challenges facing our veterans today and I ask that his statement be included in the RECORD. Maryland is proud to have one of its own serving in this position of distinction and I am sure my colleagues join me in welcoming Clarence Bacon and congratulating him on his election.

I submit for the RECORD the statement of National Commander Bacon before the committee:

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Committee, it is an honor to appear today before your distinguished committee. As the principal spokesman for the American Legion, I am here representing more than 2.5 million members, as well as nearly 1 million members of the American Legion Auxiliary.

You, of course, are well aware of those who are with me at the witness table, having worked with them on various legislative matters during recent years. In addition, there are a number of distinguished people in the audience—people who constitute the national leadership of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary.

We firmly believe that our organization represents a cross section of the veterans population in this country. Within our ranks are people from all four wars in which the United States has been involved during the twentieth century. The American Legion, therefore, has promoted and will continue to promote the interests of each wartime generation.

As part of our continuing efforts to maintain the best possible programs of benefits and services for veterans, we have frequently called for assistance from this committee. Your record in that regard speaks for itself. Not only have you offered guidance and expertise in the development of sound legislative initiatives, but you have provided the leadership to insure that those initiatives be enacted. We commend this committee for its dedication to purpose and we look forward to its continued bipartisan efforts on behalf of the nation's veteran's community.

Mr. Chairman, I now wish to discuss several of our major concerns as we plan for the upcoming year.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION BUDGET

As the American Legion has stated on several occasions, funding for veterans programs deserves to be ranked second only to national defense. While ranking veterans affairs as second among national priorities may be questioned by other groups, it simply recognizes the governmental obligation to those who performed the highest duty of citizenship. It also recognizes the fact that reasonable benefits and services to veterans of the armed forces constitute a federal responsibility, rather than state or local.

For fiscal year 1985 Congress and the President have approved almost $25.8 billion for veterans programs. Although this is the largest VA appropriation ever, it represents less than 3 percent of all federal expenditures during the upcoming fiscal year. As we have said before, this fact establishes that veterans programs are not consuming an increasing share of federal dollars.

While we appreciate the funding total for fiscal year 1985, we anticipate greater fiscal constraints next year. We encourage Congress and the President to recognize the efficiency of VA expenditures and to develop an adequate VA budget for fiscal year 1986.

VETERANS MEDICAL CARE

The American Legion is pleased that more than $8.7 billion have been appropriated for veterans medical care in fiscal year 1985. When combined with research, medical administration, and hospital construction funds—the total approaches $10 billion.

While this is a tremendous investment in health care for veterans, the money will be used to treat more than 1 million inpatients and to provide more than 18 million outpatient visits. The medical care appropriation will accommodate more than 3,000 additional medical personnel, with many of those people designated to alleviate staff shortages identified during the 90 site surveys conducted by American Legion representatives in the past year.

While $10 billion is admittedly a large investment in health care, the labor intensive nature of medical treatment and capital outlays for modern equipment offer sufficient justification for the expenditure. The wisdom of this investment is also quite evident when considering VA's four medical missions—health care for veterans, education of health manpower for the nation, basic and applied research, and contingency medical support for the armed forces.

MEDICAL AND PROSTHETIC RESEARCH

Our organization is also quite pleased by next fiscal year's increase in medical and prosthetic research funding, from $162 million to $190 million. The benefits of work done in this area are immeasurable since research breakthroughs at VA contribute to upgrading the health standards of the entire nation.

You can be sure that we will examine the Fiscal Year 1986 budget proposal very closely and we will promote sufficient research funding to insure that VA will be able to continue its outstanding achievements in basic and applied research.

MEDICAL CARE FACILITY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

Construction appropriations is yet another area in which the American Legion can express its support. Combined funding for major and minor construction projects currently stands at almost $1 billion for Fiscal Year 1985.

While citing our basic satisfaction with the total appropriation, we must re-emphasize our continuing interest in several projects which demand immediate attention. They include replacement of the Baltimore VA hospital; construction of necessary facilities in San Juan, Puerto Rico; construction of facility additions in Philadelphia; and construction of a nursing home in Providence, Rhode Island.

AGING VETERANS

Everyone in this room is well aware of the potential demand of World War II veterans on VA's health care delivery system. Two numbers offer dramatic evidence of this—there are 10.7 million surviving World War II veterans whose average age is 65.

While efficiencies in treatment of older veterans must be developed, the health care planning process must be carefully conducted to insure that costing methods and other initiatives do not undermine basic VA treatment responsibilities. Private sector mechanisms such as DRG [Diagnosis Related Grouping] must be fully examined to determine their applicability to VA health care delivery.

You can expect our organization to continue to cooperate with your committee and with VA to address the aging veteran issue—whether that cooperation be support for geriatric services, development of necessary health legislation, analysis of VA's recent older veteran study, promotion of state home construction or refinement of VA's relationship with the Administration on Aging.

VIETNAM VETERANS

The American Legion intends to maintain its commitment to the well being of Vietnam veterans. From a medical treatment standpoint, we wish to re-emphasize our impatience with those VA employees who fail to demonstrate a sensitivity toward the special problems of Vietnam veterans. We will take all necessary actions to identify any physician or adjudicator who refuses to recognize Post Traumatic Stress Disorder as a pathological condition.

In an associated matter, we strongly support the establishment of additional PTSD inpatient units and the creation of a national center for PTSD research and health care training. The American Legion will also continue its support for the Vet Center program, to include making such services available to veterans in more remote geographical regions.

AGENT ORANGE

This committee is well aware of the Legion's participation in debate on legislation to address the Agent Orange Dilemma. We also maintain a very real interest in ongoing studies by the Centers for Disease Control.

And, of course, our organization's desire to resolve the critical Agent Orange problem has led to our participation in a joint effort with Columbia University. This undertaking, designed to examine a wide range of attitudes and problems prevalent among Vietnam veterans, is expected to be completed late this year.

WOMEN VETERANS

The American Legion is encouraged by recent efforts to meet the particular needs of women veterans. The primary focus of these efforts has been appropriately directed toward health care techniques involving privacy of treatment and an awareness of gender-related disorders. As an organization which is represented on VA's Advisory Committee on Women Veterans, we intend to see that these veterans received the full range of benefits and services to which they are entitled.

WORLD WAR I PENSION

As we have done several times in recent years, we wish to reaffirm our support for a special World War I pension—one based upon financial need. Our organization sees this as a legitimate act to compensate a group of people who were unable to use the range of benefits that were available to later generations of veterans.

VETERANS EMPLOYMENT

A great deal of Congressional attention has been paid over the last three years to the persistent problem of veterans unemployment. The record speaks for itself—creation of an Assistant Secretary of Labor for Veterans Employment and Training, enactment of the Jobs Training Partnership Act, enactment of the Emergency Veterans Jobs Training Problem, reauthorization of Targeted Jobs Tax Credits, reauthorization of the Veterans Reappointment Authority, and ongoing efforts to restrict contracting out of certain jobs currently held by veterans.

As we look toward the near future, we encourage this Committee to maintain its leadership on behalf of veterans employment and job training. And we specifically urge this committee to actively seek any necessary funding to carryout the second year of the emergency jobs program for veterans.

In conclusion Mr. Chairman, I have just highlighted several of the American Legion's current concerns, and I have also discussed several additional matters which will likely create challenges for all of us during the next year.

This concludes my statement—and, at the appropriate time, those of us at the table will gladly respond to any questions or comments from the Committee

Thank you.●

COMMITTEES HAVE UNTIL 4 P.M. TODAY TO FILE REPORTS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that committees may have until 4 p.m. today in which to file reports.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, next is the statement of the program for Monday.

When the Senate adjourns today, it will do so to reconvene on Monday next at the hour of 1 p.m.

After the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, two Senators will be recognized on special orders of not to exceed 15 minutes each, followed by a period for the transaction of routine morning business not past the hour of 2 p.m., with statements limited therein to 5 minutes each.

At 2 p.m., Mr. President, under the provisions of rule XXII, the Senate will conduct a live quorum call. Once a quorum has been established, the Senate will proceed to vote on cloture on the motion to proceed to the highway bill, S. 2527.

Mr. President, once again Members are urged to consider that next week and the week following will be the last weeks scheduled for this session of the Congress. Therefore, it is entirely possible that any night may be a late night. It is also entirely possible that the Senate will be asked to be in session on Saturday of this coming week.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, is it still the intention of the leadership on both sides of the Capitol to adjourn sine die on October 4 or 5?

Mr. BAKER. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the majority leader.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 24, 1984, AT 1 P.M.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I see no other Senators seeking recognition. The minority leader has indicated he has nothing further. I move, in accordance with the order previously entered, that the Senate now stand in adjournment until the hour of 1 p.m. on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, at 2:54 p.m. adjourned until Monday, September 24, 1984, at 1 p.m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Friday, September 21, 1984

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 1841

Pursuant to the order of September 20, 1984, Mr. EDWARDS of California submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 1841) to promote research and development, encourage innovation, stimulate trade, and make necessary and appropriate amendments to the antitrust, patent, and copyright laws.

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 98-1044)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1841) to promote research and development, encourage innovation, stimulate trade, and make necessary and appropriate amendments to the antitrust, patent, and copyright laws, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment insert the following:

SHORT TITLE

SECTION 1. This Act may be cited as the "National Cooperative Research Act of 1984".

DEFINITIONS

SEC. 2. (a) For purposes of this Act:

(1) The term "antitrust laws" has the meaning given it in subsection (a) of the first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12), except that such term includes section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 45) to the extent that such section 5 applies to unfair methods of competition.

(2) The term "Attorney General" means the Attorney General of the United States.

(3) The term "Commission" means the Federal Trade Commission.

(4) The term "person" has the meaning given it in subsection (a) of the first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12(a)).

(5) The term "State" has the meaning given it in section 4G(2) of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 15g(2)).

(6) The term "joint research and development venture" means any group of activities, including attempting to make, making, or performing a contract, by two or more persons for the purpose of—

(A) theoretical analysis, experimentation, or systematic study of phenomena or observable facts,

(B) the development or testing of basic engineering techniques,

(C) the extension of investigative findings or theory of a scientific or technical nature into practical application for experimental and demonstration purposes, including the experimental production and testing of models, prototypes, equipment, materials, and processes,

(D) the collection, exchange, and analysis of research information, or

(E) any combination of the purposes specified in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D), and may include the establishment and operation of facilities for the conducting of research, the conducting of such venture on a protected and proprietary basis, and the prosecuting of applications for patents and the granting of licenses for the results of such venture, but does not include any activity specified in subsection (b).

(b) The term "joint research and development venture" excludes the following activities involving two or more persons:

(1) exchanging information among competitors relating to costs, sales, profitability, prices, marketing, or distribution of any product, process, or service that is not reasonably required to conduct the research and development that is the purpose of such venture,

(2) entering into any agreement or engaging in any other conduct restricting, requiring, or otherwise involving the production or marketing by any person who is a party to such venture of any product, process, or service, other than the production or marketing of proprietary information developed through such venture, such as patents and trade secrets, and

(3) entering into any agreement or engaging in any other conduct—

(A) to restrict or require the sale, licensing, or sharing of inventions or developments not developed through such venture, or

(B) to restrict or require participation by such party in other research cnd development activities, that is not reasonably required to prevent misappropriation of proprietary information contributed by any person who is a party to such venture or of the results of such venture.

RULE OF REASON STANDARD

SEC. 3. In any action under the antitrust laws, or under any State law similar to the antitrust laws, the conduct of any person in making or performing a contract to carry out a joint research and development venture shall not be deemed illegal per se; such conduct shall be judged on the basis of its reasonableness, taking into account all relevant factors affecting competition, including, but not limited to, effects on competition in properly defined, relevant research and development markets.

LIMITATION ON RECOVERY

SEC. 4. (a) Notwithstanding section 4 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 15) and in lieu of the relief specified in such section, any person who is entitled to recovery on a claim under such section shall recover the actual damages sustained by such person, interest calculated at the rate specified in section 1961 of title 28, United States Code, on such actual damages as specified in subsection (d), and the cost of suit attributable to such claim, including a reasonable attorney's fee pursuant to section 5 of this Act if such claim—

(1) results from conduct that is within the scope of a notification that has been filed under section 6(a) of this Act for a joint research and development venture, and

(2) is filed after such notification becomes effective pursuant to section 6(c) of this Act.

(b) Notwithstanding section 4C of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 15c), and in lieu of the relief specified in such section, any State that is entitled to monetary relief on a claim under such section shall recover the total damage sustained as described in subsection (a)(1) of such section, interest calculated at the rate specified in section 1961 of title 28, United States Code, on such total damage as specified in subsection (d), and the cost of suit attributable to such claim, including a reasonable attorney's fee pursuant to section 4C of the Clayton Act if such claim—

(1) results from conduct that is within the scope of a notification that has been filed under section 6(a) of this Act for a joint research and development venture, and

(2) is filed after such notification becomes effective pursuant to section 6(c) of this Act.

(c) Notwithstanding any provision of any State law providing damages for conduct similar to that forbidden by the antitrust laws, any person who is entitled to recovery on a claim under such provision shall not recover in excess of the actual damages sustained by such person, interest calculated at the rate specified in section 1961 of title 28, United States Code, on such actual damages as specified in subsection (d), and the cost of suit attributable to such claim, including a reasonable attorney's fee pursuant to section 5 of this Act if such claim—

(1) results from conduct that is within the scope of a notification that has been filed under section 6(a) of this Act for a joint research and development venture, and

(2) is filed after notification has become effective pursuant to section 6(c) of this Act.

(d) Interest shall be awarded on the damages involved for the period beginning on the earliest date for which injury can be established and ending on the date of judgment, unless the court finds that the award of all or part of such interest is unjust in the circumstances.

(e) This section shall be applicable only if the challenged conduct of a person defending against a claim is not in violation of any decree or order, entered or issued after the effective date of this Act, in any case or proceeding under the antitrust laws or any State law similar to the antitrust laws challenging such conduct as part of a joint research and development venture.

ATTORNEY'S FEES

SEC. 5. (a) Notwithstanding sections 4 and 16 of the Clayton Act, in any claim under the antitrust laws, or any State law similar to the antitrust laws, based on the conducting of a joint research and development venture, the court shall, at the conclusion of the action—

(1) award to a substantially prevailing claimant the cost of suit attributable to such claim, including a reasonable attorney's fee, or

(2) award to a substantially prevailing party defending against any such claim the cost of suit attributable to such claim, including a reasonable attorney's fee, if the claim, or the claimant's conduct during the litigation of the claim, was frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or in bad faith.

☐ This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., ☐ 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by the Member on the floor.

(b) The award made under subsection (a) may be offset in whole or in part by an award in favor of any other party for any part of the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee, attributable to conduct during the litigation by any prevailing party that the court finds to be frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or in bad faith.

DISCLOSURE OF JOINT RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT VENTURE

SEC. 6. (a) Any party to a joint research and development venture, acting on such venture's behalf, may, not later than 90 days after entering into a written agreement to form such venture or not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, whichever is later, file simultaneously with the Attorney General and the Commission a written notification disclosing—

(1) the identities of the parties to such venture, and

(2) the nature and objectives of such venture.

Any party to such venture, acting on such venture's behalf, may file additional disclosure notifications pursuant to this section as are appropriate to extend the protections of section 4. In order to maintain the protections of section 4, such venture shall, not later than 90 days after a change in its membership, file simultaneously with the Attorney General and the Commission a written notification disclosing such change.

(b) Except as provided in subsection (e), not later than 30 days after receiving a notification filed under subsection (a), the Attorney General or the Commission shall publish in the Federal Register a notice with respect to such venture that identifies the parties to such venture and that describes in general terms the area of planned activity of such venture. Prior to its publication, the contents of such notice shall be made available to the parties to such venture.

(c) If with respect to a notification filed under subsection (a), notice is published in the Federal Register, then such notification shall operate to convey the protections of section 4 as of the earlier of—

(1) the date of publication of notice under subsection (b), or

(2) if such notice is not so published within the time required by subsection (b), after the expiration of the 30-day period beginning on the date the Attorney General or the Commission receives the applicable information described in subsection (a).

(d) Except with respect to the information published pursuant to subsection (b)—

(1) all information and documentary material submitted as part of a notification filed pursuant to this section, and

(2) all other information obtained by the Attorney General or the Commission in the course of any investigation, administrative proceeding, or case, with respect to a potential violation of the antitrust laws by the joint research and development venture with respect to which such notification was filed, shall be exempt from disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, and shall not be made publicly available by any agency of the United States to which such section applies except in a judicial or administrative proceeding in which such information and material is subject to any protective order.

(e) Any person who files a notification pursuant to this section may withdraw such notification before notice of the joint research and development venture involved is published under subsection (b). Any notification so withdrawn shall not be subject to subsection (b) and shall not confer the protections of section 4 on any person with respect to whom such notification was filed.

(f) Any action taken or not taken by the Attorney General or the Commission with respect to notifications filed pursuant to this section shall not be subject to judicial review.

(g)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), for the sole purpose of establishing that a person is entitled to the protections of section 4, the fact of disclosure of conduct under section 6(a) and the fact of publication of a notice under section 6(b) shall be admissible into evidence in any judicial or administrative proceeding.

(2) No action by the Attorney General or the Commission taken pursuant to this section shall be admissible into evidence in any such proceeding for the purpose of supporting or answering any claim under the antitrust laws or under any State law similar to the antitrust laws.

And the House agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the title of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment to the title of the bill insert the following: "An Act to promote research and development, encourage innovation, stimulate trade, and make necessary and appropriate modifications in the operation of the antitrust laws.".

And the House agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1841) to promote research and development, encourage innovation, stimulate trade, and make necessary and appropriate amendments to the antitrust, patent, and copyright laws, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The House amendment to the text of the bill struck out all of the Senate bill after the enacting clause and inserted as a substitute text the text of the bill H.R. 5041, to promote research and development, encourage innovation, and make necessary and appropriate amendments to the antitrust laws, as passed by the House.

The Senate recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the House with an amendment which is a substitute for the Senate bill and the House amendment. The differences between the Senate bill, the House amendment, and the substitute agreed to in conference are noted below, except for clerical corrections, conforming changes made necessary by agreements reached by the conferees, and minor drafting and clarifying changes.

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

Section 1. Short title

The Conferees agree to adopt a new short title for the legislation, the National Cooperative Research Act of 1984.

Section 2. Definitions

The only definition in conference was the type of joint research and development activity covered by the bill. The agreed report language contains aspects of both the House and Senate versions. The title of the definition is "joint research and development program" in the Senate version and "joint research and development venture" in the House version. The Conferees elect to use the House term "joint research and development venture". The intent is not to modify the substantial body of antitrust case law related to non-R&D joint ventures; instead it is expected that the determination of whether or not a particular venture falls within the purview of this Act will be based solely upon this definition, this Act's legislative history, and judicial interpretation of this Act, The word "program" in the Senate version is rejected in order to avoid any suggestion of a federal program.

The Conferees have retained lists of both permissible and non-permissible conduct in the definition. Subject to Subsection (2)(b), any group of activities by two or more persons that meets the purposes set out in Subsection 2(a) will fall within the permissible range of joint R&D venture activity. Furthermore, the Conferees agree to narrow the permissible engineering activities of a joint research and development venture by striking the House-passed language concerning "standards of performance and reliability" and engineering "to meet economic requirements" and by inserting into Section 2(a) "the development or testing of basic engineering techniques". The Conferees intend to emphasize fundamental engineering as a legitimate purpose of a joint research and development venture. They also intend to eliminate joint R&D venturers' ability to rely on this Act for protection of activities at the other end of the engineering spectrum that could fall within the ambit of excluded activities under Sec. 2(b). Thus, when the sole purpose of the joint activity is to prepare a product for the commercial marketplace, the protections of this Act are not available.

Section 2(b) excludes classic cartel-like behavior by participants in a joint R&D venture from coverage under the Act. The conference agreement includes in the text of Section 2(b) every suspect activity described in either the House or the Senate-passed versions of this definition. The Conferees note that the detailed discussion of Section 201 for activities explicitly excluded, contained in Senate Report 98-427 beginning at the bottom of p. 15, accurately reflects the Congressional intent. The term "purpose" in Sec. 2(b)(1) is intended to refer to one or more of the purposes set forth in Sec. (2)(a).

The term "trade secrets" in this definition is used as defined and explained in the Restatement of Torts (1939) Sec. 757, comment b.

"Misappropriation" is used in this section as explained in Milgrim, Trade Secrets (1976), Sec. 2.01(1), on misappropriation of a trade secret.

The Conferees also intend that nothing in this Act shall modify the interpretation of the antitrust laws as applied to any activities not within the scope of the definition of a joint research and development venture. These activities are to be analyzed and judged solely under existing antitrust principles.

Section 3. Application of the rule of reason to joint research and development programs

In both the House and the Senate, there was unanimous support for legislation making clear that a court should not condemn R&D behavior as illegal under the antitrust laws without first considering its procompetitive effects.

Section 3 states clearly and unequivocally that the conduct of any person making or performing a contract to carry out a joint R&D venture shall not be deemed illegal per se. It thus assures consideration of the actual competitive effects of such conduct and the joint R&D venture of which it is a part under the antitrust "rule of reason." Section 3 eliminates any misconception that present law automatically condemns R&D conducted jointly among competitors.

In addition, there was widespread concern among members of both houses that businesses were uncertain as to the application of the antitrust laws to R&D behavior. Consequently, firms may be foregoing lawful ventures under the misperception that the antitrust laws preclude such conduct. By providing guidance to courts and the general public in section 3 and in this report, the Conferees seek to remove any misperception and thereby encourage the formation of lawful ventures. The rule of reason analysis prescribed in section 3 and in this report does not in any way alter or affect antitrust analysis of agreements not within the scope of this Act.

Under the rule of reason standard, courts must realistically analyze the competitive effects of any challenged joint R&D venture. If a joint R&D program has no anticompetitive effects, or if any such effects are outweighed by its procompetitive effects, then it should not be deemed to violate the antitrust laws.

Congressional direction to the courts to apply a rule of reason analysis to joint R&D does not imply that in every case a court must sift through, and account for, each detail of the given arrangement and its surrounding circumstances. Rather, building upon the legislative record of expert testimony before the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, this report will guide the courts in focusing on the major potential anticompetitive and procompetitive effects of joint R&D ventures. In addition, it is anticipated that the courts will continue to develop, consistent with the standards set forth in this report, further rules and presumptions based upon experience with joint R&D programs.

Section 3 identifies "effects on competition in properly defined, relevant research and development markets" as an important, but not exclusive, focus of this analysis. Competition is as important in R&D as it is in any other commercial endeavor. Indeed, in many industries, particularly those that are based on rapidly evolving technology, remaining competitive in R&D may be crucial to success. Motivated by the benefits of getting ahead of one's competitors as well as the threat of falling behind, firms in such industries have strong incentives to be the first to develop new processes and products. Thus, under the rule of reason, courts will consider whether any challenged joint R&D venture could reduce R&D competition, and thus deter innovation. Under this analysis, of course, positive competitive effects become relevant only when anticompetitive effects have already been demonstrated.

The first step in considering effects on competition in R&D is to determine the area of effective R&D competition—that is, the "relevant R&D market." To be included in the relevant R&D market, firms must have the ability and incentive, either individually or in collaboration with one another, to undertake R&D comparable to that of the joint venture in question. In this context, the terms "ability" and "incentive" are measured by an objective standard. Central to evaluating these factors are a firm's business objectives, facilities, technologies, and other available assets. Firms need not be actual competitors at the production or marketing stage. Market shares in existing markets or in projected future markets can be relevant, but will not be determinative of a firm's ability and incentive to compete in a relevant R&D market.

The unique nature of knowledge—the basic product of R&D—is important in defining relevant R&D markets. Knowledge is highly mobile; it does not face significant transportation costs, or, in general, any other legal or economic barriers to worldwide dissemination. Even though particular goods or services may face legal or economic barriers that impede their importation into this country, the knowledge that makes those goods or services possible generally can flow unimpeded across national boundaries. Thus, overseas R&D competitors will usually be significant factors in properly defined R&D markets. Courts must consider the extent of this international dimension in R&D markets.

After a relevant R&D market is determined, the effect on competition in that market of the joint R&D venture in question must be evaluated. The first inquiry is whether a particular joint R&D venture has or may have anticompetitive effects. If there are none, the court need not inquire further.

The greatest potential for harm to R&D competition exists when a joint R&D venture is overly inclusive—that is, when the venture includes a greater percentage of the potential market than it should under the circumstances. Overinclusiveness is the major concern because it reduces the number of competing R&D efforts. In general, reducing the number of separate R&D efforts may increase the costs to society of mistakes in R&D strategy because there will be fewer other businesses pursuing different and potentially successful R&D paths. Moreover, as the number of its competitors with which a joint venture participant is required to share the benefits (or losses) of R&D increases, incentives to innovate may be decreased because the benefits of winning and the costs of losing in R&D competition may be reduced.

Whether a given joint R&D venture is overly inclusive will depend on a variety of factors, including the relative capability and incentive of the firms that are in and out of the venture. No arbitrary or fixed rule is appropriate as to the minimum number of entities necessary to ensure adequate R&D competition. But when there are several other—perhaps four—comparable R&D efforts underway or successfully completed, or when there is the substantial potential for such efforts by firms or groups of firms that are included in the market, anticompetitive effects are unlikely. However, the mere fact that there are fewer than four entities in the R&D market does not necessarily mean that a joint R&D venture has an anticompetitive effect, or that any such effect is not outweighed by the procompetitive benefits of the venture.

Because it generally is the existence of competing R&D efforts that spurs desirable innovation, decisions not to include every applicant in joint R&D ventures generally will not have adverse competitive effects on R&D. Indeed, forcing a joint R&D venture to accept all comers could forestall the development of competing R&D efforts. However, a joint R&D venture that includes a large portion of the competitors in an R&D market—even all the competitors in certain instances—might be permissible when only a venture of that size can efficiently pursue the research objectives. In such a case, the exclusion of competitors may be anticompetitive.

Another possible anticompetitive risk of a joint research and development venture would be that the participants would in some manner agree to slow the pace of innovation, or the exploitation of the fruits of the venture. Any agreement relating to the commercialization of the fruits of the venture should not unreasonably discourage the participants from making full and prompt use of those fruits.

Although joint R&D ventures will generally be procompetitive, to the extent that such ventures create an anticompetitive risk, that risk is most likely to arise from their effects on competition in properly defined R&D markets. However, other competitive effects also must be considered. The courts should consider all relevant factors affecting competition. For example, joint R&D that includes a large portion of the competitors in properly defined relevant markets for goods or services that are currently being produced might in some circumstances have anticompetitive "spillover" effects, such as collusion among those competitors with respect to the price or output of goods or services sold outside a joint R&D venture, or with respect to other strategic business decisions.

The definition of a "joint research and development venture" in section 2 is intended to exclude from protection most conduct that could result in spillover effects. In some instances, however, joint research and development conduct might still have such effects. Safeguards built into a program can minimize the likelihood that these effects will occur. Courts should consider how closely related the research and development being carried out is to the production and marketing of the product or service in question. The risk of collusion is least significant when the R&D program involves basic research, far removed from current price and output decisions.

The rule of reason condemns only joint R&D ventures that on balance are anticompetitive. If no anticompetitive effects are established, a venture does not violate the antitrust laws, regardless of whether it creates any demonstrable efficiencies.

On the other hand, merely because a joint R&D venture has come anticompetitive effect, it is not automatically illegal; a weighing process is necessary. Generally, the greater the cost of an R&D venture relative to a single firm's budgetary limits, or the greater the economies of scale that can be achieved through jointly conducted R&D, the more likely it is that the procompetitive benefits will outweigh the anticompetitive effects. Conversely, if there has been a demonstration of anticompetitive effects in the relevant R&D market and if it is apparent that the research undertaking is well within a single firm's budgetary limits and can be efficiently performed by it, any procompetitive benefits to a jointly conducted R&D venture may be outweighed by its anticompetitive effects.

The Conferees agree to drop from the bill Senate language that expressly instructs a court to consider the "effects in promoting competition through innovation or enhancement of efficiency." This language is deleted with an awareness that no statutory listing of competitive concerns to be weighed in the application of the rule of reason could be an exclusive list. The most important competitive measuring stick—"effects on competition in properly defined relevant research and development markets"—is retained as in the Senate language. The listing of this factor serves to highlight its importance. The listing of only this factor also resolves a concern of the House Conferees that a more detailed enumeration might be read as an exclusive list, thereby precluding consideration of other competitive factors.

The deletion of the Senate language on procompetitive effects should not be read as a suggestion that procompetitive effects will not be attained in joint R&D ventures. To the contrary, the legislative record supports the view that joint R&D can bring about substantial procompetitive benefits, including the enhancement of efficiency.

One benefit that joint R&D ventures can capture is economies of scale. For example, the unit cost of operating very sophisticated scientific machinery used in experiments generally decreases as the frequency of use increases. Also, combining the complementary abilities of different competitors may yield synergies that further reduce the cost of R&D. And small firms that individually lack the resources to compete in R&D against larger competitors may be able to perform comparable research if they join ranks.

If anticompetitive effects are established, the court must weigh against them any demonstrated procompetitive effects. Courts are reminded of these procompetitive benefits by Section 3's express application of the rule of reason in all cases involving joint R&D ventures.

Section 4. Limitation on recovery

Section 4 sets forth the limitations on recovery of damages for conduct that is within a joint research and development venture reported to the Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission pursuant to Section 6 of the bill. The guiding principle is that R&D conduct within the scope of a joint research and development venture is never subject to more than actual damage recovery where there is compliance with the requirements of section 6. This is so even if it is subsequently demonstrated that there has been a violation of the antitrust laws. The recovery, however, should fully reimburse the injured plaintiff. Thus, section 4 contemplates payment of prejudgment interest and, consistent with current law, payment of the costs of suit (including a reasonable attorney's fee as set forth in section 5) to the prevailing plaintiff.

A joint R&D venture need not specifically notify the Justice Department and the FTC that it intends to engage in the activities described in section 2(a)(1) of the bill, provided that the venture supplies the Department and the FTC with the notification described in section 6(a). Thus, unless a venture has notified the Justice Department and the FTC to the contrary, any activity within the definitions of section 2(a)(1) is within the scope of any venture as to which notification has been filed under section 6(a). For example, unless the venture has indicated otherwise, efforts to market the results of the venture, such as through licensing, will automatically be considered within the scope of a properly notified joint R&D venture.

Subsection (a) defines the actual damage limitation for plaintiffs suing under section 4 of the Clayton Act; subsection (b) defines a similar limitation for any State that sues under section 4C of the Clayton Act; and subsection (c) defines an actual damage limit to recoveries under any State law similar to the antitrust laws. In each case, the actual damages limitation applies only if the Federal Register notice pursuant to Section 6(b) is effective as provided in section 6(c).

The Conferees wish to emphasize that the elimination of treble damages for agreements limited to joint research and development for which notification has been provided is not to be regarded as a precedent for any further elimination of treble damages. Rather, elimination of treble damages in this narrow context is appropriate because of certain unique characteristics of joint R&D. Although many agreements subject to the antitrust laws and desirable and procompetitive, joint R&D among American firms is essential if these firms are to meet successfully the challenge of foreign competition. Moreover, the antitrust risks involved in joint R&D are particularly difficult to assess because of the continually evolving nature of joint R&D and because the potential damage exposure is highly speculative when a firm must decide whether or not to join a venture. In contrast, the competitive effect and damage exposure of agreements in current markets is more easily ascertainable. Thus, the elimination of treble damages in this context cannot be relied upon to justify detrebling in other circumstances where these special characteristics of joint R&D are not present.

Both the House and Senate versions allow prejudgment interest to be awarded to a victim of an anticompetitive joint R&D venture. The versions differ slightly as to the procedures and burdens of proof placed upon parties concerning this issue.

Section 4(d) permits interest from the earliest date that injury can be established, unless the award of all or part of that interest would be unjust in the circumstances. This formulation is intended to allow an injured plaintiff to be fully compensated for injuries suffered. The Conferees recognize that it may be difficult to establish the precise date on which a "lost profit" injury began. Even if a precise date of injury cannot be established, if the plaintiff can demonstrate that the injury occurred prior to some fixed date, then interest could be awarded from that date.

Prejudgment interest is not to be awarded if it is unjust in the circumstances. There may be several general situations where an award of prejudgment interest would be inappropriate. For example, where actual damages awarded on lost profits includes compensation for the loss of use of such profits, prejudgment interest on such use should not be awarded lest the plaintiff recover what, in effect, would be double interest. Interest should also be reduced or denied where the plaintiff has engaged in unreasonable delay in commencing the litigation, or where the plaintiff has used dilatory tactics in litigation.

Both the House and Senate versions provide that the protection against treble damages would not apply to participants in an unlawful joint R&D venture who were acting in violation of an order or decree that had previously enjoined their conduct. Section 4(e) is adopted from the Senate version, which applies only to court orders issued after the effective date of this act. The Conferees intend to put any party subject to any future court-ordered injunction or FTC cease and desist order, or any future consent decree, on notice that violations of such orders or decrees will carry the penalty of treble damages.

Section 5. Attorney's fees

The House bill provides that in an antitrust suit based on conduct that results from a joint research and development venture, the substantially prevailing party shall be awarded a reasonable attorney's fee. This is a departure from current antitrust law, which generally permits only prevailing plaintiffs to recover their attorney's fees. The House bill would also depart from current law by allowing an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party to be reduced or withheld in the interests of justice, or to be reduced by an award in favor of another party. The Senate bill contains no provision altering current law on the award of attorney's fees.

The Conferees agree to a compromise approach on this issue that alters current law in several major respects. First, defendants in a suit challenging the conduct of a joint R&D venture will be entitled to collect a reasonable attorney's fee from the plaintiff in specified circumstances. When a plaintiff's claim or its conduct of the litigation is frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation, or is in bad faith, the defendant shall be reimbursed for those fees incurred in defending against such claim or conduct. Second, the trial court may offset any fee award to a prevailing party if the court finds that that party conducted a portion of the litigation frivolously, unreasonably, without foundation, or in bad faith.

Like the other sections of this bill, the treatment of attorney's fees reflects the congressional purpose to encourage procompetitive joint R&D ventures, while retaining antitrust remedies, including private suits, against anticompetitive ventures that might slow innovation or otherwise harm competition. The attorney's fee provision offers a strong deterrent to those who might consider bringing unwarranted actions against joint R&D ventures. It will force potential plaintiffs to evaluate carefully the merits of their planned suit, inasmuch as they will run the risk of paying the attorney's fees of the defendants. Since joint ventures by definition involve multiple parties, a plaintiff's potential liability for opponents' attorney's fees would often be extremely high. The Conferees believe that this prospect will strongly discourage the bringing of suits that are frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or in bad faith.

In addition, a pre-eminent purpose of this bill is to clarify the antitrust analysis of joint R&D ventures. Thus, the bill explicitly rejects the application of any per se rule to conduct within the scope of a joint venture. Furthermore, the Statement of the Managers provides specific additional guidance about how joint R&D ventures are to be evaluated under the antitrust laws. The Conferees believe that this added clarity will greatly aid the courts in determining whether particular lawsuits are frivolous, unreasonable, without foundation, or in bad faith.

The Conferees' concern about deterring unwarranted suits is balanced by a concern that too ready an award of attorney's fees to successful defendants could intimidate plaintiffs with valid claims from attempting to vindicate their rights. Under the antitrust laws, non-governmental plaintiffs play an important role as "private attorneys general" in helping to deter anticompetitive conduct that the government lacks the resources to ferret out or prosecute. It is important that plaintiffs not be discouraged from performing this valuable function under our antitrust laws by the prospect of liability for attorney's fees should they lose a non-frivolous case brought in good faith.

In the past few years, the Supreme Court has sought to reconcile these same concerns in determining when defendants in civil rights cases under Title VII should be able to recover their attorney's fees from an unsuccessful plaintiff. Like antitrust plaintiffs, those who bring civil rights actions seek to vindicate not only their own rights but also the public interest. The Supreme Court has thus sought to satisfy the two goals that the Conferees believe to be important here: first, to discourage unwarranted suits, and second, to avoid intimidating plaintiffs from pursuing meritorious claims.

To achieve that delicate balance, a unanimous Supreme Court ruled that defendants are to be awarded fees in Title VII cases if the plaintiff's claim was "frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation," or was brought in bad faith. Christiansburg Garment Co. v. EEOC, 434 U.S. 412, 417 (1978). The lower federal courts have developed a large body of case law under the Christiansburg standard, and have not hesitated to award attorney's fees against unsuccessful plaintiffs when that standard has been met. At the same time, the courts have declined to award attorney's fees to defendants in legitimate cases that were brought in good faith.

The Conferees believe that the Supreme Court's Christiansburg standard, as further explicated by the lower courts, is an appropriate one to adopt in the context of suits against joint R&D ventures, and that it will achieve the desired goal of protecting law-abiding defendants from baseless and bad faith attacks while ensuring that private enforcement of the antitrust laws is not deterred. By adopting a well-established and well-understood standard, Congress can provide the greatest certainty to litigants about the standard by which their conduct of litigation will be measured.

The Conferees wish to emphasize several points about the interpretation of this standard. The first is that, as the Supreme Court stressed in Christiansburg, "it is important that a district court resist the understandable temptation to engage in post hoc reasoning by concluding that, because a plaintiff did not ultimately prevail, his action must have been unreasonable or without foundation. This kind of hindsight logic could discourage all but the most airtight claims, for seldom can a prospective plaintiff be sure of ultimate success." 434 U.S. at 422. In particular, the Conferees realize that under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, "notice pleading" is a permissible and often necessary practice, and the Conferees do not intend to change current law in that regard.

At the same time, as the Supreme Court has recognized, an action that appears to have merit as of the date of filing may need to be discontinued in light of information developed through discovery, or in light of other information that comes to the attention of the litigant during the course of the litigation. See Christiansburg, supra, 434 U.S. at 422 ("a plaintiff should not be assessed his opponent's attorney's fees unless a court finds that his claim was frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless, or that the plaintiff continued to litigate after it clearly became so.") The lower courts have taken this point to heart. See, e.g., Davis v. Braniff Airways, 468 F. supp. 10 (N.D. Tex. 1979); see also Nemeroff v. Abelson, 704 F.2d 652 (2d Cir. 1982) (plaintiff assessed attorney's fees in securities case based on "bad faith" for continuing to litigate case when new information made clear that it was baseless). In such a case, the court should award attorney's fees to a successful defendant from the time that plaintiff should have realized that continued prosecution of the suit would be frivolous, unreasonable, or without foundation.

The offset provision in section 5(b) is also a compromise. The provision allows a court to analyze different components of a single lawsuit to determine whether a prevailing party conducted part, though not all, of the lawsuit frivolously, unreasonably, without foundation, or in bad faith. At the same time, by adopting the Christiansburg standard for "offset" awards, the compromise assures that courts will not excessively reduce awards of attorney's fees to which parties would otherwise be entitled under this bill.

The Conferees are aware of the revisions that have been made to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and to the United States Code in the past few years to discourage abusive conduct in litigation. For example, the revised version of F.R. Civ. P. 26(b) provides that the court may limit discovery if it is unreasonably duplicative or burdensome in the context of the case. Likewise, both Rule 26(g) and Rule 37 provide for strong sanctions against discovery abuse. Finally, section 1927 of Title 28 of the United States Code authorizes the courts to require an attorney to personally reimburse the opposing party if he or she has "unreasonably and vexatiously" multiplied court proceedings. The present legislation is entirely consistent with the vigorous enforcement of these important revisions.

The House bill also changed current law as to awards of attorney's fees to defendants in parens patriae suits brought by state attorneys general under section 4C of the Clayton Act. Under current law, 15 U.S.C. 15c(d)(2), attorney's fees may be awarded to a prevailing defendant upon a finding that the state attorney general acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons. The Conferees believe that this standard is appropriate in determining liability for attorney's fees in parens patriae suits and therefore do not adopt the language of the House bill in this respect.

Section 6. Disclosure of joint research and development venture

Both the House and Senate bills made damage protection for joint R&D ventures turn on some form of disclosure to the antitrust enforcement agencies.

The approach contained in the Conference bill requires parties voluntarily seeking the protection of Section 4 to disclose the nature and objectives of their venture in return for limiting their potential exposure from treble to single damages. In addition, under the Conference bill, notification would also trigger public notice (via the Federal Register), thus permitting private parties to inform the antitrust agencies of any behavior thought to be unlawful or harmful to their interests. Since it is the private antitrust remedy that may be restricted under section 4, the Conferees agree that private parties should have some notice of those joint R&D ventures that seek the newly-created protection of that section. It should be emphasized that the detrebling protection is tied to the notification filed under subsection (a) and not to the notice published in the Federal Register. Publication of the notice, however, is a requirement for the vesting of the protection as set out in section 6(c) of the Act.

The notification approach described above should not be misconstrued as establishing a type of federal regulation of joint R&D. There is no requirement that joint R&D ventures notify the antitrust agencies of their activities. As defined by this Act, regardless of notification and the potential damage protection flowing therefrom, joint R&D ventures will be judged under the rule of reason standard set out in section 3. The Conferees also foresee that a minimum of additional resources or personnel will be needed to implement the notification and notice provisions of section 6, in part because of business review procedures already in place at the antitrust enforcement agencies for evaluating joint R&D ventures.

Section 6 sets forth the procedures for notifying the Attorney General and the Federal Trade Commission of a joint R&D venture. The actions of the Attorney General and Commission in implementing section 6 procedures are essentially ministerial in nature. Publication of the notice in the Federal Register implies no approval or certification of the conduct of the parties to the joint R&D ventures by the enforcement agencies.

Section 6(a) requires that a simultaneous written notification of the joint R&D ventures be made to the Attorney General and the Federal Trade Commission not later than 90 days after a party has entered into a written agreement to form such a venture, or not later than 90 days after the Act's effective date of enactment, whichever is later.

For section 4 protection to attach, the original notification must disclose the identity of the parties and the nature and objectives of such venture. The ninety-day requirement of the original notification—whether in the case of an ongoing venture established prior to the date of enactment of the Act or in the case of a prospective venture entered into by written agreement at some point after passage of the Act—was chosen by the Conferees as a sufficient period to allow joint R&D ventures to weigh the decision to file notification materials but not excessive in the sense of permitting venturers undue advantage in lead time over those interests that might be harmed by the joint venture's activities. The phrase "entering into a written agreement to form" the venture carries no special connotation in the context of this Act; and the Conferees intend that courts, in determining whether parties have, in fact, entered into a written agreement, shall apply generally accepted principles of commercial contract law. In other words, in determining the triggering of the ninety-day period, such questions as whether there was the necessary intent to enter into a written agreement—in contrast to preliminary discussions and negotiations—or whether there were the requisite steps taken to effectuate this intent into a written instrument of binding obligation are to be judged in exactly the same manner as any other commercial agreement.

The Conferees consider the change in membership of the joint R&D venture to be quite significant (because of potential competitive risks and the need to notify the public of such change), and therefore require that notification of such change be made to the antitrust agencies not later than 90 days of such change. Failure to disclose that a new member has joined the joint R&D venture within the ninety-day period will terminate the protections of section 4 for all parties to the venture at the point of the running of the ninety-day period. Thus, even if the joint R&D venture continues to engage in activities that fall within the scope of the original or subsequently filed notifications to the antitrust agencies, this same conduct will not receive single damage protection following the change in membership unless a new notification disclosing such change in membership is filed. In such a scenario, however, section 4 protection would remain effective for parties and conduct properly disclosed through previously filed notifications that are consistent with the procedures of section 6 up until the time of the running of the ninety-day period.

Section 6(a) also provides that parties may file additional notifications as are appropriate to extend the protection of section 4. Such additional notifications are designed to permit parties to a joint R&D venture the opportunity to extend the single damage limitation to new, different or otherwise inconsistent activities and objectives not covered by the original or other subsequently filed notifications. This provision accommodates the potentially variable and, at times, even unpredictable, course of collaborative research while retaining the centerpiece of the notification scheme—namely, that protection is directly linked to disclosure. Unlike the addition of a new member to the joint R&D venture, there is no specified time period in which such additional notifications are to be made; but as section 4 and section 6(c) make clear, single damage protection will not be conferred on new and previously undisclosed activity that is first disclosed to the public via the Federal Register subsequent to the filing of an action challenging the legality of such activity. Even with such a risk, and in keeping with the voluntary nature of the notification procedures, a joint R&D venture may decide to forgo filing additional notifications even though the nature and objectives of the venture have changed and are outside the scope of previously-filed notifications. In this situation, the joint R&D venturers will continue to enjoy the protections of section 4 for activity which was disclosed in the original or subsequently filed notifications meeting the requirements of subsection (b).

The Conferees agree that the contents of the notification to be filed under section 6 shall, for the most part, be those required in the House bill. The Senate version of the bill limited notification solely to the identities of the parties; but the Senate Conferees receded to the House language requiring notification of the identities of the parties, the nature and objectives of the venture as well as the publishing of a notice in the Federal Register identifying the parties and, in general terms, the area of planned activity. The House Conferees agree that the antitrust agencies do not need congressionally-mandated authority to promulgate regulations to implement the notification procedures. Private parties will therefore determine, in their own discretion, the quantity and form of information/materials required to describe the nature and objectives of the venture.

It will be the choice of the parties to weigh the benefits of detailed disclosure against the benefits of less-detailed disclosure. If the information is too sparse to enable the agencies to formulate a notice for publication in the Federal Register, additional information will have to be supplied. For, while the protections of section 4 depend on the disclosure of pertinent information to the antitrust agencies in the notification filing, that protection does not vest until the subsequent publication of the notice in the Federal Register or as otherwise provided in subsection 6(c). Nevertheless, and despite the cautionary note sounded in the foregoing explanation, where a joint venture has made a good faith effort to comply with the written notification requirements of this subsection, nonsubstantive or technical omissions shall not destroy the protections of section 4.

Similarly, once the parties have given the agencies adequate information to permit publication of a notice, the Conferees do not intend that the benefits of detrebling turn on the quantity of documents filed with the agencies. More important than length or form is the question of whether the joint venture activity undertaken is consistent with the information in the notification.

The purpose of this legislation is to promote joint research and development; and the notification requirement is intended to be construed in a sensible and practical fashion, with an eye to substance and not to technicality. The Conferees expect that courts will focus their attention on a practical assessment of whether the information supplied to comply with notification reasonably relates to the activities actually undertaken by the joint R&D venture and is adequate to permit the agencies to fulfill their public notice function. As noted in section 4, unless a venture specifically notifies the antitrust agencies to the contrary, any activity within the definitions of section 2(a)(6) is within the scope of any joint R&D venture as to which notification under section 6(a) of the Act has been filed. A notification such as "research and development to promote the mutual interests of the parties" would not satisfy the requirements of subsection 6(a) that the parties disclose the "nature and objectives" of the venture since it would provide no information about the venture. As the statute makes clear, once a project's "nature and objectives" are provided to the antitrust agencies, the parties have fulfilled the broad purposes behind the disclosure system as established in this legislation.

Subsection (b) requires the Attorney General or the Commission, not later than 30 days after receipt of notification, to publish a notice of the joint research and development venture in the Federal Register where such venture has made a good faith effort to comply with subsection (a). Consistent with subsection (d), the enforcement agencies must make the contents of the notice available to the parties in advance of publication.

Publication in the Federal Register, as set forth in subsection (b), will provide the general public with notice that the R&D joint venture exists and that information about the nature and objectives of the venture has been disclosed to the antitrust agencies. The notice will describe the identities of the parties and "in general terms the area of planned activity." The Conferees intend that the notice list the indentities of the real parties in interest. Presumably, the 30-day period after receipt of notification until the publication of notice in the Federal Register will allow the enforcement agencies the needed opportunity to process the materials so that the notice published in the Federal Register will be informative to the public as to the identities of the real parties in interest and to the general area of planned activity.

Subsection (c) sets out the conditions for vesting the protections of section 4 as to notifications filed under section 6(a) and for which notice is later published under subsection 6(b). The section 4 protection becomes effective either on the date of the published notice under subsection 6(b), or if the notice is not published within the time required by subsection (b), on the expiration of the 30-day period beginning on the date the Attorney General or Federal Trade Commission receives information adequate to comply with requirements of section (b), whichever, date is earlier.

The information and documentary material submitted by a joint R&D venture in compliance with subsection (a) is protected from disclosure under subsection (d). Also protected from disclosure is all other information obtained by the Attorney General or the Federal Trade Commission in the course of any investigation or enforcement action as described in subsection (d). The only exception to this general prohibition against disclosure is the information contained in the notice published in the Federal Register under section 6(b).

The Conferees recognize that the exemptions justifying withholding under the Freedom of Information Act are permissive rather than mandatory. 5 U.S.C. 552(b). Thus, even if documents fall within a particular FOIA exemption—such as the exemption in 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(4) dealing with trade secrets and confidential commercial and financial information—an agency still has the discretion to release the documentary material. Consequently, the Conference adopted the thrust of the House language for subsection (d), which makes clear that information submitted under subsection (a) or obtained through a related investigation, administrative proceeding or case with respect to a potential antitrust violation by the joint R&D venture filing such notification "shall not be made publicly available" except in a judicial or administrative proceeding where such information is subject to any protective order." The Attorney General and Federal Trade Commission do not have discretion to release to the public any of the information relating to the joint venture, except for publication under subsection (b), whether or not it is exempt under the Freedom of Information Act.

Subsection (e) permits any person making a notification under this section to withdraw such notification prior to publication of the notice in the Federal Register pursuant to subsection (b). Under subsection (b), each person submitting a notification must be given an opportunity to review the contents of the notice prior to publication in the Federal Register. If there is disagreement about the contents of the notice to be published, negotiations with the enforcement agency may be able to resolve the conflict. But if the person objects to any feature of the notice to be published, he may withdraw the entire notification, in which case no publication will be made in the Federal Register. In the event of such withdrawal, the notification shall have no force or effect. The protections against disclosure under subsection (d), however, will continue to operate.

Subsection (f) provides that any action taken or not taken by the Attorney General or the Federal Trade Commission under this section shall not be subject to judicial review. The tasks assigned to the enforcement agencies are, as suggested elsewhere, essentially ministerial. Neither agency is authorized to "certify" or "approve" the conduct described in a notification. Even the agency's control of the contents of the notice for publication in the Federal Register is limited—the agency must make the contents available to the filing party in advance of publication and allow the party to withdraw its notification. Thus, the decision to deny judicial review reflects both the ministerial, nonsubstantive nature of the enforcement agency's duties and a desire on the part of the Conferees to keep costs and delay at a minimum.

Subsection (g) limits the admissibility of the fact of notification under subsection (a) and the fact of publication of notice under subsection (b); these facts are admissible in a judicial or administrative proceeding solely for the purpose of establishing the applicability of the damage limitations in Section 4. No action of the Attorney General or the Commission shall be admissible in any judicial or administrative proceeding either for supporting or answering a claim under the antitrust laws or under a State law similar to the antitrust laws. This provision reflects the fact that the bill imposes no substantive review functions on the antitrust agencies in carrying out their essentially ministerial duties. Indeed, a decision by a particular joint research and development venture not to notify under Section 6 does not create a negative inference or presumption under this legislation. The fact of disclosure is admissible into evidence solely for the purpose of determining the amount of damages in an antitrust action based on the disclosed conduct under challenge. Joint ventures are free to take advantage of the notification procedure if they so choose; if they choose not to do so, they will still benefit from the provisions in Section 3 and Section 5 of the bill.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, September 24, 1984

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Ascribe to the Lord, O heavenly beings, ascribe to the Lord glory and strength. Ascribe to the Lord the glory of His name; worship the Lord in holy array.—Psalm 29:1, 2.

We thank You, O gracious God, that Your nature is not to judge us according to our faults or condemn us by our misdeeds, but rather to renew us by Your grace. We are thankful that Your spirit encourages and sustains us and no manner of injustice can overwhelm Your love. For Your free gift of forgiveness and peace, we offer this our prayer. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Hallen, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills, joint resolutions, and a concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House with an amendment to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 2614. An act to amend the Indian Financing Act of 1974.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 1880. An act to establish an interagency committee and a technical study group on cigarette safety.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 607. An act to amend the Communications Act of 1934;

S. 2456. An act to establish a commission to study the 1932-33 famine caused by the Soviet Government in Ukraine; and

S. 2538. A bill to consolidate and authorize certain ocean and coastal programs and functions of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration under the Department of Commerce, and for other purposes.

APPOINTMENT AS ADVISORY MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON SPACE

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the provisions of section 203(b), Public Law 98-361, the Chair appoints as advisory members of the National Commission on Space, the following Members of the House:

Mr. FUQUA of Florida and Mr. LUJAN of New Mexico.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

WASHINGTON, DC,
September 21, 1984.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 5, Rule III of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received at 10:25 a.m. on Friday, September 21, 1984, the following messages from the Secretary of the Senate:

(1) That the Senate passed H.J. Res. 545; and

(2) That the Senate passed H. Con. Res. 358.

With kind regards, I am,

Sincerely,

BENJAMIN J. GUTHRIE,
Clerk, House of Representatives.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to announce that pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Speaker signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions on Friday, September 21, 1984:

H.J. Res. 545. Joint resolution designating the week of September 16 through 22, 1984, as "Emergency Medicine Week";

S. 2155. An act to designate certain National Forest System lands in the State of Utah for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System to release other forest lands for multiple use management, and for other purposes;

S.J. Res. 340. Joint resolution to designate the week of September 23, 1984 as "National Historically Black Colleges Week";

S.J. Res. 333. Joint resolution to designate September 21, 1984, as "World War I Aces and Aviators Day"; and

S.J. Res. 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984 as "National Quality Month."

THE GREAT AMERICAN COLA RIPOFF

(Mr. CONABLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I have in hand and will submit for the RECORD in connection with Extensions of Remarks a mailing from James Roosevelt, chairman of the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare which exhorts their members to petition Congress to restore the cost-of-living increase.

Mr. Speaker, I am appalled by this effort to exploit the understandable fears of senior citizens. While I find this committee's letter misleading and their math dubious, I support the right of senior citizens to petition Congress for a January 1985 COLA. As soon as President Reagan announced his desire to waive the current statutory 3-percent trigger, I introduced H.R. 6019 to that end. In fact, the latest cost of living figures appear to indicate the 3-percent trigger will be reached, mooting the issue for this year.

Mr. Speaker, I strenuously object to the national committee's shameless appeal for a 5-percent kickback from the anticipated 1985 COLA to help the committee fund this so-called fight. These senior citizens have already paid a $10 membership fee to an organization which has been conspicuous by its near absence at our Ways and Means Committee hearings.

I am appalled at this tax exempt organization's blatant attempt to rip off 5 percent of the 1985 COLA and hope senior citizens recognize the scam.

Unfortunately, I fear many will not.

TRIBUTE TO BILL MELTON

(Mr. LONG of Louisiana asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LONG of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to congratulate Mr. Bill Melton on his retirement from the staff of the Attending Physicians Office in the U.S. Capitol This is actually his second retirement. In 1968 Bill retired after 20 years of distinguished service in the U.S. Navy.

Many of you know Bill for his fine medical skills, his accommodating professional manner and his good sense of humor. You may also know that Bill has taken a special interest in the Congress as an institution. In a scholarly manner Bill has studied workings of the Congress and has become quite knowledgeable. We will miss him.

Mr. Speaker, I will miss this special friend. We have enjoyed many hours together fishing, picking apples in Virginia. His lovely wife Francis and their three sons have been very gracious to me over the years.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Members of this U.S. House of Representatives join me in thanking Bill Melton for his dedication and service to the Congress and the country and wish him the best as he begins yet another interesting and useful phase of his life.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION 648, CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, 1985

Mr. LONG of Louisiana, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 98-1045) on the resolution (H. Res. 588) providing for the consideration of the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 648) making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

TULANE'S SESQUICENTENNIAL

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, Friday was the 150th anniversary of my alma mater, Tulane University. I know all of my colleagues will want to join with me in recognizing the many contributions that this great institution of higher learning has made to our society.

Tulane University has educated undergraduates and graduate students, male and female, from across the country and around the world. Counted among its graduates are great physicians, attorneys, politicians, businessmen, and leaders in all walks of life. Tulane can be very proud of the record of service compiled by its alumni to community, country, and to the world.

Its academic record has been and is illustrious. Tulane Law School most recently produced law clerks for two Justices of the U.S. Supreme Court, and has been ranked among the top one-fifth of all American law schools. Similarly, the School of Medicine was ranked 15th out of the Nation's 124 medical schools, thus continuing the excellence begun 150 years ago when the modern university was started as a medical college.

The university, which is the largest private employer in New Orleans, is one of the primary centers for research and development in the South. And much will be heard from the Tulane School of Business as it grows in the coming years.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on about Tulane's great tradition, but I will conclude with this: Happy 150th anniversary, and hullabaloo, Tulane.

THE TRAGEDY IN BEIRUT

(Mrs. SCHROEDER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, as Chair of the committee that oversees the safety of working conditions for all employees working for this Government, I must say how very shocked I was to hear the President compare Beirut to a kitchen remodeling.

The great tragedy in Beirut last week was not the first tragedy in Lebanon under this President, but the third tragedy. The terrorists have not used new tactics each time, but the same tactics each time.

The first time I was shocked to find out the administration was not even paying employees over there danger pay because they did not realize how dangerous it was.

It is bad enough to be caught off guard the first time, but not to learn and to allow it to happen two more times and lose many more lives is wrong.

I think Federal employees are deserving of a much higher standard of care.

Mr. President, Beirut is not a kitchen. It is a city, a very dangerous city, with a civil war going on and the people who we ask to represent our flag there are deserving of a much, much higher standard of care and a much stronger statement that this will never be allowed to happen again.

CONSERVING ENERGY AND SAVING MONEY

(Mr. KINDNESS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, those of us with rural backgrounds are well aware of some of the utilitarian or mundane uses of corn cobs, but most of my colleagues may not be aware of the value of corn cobs in conserving heating oil, saving money, and helping farmers.

Dr. Mitchell D. Pedroff, assistant superintendent of the Piqua, OH, City School District, has come up with an innovative idea to help reduce our reliance on foreign sources of energy. I would like to take this opportunity to share this idea with my colleagues.

Dr. Pedroff's award-winning idea made it possible for the Springcreek School in the Piqua City School District to reduce its seasonal heating costs from $25,000, using heating oil in 1981, to under $8,000, using corn cob pellets such as these in my hand, in 1983. These pellets have a heating value of about 7,800 to 8,000 Btu's per pound so that about 100 tons of these pellets produce the same number of Btu's per pound as 20,000 gallons of fuel oil.

What we have here, Mr. Speaker, is a renewable source of energy which can certainly help to remove the United States further toward our goal of "energy nondependence." In my view, Mr. Speaker, ideas such as this need to be taken seriously and spread throughout our land.

I am currently soliciting comments on the feasibility of broadly implementing this idea, and would be glad to put any interested colleagues in contact with Dr. Pedroff.

THE LATEST U.S. HUMILIATION IN LEBANON

(Ms. OAKAR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, on July 5, 1984, I wrote to Secretary of State Shultz expressing concern over the security of our diplomatic personnel in Lebanon. After two catastrophic bombings that resulted in hundreds of deaths and injuries, it would seem only prudent that urgent steps be taken to avoid a similar tragedy.

In response to my letter, a State Department spokesman assured me that "the security situation in the Beirut area has greatly improved," but that nevertheless "we continue to take measures aimed at improving the security of our own personnel." As we again sift through the rubble of a bombed-out American facility in search of bodies and classified documents, we also have to question the competence of those responsible for our national security and for the execution of American foreign policy.

We have many honorable, courageous, and competent men and women serving our country in dangerous diplomatic and military missions around the world. If we are going to continue to ask them to risk their lives on a daily basis, they need to be assured that those in leadership positions in Washington are aware of the risks they face and have taken reasonable measures to protect their lives. Swaggering rhetoric about "standing tall" is little consolation for those buried under a mountain of bricks and mortar.

Nearly 3 months ago, I asked Secretary Shultz "what measures are being taken to provide for the security of those essential U.S. Foreign Service officers who continue to serve our country in that dangerous environment," namely Beirut. Unfortunately, the answer was written in blood early Friday morning. Today, I join all concerned Americans in asking the President the same question I asked Secretary Shultz. Let us pray we get some real answers this time.

PRESIDENT REAGAN DEMONSTRATES LACK OF LEADERSHIP IN LEBANON

(Mr. DELLUMS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, President Reagan's comparison of the security lapses at our Embassy in Lebanon to remodeling the family kitchen demonstrates an incredible insensitivity to the toll that his lack of leadership is taking in that region.

Now is not the time for trivial folksiness—it is a time for answers to the hard questions Mr. Reagan seeks to avoid.

For example, why is it that American personnel were moved to the new Embassy before security precautions were completed?

Why is it that the security contingent of American marines was withdrawn from the country after the Embassy had been forewarned of an impending terrorist attack?

Why is it that after months of agony in Lebanon, Mr. Reagan's policies and purposes there continue to be a mystery to the American people?

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the Members of this Congress will take on the task of finding answers to these questions. We are not talking about remodeling a kitchen, we are talking about protecting American lives.

PERMITTING CONTROL OF LAMPREY EEL AND DESIGNATING PORTION OF AU SABLE RIVER, MI, AS COMPONENT OF NATIONAL WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS SYSTEM

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2732) to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to permit the control of the lamprey eel in the Pere Marquette River and to designate a portion of the Au Sable River, MI, as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WRIGHT). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Ohio please explain the bill?

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, section 1 of S. 2732 contains identical language to that contained in H.R. 3472, introduced by our colleague GUY VANDER JAGT, which passed the House on May 1, 1984. That language would amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to permit installation of physical structures to control the lamprey eel on the Pere Marquette River in Michigan.

Section 2 would also amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act to designate a 23-mile segment of the Au Sable River in Michigan for inclusion in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The control of lamprey populations in the Pere Marquette is vital to the success of the restored Lake Michigan fisheries, but the use of chemical lampricide currently used has fallen under harsh public criticism. The Forest Service studied the problem and reported on alternative methods of controlling the lamprey. The construction of a weir was the alternative supported by the Forest Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Great Lakes Fisheries Commission, as being the most effective and much less expensive alternative to chemical use.

The Au Sable River possesses unique and irreplaceable natural, scenic and recreational values which qualify it for Wild and Scenic River protection. The recommended river corridor is located on the Huron National Forest between Alcona Pond and Mio Pond. It includes 6,210 acres, of which 600 acres are private ownership, 800 acres are State of Michigan lands, and the remainder are public owned and administered as part of the National Forest System.

This is an outstanding recreational and fishing river and the proposal in S. 2732 represents a compromise between Forest Service recommendations and landowner concerns.

Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any objections to this bill and urge its passage.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I would like to compliment the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. VANDER JAGT] for bringing this important legislation to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2732

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 3(a)(16) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding the following sentence at the end thereof: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the installation and operation of facilities or other activities within or outside the boundaries of the Pere Marquette Wild and Scenic River for the control of the lamprey eel shall be permitted subject to such restrictions and conditions as the Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe for the protection of water quality and other values of the river, including the wild and scenic characteristics of the river.".

SEC. 2. Section 3(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(51) Au Sable, Michigan.—The segment of the main stem from the project boundary of the Mio Pond project downstream to the project boundary at Alcona Pond project as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Au Sable River' which is on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Chief, Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture; to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture.".

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the Senate bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

INDIAN FINANCING ACT AMENDMENT OF 1984

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2614) to amend the Indian Financing Act of 1974, with a Senate amendment to the House amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment to the House amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment to the House amendments, as follows:

Page 4, line 19, of the House engrossed amendment, strike out "5 per centum" and insert "6 percent".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I would like an explanation from the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, S. 2614 is a bill to amend and reauthorize the Indian Financing Act of 1974. A similar bill passed the House by voice vote on the 11th of September. This bill was sent back to the House with a minor amendment. The amendment would raise from 5 to 6 percent the amount that could be spent on technical assistance from funds appropriated pursuant to section 302 of this act. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the amendment is noncontroversial and supported by all parties and therefore I ask unanimous consent to concur in the Senate amendment to S. 2614.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection at this time, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the Senate bill just considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

INDIAN HEALTH CARE AMENDMENTS OF 1984

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 2166) to authorize appropriations to carry out the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object—I would like the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] to explain the bill.

Mr. WEAVER. If the gentleman will yield, Mr. Speaker, on September 14, the House passed H.R. 4567, dealing with amendments to the Indian Health Care Act. Two days earlier, the Senate passed S. 2166 dealing with the same subject. At the time of the House action, the Senate had not transmitted its bill to the House so we did not have the papers to take it up after the House acted. If the unanimous consent is granted as I requested, it is my intention to substitute the text of the House-passed bill, insist on the amendment of the House, and request a conference with the Senate.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 2166

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984".

REFERENCE

SEC. 2. Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or a repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act.

IMPROVEMENT OF INDIAN HEALTH STATUS

SEC. 201. Section 201 (25 U.S.C. 1621) is amended to read as follows:

"IMPROVEMENT OF INDIAN HEALTH STATUS

"SEC. 201. (a) The Secretary is authorized to expend funds which are appropriated pursuant to subsection (j)(1), through the Service, for the purposes of—
"(1) raising the health status of Indians to be highest possible level,
"(2) eliminating backlogs in the provision of health care services to Indians,
"(3) meeting the health needs of Indians in an efficient and equitable manner, and
"(4) augmenting the ability of the Service to provide the following health service responsibilities:
"(A) clinical care (direct and indirect);
"(B) preventive health;
"(C) dental care (direct and indirect);
"(D) mental health, including community mental health services, inpatient mental health services, dormitory mental health services, therapeutic and residential treatment centers, and training of traditional Indian practitioners;
"(E) emergency medical services;
"(F) treatment and control of, and rehabilitative care related to, alcoholism among Indians;
"(G) accident prevention programs;
"(H) community health representative programs; and
"(I) maintenance and repair.

"(b)(1) Any funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (j) shall not be used to offset or limit any appropriations made to the Service under the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13), popularly known as the Synder Act, or any other provision of law.

"(2) Funds which are appropriated pursuant to subsection (j)(1) may be allocated to, or used for the benefit of, any Indian tribe which has a health resources deficiency level at level I or II only if a sufficient amount of funds have been appropriated pursuant to subsection (j)(1) to raise all Indian tribes to health resources deficiency level II.

"(3)(A) Funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (j)(1) shall be allocated on a service unit basis.

"(B) The apportionment of funds allocated to a service unit under subparagraph (A) among the health service responsibilities described in subsection (a)(4) shall be determined by the Service and the affected Indian tribes.

"(c)(1) For purposes of this section, the health resources deficiency levels are as follows:
"(A) level I—0 to 20 percent deficiency;
"(B) level II—21 to 40 percent deficiency;
"(C) level III—41 to 60 percent deficiency;
"(D) level IV—61 to 80 percent deficiency; and
"(E) level V—81 to 100 percent deficiency.

"(2) Under regulations, the Secretary shall establish procedures which allow any Indian tribe to petition the Secretary for a review of any determination of the health resources deficiency level of such tribe.

"(d) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall expend funds for research in each of the areas of health service responsibility described in subsection (a)(4).

"(e) By no later than October 1, 1984, the Secretary shall develop and begin implementation of a plan to reduce the incidence of infant mortality and morbidity among Indian tribes by October 1, 1987, to a rate no greater than the average rate of infant mortality and morbidity among all citizens of the United States. Such plan shall include an assessment of the impact of environmental and sanitation conditions on Indian infant mortality and morbidity rates and the need to improve such conditions.

"(f) Programs administered by any Indian tribe or tribal organization under the authority of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act shall be eligible for funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (j) on an equal basis with programs that are administered directly by the Indian Health Service.

"(g) Within 60 days after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress the current health services priority system report of the Service for each Indian tribe, including newly recognized or acknowledged tribes. Such report shall set our—
"(1) the methodology for determining tribal health resources deficiencies;
"(2) the level of health resources deficiency for each tribe;
"(3) the amount of funds necessary to raise all tribes below health resources deficiency level II to health resources deficiency level II;
"(4) the amount of funds necessary to raise all tribes below health resources deficiency level I to health resources deficiency level I; and
"(5) the amount of funds necessary to raise all tribes to a zero level of deficiency.

"(h)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Service and in conjunction with each Indian tribe, shall annually update the tribal specific health plans which were developed as part of the plan required under sectioin 703. The updating of such plans shall be carried out in accordance with the methodology submitted to the Congress under subsection (g)(1), as modified through consultation with the Indian tribe to which such plan relates.

"(2) The Secretary shall submit to Congress an annual report on the health services priority system to the Service by no later than 30 days after the date the President submits to the Congress the budget of the Federal Government for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1985. Such report shall be based on the updated tribal specific health plans described in paragraph (1).

"(i) In determining the eligibility of any Indian for medical or health services provided by, or on behalf of, the Service, the eligibility of such Indian for any medical or health assistance that is provided to indigents by a State or local government (or any agency or instrumentality thereof) shall not be taken into account if—
"(1) the medical or health assistance provided by the State or local government is funded by the revenues from any tax imposed on real property, and
"(2) such Indian resides on a reservation or restricted Indian land which is not subject to taxation.

"(j)(1) There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section (other than subsections (d) and (e))—
"(A) $28,000,000 for fiscal year 1985,
"(B) $29,000,000 for fiscal year 1986,
"(C) $28,000,000 for fiscal year 1987, and
"(D) such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 1988.

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of subsection (d) for each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, 1987, and 1988, an amount equal to 1 percent of the amount authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1) for such fiscal year.

"(3) There are authorized to be appropriated for purposes of carrying out the provisions of subsection (e) for each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, 1987, and 1988, an amount equal to 3 percent of the amount authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1) for such fiscal year.

"(k) The President shall include with the budget submitted under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for each fiscal year a spearate statement which specifies the total amount obligated or expended in the most recently completed fiscal year to carry out each of subsections (a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3), (a)(4)(A), (a)(4)(B), (a)(4)(C), (a)(4)(D), (a)(4)(E), (a)(4)(F), (a)(4)(G), (a)(4)(H), (a)(4)(I), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h).".

TITLE III—HEALTH FACILITIES

CONSULTATION; CLOSURE OF FACILITIES

SEC. 301. Section 301 (25 U.S.C. 1631) is amended to read as follows:

"CONSULTATION; CLOSURE OF FACILITIES

"SEC. 301. (a) Prior to the expenditure of, or the making of any firm commitment to expend, any funds appropriated for the planning, design, construction, or renovation of Indian health facilities pursuant to the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13), popularly known as the Snyder Act, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall—

"(1) consult with any Indian tribe that would be significantly affected by such expenditure for the purpose of determining and, wherever practicable, honoring tribal preferences concerning size, location, type, and other characteristics of any health facility on which such expenditure is to be made, and

"(2) be assured that, wherever practicable, such health facility shall meet the standards of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals by not later than 1 year after the date on which the construction or renovation of such health facility is completed.

"(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may close a Service hospital or other outpatient health care facility, or any portion of such a hospital or facility, only if the Secretary has submitted to the Congress at least 1 year prior to the date such hospital or facility (or portion thereof) is closed an evaluation of the impact of such closure which specifies, in addition to other considerations—

"(1) the accessibility of alternative health care resources for the population served by such hospital or facility;

"(2) the cost effectiveness of such closure;

"(3) the quality of health care to be provided to the population served by such hospital or facility after such closure;

"(4) the availability of contract health care funds to maintain current levels of service; and

"(5) the views of the Indian tribes served by such hospital or facility concerning such closure.

"(c) The President shall include with the budget submitted under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988, planning information documents for the construction of five Indian health facilities which—

"(1) comply with applicable construction standards, and

"(2) have been approved by the Secretary.

"(d)(1) By no later than 60 days after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report which sets forth—

"(A) the current health facility priority system of the Service,

"(B) the planning, design, construction, and renovation needs for the 10 top-priority inpatient care facilities and the 10 top-priority ambulatory care facilities (together with required staff quarters),

"(C) the justification for such order of priority,

"(D) the projected cost of such projects, and

"(E) the methodology adopted by the Service in establishing priorities under its health facility priority system.

"(2) The Secretary shall ensure that the planning, design, construction, and renovation needs of Service and non-Service facilities which are the subject of a contract for health services entered into under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act are fully and equitably integrated into the development of the health facility priority system.".

SAFE WATER AND SANITARY WASTE DISPOSAL FACILITIES

SEC. 302. Section 302 (25 U.S.C. 1632) is amended to read as follows:

"SAFE WATER AND SANITARY WASTE DISPOSAL FACILITIES

"SEC. 302. (a)(1) Congress hereby finds and declares that—

"(A) the provision of safe water supply systems and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal systems is basically and primarily a health consideration and function;

"(B) Indian people suffer an inordinately high incidence of diseases, injuries, and illnesses directly attributable to the absence or inadequacy of such facilities;

"(C) the long-term cost to the United States of treating and curing such diseases, injuries, and illnesses is substantially greater than the short-term cost of providing such facilities and other preventive health measures;

"(D) many Indian homes and communities still lack safe water supply facilities and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal facilities; and

"(E) it is in the interest of the United States, and it is the policy of the United States, that all Indian communities and Indian homes, new and existing, be provided with safe and adequate water supply facilities and sanitary sewage waste disposal facilities as soon as possible.

"(2) In furtherance of the findings and declaration made in paragraph (1), Congress affirms the primary responsibility and authority of the Service to provide the necessary sanitation facilities and services as provided in the Act of August 5, 1954 (68 Stat. 674).

"(b)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall develop and begin implementation of a 10-year plan to provide safe water supply and sanitation sewage and solid waste disposal facilities to existing Indian homes and communities and to new and renovated Indian homes.

"(A) financial and technical assistance to Indian tribes and communities in the establishment, training, and equipping of utility organizations to operate and maintain Indian sanitation facilities;

"(B) ongoing technical assistance and training in the management of utility organizations which operate and maintain sanitation facilities; and

"(C) operation and maintenance assistance for, and emergency repairs to, tribal sanitation facilities when necessary to avoid a health hazard or to protect the Federal investment in sanitation facilities in situations in which the community, tribe, or family is not financially or technically capable of performing the required operation and maintenance or emergency repairs.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not diminish the primary responsibility of the Indian family, community, or tribe to establish, collect, and utilize reasonable user fees, or otherwise set aside funding, for the purpose of operation and maintenance of sanitation facilities.

"(3) The financial and technical capability of an Indian tribe or community to safely operate and maintain a sanitation facility shall not be a prerequisite to the provision or construction of sanitation facilities by the Secretary under paragraph (1) and the Secretary may not require an Indian tribe or community to accept a transfer of sanitation facilities if the Secretary has determined that such Indian tribe or community does not have, or may not be reasonably expected to achieve, such capability.

"(d)(1) By not later than the date which is 6 months after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report which sets forth—

"(A) the current Indian sanitation facility priority system of the Service;

"(B) the methodology for determining sanitation deficiencies;

"(C) the level of sanitation deficiency for each Indian tribe or community;

"(D) the amount of funds necessary to raise all Indian tribes and communities to a level II deficiency;

"(E) the amount of funds necessary to raise all Indian tribes and communities to a level I deficiency; and

"(F) the amount of funds necessary to raise all Indian tribes and communities to a zero level of deficiency.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection, the sanitation deficiency levels are as follows:

"(A) Level I is a sanitation system—

"(i) which complies with all applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulations, and

"(ii) in which the deficiencies consist of routine replacement, repair, or maintenance needs,

"(B) Level II is a sanitation system—

"(i) which complies with all applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulations, and

"(ii) in which the deficiencies related to capital improvements which are necessary in order to meet the needs of the communities.

"(C) Level III is a sanitation system which—

"(i) has an inadequate or partial water supply and sewage disposal facility that does not comply with applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulation, or

"(ii) has no solid waste disposal facility.

"(D) Level IV is a sanitation system which lacks either a safe water supply system or a sewage disposal system.

"(E) Level V is the absence of a safe water supply and sewage disposal system.

"(e) Programs administered by Indian tribes or tribal organizations under the authority of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act shall be eligible for funds appropriated pursuant to subsection (f) on an equal basis with programs that are administered directly by the Indian Health Service.

"(f) There are authorized to be appropriated for purposes of carrying out the provisions of subsection (c), $5,850,000 of each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, 1987, and 1988.".

GRANTS OF UNOBLIGATED FUNDS

SEC. 303. Title III is amended by striking out section 305 and inserting in lieu thereof the following new section:

"EXPENDITURE OF NON-SERVICE FUNDS FOR RENOVATION

"SEC. 305. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, an Indian tribe is authorized to expend—

"(1) any funds of such tribe which are not held in trust by the Secretary of the Interior,

"(2) upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior, any funds held in trust by the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of such tribe, and

"(3) any funds appropriated under Federal law which are not appropriated to the Secretary for expenditure through the Service, for the purpose of making any major renovation or modernization of any Service facility or of any other Indian health facility operated pursuant to a contract entered into under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (including an expenditure for the planning or designing of such renovation or modernization) if the requirements of subsection (b) are met.

"(b) The requirements of this subsection are met with respect to any renovation or modernization if the renovation or modernization—

"(1) does not require or obligate the Secretary to provide any additional employees or equipment,

"(2) is approved by the appropriate area director of the Service, and

"(3) is administered by the Indian tribe in accordance with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary with respect to construction or renovation of Service facilities.

"(c) A renovation or modernization shall not be authorized by this section if such renovation or modernization would require the diversion of funds appropriated to the Service from any project which has a higher priority under the health facility priority system of the Service.".

(3) by striking out "The preceding sentence" in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "This subsection".

DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM FOR DIRECT BILLING OF MEDICARE, MEDICAID, AND OTHER THIRD PARTY PAYMENTS

SEC. 404. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a demonstration program under which Indian Tribes and Alaska Native health organizations, which are contracting the entire operation of an entire facility of the Indian Health Service under the authority of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, shall directly bill for, and receive payment for, health care services provided by such facility for which payment is made under title XVIII of the Social Security Act (medicare), under a State plan for medical assistance approved under title XIX of the Social Security Act (medicaid), or from any other third-party payor. The Federal percentage under the medicaid program shall continue to be 100 percent for purposes of the demonstration program.

(b)(1) Each facility participating in the demonstration program described in subsection (a) shall be reimbursed directly under the medicare and medicaid programs for services furnished, without regard to the provisions of section 1880(c) of the Social Security Act or section 402(c) of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, but all funds so reimbursed shall first be used by the facility for the purpose of making any improvements in the facility that may be necessary to achieve or maintain compliance with the conditions and requirements applicable generally to facilities of such type under the medicare or medicaid program. Any funds so reimbursed which are in excess of the amount necessary to achieve or maintain such conditions or requirements shall be used in accordance with the regulations of the Indian Health Service applicable to funds provided by the Indian Health Service under any contract entered into under the Indian Self-Determination Act.

(2) The amounts paid to the facilities participating in the demonstration program described in subsection (a) shall be subject to all auditing requirements applicable to programs administered directly by the Indian Health Service.

(3) The Secretary shall monitor the performance of facilities participating in the demonstration program described in subsection (a), and shall require such facilities to submit reports on the program to the Secretary on a quarterly basis (or more frequently if the Secretary deems it to be necessary).

(4) Notwithstanding section 1880(c) of the Social Security Act and section 402(c) of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, no payment may be out of the special fund described in section 1880(c) of the Social Security Act or section 402(c) of the Indian Health Car Improvement Act for the benefit of any facility which is participating in the demonstration program described in subsection (a).

(c)(1) In order to be considered for participation in the demonstration program described in subsection (a), a facility must submit an application to the Secretary which provides assurances that—

(A) the Indian tribe or Alaska Native health organization contracts the entire operation of the Indian Health Service facility;

(B) the facility is eligible to participate in the medicare and medicaid programs under sections 1880 and 1911 of the Social Security Act;

(C) the facility meets any applicable requirements which apply to programs operated directly by the Indian Health Service; and

(D) the facility is accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, or has submitted a plan, which has been approved by the Secretary, for achieving such accreditation prior to October 1, 1986.

(2) From among the qualified applicants, the Secretary shall, prior to October 1, 1985, select four facilities to participate in the demonstration program described in subsection (a). The demonstration program described in subsection (a) shall begin by no later than October 1, 1986, and end on September 30, 1988.

(d)(1) Upon the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, acting through the Indian Health Service, shall commence an examination of—

(A) any administrative changes which may be necessary to allow direct billing and reimbursement under the demonstration program described in subsection (a); and

(B) any changes which may be necessary to enable participants in such demonstration program to provide to the Indian Health Service medical records information on patients served under such demonstration program which is consistent with the medical records information system of the Service.

(2) Prior to the commencement of the demonstration program described in subsection (a), the Secretary shall implement all changes required as a result of the examinations conducted under paragraph (1), and shall promulgate any regulations necessary to carry out such demonstration program.

(3) Prior to October 1, 1985, the Secretary shall determine any accounting information which a participant in the demonstration program described in subsection (a) would be required to report and shall provide funding for the development of any such accounting system by any facility which has been selected to participate in such demonstration program.

(e) The Secretary shall submit an interim report to the Congress at the end of fiscal year 1987, and a final report at the end of fiscal year 1988, on the activities carried out under the demonstration program described in subsection (a), and an evaluation of whether such activities have fulfilled the objectives of such program. In the final report the Secretary shall provide a recommendation, based upon the results of such demonstration program, as to whether direct billing of, and reimbursement by, the medicare and medicaid programs and other third-party payors should be authorized for all Indian tribes and Alaska Native health organizations which are contracting the entire operation of a facility of the Indian Health Service.

(f) The Secretary shall provide for the retrocession of any contract entered into between a participant in the demonstration program described in subsection (a) and the Indian Health Service under the authority of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act. All cost accounting and billing authority shall be retroceded to the Secretary upon the Secretary's acceptance of a retroceded contract.

TITLE V—URBAN INDIAN HEALTH SERVICES

REVISION OF PROGRAM

SEC. 501. Title V (25 U.S.C. 1651, et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—HEALTH SERVICES FOR URBAN INDIANS

"PURPOSE

"SEC. 501. The purpose of this title is to encourage the establishment of programs in urban centers to make health services more accessible to urban Indians.

"CONTRACTS WITH URBAN INDIAN ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 502. The Secretary, through the Service, shall enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations to assist such organizations to establish and administer, in the urban centers in which such organizations are situated, programs which meet the requirements set forth in this title. The Secretary, through the Service, shall include such conditions as the Secretary considers necessary to effect the purpose of this title in any contract which the Secretary enters into with any urban Indian organization pursuant to this title.

"CONTRACTS FOR THE PROVISION OF HEALTH CARE OR REFERRAL SERVICES

"SEC. 503. (a) The Secretary, through the Service, shall enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations for the provision of health care or referral services for urban Indians residing in the urban centers in which such organizations are situated. Any such contract shall include requirements that the urban Indian organization successfully undertake to—

"(1) determine the population of urban Indians residing in the urban center in which such organization is situated who are or could be recipients of health care or referral services;

"(2) determine the current health status of urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(3) determine the current health care needs of urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(4) identify all public and private health services resources within such urban center which are or may be available to urban Indians;

"(5) determine the use of public and private health services resources by the urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(6) assist such health services resources in providing services to urban Indians;

"(7) assist urban Indians in becoming familiar with and utilizing such health services resources;

"(8) provide basic health education to urban Indians;

"(9) establish and implement manpower training programs to accomplish the referral and education tasks set forth in clauses (6) through (8) of this subsection;

"(10) identify gaps between unmet health needs of urban Indians and the resources available to meet such needs;

"(11) make recommendations to the Secretary and Federal, State, local, and other resource agencies on methods of improving health service programs to meet the needs of urban Indians; and

"(12) where necessary, provide, or enter into contracts for the provision of, health care services for urban Indians.

"(b) The Secretary, through the Service, shall by regulation prescribe the criteria for selecting urban Indian organizations to enter into contracts under this section. Such criteria shall, among other factors, include—

"(1) the extent of unmet health care needs of urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(2) the size of the urban Indian population in the urban center involved;

"(3) the accessibility to, and utilization of, health care services (other than services provided under this title) by urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(4) the extent, if any, to which the activities set forth in subsection (a) would duplicate—

"(A) any previous or current public or private health services project in an urban center that was or is funded in a manner other than pursuant to this title; or

"(B) any project funded under this title;

"(5) the capability of an urban Indian organization to perform the activities set forth in subsection (a) and to enter into a contract with the Secretary under this section;

"(6) the satisfactory performance and successful completion by an urban Indian organization of other contracts with the Secretary under this title;

"(7) the appropriateness and likely effectiveness of conducting the activities set forth in subsection (a) in an urban center; and

"(8) the extent of existing or likely future participation in the activities set forth in subsection (a) by appropriate health and health-related Federal, State, local, and other agencies.

"CONTRACTS FOR THE DETERMINATION OF UNMET HEALTH CARE NEEDS

"SEC. 504. (a) The Secretary, through the Service, may enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations situated in urban centers for which contracts have not been entered into under section 503. The purpose of a contract under this section shall be the determination of the matters described in subsection (b)(1) in order to assist the Secretary in assessing the health status and health care needs of urban Indians in the urban center involved and determining whether the Secretary should enter into a contract under section 503 with the urban Indian organization with which the Secretary has entered into a contract under this section.

"(b) Any contract entered into by the Secretary under this section shall include requirements that—

"(1) the urban Indian organization successfully undertake to—

"(A) document the health care status and unmet health care needs of urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(B) with respect to urban Indians in the urban center involved, determine the matters described in clauses (2), (3), (4), and (8) of section 503(b); and

"(2) the urban Indian organization complete performance of the contract within one year after the date on which the Secretary and such organization enter into such contract.

"(c) The Secretary may not renew any contract entered into under this section.

"EVALUATIONS; CONTRACT RENEWALS

"SEC. 505. (a) The Secretary, through the Service, shall develop procedures to evaluate compliance with, and performance of, contracts entered into by urban Indian organizations under this title. Such procedures shall include provisions for carrying out the requirements of this section.

"(b) The Secretary, through the Service, shall conduct an annual onsite evaluation of each urban Indian organization which has entered into a contract under section 503 for purposes of determining the compliance of such organization with, and evaluating the performance of such organization under, such contract.

"(c) If, as a result of the evaluations conducted under this section, the Secretary determines that an urban Indian organization has not complied with or satisfactorily performed a contract under section 503, the Secretary shall, prior to renewing such contract, attempt to resolve with such organization the areas of noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance and modify such contract to prevent future occurrences of such noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance. If the Secretary determines that such noncompliance or unsatisfactory performance cannot be resolved and prevented in the future, the Secretary shall not renew such contract with such organization and is authorized to enter into a contract under section 503 with another urban Indian organization which is situated in the same urban center as the urban Indian organization whose contract is not renewed under this section.

"(d) In determining whether to renew a contract with an urban Indian organization under section 503, or whether to enter into a contract with an urban Indian organization under section 503 which has completed performance of a contract under section 504, the Secretary shall review the records of the urban Indian organization, the reports submitted under section 507, and, in the case of a renewal of a contract under section 503, shall consider the results of the on-site evaluations conducted under subsection (b).

"OTHER CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS

"SEC. 506. (a) Contracts with urban Indian organizations pursuant to this title shall be in accordance with all Federal contracting laws and regulations except that, in the discretion of the Secretary, such contracts may be negotiated without advertising and need not conform to the provisions of the Act of August 24, 1935, as amended.

"(b) Payments under any contracts pursuant to this title may be made in advance or by way of reimbursement and in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this title.

"(c) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the Secretary may, at the request or consent of an urban Indian organization, revise or amend any contract entered into by the Secretary with such organization under this title as necessary to carry out the purposes of this title, except that whenever an urban Indian organization requests retrocession of the Secretary for any contract entered into pursuant to this title, such retrocession shall become effective upon a date specified by the Secretary not more than one hundred and twenty days from the date of the request by the organization or at such later date as may be mutually agreed to by the Secretary and the organization.

"(d) In connection with any contract entered into pursuant to this title, the Secretary may permit an urban Indian organization to utilize, in carrying out such contract, existing facilities owned by the Federal Government within the Secretary's jurisdiction under such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon for the use and maintenance of such facilities.

"(e) Contracts with urban Indian organizations and regulations adopted pursuant to this title shall include provisions to assure the fair and uniform provision to urban Indians of services and assistance under such contracts by such organizations.

"REPORTS AND RECORDS

"SEC. 507. (a) For each fiscal year during which an urban Indian organization receives or expends funds pursuant to a contract under this title, such organization shall submit to the Secretary a quarterly report including—

"(1) in the case of a contract under section 503, information gathered pursuant to clauses (10) and (11) of subsection (a) of such section;

"(2) information on activities conducted by the organization pursuant to the contract;

"(3) an accounting of the amounts and purposes for which Federal funds were expended; and

"(4) such other information as the Secretary may request.

"(b) The reports and records of the urban Indian organization with respect to a contract under this title shall be subject to audit by the Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States.

"(c) The Secretary shall allow as a cost of any contract entered into under section 503 the cost of an annual private audit conducted by a certified public accountant.

"REPORTS REQUIRED

"SEC. 508. (a) By no later than the date which is 1 year after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary, through the Service, shall submit a report to Congress which assesses the health status and health care needs of urban Indians. The report shall—

"(1) specify the health care needs of urban Indians and, with respect to urban centers for which urban Indian organizations have entered into contracts under section 503, whether additional health care personnel are needed to meet such needs;

"(2) make recommendations for additional programs, technical assistance, funding, and additional health care personnel to meet the health care needs of all urban Indians; and

"(3) contain recommendations for legislation and administrative actions to achieve the national goal of providing the best possible health status for urban Indians.

"(b) By no later than April 1, 1988, the Secretary, through the Service and with the assistance of the urban Indian organizations that have entered into contracts under this title, shall review the program established under this title and submit to the Congress an assessment thereof and recommendations for any further legislative efforts the Secretary deems necessary to meet the purpose of this title.

"LIMITATION ON CONTRACT AUTHORITY

"SEC. 509. The authority of the Secretary to enter into contracts under this title shall be to the extent, and in an amount, provided for in appropriation Acts.

"AUTHORIZATIONS

"SEC. 510. There are authorized to be appropriated for contracts under this title—

"(1) $15,000,000 for fiscal year 1985,

"(2) $16,500,000 for fiscal year 1986,

"(3) $17,657,000 for fiscal year 1987, and

"(4) $18,888,000 for fiscal year 1988.".

PERSONNEL CEILINGS DEMONSTRATION PROJECT

SEC. 603. Section 710 (25 U.S.C. 1680) is hereby repealed.

REDUCTION AND CONTROL OF HEPATITIS-B IN ALASKA

SEC. 604. Title VII (25 U.S.C. 1671, et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"REDUCTION AND CONTROL OF HEPATITIS-B IN ALASKA: CLINICAL CARE PRIORITIES

"SEC. 710. (a)(1) By no later than the date which is 1 year after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary, through the Service and in conjunction with the State of Alaska and the Center for Disease Control, shall complete the implementation of a program to provide for—

"(A) screening and reporting of cases of,

"(B) vaccinations for the prevention of, and

"(C) control of the incidence of, hepatitis-B in Alaska.

"(2) By no later than December 30, 1986, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report concerning the activities carried out under the program described in paragraph (1). The report shall include—

"(A) a description of any activities which, on the day the report is submitted, need to be carried out to control the incidence of hepatitis-B in Alaska, and

"(B) a schedule for the completion of such activities.

"(b)(1) The Secretary shall include in the budget submitted under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for each of the fiscal years succeeding the fiscal year in which the Indian Health Care Amendment of 1984 are enacted, a request for budget authority for, and estimates of outlays for, a program to control the incidence of hepatitis-B in Alaska.

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this section—

"(A) $3,200,000 for fiscal year 1985,

"(B) $3,200,000 for fiscal year 1986, and

"(C) such sums as may be necessary for each of the fiscal years 1987 and 1988.

"LIMITATION ON IMPLEMENTATION OF CLINICAL CARE PRIORITIES

"SEC. 711. (a) The Congress finds and declares that—

"(1) because the health care needs of Indian people vary in different geographic areas of the country;

"(2) decisions affecting the kinds of health care that can be provided in view of available resources are best made at the local level;

"(3) the quality of health care provided at the local level depends upon the degree to which there is sufficient flexibility in the allocation of resources at the local level to respond to local health needs; and

"(4) the objective of raising the health status of Indian and Alaska Native people to the highest possible level is best served when clinical care priorities are established at the local level.

"(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall not implement on a national basis—

"(1) any reduction in,

"(2) any restriction on, or

"(3) any modification in, any type of clinical health care services provided by the Service on the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984 (including any clinical health care service provided by the Service directly or by grant, contract, or any other type of arrangement) before the date which is 90 days after the date on which the Secretary submits a plan for the establishment of national clinical care priorities to the Congress.

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall conduct a study which analyzes the effect that implementation of the clinical care priorities described in paragraph (3) on a national level would have on the provision of clinical health care services if such clinical care priorities were in effect during fiscal year 1985. Such study shall be based on data extracted from the Indian Health Service patient care information system in the Service areas where that system is currently operative.

"(2) By no later than December 31, 1985, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a final report on the study conducted under paragraph (1). Such report shall include—

"(A) the total number of individuals who would have been denied clinical health care services if the clinical care priorities described in paragraph (3) had been in effect during fiscal year 1985;

"(B) a division of the total number of individuals described in subparagraph (A) among each category of clinical health care services specified in such clinical care priorities; and

"(C) a division of the total number of individuals described in subparagraph (A) among each type of clinical health care service included in each category referred to in subparagraph (B).

"(3) The clinical care priorities referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) are the priorities determined under the order of priority for the provision of clinical health care services that was recommended in the report issued in January 1983 by the Task Force on Contract Health Services which was established by the Director of the Indian Health Service.

"(d) For purposes of this section, the term 'clinical health care service' means any health care service provided by the Service to Indians directly or by grant, contract, or any other type of arrangement on the day before the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984.".

ORGANIZATIONAL IMPROVEMENTS

SEC. 605. The Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new title:

"TITLE VIII—ORGANIZATIONAL IMPROVEMENTS

"NATIONAL INDIAN HEALTH ADVISORY BOARD

"SEC. 801. (a) There is established within the Service a National Indian Health Advisory Board (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Board') which shall be composed of—

"(1) one Indian or Alaska Native from each of the regional service areas of the Service, and

"(2) two Indians or Alaska Natives who provide health care services under distinct urban Indian health care programs.

"(b)(1)(A) Each member of the Board described in subsection (a)(1) shall be elected to the Board by vote of the members of the Area Health Board for the regional service area of the Service that such member represents.

"(B) If a regional service area does not have an Area Health Board, the member of the Board described in subsection (a)(1) who represents such service area shall be elected to the Board by vote of the Indian tribes and Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established under, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)) located within such service area. In any election conducted under the preceding sentence, each Indian tribe and Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation located in such service area shall have 1 vote.

"(2) Each member of the Board described in subsection (a)(2) shall be elected to the Board by vote of the membership of the American Indian Health Care Association or any organization which succeeds such Association.

"(3) The only individuals who may be elected to serve as members of the Board are individuals who—

"(A) are members of the governing body of—

"(i) any Indian tribe which is recognized by the Secretary of the Interior as eligible for services provided to Indians because of their status as Indians, or

"(ii) any Alaska Native village or regional or village corporation (as defined in, or established under, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)), and

"(B) by reason of training or experience, are knowledgeable in health education, nursing, data systems, public information, or community program development.

"(4) The term of office for each member of the Board shall be 3 years, except that of the members first elected to the Board—

"(A) four shall serve a term of office of 1 year,

"(B) five shall serve a term of office of 2 years, and

"(C) five shall serve a term of office of 3 years, as designated by the Secretary prior to the election of such members. A member of the Board may continue to serve as a member of the Board after the term of office of such member has expired until a successor to such member takes office.

"(5)(A) A vacancy on the Board shall not affect the activities of the Board.

"(B) If a vacancy on the Board occurs, an election shall be held within 90 days of such occurrence to fill such vacancy. Any individual who is elected to fill such vacancy shall serve the remainder of the unexpired term.

"(6) The Board shall elect from among its members a chairman and such other officers as the Board considers to be necessary.

"(7) The Board shall meet at the call of the chairman of the Board or at the request of the Director of the Indian Health Service, but not less often than 4 times a year.

"(8) The Board shall adopt such bylaws as the Board determines to be necessary to enable the Board to carry out its functions.

"(c) The Board shall—

"(1) advise the Director of the Indian Health Service and the Secretary with respect to—

"(A) the administration (including the development of regulations and of administrative practices and policies) of any medical or health program in which Indians participate, and

"(B) the adequate funding of such programs;

"(2) evaluate all medical or health programs and projects carried out under any program of the Department of Health and Human Services in which Indians can participate or from which they can benefit, and disseminate the results of such evaluations;

"(3) provide technical assistance to local medical or health agencies and to Indian medical or health agencies, institutions, and organizations to assist them in improving the health of Indians;

"(4) assist the Secretary in developing criteria and regulations for the administration and evaluation of contracts made under title V of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984;

"(5) conduct studies and acquire information on the health status of American Indians and Alaska Natives and disseminate such information and the results of such studies;

"(6) assist the Secretary and the Director of the Indian Health Service in promoting the development of American Indian and Alaska Native health manpower;

"(7) assist the Secretary and the Director of the Indian Health Service in improving the health status of American Indians and Alaska Natives and in promoting the self-determination of American Indians and Alaska Natives; and

"(8) inform local and area health boards, Indian tribes, and Alaska Native villages or regional or village corporations (as defined in, or established under, the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601, et seq.)) of proposed health legislation or regulations and the impact such legislation or regulations may be expected to have on the health status or health care of American Indians or Alaska Natives.

"(d) After consultation with the Board and consideration of the recommendations of the Board, the officers of the Board—

"(1) shall appoint an executive director and at least one other individual as a member of the professional staff of the Board, and

"(2) shall—

"(A) appoint such other employees, and

"(B) through contract or other arrangements—

"(i) acquire such administrative support services and facilities,

"(ii) acquire such information, and

"(iii) acquire the services of such consultants, as the Board determines to be necessary to enable the Board to carry out its functions.

"(e)(1) Members of the Board who are not officers or employees of the United States shall receive for each day they are engaged in the performance of the duties of the Board compensation at rates not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate in effect for GS-18 of the General Schedule, including traveltime.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), any officer or employee of the United States who is a member of the Board shall serve as a member of the Board without compensation.

"(3) All members of the Board, while serving away from their homes or regular places of business as members of the Board, may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in the same manner as such expenses are authorized by section 5703, title 5, United States Code, for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

"(f) The Board shall submit to the Congress by no later than June 30 of each year an annual report on the activities of the Board during the preceding year. Such annual report shall include—

"(1) any recommendations the Board may deem necessary for the improvement of medical and health programs in which Indians participate, or from which they can benefit, and

"(2) a statement of the recommendations of such Board to the Secretary with respect to the funding of any such programs.

"(g)(1) The Board is authorized to enter into contracts with any public or private nonprofit agency, institution, or organization in order to carry out the duties of the Board described in paragraphs (2), (3), (4), and (5) of subsection (c).

"(2) The authority of the Board to enter into any contract under this section shall be limited to such extent, and to such amounts, as may be provided for in appropriation Acts.

"(h) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1984, and ending before October 1, 1988, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"INDIAN HEALTH POLICY ADVISORY PANEL

"SEC. 802. (a) There is established within the Service an Indian Health Policy Advisory Panel (hereinafter in this section referred to as the 'Panel') which shall be composed of—

"(1) three Indians or Alaska Natives from distinct regional service areas of the Service,

"(2) one Indian or Alaska Native who provides health care services under an urban Indian health care program,

"(3) three individuals who—

"(A) are scientists, physicians, or other health professionals, and

"(B) represent the specialties and disciplines relevant to the services provided by the Service,

"(4) the Assistant Secretary for Health of the Department of Health and Human Services,

"(5) the Director of the National Institutes for Health,

"(6) the Director of the Center for Disease Control,

"(7) the Administrator of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration,

"(8) the Director of the Indian Health Service and all former Directors of the Indian Health Service, and

"(9) such other officers and employees of the United States whose advice is determined by the Secretary to be necessary in order to carry out the duties of the Panel.

Any individual described in paragraph (4), (5), (6), (7), (8), or (9) shall serve as an ex officio member of the Panel.

"(b)(1) Each member of the Panel described in subsection (a)(1) shall be elected to the Panel by the members of the National Indian Health Advisory Board.

"(2) The member of the Panel described in subsection (a)(2) shall be elected to the Panel by vote of the membership of the American Indian Health Care Association or any organization which succeeds such Association.

"(3) The members of the Panel described in subsection (a)(3) shall be appointed by the Secretary from a list of nominees provided to the Secretary by the Director of the Indian Health Service.

"(4) The term of office for each member of the Panel described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) shall be 3 years, except that of the first of such members elected or appointed to the Panel—

"(A) two shall serve a term of office of 1 year,

"(B) two shall serve a term of office of 2 years, and

"(C) three shall serve a term of office of 3 years, as designated by the Secretary prior to the election or appointment of such members.

"(5) A member of the Panel may continue to serve as a member of the Panel after the term of office of such member has expired until a successor to such member takes office.

"(6)(A) A vacancy on the Panel shall not affect the activities of the Panel.

"(B) If a vacancy on the Panel occurs with respect to any member of the Panel described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a), an election shall be held, or appointment made (as the case may be), to fill such vacancy within 90 days of such occurrence. Any individual who is elected or appointed to fill such vacancy shall serve the remainder of the unexpired term.

"(C) If a vacancy occurs with respect to any member of the Panel described in subsection (a)(1), the individual elected to fill such vacancy shall not be from the same regional service area of the Service which was represented by the individual who is being replaced on the Panel.

"(7) The Director of the Indian Health Service shall be the chairman of the Panel.

"(8) The Panel shall meet at the call of the chairman of the Panel or upon request of the Secretary, but not less often than 2 times a year.

"(9) The Panel shall adopt such bylaws as the Panel determines to be necessary to enable the Panel to carry out its functions.

"(c) The Panel shall—

"(1) advise the Director of the Indian Health Service on matters of long-range Indian health policy,

"(2) under direction of the chairman of the Panel, develop a plan to implement Indian health policy and to provide for the most effective use and organization of the resources available to the Indian Health Service,

"(3) after consultation with and consideration of the recommendations of the Secretary, make recommendations to Congress and the President on matters of long-range Indian health policy, and

"(4) maintain liaison with the National Indian Health Advisory Board, other advisory bodies, the heads of other appropriate Federal agencies, and with key non-Federal entities involved in activities affecting the Indian Health Service.

"(d) After consultation with the Panel and consideration of the recommendations of the Panel, the chairman of the Panel—

"(1) shall appoint an executive director and at least one other individual as a member of the professional staff of the Panel, and

"(2) shall—

"(A) appoint such other employees, and

"(B) through contract or other arrangements—

"(i) acquire such administrative support services and facilities,

"(ii) acquire such information, and

"(iii) acquire the services of such consultants, as the Panel determines to be necessary to enable the Panel to carry out its functions.

"(e)(1) Members of the Panel who are not officers or employees of the United States shall receive for each day they are engaged in the performance of the duties of the Panel compensation at rates not to exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate in effect for GS-18 of the General Schedule, including traveltime.

"(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), any officer or employee of the United States who is a member of the Panel shall serve as a member of the Panel without compensation.

"(3) All members of the Panel, while serving away from their homes or regular places of business as members of the Panel, may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, in the same manner as such expenses are authorized by section 5703, title 5, United States Code, for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.

"(f) The authority of the Panel to enter into any contract under this section shall be limited to such extent, and to such amounts, as may be provided for in appropriation Acts.

"(g) The Panel shall submit to the Secretary and to the Congress an annual report which—

"(1) describes the Advisory Panel's activities in the fiscal year for which the report is made;

"(2) makes recommendations to Congress and the President for the establishment of Indian health policy; and

"(3) describes a plan to implement Indian health policy, or contains the Advisory Panel's recommendations, if any, for changes in such a plan.

"(h) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

"MANAGEMENT INFORMATION SYSTEM

"SEC. 803. (a)(1) The Secretary shall establish an automated management information system for the Service.

"(2) The information system established under paragraph (1) shall include—

"(A) a cost accounting system,

"(B) a patient care information system for each area served by the Service, and

"(C) a privacy component that protects the privacy of patient information held by the Service.

"(b) By no later than September 30, 1985, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress setting forth—

"(1) the activities which have been undertaken to establish an automated management information system,

"(2) the activities, if any, which remain to be undertaken to complete the implementation of an automated management information system, and

"(3) the amount of funds which will be needed to complete the implementation of a management information system in the succeeding fiscal years.

"(c) There are authorized to be appropriated—

"(1) $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, and

"(2) such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section for each of the fiscal years 1986, 1987, and 1988.".

NEGOTIATION FOR CONTRACTS

SEC. 606. Subsection (b) of the first section of the Act of August 5, 1954 (68 Stat. 674; 42 U.S.C. 2001(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "In carrying out" and inserting in lieu thereof "(1) In carrying out", and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2) The Secretary may waive any statutory or administrative requirement for competitive procurement of health services if, in the judgment of the responsible Chief Medical Officer, such competitive procurement would compromise the accessibility, quality, and continuity of health services or would not result in appreciable competition or savings.

"(3) The Secretary shall reject any bid submitted pursuant to any statutory or administrative requirement for competitive procurement of health services upon certification by the responsible Chief Medical Officer that acceptance of such bid would compromise the accessibility, quality, and continuity of health services.".

TECHNICAL AMENDMENT

SEC. 607. Section 4 is amended by striking out subsections (i), (j), and (k).

STUDY OF HEALTH CARE NEEDS OF NATIVE HAWAIIANS AND OTHER NATIVE PACIFIC ISLANDERS

SEC. 608. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct a study of the physical and mental health care needs of Native Hawaiians and other Native American Pacific Islanders.

(2) In conducting the study required under paragraph (1), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall consult with the Commissioner of the Administration for Native Americans, the Administrator of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration, the Director of the Indian Health Service, leaders in the field of health care, and representatives of Native Hawaiians and other Native American Pacific Islanders.

(b) By no later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall submit to the Congress a report on the study conducted under subsection (a). Such report shall include—

(1) an assessment of the access of, and barriers to, Native Hawaiians and other Native American Pacific Islanders in receiving physical and mental health care services,

(2) an assessment of the physical and mental health care needs of Native Hawaiians and other Native American Pacific Islanders, and

(3) specific recommendations for the development of a national strategy to address such needs.

LEASING AUTHORITY

SEC. 609. Section 704 of the Act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 704. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary is authorized, in carrying out the purposes of this Act, to enter into leases with Indian tribes for periods not in excess of twenty years. Property leased by the Secretary from an Indian tribe may be reconstructed or renovated by the Secretary pursuant to an agreement with such Indian tribe.

"(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary is authorized in carrying out the purposes of this Act, to enter into leases, contracts, and other legal agreements with Indian tribes and tribal organizations for the purpose of compensating such tribes or organizations for facility space costs, including but not limited to depreciation based on the useful life of the building, interest paid or accrued, operation and maintenance, and other allowable costs associated with the administration and delivery of health services by the Indian Health Service or tribally operated programs.".

CONTRACT HEALTH SERVICES FOR THE TRENTON SERVICE AREA

SEC. 610. The Act is amended by adding a new section as follows:

"SEC. 712. The Secretary, acting through the Service, is directed to provide contract health services to members of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians that reside in the Trenton Service Area of Divide, McKenzie, and Williams counties of North Dakota and the adjoining counties of Richland, Roosevelt, and Sheridan in the State of Montana. The Secretary is directed to conduct a population survey of Indians residing in the Trenton Service Area for the purpose of determining the basis for the distribution of equity health care funds and the provision of contract health care. Should the results of the population survey indicate that additional eligible members of the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa Indians reside outside the boundaries of the named North Dakota and Montana counties, the contract health service delivery area shall be defined to include those additional counties of North Dakota or Montana in which such eligible tribal members reside.".

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. WEAVER

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. WEAVER: Strike out all after the enacting clause of the Senate bill, S. 2166, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That (a) this Act may be cited as the "Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984".

(b) Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act (25 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

SEC. 2. Section 4 is amended by striking out subsections (i), (j), and (k).

SEC. 3. (a) Subsection (c) of section 102 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $550,000 for fiscal year 1985, $600,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $650,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

(b) Section 103 is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after "SEC. 103. (a)", redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively, and adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(2) The Secretary shall not deny scholarship assistance to an eligible applicant under this section solely on the basis of an applicant's scholastic achievement where such applicant has been admitted to or maintained good standing at an accredited institution.";

(2) inserting before the period at the end of subsection (c) the following: "of a grantee while attending school full time"; and

(3) amending subsection (d) to read as follows:

"(d) For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $4,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, $4,700,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $5,400,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

(c) Section 104 is amended to read as follows:

"INDIAN HEALTH SCHOLARSHIPS

"SEC. 104. (a) In order to provide health professionals to Indian communities, the Secretary, acting through the Service and in accordance with this section, shall make scholarship grants to Indians who are enrolled full time in schools of medicine, osteopathy, dentistry, veterinary medicine, nursing, optometry, public health, and allied health professions. Such scholarships shall be designated Indian Health Scholarships and shall be made in accordance with section 338A of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254l) except as provided in subsection (b) of this section.

"(b)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall determine who shall receive such scholarships and shall determine the distribution of such scholarships among such health professions on the basis of the relative needs of Indians for additional service in such health professions.

"(2) An individual shall be eligible for a scholarship under subsection (a) in any year in which such individual is enrolled full time in a health professions school referred to in subsection (a).

"(3) The active duty service obligation prescribed under section 338B of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254m) shall be met by a recipient of an Indian Health Scholarship by service in the Indian Health Service, including service under a contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638); in a program assisted under title V of this Act; or in the private practice of his profession if, as determined by the Secretary, in accordance with guidelines promulgated by him, such practice is situated in a physician or other health professional shortage area and addresses the health care needs of a substantial number of Indians.

"(c) For the purpose of this section, the term 'Indian' has the same meaning given that term by subsection (c) of section 4 of this Act, including all individuals described in clauses (1) through (4) of that subsection.

"(d) For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $6,100,000 for fiscal year 1985, $7,000,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $8,100,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

(d) Section 105(a) is amended by—

(1) inserting "(1)" after "SEC. 105. (a)" and adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"(2) No stipend may be paid to any person under sections 103 and 104 of this title while such person is employed under this section."; and

(2) amending subsection (d) to read as follows:

"(d) For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $300,000 for fiscal year 1985, $350,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $400,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

SEC. 4. (a) Section 201 is amended to read as follows:

"HEALTH SERVICES

"SEC. 201. (a)(1) To further implement the national policy of raising the health status of Indians to a zero level of deficiency as defined in subsection (c) by eliminating backlogs in health care services and meeting unmet Indian health needs as soon as possible and in an equitable manner, the Secretary is authorized to expend, through the Service, over the three-year period beginning with fiscal year 1985 the amounts authorized to be appropriated by subsection (e) of this section. Funds requested under this section shall be separately stated in the Service budget request as submitted to Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, and funds appropriated under this section shall not be used to offset or limit appropriations made to the Service under authority of the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13) or any other law. Funds appropriated under this section in any fiscal year shall be included in the base budget of the Service for the purpose of determining appropriations under this section in subsequent fiscal years.

"(2) Nothing in this section is intended to diminish the primary responsibility of the Service to eliminate existing backlogs in unmet health care needs of the Service, nor is it intended to discourage the Service from undertaking additional efforts to achieve parity among tribes.

"(b)(1) Funds appropriated under this section shall be expended to augment the ability of the Service to meet the following health service responsibilities—

"(A) clinical care (direct or indirect);

"(B) preventive health;

"(C) dental care (direct or indirect);

"(D) mental health, including community mental health services, inpatient mental health services, dormitory mental health services, therapeutic and residential treatment centers, and training of traditional Indian practitioners;

"(E) emergency medical services;

"(F) treatment and control of, and rehabilitative care related to, alcoholism among Indians;

"(G) accident prevention programs;

"(H) community health representative programs; and

"(I) maintenance and repair.

"(2) Where any funds allocated to a service unit are used for a contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, not more than 15 percent of such funds shall be used for health planning, training, technical assistance, and other administrative support functions.

"(3) To the extent that all or a portion of the funds appropriated under subsection (e) are required to raise service units which are below a Level II deficiency, as defined in subsection (c), to such level, such funds shall not be available for allocation to service units at or above such level. Funds appropriated under this section shall be allocated on a service unit basis and apportionment of a service unit's allocation of funds among the health service responsibilities listed in paragraph (1) shall be as determined by the Service and the affected Indian tribe or tribes.

"(c)(1) Within sixty days of the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress the current health services priority system report of the Service for each service unit including units serving newly recognized or acknowledged tribes. Such report shall contain—

"(A) the methodology for determining tribal health resources deficiencies; the level of health resources deficiency for each service unit; the amount of funds necessary to raise all service units below a Level II deficiency to a Level II deficiency; the amount of funds necessary to raise all service units below a Level I deficiency to a Level I deficiency; and the amount of funds necessary to raise all service units to a zero level of deficiency; and

"(B) an estimate of—

"(i) the amount of health service funds appropriated under the authority of this or any other Act for the preceding fiscal year which is allocated to each service unit or comparable entity; and

"(ii) the number of Indians eligible for health services in each service unit.

"(2) For purposes of this section, health resources deficiency levels shall be defined as follows:

"Level I—0 to 20 percent deficiency,

"Level II—21 to 40 percent deficiency,

"Level III—41 to 60 percent deficiency,

"Level IV—61 to 80 percent deficiency, and

"Level V—81 to 100 percent deficiency.

"(3) The Secretary shall establish by regulation procedures which allow any Indian tribe to petition the Secretary for a review of any determination of the health resources deficiency level of the service unit through which such tribe receives health services.

"(d) Upon enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall take all necessary action, in cooperation with each Indian tribe, to bring current the tribal specific health plans which were developed as a part of the plan required by section 703 of this Act and which formed the basis for such plan in response to the requirements of section 701 of this Act. These plans shall be based upon the methodology submitted under subsection (c), as may be further modified through tribal consultation, and shall form the basis for the health services priority system report to be submitted by the Secretary for fiscal years 1986 and 1987. Such reports shall be submitted to the Congress not more than thirty days after the submission of the annual budget for such fiscal years to the Congress by the President.

"(e) For each of the three fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1985, there are authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this section such sums as may be necessary to raise all service units to at least a Level II deficiency on the health services priority system. Any funds appropriated under this subsection shall be designated as the Indian Health Care Improvement Fund.

"(f) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall expend directly or by contract, including contracts under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638), not less than 1 percent of the funds appropriated under subsection (e) for research in the areas of Indian health care set out in subparagraphs (A) through (G) of subsection (b)(1).".

(b) Title II is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"CATASTROPHIC HEALTH

"SEC. 202. (a) There is established an Indian Catastrophic Health Emergency Fund to be administered by the Secretary, acting through the Service, solely for the purpose of meeting the extraordinary medical costs associated with the treatment of victims of disasters or catastrophic illnesses falling within the responsibility of the Service. The fund shall be administered by the central office of the Service and shall not be allocated, apportioned, or delegated on a service unit or area office basis. Funds appropriated under subsection (c) shall not be used to offset or limit appropriations made to the Service under authority of the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13) or any other law. No part of the fund or its administration shall be subject to contract or grant under any law, including the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638).

"(b) The Secretary shall, through the promulgation of regulations consistent with the provisions of this section—

"(1) establish a definition of disasters and catastrophic illnesses for which the cost of treatment, whether provided under contract or directly by the Service, would qualify for payment from the fund; and which shall provide that a service unit shall not be eligible for reimbursement for the cost of treatment from the fund until its cost of treating any victim of such catastrophic illness or disaster shall have reached a certain threshold cost which the Secretary shall establish at not less than $10,000 or not more than $20,000;

"(2) establish a procedure for the reimbursement of service units or facilities rendering treatment or, whenever otherwise authorized by the Service, the reimbursement of non-Service facilities or providers rendering treatment;

"(3) establish a procedure for payment from the fund where the exigencies of the medical circumstances warrant treatment prior to the authorization of such treatment by the Service; and

"(4) establish a procedure that will assure that no payment shall be made from the fund to any provider to the extent that the provider is eligible to receive payment for the treatment from any other Federal, State, local, or private source of reimbursement for which the patient is eligible or by which the patient is covered.

"(c) There is authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this section $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1985 and in fiscal years 1986 and 1987 such sums as are necessary to maintain the fund at $12,000,000. Funds appropriated under this section shall remain available until expended.

"(d) The Secretary shall report to Congress on the operation of the fund on January 1, 1987. Such report shall include—

"(1) the number and nature of disasters and catastrophic illnesses for which reimbursement was sought;

"(2) the costs associated with these disasters or illnesses;

"(3) the amounts reimbursed by the fund in connection with such illnesses and disasters;

"(4) the effect of the fund on the ability of the service unit to meet the health needs of their Service populations; and

"(5) the Secretary's recommendations regarding the future operation of the fund.".

SEC. 5. Section 301 is amended to read as follows:

"HEALTH FACILITIES

"SEC. 301. (a)(1) Within sixty days after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report which shall set forth the current health facilities priority system of the Service and which shall include the planning, design, construction, or renovation needs for the ten top priority inpatient care facilities and the ten top priority ambulatory care facilities together with required staff quarters, the justification for such priority listings, and the projected cost of such projects. The report shall also include the methodology adopted by the Service in establishing priorities under its health facilities priority system.

"(2)(A) Within thirty days of the submission of the annual budget to the Congress by the President for fiscal years 1986 and 1987, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report which complies with the requirements of paragraph (1).

"(B) In preparing such report in such fiscal years, the Service shall consult with tribes and tribal organizations including those tribes or tribal organizations operating health programs or facilities with funds from the Service under the Indian Self-Determination Act, and shall review the needs of these tribes and tribal organizations for inpatient and outpatient facilities, including their needs for renovation and expansion of existing facilities.

"(3) The Service shall use the same criteria for fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987 to evaluate the needs of facilities operated under contract under the Indian Self-Determination Act as it uses to evaluate the needs of facilities operated directly by the Service in such fiscal years.

"(b)(1) All funds appropriated under the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13) for the planning, design, construction, or renovation of health facilities for the benefit of a tribe or tribes may be used for the expenses of such activities incurred by such tribe or tribes under contracts or grants under the Indian Self-Determination Act. Title to any facility constructed under a grant under this section shall be in the United States.

"(2) Any tribal contractor or grantee shall expend such funds for the purpose for which appropriated pursuant to rules and regulations established by the Secretary for contracting and procurement.

"(c) Prior to the expenditure of, or the making of any firm commitment to expend, any funds appropriated for facilities planning and design, construction, or renovation under the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13), the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall—

"(1) consult with any Indian tribe that would be significantly affected by such expenditure for the purpose of determining and, wherever practicable, honoring tribal preferences concerning size, location, type, and other characteristics of any facility on which such expenditure is to be made, and

"(2) ensure, wherever practicable, that such facility, not later than one year after its construction or renovation, shall meet the standards of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

"(d) The Secretary shall not close, under any existing authority, any Service hospital or other outpatient health care facility or any portion thereof unless he has submitted to the Congress at least one year prior to the planned closure date an evaluation of the impact of the proposed action which shall include the following factors—

"(1) accessibility of alternative health care resources for the service population;

"(2) cost effectiveness of the closure;

"(3) quality of health care to be provided to the service population after closure;

"(4) availability of contract health care funds to maintain current levels of service; and

"(5) the views of the Indian tribe or tribes served by such facility on the planned closure.

"(e)(1) Notwithstanding any other law, an Indian tribe may acquire and expend funds, other than funds appropriated to the Service, for major renovation and modernization, including planning and design for such renovation and modernization, of Service facilities, including facilities operated under contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638).

"(2) Any project undertaken under paragraph (1) shall be subject to the approval of the Area Director and shall—

"(A) not require or obligate the Service to provide any additional staff or equipment; and

"(B) not divert Service funds from a higher priority project on the current health facilities priority system as provided in subsection (a).

"(3) Any tribe undertaking a project under paragraph (1) shall have full authority to administer such project, but shall do so in accordance with applicable rules and regulations promulgated by the Secretary governing construction or renovation of Service health facilities.

"(f)(1) The Secretary shall convey to the Bethel Native Corporation, an Alaska Native Corporation organized pursuant to the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following real property situated in Bethel, Alaska described as:

"United States Survey Numbered 4000, excluding those lands identified as tracts A and B in the determination AA-18959 of the Bureau of Land Management issued on September 30, 1983 pursuant to section 3(e) of Public Law 92-203.

"(2) The Secretary is authorized and directed to enter into a contract for sale of the service hospital, housing facilities owned by the Service, fixtures, equipment, and appurtances located on the property described in subsection (1) to the Bethel Native Corporation upon the execution of a lease-purchase agreement between the Service and the Bethel Native Corporation whereby the Bethel Native Corporation shall agree to a purchase of the service hospital, housing facilities, fixtures, equipment and appurtances at a price which recovers the actual Federal expenditures in the construction of said hospital and facilities and whereby the Service shall agree to lease and operate said hospital and facilities.".

SEC. 6. Section 302 is amended to read as follows:

"SAFE WATER AND SANITARY WASTE DISPOSAL FACILITIES

"SEC. 302. (a)(1) Congress finds that—

"(A) the provision of safe water supply and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal systems is primarily a health consideration and function;

"(B) Indian people suffer an inordinately high incidence of disease, injury, and illness directly attributable to the absence or inadequacy of such facilities;

"(C) the long-term cost to the United States of treating and curing such disease, injury, and illness is substantially greater than the short-term cost of providing such facilities and other preventive health measures;

"(D) many Indian homes and communities still lack safe water supply and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal facilities;

"(E) it is in the interest of the United States and it is the policy of the United States that all Indian communities and Indian homes, new and existing, be provided with safe and adequate water supply and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal facilities as soon as possible; and

"(2) Congress reaffirms the primary responsibility and authority of the Service to provide the necessary sanitation facilities and services as provided in section 7 of the Act of August 5, 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2004a).

"(b) Beginning in fiscal year 1985, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall develop and begin implementation of a ten-year plan to provide safe water supply and sanitary sewage and solid waste disposal facilities to existing Indian homes and communities and to new and renovated Indian homes.

"(c)(1) Within sixty days of the date of the enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall report to Congress on the Service's sanitation facilities priority system. The Secretary, in preparing such report, shall uniformly apply the methodology for determining sanitation deficiencies to all Indian tribes. Such report shall identify the methodology for determining sanitation deficiencies; the level of deficiency for each Indian community or tribe; the amount of funds necessary to raise all communities to a level I deficiency; and the amount of funds necessary to raise all communities or tribes to a zero level of deficiency. For the purpose of such report—

"(A) a level I deficiency means a sanitation system which complies with all applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulations in which the defined deficiencies consist of routine replacement, repair, or maintenance needs;

"(B) a level II deficiency means a sanitation system which complies with all applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulations in which the defined deficiencies consist of capital improvements necessary to improve the facilities to meet the needs of the communities for domestic sanitation facilities;

"(C) a level III deficiency means a sanitation system which has an inadequate or partial water supply and sewage disposal facility which does not comply with applicable water supply and pollution control laws and regulations or which has no solid waste disposal facility;

"(D) a level IV deficiency means a sanitation system which lacks either a safe water supply system or a sewage disposal system; and

"(E) a level V deficiency means the absence of a safe water supply and sewage disposal system.

Any tribe or community which lacks the operation and maintenance capability to meet pollution control laws and regulations shall be deemed to have a level III deficiency;

"(2)(A) Within thirty days of the submission of the annual budget to the Congress by the President for fiscal years 1986 and 1987, the Secretary shall submit a report to the Congress which meets the requirements of paragraph (1).

"(B) In preparing such report in such fiscal years, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall consult with tribes and tribal organizations including those operating health care programs or facilities under contracts under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act to determine the sanitation needs of each tribe.

"(d)(1) To clarify the powers conferred by subsection (a) of section 7 of the Act of August 5, 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2004a) the Secretary, acting through the Service, is authorized to provide—

"(A) financial and technical assistance to Indian tribes and communities in the establishment, training, and equipping of utility organizations to operate and maintain Indian sanitation facilities,

"(B) ongoing technical assistance and training in the management of utility organizations, and

"(C) operation and maintenance assistance for and emergency repairs to tribal sanitation facilities when necessary to avoid a health hazard or to protect the Federal investment in sanitation facilities in situations where the community or tribe or family is not financially or technically capable of performing the required emergency repairs with their own resources.

"(2)(A) This section is not intended to diminish the primary responsibilities of the Indian family, community, or tribe to establish, collect, and utilize reasonable user fees, or otherwise set aside funding, for the purpose of operation and maintenance of sanitation facilities.

"(B) The financial and technical capability of an Indian tribe or community to safely operate and maintain a sanitation facility shall not be a precondition for the provision or construction of such facilities and the Secretary may not require a tribe or community to accept a transfer of such facilities where he has determined the tribe or community does not have, or may not be reasonably expected to achieve, such capability.

"(e) For the purpose of providing necessary funds and staff to implement the expanded responsibilities of the Service under subsection (d)—

"(1) there is authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987, and

"(2) there is authorized to be appropriated for each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987, $850,000 to support thirty new full-time equivalents for the Service.

"(f) Any funds appropriated and allocated for the purpose of providing water supply and sewage disposal services for the benefit of any tribe or tribal organization may be used for expenses incurred by any such tribe under contract or grant for the provision of such services under the Indian Self-Determination Act.".

SEC. 7. Title V is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE V—HEALTH SERVICES FOR URBAN INDIANS

"PURPOSE

"SEC. 501. The purpose of this title is to encourage the establishment of programs in urban areas to make health services more accessible to the urban Indian populations.

"CONTRACTS WITH URBAN INDIAN ORGANIZATIONS

"SEC. 502. The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations to assist such organizations to establish and administer, in urban centers in which such organizations are situated, programs which meet the requirements of this title. The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall include such conditions in any such contract as he considers necessary to effect the purpose of this title.

"CONTRACTS FOR THE PROVISION OF HEALTH CARE OR REFERRAL SERVICES

"SEC. 503. (a) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations for the provision of health care or referral services for urban Indians residing in the urban centers in which such organizations are situated. Any such contract shall include requirements that the urban Indian organization undertake to—

"(1) determine the population of urban Indians residing in the urban center in which such organization is situated who are or could be recipients of health care or referral services;

"(2) determine the current health status of urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(3) determine the current health care needs of urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(4) identify all public and private health service resources within such urban center which are or may be available to urban Indians;

"(5) determine the use of public and private health services resources by the urban Indians residing in such urban center;

"(6) assist such health service resources in providing service to such urban Indians;

"(7) assist such urban Indians in becoming familiar with and utilizing such resources;

"(8) provide basic health education to such urban Indians;

"(9) establish and implement manpower training programs necessary to accomplish the directives described in paragraphs (6) through (8);

"(10) identify gaps between unmet health needs of urban Indians and the resources available to meet such needs;

"(11) make recommendations to the Secretary and Federal, State, local, and other resource agencies on methods of improving health service programs to meet the needs of urban Indians; and

"(12) where necessary, provide or contract for health care services to urban Indians.

"(b) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall by regulation prescribe the criteria for selecting urban Indian organizations with which contracts may be entered into under this title. Such criteria shall include—

"(1) the extent of the unmet health care needs of urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(2) the size of the urban Indian population in the urban center involved;

"(3) the accessibility to, and utilization of, health care services (other than services provided under this title) by urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(4) the extent to which the requirements described in subsection (a) would duplicate—

"(A) any previous or current public or private health services project which is situated in an urban center and which is not funded under this title; or

"(B) any project funded under this title;

"(5) the capability of an urban Indian organization to meet the requirements of subsection (a);

"(6) the satisfactory performance and successful completion by an urban Indian organization of other contracts with the Secretary under this title;

"(7) the appropriateness and likely effectiveness of conducting the activities described in subsection (a) in an urban center; and

"(8) the extent of existing or likely future participation in the activities described in subsection (a) by appropriate health and health-related Federal, State, local, and other agencies.

"CONTRACTS FOR THE DETERMINATION OF UNMET HEALTH CARE NEEDS

"SEC. 504. (a) The Secretary, acting through the Service, may enter into contracts with urban Indian organizations which are situated in urban centers and for which contracts have not been entered into under section 503.

"(b) Any contract entered into by the Secretary under subsection (a) shall require—

"(1) the urban Indian organization—

"(A) to document the health care status and unmet health care needs of urban Indians in the urban center involved;

"(B) with respect to urban Indians in the urban center involved, to determine the matters described in paragraphs (2), (3), (4), and (8) of section 503(b); and

"(2) the urban Indian organization to complete performance of the contract within one year after the date on which the Secretary and such organization enter into such contract.

"(c) The Secretary may not renew any contract entered into under this section.

"EVALUATIONS: CONTRACT RENEWALS

"SEC. 505. (a) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall develop procedures to evaluate performance of contracts entered into by urban Indian organizations under this title. Such procedures shall include provisions for carrying out the requirements of this section.

"(b) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall conduct an annual onsite evaluation of each urban Indian organization which has entered into a contract under section 503 for purposes of evaluating the performance of such organization under such contract.

"(c) If, as a result of the evaluations conducted under subsection (b), the Secretary determines that an urban Indian organization has not satisfactorily performed a contract under section 503, the Secretary shall, prior to renewing such contract, attempt to resolve with such organization the areas of unsatisfactory performance and modify such contract to prevent future occurrences of such unsatisfactory performance. If the Secretary determines that such unsatisfactory performance cannot be resolved and prevented in the future, the Secretary shall not renew such contract with such organization and may enter into a contract under section 503 with another urban Indian organization which is situated in the same urban center as the urban Indian organization whose contract is not renewed under this section.

"(d) In determining whether to renew a contract with an urban Indian organization under section 503, or whether to enter into a contract with an urban Indian organization under section 503 which has completed performance of a contract under section 504, the Secretary shall review the information generated by the urban Indian organization in compliance with sections 503(a) and 504(b), the reports submitted under section 507, and, in the case of a renewal of a contract under section 503, the results of the on-site evaluations conducted under subsection (b).

"OTHER CONTRACT REQUIREMENTS

"SEC. 506. (a) Contracts with urban Indian organizations under this title shall be in accordance with all Federal contracting laws and regulations except that, in the discretion of the Secretary, such contracts may be negotiated without advertising and need not conform to the provisions of the Act of August 24, 1935 (40 U.S.C. 270a).

"(b) Payments under any contract under this title may be made in advance or by way of reimbursement and in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this title.

"(c)(1) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, the Secretary may, at the request, or with the consent, of an urban Indian organization, revise or amend any contract made by the Secretary with such organization under this title as necessary to carry out the purposes of this title.

"(2) Whenever an urban Indian organization requests the Secretary to assume responsibility for any contract entered into under this title, the Secretary shall assume such responsibility not more than one hundred and twenty days from the date of the request by the organization or at such later date as may be mutually agreed to by the Secretary and the organization.

"(d) The Secretary may permit an urban Indian organization performing a contract under this title to use federally owned facilities within the Secretary's jurisdiction under such terms and conditions as may be jointly agreed upon for the use and maintenance of such facilities.

"(e) Contracts with urban Indian organizations and regulations adopted under this title shall assure the fair and uniform provision to urban Indians of services and assistance under such contracts by such organizations.

"REPORTS

"SEC. 507. (a) For each fiscal year in which an urban Indian organization receives or expends funds under a contract under this title, such organization shall submit to the Secretary a quarterly report including—

"(1) in the case of a contract under section 503, information gathered under paragraphs (10) and (11) of subsection (a) of such section;

"(2) information on activities conducted by the organization under the contract;

"(3) an accounting of the amounts and purposes for which Federal funds were expended; and

"(4) such other information as the Secretary may request.

"(b) The report required under subsection (a) and information production required under sections 503(a) and 504(b) of any urban Indian organization under a contract under this title shall be subject to audit by the Secretary and the Comptroller General of the United States.

"(c) The Secretary shall allow as a cost of any contract entered into under section 503 the cost of an annual private audit conducted by a certified public accountant.

"REPORTS OF THE SECRETARY

"SEC. 508. (a) Within one year after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall submit a report to Congress which assesses the health status and health care needs of urban Indians. The report shall—

"(1) specify the health care needs of urban Indians and, with respect to urban centers for which urban Indian organizations have entered into contracts under section 503, whether additional health care personnel are required to meet such needs;

"(2) make recommendations for additional programs, technical assistance, funding, and additional health care personnel to meet the health care needs of Indians in urban centers; and

"(3) contain recommendations for legislation and administrative actions to achieve the national goal of raising the health status of urban Indians to a level equal to that of the general population.

"(b) Not later than April 1, 1987, the Secretary, acting through the Service and with the assistance of the urban Indian organizations that have entered into contracts under this title, shall review the programs established under this title and submit to Congress an assessment thereof and recommendations for any further legislative efforts the Secretary deems necessary to meet the purpose of this title.

"AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 509. There are authorized to be appropriated for contracts with urban Indian organizations under this title $12,000,000 for fiscal year 1985, $13,200,000 for fiscal year 1986, and $14,400,000 for fiscal year 1987.".

SEC. 8. (a) Title VI is amended to read as follows:

"TITLE VI—OFFICE OF INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE

"OFFICE OF INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE

"SEC. 601. (a) In order to more effectively and efficiently carry out the responsibilities, authorities, and functions of the United States to provide health care services to Indians and Indian tribes, as is or may be hereafter be provided by Federal statute or treaties, there is established within the Public Health Service of the Department of Health and Human Services an Office of Indian Health Service which shall be under the direction of an Administrator for Indian Health who shall report directly to the Assistant Secretary for Health.

"(b) All health programs and authorities under which health care is provided to Indians based upon their status as Indians which are administered by the Secretary, including but not limited to programs, functions, responsibilities, and authorities under this Act; the Act of November 2, 1921 (25 U.S.C. 13); the Act of August 5, 1954 (68 Stat. 674), as amended; the Act of August 16, 1957 (71 Stat. 370); the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638); and the Act of December 5, 1979 (93 Stat. 1056), shall be delegated solely to the Administrator for Indian Health.

"(c) In the implementation of the delegation described in subsection (b), the Administrator for Indian Health shall undertake the administrative and financial management, personnel, contracting, granting, management and program policy development and planning, evaluation, and public information functions and shall receive compensation at the rate now or hereafter provided by law for Assistant Surgeon Generals corresponding with the grade of Major General or the Civil Service equivalent.

"(d) All personnel, records, equipment facilities, and interests in property that were administered by the Indian Health Service on the date of enactment of this section shall be transferred to the Office of Indian Health Service. There shall also be allocated to the Office of Indian Health Service budget and personnel ceiling authority necessary to implement fully the delegation described in subsection (b) and the functions described in subsection (c).

"(e) The requirements of this section shall be met within one hundred and eighty days after the date of the enactment of this section. The Secretary is authorized to waive the Indian preference laws on a case-by-case basis for temporary transfers, under existing authority, involved in implementing this section.

"BUDGET ESTIMATE

"SEC. 602. The Director of the Service shall prepare and submit, directly to the President for review and transmittal to Congress, an annual budget estimate for programs of the Indian Health Service and shall receive directly from the President and the Office of Management and Budget all funds appropriated for obligation and expenditure by the Service.".

SEC. 9. (a) Section 704 is amended by inserting "(a)" after "SEC. 704." and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) The Secretary may enter into leases, contracts, and other legal agreements with Indian tribes, tribal organizations, or Indian organizations which hold—

"(1) title to;

"(2) a leasehold interest in; or

"(3) a beneficial interest in (where title is held by the United States in trust for the benefit of a tribe); facilities used for the administration and delivery of health services by the Indian Health Service or by programs operated by tribes, tribal organizations, or Indian organizations, to compensate such tribes, tribal organizations, or Indian organizations for costs associated with the use of such facilities for such purposes. Such costs include rent, depreciation based on the useful life of the building, principal and interest paid or accrued, operation and maintenance expenses, and other expenses determined by regulation to be allowable.".

(b) Section 705 is amended to read as follows:

"COMPETITIVE PROCUREMENT

"SEC. 705. (a) The Secretary, acting through the Service, may waive any statutory or administrative requirement for competitive procurement of health services if, in the judgment of the Chief Medical Officer who will have jurisdiction over such health services, such competitive procurement would compromise the accessibility, quality, and continuity of health services or would not result in any appreciable competition or savings.

"(b) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall reject any bid submitted under any statutory or administrative requirement for competitive procurement of health services upon the certification of the Chief Medical Officer who will have jurisdiction over such health services that acceptance of such bid would compromise the accessibility, quality, and continuity of health services.".

SEC. 10. Section 706 is amended to read as follows:

"JUVENILE ALCOHOL AND DRUG ABUSE

"SEC. 706. (a) Within ninety days of the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Education to coordinate the efforts of their Departments related to alcohol and drug abuse among Indian juveniles. The agreement shall provide for the identification and coordination of available resources and programs to combat Indian juvenile alcohol and drug abuse through prevention, education, counseling, and referral. The Secretary shall publish such agreement in the Federal Register within one hundred and twenty days of the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984.

"(b) The Secretary, acting through the Service and in consultation and cooperation with the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Education, shall develop a program to provide training in—

"(1) preventive education;

"(2) the identification of juvenile alcohol and drug abusers; and

"(3) counseling techniques on juvenile alcohol and drug abuse.

Such training shall be provided to elementary and secondary teachers and counselors—

"(A) in schools operated by the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

"(B) in schools operated under contract with the Bureau of Indian Affairs; and

"(C) in public schools on or near Indian reservations (including public schools in Oklahoma and Alaska with significant numbers of Indian students).

The Service may provide such training either directly or through contract with qualified private or public entities.

"(c) The Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Bureau of Indian Affairs and in consultation with the Service, shall review existing literature and reports on juvenile alcohol and drug abuse, including studies and school curricula and any other material relevant to an understanding of the problem of juvenile alcohol and drug abuse, and shall make available the results of such review to the schools described in subsection (b).

"(d) The Secretary shall establish an Office of Alcohol and Drug Abuse within the Service which shall be responsible for the administration of the programs and authorities of the Service in the field of alcohol and drug abuse. The Office shall have assigned to it a number of full-time equivalent positions which shall be not less than eight full-time equivalent positions in the Central Office of Service and one full-time equivalent position in each Service area and Program Office.

"(e) For the purpose of implementing subsection (b), there is authorized to be appropriated $1,500,000 for each of the fiscal years 1985, 1986, and 1987.".

SEC. 11. Section 707 is amended to read as follows:

"NUCLEAR RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT HEALTH HAZARDS

"SEC. 707. (a) The Secretary, acting through the Service, shall undertake to enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a study of the health hazards to Indian miners of nuclear materials and Indians on or near Indian reservations and in Indian communities as a result of nuclear resource development. Such study shall include—

"(1) an evaluation of the nature and extent of nuclear resource development related health problems currently exhibited among Indians and the causes of such health problems;

"(2) an analysis of the potential effect of ongoing and future nuclear resource development on Indians living in or near Indian reservations and communities;

"(3) an evaluation of the types and nature of activities, practices, and conditions causing or affecting such health problems, including uranium mining and milling, uranium mine tailing deposits, nuclear powerplant operation and construction, and nuclear waste disposal;

"(4) a summary of any findings and recommendations provided in Federal and State studies, reports, investigations, and inspections during the ten years prior to the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984 that directly or indirectly relate to the activities, practices, and conditions affecting the health or safety of such Indians; and

"(5) an evaluation of the efforts that have been made by Federal and State agencies and mining and milling companies to effectively carry out an education program for such Indians regarding the health and safety hazards of nuclear resource development.

To assist the Academy in conducting such study, the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior shall furnish at the request of the Academy any information which the Academy deems necessary for the purpose of conducting the study. In addition, they shall cooperate with the Academy in obtaining information necessary to carry out the intent of the study.

"(b) Upon the completion of such study, the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall, on the basis of the results of such study, develop a health care plan to address the health problems studied under subsection (a). The plan shall include—

"(1) methods for diagnosing and treating Indians currently exhibiting nuclear resource development related health problems;

"(2) preventive care for Indians who may be exposed to such health hazards as a result of nuclear resource development, including the monitoring of the health of individuals who have or may have been exposed to excessive amounts of radiation, or otherwise affected by nuclear development activities that have had or could have a serious impact upon the health of such individuals; and

"(3) a program of education for Indians who, by reason of their work or geographic proximity to nuclear development activities, may experience health problems.

"(c) The Secretary shall submit to Congress the results of the study conducted under subsection (a) no later than eighteen months after the date of enactment of the Indian Health Care Amendments of 1984. The health care plan prepared under subsection (b) shall be submitted to Congress no later than one year after the date the results of the study are submitted. Such report shall include recommended activities for implementation of the plan, as well as an evaluation of any activities previously undertaken by the Service to address such health problems.

"(d) For the purpose of conducting the study required by subsection (a) of this section, there is authorized to be appropriated $350,000.".

SEC. 12. Section 708 is amended to read as follows:

"SERVICE TO INELIGIBLE PERSONS

"SEC. 708. (a)(1) The Secretary, acting through the Service, may provide or authorize the provision of medical care, treatment, or benefits by the Service to persons who are not otherwise eligible for such services in health facilities maintained by the Service or contracted under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (Public Law 93-638) or through contract health care services, subject to the limitations of this section.

"(2) Persons eighteen years of age or under who are the natural or adopted children (including foster- and step-children), legal wards, or orphans of an eligible Indian person and who are not otherwise eligible for the medical care, treatment, or benefits of the Service shall be eligible for all such services on the same basis and subject to the same rules as apply to eligible Indians until their nineteenth birthday. The existing and potential medical needs of such persons shall be taken into consideration by the Service in determining the need for, or the allocation of, its health resources. Any such person who has been determined to be legally incompetent prior to their nineteeth birthday shall remain eligible for such services until one year after the date such disability has been removed.

"(3) Non-Indian spouses of eligible Indians or spouses of Indian descent who are not otherwise eligible for the medical care, treatment, or benefits of the Service shall not be eligible for such service unless they are made eligible, as a class, by an appropriate resolution of the governing body of the relevant Indian tribe. The medical needs of persons made eligible under this subsection shall not be taken into consideration by the Service in determining the need for, or allocation of, its health resources.

"(b)(1)(A) At the request of the Indian tribe or tribes included within the service area of any service unit of the Service, the Secretary may authorize the medical care and treatment of otherwise ineligible persons residing within such service area in health facilities maintained and operated by the Service.

"(B) Persons receiving medical care and treatment under this subsection shall be liable for the payment for such services under a fee schedule adopted by the Secretary which, in the judgment of the Secretary, shall result in reimbursement in an amount not less than the actual cost of providing the service. Fees collected under this subsection, including medicare or medicaid reimbursements under titles VIII and XIX of the Social Security Act, shall be credited to the account of the facility providing the service and shall be used solely for the provision of health services within that facility.

"(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), where the governing body of an Indian tribe or, in the case of a multi-tribal service area, any Indian tribe revokes its concurrence to the provision of services under paragraph (1)(A), the Secretary's authority to provide such service shall terminate at the end of the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which such revocation was adopted.

"(B) In California, in the case of a multi-tribal service area, unless 51 percent or more of the Indian tribes in the Service area revoke their concurrence to the provision of services under paragraph (1)(A), the authority to provide such service shall not be affected.

"(3)(A) In the case of health facilities operated directly by the Service, such medical care and treatment may be provided under this subsection only where the Secretary and the affected tribe or tribes have jointly determined that—

"(i) the provision of such service will not result in a denial or diminution of services to eligible Indian persons; and

"(ii) there is no reasonable alternative health facility or service, within or without the service unit area, available to meet the medical needs of such persons.

"(B) In the case of health facilities operated under contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act, the governing body of the Indian tribe or tribal organization providing health services under a contract with the Service under the Indian Self-Determination Act is authorized determine the eligibility for such services of persons who are not otherwise eligible for such services. Such determination shall be in accordance with the requirements of this section.

"(4) The Service may continue to provide medical care, treatment, and benefits to persons not provided service under subsections (a) or (b) to achieve stability in a medical emergency, to prevent the spread of a communicable disease or otherwise deal with a public health hazard; to provide care to non-Indian women pregnant with an eligible Indian's child for the duration of the pregnancy through post partum, or to immediate family members of an eligible person where such care is directly related to the treatment of the eligible person.

"(5) Hospital privileges in health facilities operated and maintained by the Service or operated under contract under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act may be extended to non-Service health care practitioners under a plan adopted under subsection (d) of this section. Such non-Service health care practitioners shall not be regarded as employees of the Federal Government for purposes of sections 1346(b) and 2671 et seq. of title 28 of the United States Code relating to Federal tort claims even if providing services to eligible persons as a part of the condition under which privileges are extended. This subsection shall not affect the conditions under which ineligible persons may be provided health services at Service facilities in cases where non-Service health care practitioners may be extended hospital privileges in Service facilities under any other provision of law.".

SEC. 13. Section 709 is amended to read as follows:

"ELIGIBILITY OF CALIFORNIA INDIANS

"SEC. 709. The following California Indians shall be eligible for care from the Service:

"(1) Members of federally recognized tribes.

"(2) All Indians of California as defined in the first section of the Act of May 18, 1928 (25 U.S.C. 651).

"(3) Indians who hold trust interests in public domain, national forest, or Indian reservation allotments in California.

"(4) Indians in California who were listed on the plans for distribution of the assets of California rancherias and reservations under the Act of August 18, 1958 (72 Stat. 619), and their descendants. This paragraph shall cease to be effective after October 1, 1988.".

SEC. 14. Section 710 is amended to read as follows:

"REDUCTION AND CONTROL OF HEPATITIS-B IN ALASKA

"SEC. 710. The Secretary, acting through the Indian Health Service and the centers for Disease Control, shall, in cooperation with the State of Alaska, provide for screening and reporting of cases of hepatitis-B among Native Alaskans and vaccinations to prevent and control the incidence of hepatitis-B among Native Alaskans. Not later than December 30, 1986, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report detailing the activities carried out under this section and outlining what subsequent actions should be taken to continue to control the incidence of hepatitis-B in Alaska, together with a recommended schedule for the completion of such actions.".

SEC. 15. Title VII is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sections:

"CALIFORNIA AS A CONTRACT HEALTH SERVICE DELIVERY AREA

"SEC. 712. (a) The State of California, excluding the counties of Alameda, Contra Costa, Los Angeles, Marin, Orange, Sacramento, San Francisco, San Mateo, and Santa Clara, shall be designated as a contract health service delivery area by the Service for the purpose of providing contract health services to Indians in such State.

"(b) This section shall take effect October 1, 1984.

"CONTRACT HEALTH FACILITIES

"SEC. 713. (a) The Indian Health Service shall provide funds for health care programs and facilities operated by tribes and tribal organizations under contracts with the Indian Health Service under the Indian Self-Determination Act—

"(1) for the maintenance and repair of clinics owned or leased by such tribes or tribal organizations,

"(2) for employee training,

"(3) for cost-of-living increases for employees, and

"(4) for any other expenses relating to the provision of health services, on the same basis as such funds are provided to programs and facilities operated directly by the Indian Health Service.

"(b) In the case of eligible California Indians as defined by section 709 of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, as amended by this Act, who are not members of Indian tribes or eligible for membership in such tribes, the Secretary may not enter into a contract to provide health services to such Indians under section 103 of the Indian Self-Determination Act if 51 percent of the adult population of such Indians object prior to the award of such contract either individually or through any legally established organization of Indians, in which case the Secretary, acting through the Service, shall make alternate arrangements for the delivery of health care services to such Indians. Nothing in this section shall be construed to restrict or interfere with the right of any Indian tribe to contract for health services on behalf of its own members.

"NATIONAL HEALTH SERVICE CORPS

"SEC. 714. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall not—

"(1) remove a member of the National Health Service Corps from a health facility operated by the Indian Health Service or by a tribe or tribal organization under contract with the Indian Health Service under the Indian Self-Determination Act; or

"(2) withdraw funding used to support such member unless the Secretary, acting through the Service, has ensured that the Indians receiving services from such member will experience no reduction in services. This section shall take effect as of October 1, 1983.

"RESTRICTIONS ON THE USE OF INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE APPROPRIATIONS

"SEC. 715. Unless otherwise specifically provided, any restriction placed on the use of appropriations for Indian health services shall not be interpreted—

"(1) to apply to the use of funds other than such appropriated funds by an entity with a contract with the Indian Health Service;

"(2) to prohibit the support of litigation with such other funds; or

"(3) to prohibit the promotion of public support for or opposition to any legislative proposal with such other funds.

"INFANT AND MATERNAL MORTALITY

"SEC. 716. Not later than January 1, 1985, the Secretary shall develop and begin implementation of a plan to achieve the following objectives by January 1, 1990:

"(1) Reduction of the rate of Indian infant mortality in each Area Office of the Service to twelve deaths per one thousand live births or to that of the United States population, whichever is lower.

"(2) Reduction of the rate of maternal mortality in each Area Office of the Service to five deaths per one hundred thousand live births or to that of the United States population, whichever is lower.

The Secretary shall report to Congress on January 1 of each year after fiscal year 1985 on the progress that has been made toward achieving such objectives.

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 717. As used in this Act—

"(1) 'Area Office' means an administrative entity including a program office, within the Indian Health Service through which services and funds are provided to the service units within a defined geographical area; and

"(2) 'service unit' means an administrative entity within the Indian Health Service or a tribe or tribal organization operating health care programs or facilities with funds from the Service under the Indian Self-Determination Act through which services are provided, directly and by contract, to the eligible Indian population within a defined geographic area.".

Mr. WEAVER (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment in the nature of a substitute be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitue offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER].

The amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "An act to reauthorize and amend the Indian Health Care Improvement Act, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON S. 2166

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House insist on its amendment to the Senate bill, S. 2166, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: From the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, Messrs. UDALL, MCNULTY, GEJDENSON, RICHARDSON, YOUNG of Alaska, and MCCAIN; and from the Committee on Energy and Commerce, Messrs. DINGELL, WAXMAN, SCHEUER, LUKEN, BROYHILL, and MADIGAN.

There was no objection.

EXTENDING LEASE TERMS OF OIL AND GAS LEASE NUMBERED U-39711

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S.

1770) to extend the lease terms of Federal oil and gas lease numbered U-39711, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like an explanation from the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. WEAVER. If the gentleman will yield, this is identical to the House-passed bill. We simply did not couple up with the Senate bill in the same situation as occurred in the bill just previously acted upon. It is Mr. MARRIOTT's bill to S. 1770, to extend oil and gas lease U-39711.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 1770

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, notwithstanding any decision to the contrary heretofore made by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States or his authorized agents or representatives, United States oil and gas lease numbered U-39711 shall be held not to have terminated by operation of law or otherwise on January 30, 1980, but shall be deemed to be in full force and effect as having been capable of producing oil or gas prior to the expiration date of the lease and the term of said lease shall be extended from that date forward for so long after the date of enactment of this Act as oil or gas is produced in paying quantities. The lessee shall be granted six months to install production equipment and facilities on said lease: Provided, That within thirty days after the receipt of written notice from the Secretary of the Interior the lessee shall tender payment of back rentals at the rate of not less than $5 per acre per year. Notice shall be given by the Secretary within thirty days after the effective date of this Act. The Secretary shall include in the reinstated lease a future rental requirement of not less than $5 per acre per year and a future royalty rate requirement of not less than 16⅔ per centum: Provided, however, That except as specifically modified herein as to such lease, all other provisions of the Mineral Lands Leasing Act of 1920, as amended, shall be applicable as to such lease.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

WASHINGTON, DC,
September 21, 1984.

Hon. THOMAS P. O'NEILL, Jr.,
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 5, Rule III of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, I have the honor to transmit sealed envelopes received from the White House as follows:

(For message, see proceedings of the Senate of today, Monday, September 24, 1984.)

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5, rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote of the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken on Tuesday, September 25, 1984.

PROVIDING FOR DISTRIBUTION OF CERTAIN FUNDS TO WYANDOTTE TRIBE OF OKLAHOMA

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 6221) to provide for the use and distribution of certain funds awarded to the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 6621

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

ABROGATION OF PRIOR PLAN; REPEAL OF PRIOR DISTRIBUTION OF JUDGMENT FUNDS ACT

SECTION 1. (a) Notwithstanding the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the use and distribution of funds appropriated in satisfaction of certain judgments of the Indian Claims Commission and the United States Court of Claims, and for other purposes." and approved October 19, 1973 (25 U.S.C. 1401, et seq.), or any other regulation or plan promulgated by the Secretary pursuant to such Act, the funds appropriated in satisfaction of the judgments awarded to the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma in—

(1) docket numbered 139 before the Indian Claims Commission,

(2) docket numbered 141 before the United States Court of Claims, and

(3) dockets numbered 212 and 213 before the United States Claims Court,

(other than funds appropriated for the payment of attorney fees or litigation expenses) and any interest or investment income accrued or accruing (on or before the date of the allocation of funds pursuant to section 3(b)) on the amount of such judgments shall be used and distributed as provided in this Act.

(b) The Act entitled "An Act to provide for the use and distribution of funds to the Wyandot Tribe of Indians in docket 139 before the Indian Claims Commission and docket 141 before the United States Court of Claims, and for other purposes." and approved December 20, 1982, is hereby repealed.

PREPARATION OF THE ROLL OF MEMBERS OF THE WYANDOTTE TRIBE OF OKLAHOMA AND THE ROLL OF ABSENTEE WYANDOTTES

SEC. 2. (a) In accordance with such procedures as may be adopted by the tribal governing body of the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma and approved by the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Secretary"), such tribal governing body shall take such steps as may be necessary to ensure that the roll of members of such tribe includes all members of the tribe born on or before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall prepare a roll of all individuals who—

(A) were born on or before the date of the enactment of this Act,

(B) are alive on the date of the enactment of this Act, and

(C) are listed in, or are lineal descendants of individuals listed in, the compilation entitled "Census of Absentee or Citizen Wyandotte Indians" compiled by Joel T. Olive and dated November 18, 1896 (as corrected by W. A. Richards, Commissioner of the General Land Office, in a circular dated October 28, 1904).

(2) Applications for enrollment of individuals under paragraph (1) may be field with the Secretary (in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe) before the end of the 90-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3)(A) The Secretary shall determine whether an individual who filed an application under paragraph (2) is eligible to be enrolled under paragraph (1). The initial determination of the Secretary with respect to the enrollment of any such individual shall be made before the end of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act. The final determination of the Secretary with respect to the enrollment of any such individual shall not be reviewable in any court.

(B) Any review by the Secretary of an initial determination of the Secretary with respect to the enrollment of any individual under paragraph (1) shall not delay the allocation of funds pursuant to section 3(b) or any distribution of funds under section 4 or 5.

(4) The Secretary shall publish, in the Federal Register and in such local media as the Secretary may determine to be appropriate, notice of—

(A) the provisions of this Act that provide for a per capita distribution to Absentee Wyandottes and their descendants,

(B) the preparation of the roll described in paragraph (1), and

(C) the procedures established pursuant to paragraph (2) for filing applications for enrollment on such roll and the final date on which any applications may be filed with the Secretary.

ALLOCATION OF FUNDS TO THE WYDANDOTTE TRIBE OF OKLAHOMA AND THE ABSENTEE WYANDOTTES

SEC. 3. (a) Before the end of the 90-day period beginning on the later of—

(1) the date by which any action required under section 2(a) relating to the roll of members of the tribe is completed, or

(2) the date on which the roll prepared by the Secretary pursuant to section 2(b) is completed, the Secretary shall divide the funds described in section 1 between the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma and the Absentee Wyandottes (as a group) in the manner provided in subsection (b).

(b) The Secretary shall allocate the Wyandotte Tribe and to the Absentee Wyandottes an amount which bears the same proportion to the total amount of the funds described in section 1 as the number of individuals listed on the roll referred to in subsection (a)(1) or (a)(2), as the case may be, who are living on the date of the enactment of this Act bears to the sum of the numbers of individuals on each such roll who are living on such date.

DISTRIBUTION TO ABSENTEE WYANDOTTES

SEC. 4. The funds allocated to the Absentee Wyandottes and their descendants pursuant to section 3(b) shall be distributed in the form of per capita payments, in sums as equal as possible, to each individual listed on the roll prepared by the Secretary to section 2(b).

DISTRIBUTION TO WYANDOTTE TRIBE OF OKLAHOMA

SEC. 5. (a) Eighty percent of the funds allocated to the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma pursuant to section 3(b) shall be distributed in the form of per capita payments, in sums as equal as possible, to each member of such Tribe who—

(1) was born on or before the date of the enactment of this Act, and

(2) is living on such date.

(b) Twenty percent of the funds allocated to the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma pursuant to section 3(b) shall be used and distributed in accordance with the following general plan:

(1) A sum of $100,000 of such funds shall be used for the purchase of real property which shall be held in trust by the Secretary for the benefit of such Tribe.

(2) The amount of such funds in excess of $100,000 shall be held in trust by the Tribal Business Committee of such Tribe for the benefit of such Tribe.

(3) Any interest of investment income accruing on the funds described in paragraph (2) may be used by the Tribal Business Committee of such Tribe for any of the following purposes:

(A) Education of the members of such Tribe (including grants-in-aid or scholarships).

(B) Medical or health needs of the members of such Tribe (including prosthetics).

(C) Economic development for the benefit of such Tribe.

(D) Land purchasers for the use and benefit of such Tribe.

(E) Investments for the benefit of such Tribe.

(F) Tribal cemetery maintenance.

(G) Tribal building maintenance.

(H) Tribal administration.

(c)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) and notwithstanding any other provision of law, the approval of the Secretary for any payment or distribution by the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma of any funds described in subsection (b) (or or after the date such funds are allocated pursuant to section 3(b)) shall not be required and the Secretary shall have no further trust responsibility for the investment, supervision, administration, or expenditure of such funds.

(2) The Secretary may take such action as the Secretary may determine to be necessary and appropriate to enforce the requirements of this Act.

MANNER OF PER CAPITA DISTRIBUTION; TREATMENT OF AMOUNTS PAID OR DISTRIBUTED

SEC. 6. (a) Any payment of a per capita share of funds to which a living, competent adult is entitled under this Act shall be paid directly to such adult.

(b) Any per capita share of funds to which a deceased individual is entitled under this Act shall be paid, and the beneficiaries thereof determined, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

(c) Any per capita share of funds to which a legally incompetent individual or a minor is entitled under this Act shall be paid in accordance with the requirements of section 3(b)(3) of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the use and distribution of funds appropriated in satisfaction of certain judgments of the Indian Claims Commission and the United States Court of Claims, and for other purposes." and approved October 19, 1973 (25 U.S.C. 1401, et seq.).

(d) None of the funds distributed per capita under this Act or made available under this Act for any tribal program shall be—

(1) subject to Federal, State, or local income taxes, or

(2) considered as income or resources in determining either eligibility for, or the amount of assistance under—

(A) the Social Security Act, or

(B) in the case of any per capita share of $2,000 or less, any other Federal, State, or local programs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER].

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 6221, cosponsored by Congressmen SYNAR and WINN, is a bill to provide for the use and distribution of judgment funds awarded to the Wyandotte Indian Tribe by the Indian Claims Commission and the Court of Claims.

The bill covers four dockets totaling about $3 million. The funds were awarded to the tribe for lands ceded to the United States by the tribe in the 19th century. Funds to cover these awards have already been appropriated and therefore the bill would not cost the United States any additional moneys.

The bill would distribute these awards between two groups: The Wyandotte Indian Tribe of Oklahoma and a group of Wyandotte descendants also known as the Absentee Wyandottes.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 6221. I urge my colleagues to vote for the legislation. The bill is noncontroversial, and it is supported by the tribe, it is supported by the administration. To my knowledge, as the subcommittee chairman just said, there is no opposition to the legislation. I urge the passage of the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. SYNAR].

Mr. SYNAR. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to join with my colleagues and ask the support of all our colleagues on this important piece of legislation.

I want to personally thank my staff, John Hollar, and the Interior Committee staff for this expeditious hearing on this bill. I also want to thank Mr. YOUNG of Alaska, Mr. WEAVER, and Mr. UDALL for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to provide for the distribution of judgment funds plus accrued interest resulting from four dockets to the members of the Wyandotte Tribe of Oklahoma and to the lineal descendants of that tribe.

This bill would repeal Public Law 97-371, which allocated previously appropriated funds to the Wyandotte Tribe and Absentee Wyandottes. The formula for distribution of these funds, as contained in that act, has been determined to be inequitable by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Wyandotte Tribe, and many Absentee Wyandottes.

The bill contains a new distribution formula which would provide for the fair distribution of judgment funds between the Wyandotte Tribe and Absentee Wyandottes. In addition, this bill provides for the distribution of funds appropriated under two additional dockets awarded since the passage of the previous act.

This bill provides for 80 percent of the funds to be distributed on a per capita basis. The remaining 20 percent will be made available to the tribe for the purchase of property and for other tribal development purposes. In the interest of increasing tribal self-sufficiency, the expenditure of these funds will not require the approval of the Secretary.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DOWNEY of New York). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 6221.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVING IMPEDIMENT TO OIL AND GAS LEASING OF CERTAIN FEDERAL LANDS IN CORPUS CHRISTI, TX, AND PORT HUENEME, CA

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5787) to remove an impediment to oil and gas leasing of certain Federal lands in Corpus Christi, TX, and Port Hueneme, CA, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5787

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, notwithstanding section 3 of the Mineral Leasing Act for Acquired Lands (30 U.S.C. 352), the fact that acquired lands are incorporated into and a part of the city of Corpus Christi, Texas, or the city of Port Hueneme, California, shall not prevent the leasing of such lands: Provided, That prior to any such leasing the Department of the Interior must do a detailed re-evaluation to determine if the lands are within a known geologic structure by the Secretary of the Interior for oil or gas exploration and extraction, and such lands shall be available for such leasing as if they were not in an incorporated city, except that no such leasing activity shall proceed without the permission of the appropriate city.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER].

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5787, as amended, waives a restriction to oil and gas leasing of certain federally acquired lands in Corpus Christi, TX and Port Hueneme, CA. There is a provision in section 3 of the Mineral Leasing Act for Acquired Lands which prohibits the issuance of leases on acquired lands which are located within the boundaries of incorporated cities.

The cities of Corpus Christi, TX, and Port Hueneme, CA, want leasing on naval air station lands within their boundaries, and passage of this legislation would allow the Secretary to lease those acquired lands with the permission of the cities. All other provisions of the Mineral Leasing Act still apply, including the consent of the Navy Department.

The subject tract in Corpus Christi is within a known geologic structure which would require a competitive lease sale. A known geologic structure has not been formally established for the Port Hueneme area. The total acreage of acquired lands which could be available for leasing in Corpus Christi is 2,810.90 acres and in Port Hueneme, is 1,639 acres.

Most of the committee's debate focused on the method of leasing for the Port Hueneme area, that is, competitive bid versus noncompetitive simultaneous leasing. The committee recognizes the controversial nature of this issue and in an effort to not prejudice future legislative consideration of the oil and gas leasing system, agreed to an amendment which allows leasing provided that a detailed reevaluation is done by the Secretary to determine if the lands are within a known geologic structure [KGS]. After the reevaluation, if the area is within a KGS, leasing would be on a competitive-bid basis; if the lands are deemed not to be within a KGS, leasing would be on a noncompetitive basis.

The committee report makes special note of some of the difficulties surrounding known geologic structures and competitive exploration. It is the committee's hope that the reevaluation of the lands by the Secretary prior to leasing will be detailed enough to assure an accurate classification of the areas.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the passage of H.R. 5787, as amended.

□ 1240

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WEAVER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5787, as amended, to remove an impediment to oil and gas leasing of certain Federal lands in Corpus Christi, TX, and Port Hueneme, CA.

This legislation was jointly referred to the Committees on Armed Services and Interior and Insular Affairs. Under a unanimous consent request, the Armed Services Committee suspended its rules and reported this bill favorably to the House on September 20, 1984.

As amended, H.R. 5787 would permit the Secretary of the Interior to allow leasing for oil and gas exploration and extraction on certain Federal lands incorporated in the cities of Corpus Christi, TX, and Port Hueneme, CA. Such leases are presently not allowed on Federal lands located inside of incorporated cities. This legislation would require the approval of both the appropriate city as well as the head of the executive department having jurisdiction over such land.

Mr. Speaker, the Armed Services Committee fully supports this legislation and urges its approval.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H.R. 5787 and compliment the gentleman from Oregon and the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] for bringing this important legislation to the floor at this time, and I urge passage of the legislation.

● Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak on behalf of legislation which promises to provide much needed revenue to local governing units in part of my district, the 27th District of Texas, as well as to those local entities in the 21st District of California, a district represented by Congresswoman BOBBI FIEDLER, without costing the Federal Government one penny.

The legislation, H.R. 5787, removes an impediment to oil and gas leasing of certain Federal lands in Corpus Christi, TX, and Port Hueneme, CA. I proposed this bill for Ms. FIEDLER and myself to address a problem our two districts are encountering in taking advantage of a change in the Mineral Lands Leasing Act that occurred in 1981.

On July 20, 1981, the Department of the Interior through the Bureau of Land Management lifted an existing moratorium precluding oil and gas leasing on acquired military lands. Section 35 of the Mineral Lands Leasing Act as codified 30 U.S.C. 191, provides that one-half of the royalty revenue derived from production on leases governed by this act will be paid to the State. Subsequently, each State legislature may apportion its half of the revenue to those subdivisions that are socially or economically impacted by the development of these mineral leases.

This past year, the Texas State Legislature enacted a law that forwards these funds to the county which encompasses the Federal land in question. The county, in turn, is directed to distribute 50 percent of the revenue to school districts within the county, retain 35 percent for county use, and disburse the remaining 15 percent to the cities in the county.

The State of California has legislated a different formula for the dispersal of these revenues, but the need for this new source of revenue in each of our districts is unquestioned.

A problem developed, however, as we tried to take advantage of the lifting of the moratorium. It was learned that the military lands had been incorporated into the respective cities. Unfortunately, even though leasing on acquired military lands is now allowable, there also exists a regulation prohibiting leasing being issued in incorporated cities, towns, and villages.

In order to expedite this matter, I decided a bill addressing the specific problems in Ms. FIEDLER's district and my district was preferable to a generic bill seeking to strike the general provision banning oil and gas leasing on all Federal lands incorporated in cities.

Both cities affected by this legislation—Corpus Christi and Port Hueneme—have passed resolutions supporting this legislation. It also has support from the local school districts and commanders of the military facilities.

Mr. Speaker, in this period of fiscal restraint, local governing units can ill afford losing the revenue to private interests. Our Nation's schools are in dire need of upgrading. This bill would provide additional income for improvements to curriculum, facilities and personnel in the schools of Nueces County in my district and a much needed new source of revenue to the 21st District of California, and at no cost to the Federal Government.

Mr. Speaker, my distinguished colleagues, I strongly urge you vote for H.R. 5787, a bill that will benefit many and not add a dime to our deficit.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5787, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on H.R. 5787, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

DESIGNATING PARTS OF ILLINOIS AND OWYHEE RIVERS IN OREGON AS COMPONENTS OF THE WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS SYSTEM

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 416) to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Illinois River in Oregon and the Owyhee River in Oregon as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (82 Stat. 906 as amended; 16 U.S.C. 1271-1287), is further amended as follows:

In section 3(a) after the last paragraph insert the following new paragraphs:

"(52) Illinois, Oregon: The segment from the boundary of the Siskiyou National Forest downstream to its confluence with the Rogue River as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Illinois River Study' and is also part of a report entitled 'A Proposal: Illinois Wild and Scenic River'; to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture. After consultation with State and local governments and the interested public, the Secretary shall take such action as is required under subsection (b) of this section within one year from the date of enactment of this paragraph. For the purposes of this Act with respect to the river designated by this paragraph, effective October 1, 1984, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as necessary for the acquisition of lands or interests in lands, and such sums as necessary for development.

"(53) Owyhee, Oregon: The South Fork from the Idaho-Oregon State line downstream to Three Forks; the Owyhee River from Three Forks downstream to China Gulch; and the Owyhee River downstream from Crooked Creek to the Owyhee Reservoir as generally depicted on a map entitled 'Owyhee, Oregon' dated April 1984; all three segments to be administered as a wild river by the Secretary of the Interior. After consultation with State and local governments and the interested public, the Secretary shall take such appropriate action as is required under subsection (b) of this section within one year from the date of enactment of this paragraph. For the purposes of this Act with respect to the river designated by this paragraph, effective October 1, 1984, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as necessary for the acquisition of lands or interests and such sums as necessary for development.".

SEC. 2. Section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

"(90) The North Umpqua, Oregon. The segment from the Soda Springs Powerhouse to the confluence of Rock Creek. The provisions of section 7(a) shall apply to tributary Steamboat Creek in the same manner as such provisions apply to the rivers referred to in such section 7(a). The Secretary of Agriculture shall, in the Umpqua National Forest plan, provide that management practices for Steamboat Creek and its immediate environment conserve, protect, and enhance the anadromous fish habitat and population.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, S. 416, as amended, would amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act by designating a segment of the Illinois River and the Owyhee River both in the State of Oregon as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, to provide for study of the North Umpqua River, in Oregon as a possible addition to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System and to require the Forest Service and other Federal agencies to afford special consideration to Steamboat Creek, a tributary of the North Umpqua River.

Mr. Speaker, I know that our distinguished colleague from the State of Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] has spent a great deal of time, in fact several years, working to protect these magnificent rivers. I have visited some of them myself, not as much as I would like to, however, but I want to commend him for this legislation.

I am not going to go into detail at this point as to exactly what this river does. I presume he may want to do that but let me simply say that both the rivers that are designated and the rivers that would be studied by this system are exceptionally important additions to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System or potential additions, and it is with great satisfaction that I view this bill coming to us today, and I know it was not easy to work out and I think it is a real achievement.

The Department of Agriculture studied 88 miles of the Illinois River and sent the study report to Congress on October 13, 1978, recommending that 50.4 miles of the river be designated as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. The segment of the Illinois River proposed for designation flows through predominantly public lands within the Siskiyou National Forest and joins the existing Rogue Wild and Scenic River. The study identified high quality fisheries, scenic and recreation values associated with the Illinois River.

The National Park Service completed a study of the Owyhee River in 1979, and in October 1979 a report and draft legislation to designate the river as a component of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System were transmitted to the Congress. The 1979 report recommended designation of 178 miles in the States of Idaho and Oregon. It also recommended that the State of Oregon administer a 14-mile stretch from China Gulch to Crooked Creek in Oregon. Virtually all the private lands along the river in Oregon are within this 14-mile segment.

Mr. Speaker, it should be made clear that S. 416 would not designate that segment of the Owyhee River located in Idaho nor the 14-mile segment recommended for administration by the State of Oregon.

The North Umpqua River supports one of the largest populations of summer and winter steelhead in Oregon. The cool, clear waters of the North Umpqua and its tributaries provide vitally important spawning habitat for steelhead as well as other anadromous fish.

Steamboat Creek, a 19-mile tributary of the North Umpqua, is particularly important to the Umpqua fishery. More than 80 percent of the summer steelhead in the entire Umpqua River system spawn in Steamboat Creek which is located generally within the boundaries of the Umpqua National Forest.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of S. 416.

I will be happy to yield to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. WEAVER] for a question.

Mr. WEAVER. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me and I want to thank him for all the good work he has done. His perseverance as chairman and his patience and persistence have brought to this floor many fine and great bills, including this particular one.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have helped bring S. 416 to the House of Representatives today. It is an important bill that will add 162 miles to two of Oregon's finest rivers, the Illinois and the Owyhee, to the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

The Illinois for many years in my congressional district, one of the last pure, pristine rivers in Oregon, I have boated many times, is a magnificent river running through canyons in an area called the Kalmeopsis flowing into the Rogue River, and where the Rogue is a great river and one of the wild and scenic rivers of our country, you can see at their confluence the Illinois is clear; you can see to the botton as far as 40 feet, while the Rogue, developed more, is gray and muddy now, and we are here attempting to protect much of the Illinois River.

I think that it remains to be accomplished, the protection of a number of the major tributaries of the Illinois, particularly the Silver and Indigo Creeks, beautiful little streams that run into the Illinois and they should also be protected in the years to come as well as Bald Mountain, an area standing above the Illinois near the Silver and Indigo Creeks.

Bald Mountain, if this is protected, we can then accomplish the full protection of the Illinois and leave it for our children and theirs; a beautiful pristine river.

In addition, I am proud to say that we have in the House added to this bill passed by the Senate protections for Steamboat Creek, a tributary of the North Umpqua, and Steamboat is the spawning ground for 80 percent of the Umpqua River system's summer steelhead population.

We have also included the North Umpqua itself as a wild and scenic study river.

This bill, including the Steamboat Creek language in the North Umpqua wild and scenic study, is a truly outstanding bill. I am pleased that Senator HATFIELD, our senior Senator was the sponsor in the Senate of this bill, and I urge my colleagues to join me in ensuring that these rivers receive the wild and scenic status they so richly deserve.

And now if you would allow me, I would like to enter into a brief colloquy with the gentleman from Ohio, the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. Speaker, livestock grazing and associated activities along the Owyhee River has caused damage to riparian vegetation and other environmental values. Although grazing will be allowed to continue along the wild and scenic segment and on surrounding plateaus, I expect that the BLM will be allowed to moderate grazing use as necessary in the Owyhee Canyon and on surrounding plateaus so as not to be detrimental to soil stability, vegetative patterns, wildlife distribution, water quality, or other environmental values.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Yes; your understanding is correct. As on all public lands, grazing must be managed to prevent overgrazing and to ensure the long-term productivity and environmental quality necessary for sound multiple use as the Federal Land Policy and Management Act requires.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify a point for the record about S. 416. The BLM is currently conducting a wilderness study of 374,600 acres in the Owyhee Canyonlands and an additional 378,600 acres along the Owyhee in Oregon will be studied for wilderness in a statewide EIS due in 1985. Is my understanding correct, Mr. Speaker, that the designation of the Owyhee as a wild and scenic river is not intended to adversely impact the Owyhee Wilderness studies or future congressional wilderness designation in the region?

Mr. SEIBERLING. Yes; the gentleman from Oregon is correct. After the BLM wilderness study is completed, Congress will review the BLM's recommendations and consider action to designate wilderness in the Owyhee Canyon lands.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WEAVER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

□ 1250

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I apologize. This is about the most disorganized debate today I have ever heard in my life. I can tell you that right now. For one thing, the gentleman from Oregon entered into a colloquy that I believe this gentleman was going to enter into with the chairman, and the chairman would then have the right answer, but gave the right answer to the gentleman from Oregon, and now is going to come back with another colloquy. This is very interesting.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I will gladly yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, if the other gentleman from Oregon will ask me the questions, I will give him the right answers.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. That is what we are waiting for and I will gladly yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH], if I may, to ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] to enter into a colloquy concerning the area which these two rivers are in.

Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I thank you all for yielding, especially you, Mr. Chairman, and I would like to enter into a colloquy with the chairman.

This is a question that was posed, but in a little different form. Let me ask the chairman again, if I may: Livestock grazing and associated ranching activities take place on the public and private lands along the Owyhee Wild and Scenic River Corridor.

Is it the committee's understanding that ranching activities will continue to take place on private and public lands along the Owyhee Wild and Scenic River Corridor?

Mr. SEIBERLING. If the gentleman will yield, that is correct. Grazing will be permitted to the same extent that it is now.

Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH. I thank the gentleman. One other question, if I may. I have 2.

Is it the further understanding of the committee that existing uses of the grazing resources as well as stock watering are compatible with the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act?

Mr. SEIBERLING. If the gentleman will yield further, they are.

Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH. I thank the gentleman. One other question, Mr. Chairman.

Is it the committee's intention to insure that ranching activities, where compatible with the act, be allowed to continue? Specifically, these activities include grazing, stock watering, and repair, maintenance and replacement of structures associated with livestock operations.

Mr. SEIBERLING. If the gentleman will yield further, that is correct, subject to reasonable regulation by the managing agency.

Mr. ROBERT F. SMITH. Yes; of course. I think the gentleman and I suggest that S. 416 should be passed and I urge all Members to vote for it.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 416 and want to compliment the Members of the Oregon delegation, both ROBERT F. SMITH and DENNY SMITH, Mr. WEAVER, Senator HATFIELD, for their work on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation will add two river segments in the State of Oregon as designated units in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System. Approximately 50 miles of the Illinois and southwestern Oregon and 110 miles of the Owyhee River in eastern Oregon to the system. Both of these rivers have been studied by the National Park Service and U.S. Forest Service, respectively, and were recommended for inclusion into the system.

In addition, the bill, as amended during consideration in the Interior Committee, calls for a study of the North Umpqua River possible designation and requires that the provisions of section 7(A) of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers Act be applied to Steamboat Creek. The primary tributary of the North Umpqua. This amendment is intended to protect the migratory fish habitat and population in the area. At the same time, this legislation is not intended to preclude completion of several ongoing and planned timber sales along Steamboat Creek.

As was stated by Members from Oregon on this side of the aisle during consideration at the Oregon wilderness bill earlier this year, there is a strong concern in many areas dependent on the timber industry in Oregon that future timber harvesting is being significantly reduced by wilderness and wild and scenic river designations made this year. This point was made again during Interior Committee consideration of this bill by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. DENNY SMITH]. These concerns over the need to maintain a reasonable level of timber base is shared by several members of our committee, who intend to monitor closely timber sales and management practices to see that the assurances made during consideration of the Oregon wilderness and wild and scenic river bills are kept.

Based on these assurances, I support the passage of S. 416 and urge my colleagues to do the same.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 416, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "An Act to amend the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act be designating a segment of the Illinois River in Oregon and the Owyhee River in Oregon as components of the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks in the RECORD on S. 416, the Senate bill just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS WITHIN NELLIS AIR FORCE RANGE, NV

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 4932) to withdraw and reserve for the Department of the Air Force certain public lands within the Nellis Air Force Range, within Clark, Nye, and Lincoln Counties, NV, for use as a training and weapons testing area, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 4932

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. (a) Subject to valid existing rights, the lands depicted on the map entitled "Groom Mountain Addition to Nellis Air Force Range", dated September 1984, and aggregating approximately 89,600 acres in Lincoln County, Nevada, are hereby withdrawn from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws but not the mineral and geothermal leasing laws. Such lands are reserved for use by the Secretary of the Air Force—

(1) for training for electronic warfare, tactical maneuvering, and air support, and

(2) for other defense-related purposes consistent with, and involving no greater adverse impact on the withdrawn lands and their resources than, such training.

(b) The withdrawal provided by subsection (a) with regard to the lands described in subsection (a), and the right of their use by the Secretary of the Air Force for the purposes specified in that subsection, terminates on December 31, 1987.

SEC. 2. As soon as possible after the date of the enactment of this Act, but no later than January 1, 1987, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Air Force shall issue an environmental impact statement, consistent with requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, concerning continued or renewed withdrawal of the lands described in section 1(a) after December 31, 1987. Such statement shall include a description of and recommendations concerning measures to mitigate the impact of such continued or renewed withdrawal on opportunities for outdoor recreation, mineral exploration and development, and agriculture in Nevada. Such measures shall include possible acquisition by the Secretary of the Interior (through exchanges or otherwise) of lands in Nevada suitable for outdoor recreational uses and possible increased mineral, agricultural, or recreational use of lands in Nevada withdrawn for military purposes.

SEC. 3. (a) During the period of the withdrawal of the lands described in section 1(a), the Secretary of the Interior shall manage such lands pursuant to the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 and other applicable law, including this Act. All use of such lands, and the issuance of any lease, easement, right-of-way, or other authorization with regard to such lands—

(1) shall be secondary to the military use of such lands for the purposes specified in section 1, and

(2) may be authorized by the Secretary of the Interior only with the concurrence of the Secretary of Air Force.

(b) When military operations, public safety, or national security, as determined by the Secretary of the Air Force, require the closure to public use of any road, any trail, or any other portion of the lands withdrawn by this Act, the Secretary of the Air Force may take such action as the Secretary of the Air Force determines necessary or desirable to effect and maintain such closure. Such closures shall be limited to the minimum areas and periods which the Secretary of the Air Force determines are required for the purposes specified in this subsection. During such closures appropriate warning notices shall be kept posted and the Secretary of the Air Force shall take appropriate steps to notify the public concerning such closures.

(c)(1) As soon as possible after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall prepare and publish in the Federal Register a legal description of the lands withdrawn by this Act. The Secretary of the Air Force shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior for the costs of preparing and publishing such description.

(2) The map referred to in section 1(a) shall be on file and available for public inspection in the Office of the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Air Force in Washington, D.C., and Las Vegas and Carson City, Nevada.

(3) The withdrawal provided by this Act is not intended to—

(A) reserve or otherwise withdraw any water for use in connection with the purposes specified in section 1;

(B) affect in any manner the future appropriation, under State law, by the United States or others, of waters in, under, or upon the lands withdrawn by this Act; or

(C) affect any water rights acquired by the Secretary of the Air Force or any other person or entity before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(4) The withdrawal established by this Act may not be extended or renewed except by Act of Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I demand a second, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consumer to the gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS].

Mr. DELLUMS. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to express the support of the Armed Services Committee for H.R. 4932, as amended. As Members know, this bill was jointly referred to the Armed Services Committee and the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. The Subcommittee on Military Installations and facilities, which I chair, held a hearing on the bill and subsequently amended it in the exact fashion as it had been amended by the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

We are in agreement that this legislation is urgently needed to provide the Air Force with the legal authority to exercise control over the so-called Groom Mountain area in southern Nevada. The Air Force requires these lands as a buffer zone so that there is no public access to a highly classified area on the base. There is no question about this requirement. Therefore, we are in agreement with the Interior Committee when its states that this legislation should be enacted as quickly as possible.

It will give the Air Force more than 2 years to prepare an environmental impact statement on this area and an additional year to seek congressional approval for a withdrawal of public lands for a much longer term. This is a good interim solution. I urge adoption of H.R. 4932.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, H.R. 4932 is a simple bill but one that involves an important matter affecting the national defense. It deserves prompt approval.

The bill provides the Air Force temporary authority to control access to the Groom Mountain area in Nevada which overlooks lands already effectively off-limits to unauthorized public entry and where highly classified defense activities are currently underway. This authority the Air Force needs and very much wants to receive as soon as possible.

Having said that, however, let me put this bill into its proper context. H.R. 4932 as introduced dealt with the Nellis Air Force Range in Nevada, which encompasses an area of about 3 million acres established by reservations and withdrawals from the public domain going back to the 1940's. At that time, allocations of public lands were accomplished by the executive branch on its own initiative and without the requirement of congressional action.

Since then, subsequent legislation—and especially the Engle Act of 1958—have laid down new requirements. Under the Engle Act, new or renewed withdrawals of 5,000 acres of more of public lands for military purposes can only be done by act of Congress. The Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 added other requirements that must be met by those seeking such withdrawals.

More than 5 years ago, the Department of the Interior and the Air Force began preparations for congressional renewal of the withdrawal of the entire Nellis Air Force Range which is approximately 3 million acres. An environmental impact statement was prepared and was made available, in draft form, in July 1979. The Final EIS was filed in April 1981. However, H.R. 4932 was not introduced until this year.

After the Final EIS had been issued, but before the bill was introduced, responsible officials of the executive branch decided that it was necessary to extend Air Force control over the 89,600 acre Groom Mountain or Groom Range area. This area consist of public lands under BLM management, adjacent to the established Nellis complex, which includes some elevated terrain and is accessible by an old road leading to the vicinity of some mining properties.

The Groom Mountain area had not been withdrawn for military purposes, and until a couple of years ago, was open to public access and use. It still has never been legally withdrawn from public access.

In November 1981, the Air Force asked the BLM to modify the withdrawal application to include the Groom Mountain area, so that that area could be closed to public access and use. Today, the Air Force is already exercising effective control over the Groom Mountain area, despite its lack of legal authorization to do so. At our subcommittee's hearing, we were informed that this is being done because of decisions at the highest levels of the executive branch, and only because of the national security concerns that led to the request for withdrawal.

Without congressional approval, however, the Air Force is on tenuous legal grounds—to put it mildly. Naturally it very much wants the Congress to legalize its position in the Groom Mountain area. The bill before us withdraws those 89,600 acres for military use until December 31, 1987, and requires the Air Force to prepare an environmental impact statement not later than July 1, 1987.

The bill as it comes to the floor does not deal with the question of renewing the expired withdrawal for the existing Nellis Air Force Range complex. Renewal of this withdrawal is an important matter, and I believe that it is something that our committee should address in the next Congress. However, while in the meantime the former withdrawal has expired and the precise legal status of the lands in the existing Nellis complex is less than ideal, this is hardly a unique situation.

As a matter of fact, there are at least 10 military installations or facilities in Nevada and other States that were established on public lands by various withdrawal actions and for which the withdrawals have expired. These include Air Force, Army, and Navy withdrawals in Alaska, Arizona, California, New Mexico, and Nevada.

So the Nellis situation—except for the Groom Mountain area dealt with in the bill now before us—is neither unique nor especially urgent. The Air Force and the other military services will be in exactly the same position next year as they are now. And next year our committee and the House should be able to deal with the renewal of the withdrawals of these areas in a careful, considered fashion that gives appropriate consideration to the various matters related to those renewals.

The need to such a deliberate approach became apparent to us when our subcommittee and then the full committee began consideration of H.R. 4932.

One of the things that we learned was that bills dealing with the renewal of expired military withdrawals must be carefully scrutinized to see how they might affect the balance of rights and responsibilities between the military, the Federal land managers, and the public.

For example, in the case of the Nellis complex, we must consider the relationship between the Air Force and the Fish and Wildlife Service on the part of the Nellis complex which overlaps the Desert National Wildlife Range, and, in fact, overlaps a pending 1974 wilderness recommendation for some of those lands.

During our subcommittee's consideration of this bill, the Air Force testified that they had no problems with the recommendation for wilderness and reaffirmed their original position of 10 years ago in support of wilderness designation. Later, however, the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH] expressed concerns about the wilderness proposal, she and the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. BYRON] indicated that they understood the Air Force to be opposed to the proposal.

As a result, I requested that we be provided with a written explanation of any problems the Air Force might have with the proposed wilderness area. I especially wanted this because the Air Force's witness at our hearing was quite categorical when he testified that designation of the Desert Range wilderness—as proposed by the Ford administration in 1974—would not cause problems for the Air Force. I now have received that letter and as part of my statement, I will include it in the RECORD. I must say that after reading the Air Force's letter I was left with a considerable number of questions. There appear to be contridictions not only between what the Air Force states in the letter and what representatives said in testimony, but also between the Air Force's statements in the letter and statements in the environmental impact statement prepared by the Air Force and the Interior Department. From what I have seen, there are apparent discrepancies between the two departments not only as to their positions but even as to what is now occurring on the ground and what would occur if the wilderness recommendation were to be adopted.

In its letter the Air Force states that:

Nellis Air Force Ranges 61, 62, 63, 64, and 65 lie within the DNWR. We believe that parts of 62–65 have been excluded from the wilderness proposal, but 61 is wholly in it. During the year ending June 30, 1984, the Air Force flew 33,546 air-to-ground sorties on these ranges. These sorties consisted of simulated nuclear, laser, tactical and conventional training events using live and inert bombs, rockets, bullets, and laser designators. By agreement with the Fish and Wildlife Service, roads, ground instrumentation sites, and targets have been constructed in many sections of DNWR and jet aircraft fly at low altitudes over most of it. The loss of air-to-ground and air-to-air training area, air combat maneuvering instrumentation ground facilities, towed target training area, and other special use facilities would result in a severe impact on Air Force tactical training and readiness.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, the Air Force is operating in the Desert National Wildlife Range in accordance with a 1976 memorandum of understanding with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service which restricts its training activities to specified terms and conditions which are designed to protect wildlife and the environment within the wildlife range. All testing of facilities and equipment can occur only below the 4000' contour line and then in specific locations only. The wilderness proposal is situated above that elevation. Further, in testimony the Fish and Wildlife Service has stated that the wilderness proposal has been administered as "de facto" wilderness since 1976 when the memorandum of understanding was approved by the Department of the Air Force and the Department of the Interior.

In any event, the bill as reported does not include the designation of any lands as wilderness, even though only the western one-half of the wilderness proposal is within the Nellis complex. The 1974 recommendations still remain pending, however, and the House should be aware that deletion of wilderness designations from this bill was done only after assurances from the Nevada delegation—both in the House and the other body—that those recommendations and other pending wilderness proposals for National Forests in Nevada would be dealt with in the context of a statewide Nevada RARE II wilderness bill which the delegation has stated will be introduced next year.

To keep the ball rolling on this subject, I have sent the Air Force a letter responding to their letter to me. My letter requests that an expedited review of the situation in the Desert National Wildlife Range portion of the Nellis complex be carried out, so that we can act on Nevada wilderness proposals on the basis of the latest views of the Air Force. I am also including a copy of my letter as part of this statement.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4932 as it comes to the floor today is important and necessary legislation. It provides the Air Force with the explicit legal authority they need to control public access to the Groom Mountain area, while requiring that there be an open, public process for evaluating whether that authority should be continued after 1987—and, if so, what steps can be taken to mitigate the impact on the people of Nevada from continuing to keep the area off-limits to general use. I believe the bill is fair and balanced, and I strongly urge the House to approve it.

DEPARTMENT OF THE AIR FORCE,
Washington, DC, September 14, 1984.

Hon. JOHN F. SEIBERLING,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Public Lands and National Parks, Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is in response to your request at the September 13, 1984, Mark-up of H.R. 4932 by the Subcommittee for the Air Force position on wilderness designation of that portion of the Desert National Wildlife Range (DNWR) that is within the withdrawal area for the Nellis Air Force Range.

As a general comment, the Air Force supports the concept of the National Wilderness System. In the case of Nellis Air Force Range, however, it is difficult to reconcile military use of these lands with the provisions of the Wilderness Act, 16 USC 1131 (C). It provides that a wilderness is to be ". . . an area untrammeled by man . . . with the imprint of man's work substantially unnoticeable . . . has outstanding opportunities for solitude. . . ." The Act further provides (16 USC 1133 (C)) that ". . . there shall be no temporary road, no use of motor vehicles, motorized equipment, or motor boats; no landing of aircraft, no other forms of mechanical transport, and no structure or installation within any such area."

Nellis Air Force Ranges 61, 62, 63, 64 and 65 lie within the DNWR. We believe that parts of 62–65 have been excluded from the wilderness proposal, but 61 is wholly in it. During the year ending June 30, 1984, the Air Force flew 33,546 air-to-ground sorties on these ranges. These sorties consisted of simulated nuclear, laser, tactical and conventional training events using live and inert bombs, rockets, bullets, and laser designators. By agreement with the Fish and Wildlife Service, roads, ground instrumentation sites, and targets have been constructed in many sections of DNWR and jet aircraft fly at low altitudes over most of it. The loss of air-to-ground and air-to-air training area, air combat maneuvering instrumention ground facilities, towed target training area, and other special use facilities would result in a severe impact on Air Force tactical training and readiness.

We believe it is obvious that lands affected by these activities are not "wilderness" in either a practical or a legal sense, and we question the desirability of so designating the provisions of Wilderness Act, applied to Nellis Air Force Range, could lead to curtailment of existing operations and could prevent changing military land uses to meet new and unforeseen national defense needs. Yet even termination of these activities would not make DNWR a "wilderness," for the imprint of military activities will remain for generations. Furthermore, without carefully drawn language authorizing military activities, it is reasonable to predict that use of military lands for many existing purposes would be enjoined by the courts as a violation of the Wilderness Act.

It must be emphasized that the military land uses involved are unique and that no alternate lands are available for this critical military training and testing. The impairment of these uses, which could result from the designation of wilderness, could seriously endanger a variety of essential operational testing and training activities.

The 1974 comments on the proposed DNWR EIS indicated that the Air Force could operate with such a designation provided that the posture of Air Force operations was not curtailed thereby. When questioned in 1984 hearings on this subject, the Air Force indicated that we stood by those comments.

Subsequent to that hearing, an updating review of Nellis Air Force Range operations by Tactical Air Command (TAC) revealed that much had occurred during the intervening ten years since the DNWR EIS publication regarding our reliance on operations in the DNWR proposed wilderness area. Given this new analysis, we feel that the better-reasoned view would be to state that the nature of Air Force operations currently should mitigate against such a Wilderness designation for the area. We, therefore, believe it would be misleading the public to designate this area, part of which is an active bombing range, as a "wilderness" area. Given this current operational status, the Air Force must oppose the proposal to designate a portion of the Nellis Air Force Range as a wilderness area.

The Air Force supports that portion of the proposed legislation dealing with decontamination requirements; however, we would be remiss if we did not point out the following information. Our previous experience in decontaminating such target areas has been that complete decontamination is extremely expensive. We have also determined it is virtually impossible to achieve a level of decontamination that allows us to certify the area is free of all munitions and safe for any future activity, such as mining. However, the Air Force will attempt to decontaminate any of the specified areas within the resources and technology available at that time. As a practical matter, we believe the requirement for range decontamination should only be applicable if the Air Force intends to return the target areas within the DNWR to the public domain.

We appreciate your interest in this matter and hope the information provided is helpful.

Sincerely,

JAMES F. BOATRIGHT,
Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Air Force (Installations, Environment and Safety).

COMMITTEE ON INTERIOR AND INSULAR AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC, September 18, 1984.

Mr. JAMES F. BOATRIGHT,
Deputy Assistant Secretary, Installations, Environment and Safety, U.S. Department of the Air Force, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. BOATRIGHT: Thank you for your letter of September 14, setting forth the Air Force's current position on wilderness designation of a portion of the Desert National Wildlife Range that is in the withdrawal area for the Nellis Air Force Range.

Although this constitutes a reversal of the stated support that the Air Force's representative gave at our hearing on August 6, we plan to revise the proposed legislation authorizing the withdrawal of certain additional lands for use by the Air Force, so that there will be no wilderness designation in the legislation. However, in discussions with members of the Nevada Congressional Delegation, it is the consensus that in the next Congress an effort will be made to resolve the wilderness issues in Nevada and consideration will be given at that time to designating portions of the Desert National Wildlife Range as wilderness.

Accordingly, it would be helpful all around, and particularly from the standpoint of the Air Force, if a more precise review were made as to exactly which portions of the Wildlife Range are impacted or likely to be impacted by Air Force operations. It is particularly important that this be done, because our information is that none of the impact area are, in fact, within the boundaries of the wilderness proposal that our subcommittee was considering.

I would suggest that any such review be completed within the next six months, so that the subcommittee could proceed with its review of wilderness proposals in Nevada early in the next session of Congress. If you could advise us who would be conducting that review, I would be glad to assign a member of my subcommittee staff to work with them.

Thank you very much for your consideration.

Sincerely,

JOHN F. SEIBERLING,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Public Lands and National Parks.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4932, as amended by the Interior Committee.

As originally introduced, the bill would have withdrawn some 3 million acres of land in Nevada from all forms of appropriation under the public land laws and reserved these lands for use by the Department of the Air Force. The area is currently part of the Nellis Air Force Range, a highly sophisticated range used for military testing and training exercises vital to our national security.

The bill before us today is considerably scaled down. Instead of granting the Air Force the entire 3-million acre withdrawal, the bill addresses only an 89,000-acre area known as the Groom Mountains.

The Groom Mountains are being added to the withdrawn area for the first time and the committee felt it should receive expeditious consideration. The Air Force is currently controlling access to the area without any clear authority. Our bill grants the necessary authority with some constraints. The Air Force must prepare an EIS and may not expand its mission in such a way as to threaten the resources in the area.

The Air Force wishes to control access to the area because of its proximity to sensitive training areas. One can actually see into the test area from on top of the mountains.

It is not their intention, as I understand it, to use the areas for bombing or weapons testing.

The remaining withdrawal will have to be addressed next year. The Air Force would have preferred to take care of the entire withdrawal in this legislation as would many of the members of the committee.

However, the bill does address the most pressing concerns and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

● Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 4932, which would withdraw approximately 89,000 acres in Lincoln County, NV, for use by the Air Force. I must admit, however, that I do have a few concerns about the bill we have before us today.

First, I had hoped that we could take care of the entire withdrawal at one time. This version of the legislation will leave the Air Force in virtual trespass on approximately 2.9 million acres. The Air Force has already completed the environmental work on the lands that were previously withdrawn. They have complied with FLPMA, NEPA, and the Engle Act. The controversy was never over the lands that were previously withdrawn, only over the Groom Mountain area. It does not make sense to me to act only on the controversial part of the legislation while postponing action on a withdrawal that expired in 1977.

In addition, postponing action on the 2.9-million-acre withdrawal may leave the wilderness issue wide open. As I have expressed in conversations with the chairman of the Subcommittee on Public Lands and National Parks, I believe the wilderness issue should be dealt with in a statewide wilderness bill, not in the Nellis withdrawal bill. Nevada will have a wilderness bill next year but I want to ensure that nothing will happen to jeopardize our efforts prior to that time. The chairman has agreed to delete, from the Nellis bill, the wilderness provisions for desert wildlife refuge in anticipation of a Nevada wilderness bill. I am hopeful that agreement will carry over until next year. By postponing action on the wilderness issue until next year, we will have time to carefully evaluate the 1974 wilderness proposal in light of more recent changes. For example, the 1974 proposal included 76,000 acres of Bureau of Land Management land that has since been dropped from consideration.

My second concern relates to the provision of section 2 of the subcommittee substitute regarding the Environment Impact Statement. Lincoln County is outraged that they are losing almost 90,000 acres of public land while the lands that have been proposed for acquisition to mitigate the loss are in Clark County. I realize this is a sensitive local issue but I would hope that it will be considered in the EIS by looking at where the land is and who actually uses it.

Finally, I expressed concern in committee that the bill does not adequately protect the grazing interests in the Groom Mountain area. We have resolved this problem by including language in the committee report stating that it is the committee's intent that the Air Force will renew the existing grazing permit unless there are clearly compelling reasons for not doing so.

Through I am not completely satisfied with this bill, I urge my colleagues to vote to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 4932. I believe it is important and necessary to at least legalize the Air Force's presence on the 89,000 acres in the Groom Mountain area, in spite of the fact that we are leaving them in virtual trespass on the remaining 2.9 million acres. Thank you very much.

Thank you.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4932, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to withdraw certain public lands in Lincoln County, Nevada, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the bill just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

HARRY R.E. HAMPTON VISITOR CENTER

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 1889) to amend the Act authorizing the establishment of the Congaree Swamp National Monument to provide that at such time as the principal visitor center is established, such center shall be designated as the "Harry R.E. Hampton Visitor Center", as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 1889

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. Section 3 of the Act approved October 18, 1976 (90 Stat. 2517), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(c) At such time as the principal visitor center at such monument is established, such center shall be designated as the 'Harry R.E. Hampton Visitor Center'.".

SEC. 2. Section 5 of the Act of July 15, 1968 (82 Stat. 354) is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting the following new subsection (c) after subsection (b):

"(c) In order to protect the air, land, water, and natural and cultural values of the national park system and the property of the United States therein, no solid waste disposal site (including any site for the disposal of domestic or industrial solid wastes) may be operated within the boundary of any unit of the National Park System, other than—

"(1) a site which was operating as of September 1, 1984, or

"(2) a site used only for disposal of wastes generated within that unit of the park system so long as such site will not degrade any of the natural or cultural resources of such park unit.

"The Secretary of the Interior shall promulgate regulations to carry out the provisions of this subsection, including reasonable regulations to mitigate the adverse effects of solid waste disposal sites in operation as of September 1, 1984, upon property of the United States.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There is no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of S. 1889 is to amend Public Law 94-545 (90 Stat. 2517) to provide for the naming of the principal visitor center at Congaree Swamp National Monument in South Carolina for conservationist Harry Hampton. A bill (H.R. 3996) with identical language was introduced by our colleague FLOYD SPENCE on September 27, 1983. An addition to the language of the bill would prohibit commercial waste disposal sites within the boundaries of units of the National Park System.

Harry Hampton was born near Columbia, SC, on July 8, 1897, and died in 1980. He worked as a reporter, columnist, and coeditor for the State newspaper, writing his "Woods and Water" column for more than 30 years.

Until his death, Harry Hampton worked tirelessly for the cause of conservation. In 1931, he helped create the South Carolina Game and Fish Association, and was active in the formation of the State's wildlife and marine resources department. He began his efforts on behalf of Congaree Swamp in 1954. For more than 20 years, he attended meetings, made speeches, wrote articles, and personally escorted people into the swamp to document trees, birds, and other wildlife, all to stimulate and awareness of the area's beauty and value as a prime example of a southern hardwood forested swamp.

Due in part to the efforts of Harry Hampton in building public awareness and support, Congress enacted legislation in 1976 establishing Congaree Swamp National Monument.

The committee amended the bill to include a ban on any new landfills inside units of the National Park System, except those that are operated solely for disposal of waste generated inside the park.

There are currently three commercial waste disposal sites within park units at Gateway National Recreation Area, Cape Cod National Seashore, and Gettysburg National Military Park.

In addition there have been recent proposals to use land within other park units for waste disposal including the Cuyahoga Valley National Recreation Area.

The conditions of noise, air pollution, waste disposal in surrounding park lands, rat and other pest problems, and area disruption due to heavy truck use that are created by these waste disposal sites have resulted in a deep concern over the degradation of park values.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the House to adopt S. 1889.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 1889.

As introduced, this legislation would authorize the designation of a visitor center in the Congaree Swamp National Monument in the event that a center is constructed. The designation of the proposed visitor center as the "R.E. Hampton Visitor Center" is not controversial and supported by the minority members of the Interior Committee.

Section 2 of the bill, added as an amendment during consideration of the legislation by the Interior Committee, would prohibit the operation of additional solid waste disposal sites within units of the National Park Service. Operation would be permitted for most sites designed for disposal of waste generated within the park unit.

Although I am concerned that section 2 provides for a broad restriction on operations of park units which are currently authorized, I believe the section will address a problem facing some units of the National Park System.

For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support S. 1889.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

● Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 1889 which would name the visitors center at Congaree Swamp National Monument, when constructed, for the late Harry R.E. Hampton of South Carolina. I am the author of a companion bill, H.R. 3996, in which all Members of the South Carolina delegation have joined as cosponsors.

Mr. Speaker, no individual is more responsible for the establishment of the Congaree Swamp National Monument than Harry Hampton. Approval of this measure would be well received by everyone familiar with Congaree and its background. Not only does it enjoy unprecedented support, I am unaware of any opposition to its passage.

Harry Hampton richly deserves this honor. It was through his resourcefulness and presistent efforts that the public became aware of the unique character, beauty, and enchantment of this great natural treasure.

Mr. Hampton, one of South Carolina's earliest and most ardent conservationists, died in 1980. During his 42-year career with the State newspaper as a reporter, columnist, and editor, he wrote an outdoor column entitled "Woods and Waters." He was instrumental in the formation of the South Carolina Wildlife Federation and the establishment of the South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resources Department.

Mr. Hampton began his efforts in behalf of Congaree Swamp preservation in 1954 and worked unstintingly to increase public awareness of assets found in the swamp and to document birds, trees and wildlife present there. Following the designation of the swamp as a protected national monument and a part of the National Park Service in 1976—and, I would like to say here, I am very proud to have been the sponsor of the legislation which established the monument—Mr. Hampton continued his campaign, seeking avenues to make it more accessible to the public.

While others came to champion the cause of preserving the Congaree Swamp, there can be no doubt that Harry Hampton's contribution to this task was unsurpassed and that his dedication is directly responsible for the establishment of the monument and the conservation of this rare natural resource, the finest remaining example of southern bottomland hardwood forests. The "Harry R.E. Hampton Visitors Center" will recognize these efforts and associate his name permanently with the wild and beautiful area that he loved so much.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 1889, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: "An act to amend the act authorizing the establishment of the Congaree Swamp National Monument to provide that at such time as the principal visitor center is established, such center shall be designated as the 'Harry R.E. Hampton Visitor Center' and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to extend their remarks on the Senate bill just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

INCLUSION OF WASHINGTON SQUARE AREA IN PHILADELPHIA IN THE INDEPENDENCE NATIONAL HISTORIC PARK AREA

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2768) to provide for the inclusion of the Washington Square area within Independence National Historical Park, and for other purposes, as amended.

The clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2768

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Act of June 28, 1948 (62 Stat. 1061; 16 U.S.C. 470m et seq.), is amended by adding the following new section at the end thereof:

"SEC. 8. (a) The area known as 'Washington Square' (bounded generally by Walnut Street on the north, Sixth Street on the east, and the intersecting streets named 'Washington Square' on the west and south) is hereby included within the Independence National Historical Park.

"(b) The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to enter into a cooperative agreement with the city of Philadelphia (acting through its designated agency, the Fairmont Park Commission) to provide technical assistance in the preservation and interpretation of the property known as Washington Square. Such agreement shall contain, but shall not be limited to, provisions that the Secretary, through the National Park Service, shall have right of access at all reasonable times to all public portions of the property for the purpose of conducting visitors through the grounds and interpreting them to the public, and that no major changes or alterations shall be made in the property, including its buildings and grounds, except by mutual agreement between the Secretary and the city."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2768 was introduced by our good friend TOM FOGLIETTA on April 27, 1983.

H.R. 2768, as introduced, would have added the area known as Washington Square to the Independence National Historical Park. Washington Square is adjacent to Independence Square and is owned by the city of Philadelphia.

Capt. Thomas Holmes, William Penn's chief surveyor, laid out the city of Philadelphia with five public squares, named in customary Quaker tradition for their locations in the city. These squares still exist today, although the names have been changed. They are Penn (Centre) Square; Washington (Southeast) Square; Franklin (Northeast) Square; Logan (Northwest) Circle, formerly a square; and Rittenhouse (Southeast) Square. Independence Square dates from a later period, having been planned in 1730.

Washington Square covered "6 acres and 2 roads" and was a field through which a brook curved from near its northwest corner to its eastern boundary. In 1706 it was designated by city council "for a common publick burying ground," a place for all strangers or others who might not conveniently be laid in particular enclosures appropriated by certain religious societies for that purpose.

Washington Square is the burial place for more than 2,000 unknown Revolutionary War dead. Some of those buried in Washington Square died from their wounds or disease in Independence Hall itself, which had been turned into a prison during the British occupation. Buried there were also many of the Acadians and many victims of the yellow fever epidemic of 1793. In 1815, it was turned into a park and trees were planted by a noted French botanist, Francois Andre Michaus.

In 1952, the long-forgotten history of the square was brought to light. Plans were made for the creation of the memorial to these unknown soldiers of the American Revolution. The city of Philadelphia went to great effort to refurbish Washington Square for dedication to the Unknown Soldier of the American Revolution. That work was completed and the dedication was held on June 28, 1957.

Mr. Speaker, in spite of all of the efforts of the city of Philadelphia, the historical value of Washington Square as a monument to the valor of our Revolutionary soldiers has never been recognized at a national level.

The bill introduced by TOM FOGLIETTA would have done that, by adding Washington Square to Independence National Historical Park to be administered by the Park Service. However, the administration has opposed H.R. 2768 as introduced. The primary reason given for opposing the bill was the development costs associated with construction to bring Washington Square up to national park standards. As a result the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs adopted an amendment which would include Washington Square within the boundary of Independence National Historical Park but would limit the National Park Service involvement to that of providing technical assistance to the city of Philadelphia. This will grant the national recognition that Washington Square deserves and overcome the administration's objections by eliminating the major expenses of upgrading the area.

Mr. Speaker, I urge H.R. 2768 be enacted.

□ 1310

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2768.

Madam Speaker, this legislation will authorize the acquisition of an important addition to the Independence National Historical Park in Philadelphia. Under this bill, the park will be expanded to include the area known as Washington Square, which is an area of historical significance because it is the burial site of thousands of Revolutionary War soldiers. In addition, the addition will provide a logical expansion of the park to an area adjacent to the current park site.

During committee consideration of this legislation, amendments were adopted to authorize the National Park Service to provide technical assistance to the city of Philadelphia to aid in preservation and interpretation of Washington Square while eliminating the requirement of major Federal expenses to renovate the square.

Madam Speaker, I believe this legislation will provide an important addition to our national park system in a city which was home to the birth of the independence movement of our Nation. For these reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and commend our colleagues from Pennsylvania for bringing the need for this legislation to the attention of the Congress.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. OAKAR). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2768, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the bill just considered and passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

FIRE ISLAND NATIONAL SEASHORE AMENDMENTS ACT OF 1983

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3697) to modify Federal land acquisition and disposal policies carried out with respect to Fire Island National Seashore, and for other purposes, as amended:

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3697

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Fire Island National Seashore Amendments Act of 1984".

SEC. 2. Section of the Act entitled "An Act to establish the Fire Island National Seashore, and for other purposes", approved September 11, 1964 (16 U.S.C. 459e-1), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(h)(1)(A) The Secretary shall sell any property described in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph acquired by condemnation under this Act to the highest bidder; except that—

"(i) no property shall be sold at less than its fair market value; and

"(ii) no property shall be sold unless it is sold subject to covenants or other restrictions that will ensure that the use of such property conforms—

"(I) to the standards specified in regulations issued under section 3(a) of this Act which are in effect at the time of such sale, and

"(II) to any approved zoning ordinance or amendment thereof to which such property is subject.

"(B) The property referred to in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph is any property within the boundaries of the national seashore as delineated on the map mentioned in section 1 except—

"(i) property within the Dune district referred to in subsection (g) of this section;

"(ii) beach or waters and adjoining land within the exempt communities referred to in the first sentence of subsection (e) of this section; and

"(iii) property within the eight-mile area described in the second sentence of subsection (e) of this section; and

"(iv) any property acquired prior to October 1, 1982, that the Secretary determines should be retained to further the purpose of this Act.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all moneys received from sales under paragraph (1) of this subsection may be retained and shall be available to the Secretary, without further appropriation, only for purposes of acquiring property under this Act.

"(i)(1) Upon or after the commencement of any action for condemnation with respect to any property under this Act, the Secretary, through the Attorney General of the United States, may apply to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York for a temporary restraining order or injunction to prevent any use of, or construction upon, such property that—

"(A) fails, or would result in a failure of such property, to conform to the standards specified in regulations issued under section 3(a) of this Act in effect at the time such use of construction began; or

"(B) in the case of undeveloped tracts in the Dune district referred to in subsection (g) of this section, would result in such undeveloped property not being maintained in its natural state.

"(2) Any temporary restraining order or injunction issued pursuant to such an application shall terminate in accordance with the provisions of Section 3(g) of this Act.".

SEC. 3. Section 3(e) of the Act entitled "An Act to establish the Fire Island National Seashore, and for other purposes", approved September 11, 1964 (16 U.S.C. 459e-2(e)), is amended to read as follows:

"(e) In the case of any property, including improved property but excluding undeveloped property in the Dune district referred to in section 2(d) of this Act, with respect to which the Secretary's authority to acquire by condemnation has been suspended under this Act if—

"(1) such property is, after the date of the enactment of the Fire Island National Seashore Amendments Act of 1984, made the subject of a variance under, or becomes for any reason an exception to, any applicable zoning ordinance approved under this section; and then the suspension of the Secretary's authority to acquire such property by condemnation shall automatically cease.".

"(2) such variance or exception results, or will result, in such property being used in a manner that fails to conform to any applicable standard contained in regulations of the Secretary issued pursuant to this section and in effect at the time such variance or exception took effect:

SEC. 4. Subsection (b) of section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to establish the Fire Island National Seashore, and for other purposes", approved September 11, 1964 (16 U.S.C. 459e-2(b)) is amended by striking out "by means or acreage, frontage, and setback requirements." and inserting "by means of limitations or restrictions on the size, location or use of any commercial, residential, and other structures. In accomplishing these objectives, such standards shall seek to reconcile the population density of the seashore at the time of enactment of the Fire Island National Seashore Amendments Act of 1984 with the protection of the natural resources of the Seashore consistent with the purposes for which it has been established as provided by this Act."

SEC. 5. Section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to establish the Fire Island National Seashore, and for other purposes", approved September 11, 1984 (16 U.S.C. 459e-2) is amended by adding the following new subsection (g) after subsection (f):

"(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Attorney General of the United States, may apply to the United States District Court for the Eastern District of New York for a temporary restraining order or injunction to prohibit the use of, including construction upon, any property within the seashore in a manner that—

"(1) will cause or is likely to cause significant harm to the natural resources of the seashore, or

"(2) is inconsistent with the purposes for which the seashore was established.

Except to the extent the Court may deem necessary in extraordinary circumstances, no such order or injunction shall continue in effect for more than 180 days. During the period of such order or injunction, the Secretary shall diligently and in good faith negotiate with the owner of the property to assure that following termination of the order or injunction, the inconsistent use is abated or the significant harm to the natural resources is mitigated.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York [Mr. DOWNEY], the author of this legislation.

Mr. DOWNEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I want to first thank the distinguished floor manager for his outstanding and continued commitment to the Fire Island National Seashore. He braved some of the foulest spring weather in my memory to visit the beach in April and his subcommittee held a local hearing that day to give the residents an opportunity to voice their views on my legislation, H.R. 3697. In July his subcommittee once held a hearing in Washington and heard testimony from local residents and the administration. His efforts have truly been outstanding as well as those of my staff, in particular Dan Morowitz.

The bill we have before us today represents a bipartisan effort that will go far to protect and preserve Fire Island for the use and enjoyment of future generations. The legislation is supported by the Fire Island Association, the largest group of inholders within the seashore, the local municipalities, and the administration. Concerns that were raised during public hearings both on Long Island and in Washington over provisions in the original legislation and over amendments proposed by the administration have been addressed. I believe that the passage of this legislation will guarantee that one of the last relatively unspoiled natural barrier islands in the Northeast will not fall prey to reckless development.

Indeed, Fire Island is a unique resource. It is located only 50 miles from New York City and has one of the finest ocean beaches in the world. It also has magnificent dunes and spectacular maritime forests including the famous Sunken Forest Preserve. Within the boundaries of the seashore are 18 small communities that primarily consist of single-family homes and cottages. In 1964, Congress acted to create the Fire Island National Seashore to protect and preserve this barrier beach for the use and enjoyment of future generations.

Under the provisions of the original Fire Island legislation, the residents could keep their property and the local governments would retain their zoning authority over Fire Island's unincorporated communities. However, the act also stated that the private use and development of property had to be carried out in compliance with local zoning regulations which conformed to guidelines set forth by the Secretary of the Interior. The Secretary was made a partner in this zoning process because of his trust responsibilities to protect the resources for which the seashore was established.

In 1982, the Fire Island residents came to me with a problem. The mechanisms set up by the Congress to preserve the manmade and natural environments of Fire Island were not working. Illegal development was taking place in spite of the enforcement powers given to the Secretary. The seashore was being spoiled by commercial development that was coming in the form of bars, discos, restaurants, and the conversion of single-family residences to multifamily dwellings. On behalf of Fire Island's residents I introduced legislation last July designed to protect the quality of their communities and the natural resources of the seashore.

H.R. 3697 sets forth an effective yet equitable enforcement mechanism by allowing the Secretary to sell the property he acquires through a condemnation procedure established in the original Fire Island legislation. The money acquired from the sale of the property—which must be equivalent to the fair market value—would go into a special fund which would be used for future enforcement actions. The protection of Fire Island, then, would not come at the expense of the taxpayer and valuable property would be returned to the tax rolls.

Over the summer I worked with the subcommittee, the Department of the Interior, and the residents to enhance the original provisions of H.R. 3697. The amended legislation will allow the Park Director to initiate a 180-day cooling off period before he proceeds with a condemnation. This cooling off period will provide the Park Director and the property owner valuable time to negotiate on the ways in which the property under discussion can be brought into compliance with zoning regulations. With this amendment, both time and money will be saved. I am confident it will cut down on the number of acquisitions the Park Service will have to make.

Many residents have voiced concern over the original injunctive authority in H.R. 3697. The minority offered an amendment that the subcommittee accepted that I believe will answer the concerns of the residents. It places a 180-day cap on the injunction that the Secretary will receive when he begins a condemnation proceeding.

Finally, the legislation will now address one of the island's most serious threats—a burgeoning population and a continued decrease in available physical space. This situation has brought on the illegal conversion of single-family homes into multiple family dwellings. The hidden cost of these illegal conversions will be immense. The labyrinth of sewer hookups, electrical lines, and water lines for these structures will only hasten beach erosion and aggravate storm damage. This amendment will refocus the standards for the development of zoning guidelines on development and population density factors that affect the potable water, open space, waste disposal, and similar capacities of the island's ecology.

Today we have a chance to restore the Secretary's power to maintain the delicate balance between nature and man's activities on Fire Island. Fire Island stands in constant danger from the devastating winds and surf of the Atlantic Ocean. It need not face the added threat of reckless human development. The 1964 act was designed to preserve "the use for future generations certain relatively unspoiled and undeveloped beaches." My legislation will help the National Park Service accomplish that essential mission and I strongly urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3697.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, H.R. 3697 would amend the act establishing Fire Island National Seashore, to modify Federal land acquisition and disposal policies carried out with respect to the seashore. Our good friend and colleague TOM DOWNEY introduced H.R. 3697 on July 28, 1983.

The Fire Island National Seashore, NY, was established by the Congress in 1964 to preserve and protect one of the last relatively unspoiled natural barrier islands in the Northeast for the use and enjoyment of future generations.

The legislation provides for Park Service management standards and for private ownership within the boundaries of the seashore. The formula recognizes the zoning authority of local government as well as the trust responsibility of the Secretary of the Interior to protect park resources. Accordingly, the Secretary is restrained in his exercise of the power of eminent domain to acquire property within the seashore as long as an approved zoning plan is in effect.

The Secretary was required by the act to establish standards for development of local zoning ordinances and to approve such ordinances. To date no local zoning ordinances have been approved by the Secretary.

The guidelines for such standards in the act have been called into question by many people in the area. These guidelines related to acreage, frontage, and setback requirements have been criticized as being of very limited value in meeting the special zoning needs of the Fire Island communities.

The implementation of this procedure has been a focal point of controversy since enactment. On the one hand, it has been alleged by some that the National Park Service has been too quick to condemn and acquire property developed either in direct violation of local zoning or under an exception or variance to zoning codes. On the other hand, there are those who maintain that the National Park Service has been ineffective in controlling adverse developments within the seashore.

Unfortunately, the only method available to the Park Service, under the provisions of the act of 1964, to control improper development has been to condemn the property that is being used in violation of local zoning laws. This is of limited utility not only because it has seemed improper to use such a severe approach for minor violations, but because of its cost.

Several citizen groups and town leaders from Fire Island have urged, for several years, that amendments be made to the act establishing Fire Island National Seashore that would:

First, specifically authorize the use of injunction powers as a means of quickly responding to adverse development.

Second, mandate the resale, with protective covenants, of property condemned because of proven violations of zoning standards and the sale proceeds be retained by the park for use in implementing the provisions of the act.

Third, establish a process by which the NPS would certify whether or not a nonconforming structure might harm the park resources, thereby avoiding automatic condemnation action for minor zoning violations. These citizens recommendations were incorporated into H.R. 3697.

The Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs amended H.R. 3697 to meet objections raised by the administration by limiting any injunction that a court might issue to no more than 180 days; clarifying the provisions for resale by stipulating that any sale must be to the highest bidder, must be sold at or above the fair market value, and must be sold with appropriate restrictions to the use of property to ensure protection of the seashore; and establishing new guidelines for the Secretary on which to base the new regulations required to govern zoning within the seashore that would require standards that reconcile population density with the protection of the natural resources of the seashore.

Madam Speaker, I urge enactment of this legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in strong support of H.R. 3697.

I would like to compliment the gentleman from New York for his strong leadership in this role for the Fire Island Amendments of 1984.

As the gentleman from Ohio has mentioned in his opening statement, the committee did adopt amendments that took away the objections of the administration, that were urged by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CARNEY].

I would also urge the Interior Department now to consider promptly the local zoning ordinance which was necessary for local residents to be in compliance with the law.

This is a good piece of legislation and I recommended its passage.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the bill being considered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3697, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PIKE NATIONAL FOREST, CO, BOUNDARY MODIFICATION

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3601) to modify the boundary of the Pike National Forest in the State of Colorado, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 3601

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. In order to provide for the more efficient administration of certain Federal lands in the vicinity of Waterton Canyon, South Platte River in the State of Colorado, the exterior boundary of the Pike National Forest is hereby modified as shown on Department of Agriculture, Forest Service maps entitled "Boundary Modification, Pike National Forest", dated March 1981. The maps and legal description of the boundary of such lands shall be on file and available for public inspection in the offices of the Chief of the Forest Service, Department of Agriculture and the Director of the Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior, and appropriate field offices of those agencies.

SEC. 2. All public lands brought within the boundary of the Pike National Forest as a result of the boundary modification set forth in the first section of this Act (comprising about 2,869 acres and currently administered by the Bureau of Land Management, Department of the Interior) are hereby added to the Pike National Forest, and shall be administered in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations applicable with respect to lands in the National Forest System.

SEC. 3. Nothing in this Act shall affect valid existing rights, or interests in existing land use authorizations, except that any such right or authorization shall be administered by the agency having jurisdiction of the land after the enactment of this Act in accordance with section 2 of this Act and other applicable law. Reissuance of any such authorization shall be in accordance with applicable law and the regulations of the agency having jurisdiction, except that the change of administrative jurisdiction resulting from the enactment of this Act shall not in itself constitute a basis for denying the renewal or reissuance of any such authorization.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of section 7 of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 4601-9), the boundary of the Pike National Forest, as modified by the first section of this Act, shall be treated as if it were the boundary of that forest as of January 1, 1965.

SEC. 5. (a) section 5(a) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act (16 U.S.C. 1271-1287) is amended by adding the following new paragraph at the end thereof—

"(90) Horsepasture, North Carolina.—The segment from Bohaynee Road (N.C. 281) downstream to Lake Jocassee.".

(b) Section 5(b)(3) of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "The study of the river named in paragraph (90) of subsection (a) shall be completed not later than three years after the date of the enactment of this sentence.".

(c) The first paragraph (4) in section 5(b) of such Act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "There are authorized to be appropriated for the purpose of conducting the study of the river named in paragraph (90) such sums as may be necessary.". The second paragraph (4) in such section 5(b) and paragraph (5) in such section 5(b) are redesignated as paragraphs (5) and (6) respectively.

SEC. 6. The provisions of this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING].

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, H.R. 3601 as reported by the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, does two things:

First, it adjusts the boundary of the Pike National Forest, in Colorado, in a manner requested by the administration in order to promote more efficient management of the Federal lands involved. The new effect is to add to the national forest, and thus to management by the Forest Service, some 2,869 acres of public lands now managed by the Bureau of Land Management in the Department of the Interior. This administration proposal is the result of a joint study by the Forest Service and Interior Department aimed at streamlining management of lands in locations such as these, where consolidation into one agency's hands will be more efficient.

Second, the bill provides for a 3-year study of a portion of the Horsepasture River, in North Carolina, for possible designation as a part of the Wild and Scenic Rivers System. The 4 miles of the river which would be studied include a steep drop off the Blue Ridge escarpment through rocky gorges before the river crosses the State line into South Carolina. This stretch includes several noted waterfalls, and is a major tourist attraction. Our committee believes that it is an appropriate river to be studied for possible national recognition through addition to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Madam Speaker, this is a simple and straightforward bill, and I urge its approval.

□ 1320

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of H.R. 3601 but with some reservations.

The bill as introduced would extend the boundary of the Pike National Forest in Colorado to provide for more efficient administration of certain Federal lands in the vicinity of a water development project. The bill has the full support of the affected agencies and local communities.

However, last week, in our full committee, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARKE] introduced an amendment to the bill adding a totally unrelated matter. His amendment provides for a study of the Horsepasture River in North Carolina to determine whether or not it should be added to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

It is my understanding that the river is highly scenic and a popular recreation site. However, it is also my understanding that there is a small hydroelectric project proposed in the area which the amendment would stop.

We have not had an opportunity to hear from proponents of the project and, therefore, have little information on which to judge the merits of the amendment.

I appreciate the gentleman's desire to respond to local interests and I shall not oppose the bill. However, I hope that a more complete airing of the matter can take place so that it does not delay or kill an otherwise meritorious bill.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, let me reiterate that this bill provides for a study. It does not designate this river as a wild and scenic river, but merely provides for a study. One of the things a study will undertake, at least that is our intent, is a study of any hydropower conflicts that may arise if it were designated a wild and scenic river.

The addition of this provision to the bill was due to the energetic activity of our colleague from North Carolina, Mr. JAMIE CLARKE, and the high regard in which we hold him.

Therefore, I now yield to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. CLARKE] such time as he may consume, since he is the author of that section of the bill.

Mr. CLARKE. Madam Speaker, H.R. 3601 is important to my district in western North Carolina because one of the most scenic rivers in Eastern America is threatened with destruction by a small hydroelectric project.

The Horsepasture River drops 1,700 feet in 4 miles off the Blue Ridge escarpment in western North Carolina, just above the South Carolina line. In this drop there are five magnificent waterfalls. Hundreds of visitors from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and other States come every week to visit and enjoy the river. Several unusual species of rhododendron grow in profusion in the gorge.

The land adjoining the river is owned by the U.S. Forest Service, the Carrasan Power Co., which has purchased some 900 acres, and a subsidiary of the Duke Power Co. which owns the lower portion where the river enters Lake Jacassee, a cooling lake for Duke's nuclear powerplant.

Duke has publicly stated that it needs no additional power until the turn of the century, and is taking no position on the project.

The proposed power development would divert most of the water through a pipeline 2.5 miles to a powerhouse near the bottom of the river. The lower part of the gorge, which contains virgin timber, has been designated as a Society of American Foresters Natural Area and as a North Carolina Natural Heritage Area.

The project appears to be motivated primarily by the 5-year accelerated writeoff of investment and the 18- to 21-percent investment tax credit permitted to individuals and groups under the Public Utilities Regulatory Procedures Act of 1978.

At the request of the administration, H.R. 3601 adds 2,869 acres of Bureau of Lands Management land to the Pike National Forest in Colorado. H.R. 3601 also provides for a study of 4 miles of the Horsepasture River in North Carolina for possible inclusion in the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

A great many people in my district and in upper South Carolina and Georgia and elsewhere are concerned about the possible loss of this river which contains probably the most beautiful series of waterfalls in Eastern America. It is a priceless natural asset and deserves to be studied for inclusion in the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

Madam Speaker, I ask the strong support of the House for H.R. 3601.

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SEIBERLING] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3601, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SEIBERLING. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT SPOUSE EQUITY ACT OF 1984

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2300) to provide that a former spouse of a Federal employee who is married to such employee for 10 years or more shall be entitled to a portion of such employee's annuity and to a portion of the annuity of any surviving spouse of such employee, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2300

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1984".

SEC. 2. Chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 8331—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (21);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (22) and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(23) 'former spouse' means a former spouse of an individual—

"(A) if such individual performed at least 18 months of civilian service covered under this subchapter as an employee or Member, and

"(B) if the former spouse was married to such individual for at least 9 months; and

"(24) 'Indian court' means an Indian court as defined by section 201(3) of the Act entitled 'An Act to prescribe penalties for certain acts of violence or intimidation, and for other purposes', approved April 11, 1968 (25 U.S.C. 1301(3); 82 Stat. 77).";

(2) by amending section 8334(h) to read as follows:

"(h) For the purpose of survivor annuities, deposits authorized by subsections (c), (d), and (j) of this section and by section 8339(j)(5)(C) and the last sentence of section 8339(k)(2) of this title may also be made by a survivor of an employee or Member.";

(3) in section 8339—

(A) by amending subsection (j) to read as follows:

"(j)(1) The annuity computed under subsections (a)-(i) and (n) of this section (or a portion of the annuity, if jointly designated for this purpose by the employee or Member and the spouse of the employee or Member under procedures prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management) for an employee or Member who is married at the time of retiring under this subchapter is reduced as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection in order to provide a survivor annuity for the spouse under section 8341(b) of this title, unless the employee or Member and the spouse jointly waive the spouse's right to a survivor annuity in a written election filed with the Office at the time that the employee or Member retires. Each such election shall be made in accordance with such requirements as the Office shall, by regulation, prescribe, and shall be irrevocable. The Office shall provide, by regulation, that an employee or Member may waive the survivor annuity without the spouse's consent if the employee or Member establishes to the satisfaction of the Office—

"(A) that the spouse's whereabouts cannot be determined, or

"(B) that, due to exceptional circumstances, requiring the employee or Member to seek the spouse's consent would otherwise be inappropriate.

"(2) If an employee or Member has a former spouse who is entitled to a survivor annuity as provided in section 8341(h) of this title, the annuity of the employee or Member computed under subsections (a)-(i) and (n) of this section (or any designated portion of the annuity, in the event that the former spouse is entitled to less than 55 percent of the employee or Member's annuity) is reduced as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection.

"(3) An employee or Member who has a former spouse may elect, under procedures prescribed by the Office, to have the annuity computed under subsections (a)-(i) and (n) of this section or a portion thereof reduced as provided in paragraph (4) of this subsection in order to provide a survivor annuity for such former spouse under section 8341(h) of this title. An election under this paragraph shall be made at the time of retirement or, if later, within 2 years after the date on which the marriage of the former spouse to the employee or Member is dissolved, subject to a deposit in the Fund by the retired employee or Member, within such 2-year period, of an amount determined by the Office, as nearly as may be administratively feasible, to reflect the amount by which the annuity of such employee or Member would have been reduced if the election had been continuously in effect since the date the annuity commenced. If the employee or Member does not make such a deposit, the Office shall collect the amount of the deposit by offset against the employee or Member's annuity, up to a maximum of 25 percent of the net annuity otherwise payable to the employee or Member, and the employee or Member is deemed to consent to such offset. An election under this paragraph—

"(A) shall not be effective to the extent that it—

"(i) conflicts with—

"(I) any court order or decree referred to in subsection (h)(1) of section 8341 of this title, which was issued before the date of such election; or

"(II) any agreement referred to in such subsection which was entered into before such date; or

"(ii) would cause the total of survivor annuities payable under subsections (b), (d), (f), and (h) of section 8341 of this title based on the service of the employee or Member to exceed 55 percent of the annuity to which the employee or Member is entitled under subsections (a)-(i) and (n) of this section; and

"(B) shall not be effective, in the case of an employee or Member who is then married, unless it is made with the spouse's written consent.

The Office shall provide by regulation that subparagraph (B) of this paragraph may be waived for either of the reasons set forth in the last sentence of paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(4) In order to provide a survivor annuity or combination of survivor annuities under subsections (b), (d), (f), and (h) of section 8341 of this title, the annuity of an employee or Member (or any designated portion or portions thereof) is reduced by 2½ percent of the first $3,600 thereof plus 10 percent of so much thereof as exceeds $3,600.

"(5)(A) Any reduction in an annuity for the purpose of providing a survivor annuity for the current spouse of a retired employee or Member shall be terminated for each full month—

"(i) after the death of the spouse, or

"(ii) after the dissolution of the spouse's marriage to the employee or Member, except that an appropriate reduction shall be made thereafter if the spouse is entitled, as a former spouse, to a survivor annuity under section 8341(h) of this title.

"(B)(i) Any reduction in an annuity for the purpose of providing a survivor annuity for a former spouse of a retired employee or Member shall be terminated for each full month after the former spouse remarries before reaching age 55 or dies, unless the employee or Member elects, within 2 years after the former spouse's death or remarriage, to continue the reduction in order to provide a survivor annuity or increase the survivor annuity for the current spouse of the retired employee or Member.

"(ii) Notwithstanding clause (i) of this subparagraph—

"(I) a reduction in an annuity shall not be terminated under such clause, and

"(II) an election made under such clause with respect to a current spouse after a remarriage before age 55 or the death of a former spouse shall not be effective, if, and to the extent that, continuation of the reduction is necessary in order to provide for any survivor annuity, or any increase in a survivor annuity, which becomes payable under section 8341(h)(2) of this title to any other former spouse as a result of such remarriage or death.

"(C)(i) Upon remarriage, a retired employee or Member who was married at the time of retirement (including an employee or Member whose annuity was not reduced to provide a survivor annuity for the employee or Member's spouse or former spouse as of the time of retirement) may irrevocably elect during such marriage, in a signed writing received by the Office within 2 years after such remarriage or, if later, within 2 years after the death or remarriage of any former spouse of such employee or Member who was entitled to a survivor annuity under section 8341(h)of this title (or of the last such surviving former spouse, if there was more than one), a reduction in the employee or Member's annuity under paragraph (4) of this subsection for the purpose of providing an annuity for such employee or Member's spouse in the event such spouse survives the employee or Member.

"(ii) Such election and reduction shall be effective the first day of the second month after the election is received by the Office, but not less than 9 months after the date of the remarriage, and the retired employee or Member shall, within 2 years after the date of the remarriage or, if later, the death or remarriage of the former spouse (or of the last such surviving former spouse), deposit in the Fund an amount determined by the Office of Personnel Management, as nearly as may be administratively feasible, to reflect the amount by which the annuity of such retired employee or Member would have been reduced if the election had been in effect since the date of retirement or, if later, the date the previous reduction in such retired employee or Member's annuity was terminated under subparagraph (A) or (B) of this paragraph.

"(iii) If the employee or Member does not make such deposit, the Office shall collect such amount by offset against the employee or Member's annuity, up to a maximum of 25 percent of the net annuity otherwise payable to the employee or Member, and the employee or Member is deemed to consent to such offset.

"(iv) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subparagraph, an election under this subparagraph may not be made for the purpose of providing an annuity in the case of a spouse by remarriage if such spouse was married to the employee or Member at the time of such employee or Member's retirement, and all rights to survivor benefits for such spouse under this subchapter based on marriage to such employee or Member were then waived under paragraph (1) of this subsection or a similar prior provision of law.";

(B) in subsection (k)(1) by striking out "unmarried" in the first sentence thereof; and

(C) by amending subsection (k)(2) to read as follows:

"(2)(A) An employee or Member, who is unmarried at the time of retiring under a provision of law which permits election of a reduced annuity with a survivor annuity payable to such employee or Member's spouse and who later marries, may irrevocably elect, in a signed writing received in the Office within 2 years after such employee or Member marries or, if later, within 2 years after the death or remarriage of any former spouse of such employee or Member who was entitled to a survivor annuity under section 8341(h) of this title (or of the last such surviving former spouse, if there was more than one), a reduction in the retired employee or Member's current annuity as provided in subsection (j) of this section.

"(B)(i) The election and reduction shall take effect the first day of the first month beginning 9 months after the date of marriage and shall prospectively void any election previously made under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

"(ii) Within 2 years after the date of marriage, the retired employee or Member (other than an employee or Member who made a previous election under paragraph (1) of this subsection) shall deposit in the Fund an amount determined by the Office of Personnel Management, as nearly as may be administratively feasible, to reflect the amount by which the retired employee or Member's annuity would have been reduced under subsection (j)(4) of this section since the commencing date of the annuity, if the employee or Member had been married at the time of retirement and had elected to provide a survivor annuity at that time.

"(C) If the employee or Member does not make such deposit, the Office shall collect such amount by offset against the employee or Member's annuity, up to a maximum of 25 percent of the net annuity otherwise payable to the employee or Member, and the employee or Member is deemed to consent to such offset.";

(4) in section 8341—

(A) in paragraphs (1)(A) and (2)(A) of subsection (a), by striking out "1 year" and inserting in lieu thereof "9 months";

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, if an employee or Member dies after having retired under this subchapter and is survived by a widow or widower, the widow or widower is entitled to an annuity equal to 55 percent (or 50 percent if retired before October 11, 1962) of an annuity computed under section 8339 (a)-(i) and (n) of this title as may apply with respect to the annuitant, or of such portion thereof as may have been designated for this purpose under section 8339(j)(1) of this title, unless the right to a survivor annuity was waived under such section 8339(j)(1) or, in the case of remarriage, the employee or Member did not file an election under section 8339(j)(5)(C) or section 8339(k)(2) of this title, as the case may be.";

(ii) in the second and third sentences of paragraph (3) by striking out "spouse, widow," each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "widow";

(iii) by striking out "60 years of age" at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "55 years of age"; and

(iv) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subsection, the annuity payable under this subsection to the widow or widower of a retired employee or Member may not exceed the difference between—

"(A) the amount which would otherwise be payable to such widow or widower under this subsection (determined without regard to any waiver or designation under section 8339(j)(1) of this title or a prior similar provision of law), and

"(B) the amount of the survivor annuity payable to any former spouse of such employee or Member under subsection (h) of this section.";

(C) in subsection (d)—

(i) by inserting after the first sentence the following:

"Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, the annuity payable under this subsection to the widow or widower of an employee or Member may not exceed the difference between—

"(A) the amount which would otherwise be payable to such widow or widower under this subsection, and

"(B) the amount of the survivor annuity payable to any former spouse of such employee or Member under subsection (h) of this section."; and

(ii) in the last sentence, by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively, and by striking out "60 years of age" and inserting in lieu thereof "55 years of age";

(D) in subsection (e)—

(i) in paragraoh (1), by inserting "or a former spouse who is the natural or adoptive parent of a surviving child of the employee or Member" after "survived by a spouse" each place it appears; and

(ii) by amending the last sentence of paragraph (2) to read as follows: "On the death of the surviving spouse or former spouse or termination of the annuity of a child, the annuity of any other child or children shall be recomputed and paid as though the spouse, former spouse, or child had not survived the employee or Member.";

(E) in subsection (f) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following:

"Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, an annuity payable under this subsection to the surviving spouse of a Member may not exceed the difference between—

"(A) the annuity which would otherwise be payable to such surviving spouse under this subsection, and

"(B) the amount of the survivor annuity payable to any former spouse of such Member under subsection (h) of this section."; and

(F) in subsection (g) by striking out "60 years of age" and inserting in lieu thereof "55 years of age"; and

(G) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(h)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) through (5) of this subsection a former spouse of a decreased employee, Member, or annuitant is entitled to a survivor annuity under this subsection, if and to the extent expressly provided for in an election under section 8339(j)(3) of this title, or in the terms of any decree of divorce or annulment or any court order or court-approved property settlement agreement incident to such decree.

"(2)(A) The annuity payable to a former spouse under this subsection may not exceed the difference between—

"(i) the amount applicable in the case of such former spouse, as determined under subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, and

"(ii) the amount of any annuity payable under this subsection to any other former spouse of the employee, Member, or annuitant, based on an election previously made under section 8339(j)(3) of this title, or a court order previously issued.

"(B) The applicable amount, for purposes of subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph in the case of a former spouse, is the amount which would be applicable—

"(i) under subsection (b)(4)(A) of this section in the case of a widow or widower, if the deceased was an employee or Member who died after retirement;

"(ii) under subparagraph (A) of subsection (d) of this section in the case of a widow or widower, if the deceased was an employee or Member described in the first sentence of such subsection; or

"(iii) under subparagraph (A) of subsection (f) of this section in the case of a surviving spouse, if the deceased was a Member described in the first sentence of such subsection.

"(3) The commencement and termination of an annuity payable under this subsection shall be governed by the terms of the applicable order, decree, agreement, or election, as the case may be except, that any such annuity—

"(A) shall not commence before—

"(i) the day after the employee, Member, or annuitant dies, or

"(ii) the first day of the second month beginning after the date on which the Office receives written notice of the order, decree, agreement, or election as the case may be, together with such additional information or documentation as the Office may prescribe, whichever is later, and

"(B) shall terminate—

"(i) in the case of an annuity computed by reference to clause (i) or (ii) of paragraph (2)(B) of this subsection, no later than the last day of the month before the former spouse remarries before becoming 55 years of age or dies; or

"(ii) in the case of an annuity computed by reference to clause (iii) of such paragraph, no later than the last day of the month before the former spouse remarries or dies.

"(4) For purposes of this subchapter, a modification in a decree, order, agreement, or election referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not be effective—

"(A) if such modification is made after the retirement of the employee or Member concerned, and

"(B) to the extent that such modification involves an annuity under this subsection.

"(5) For purposes of this subchapter, a decree, order, agreement, or election referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not be effective, in the case of a former spouse, to the extent that it is inconsistent with any joint designation or waiver previously executed with respect to such former spouse under section 8339(j)(1) of this title or a similar prior provision of law.

"(6) Any payment under this subsection to a person bars recovery by any other person.

"(7) As used in this section, 'court' means any court of any State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, or the Virgin Islands, and any Indian court.

"(i) The requirement in subsections (a)(1)(A) and (a)(2)(A) of this section that the surviving spouse of an employee or Member have been married to such employee or Member for at least 9 months immediately before the employee or Member's death in order to qualify as the widow or widower of such employee or Member shall be deemed satisfied in any case in which the employee or Member dies within the applicable 9-month period, if—

"(1) the death of the employee or Member was accidental; or

"(2) the surviving spouse of such individual had been previously married to the individual and subsequently divorced, and the aggregate time married is at least 9 months.";

(5) in section 8342(a)—

(A) by striking out "An" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subject to subsection (j) of this section, an"; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) Payment of the lump-sum credit under subsection (a) of this section—

"(A) may be made only if any current spouse and any former spouse of the employee or Member are notified of the employee or Member's application; and

"(B) in any case in which there is a former spouse, shall be subject to the terms of a court order or decree issued with respect to such former spouse if—

"(i) the order or decree expressly relates to any portion of the lump-sum credit involved, and

"(ii) payment of the lump-sum credit would extinguish entitlement of the former spouse to a survivor annuity under section 8341(h) of this title or to any portion of an annuity under section 8345(j) of this title.

"(2)(A) Notification of a spouse or former spouse under this subsection shall be made in accordance with such requirements as the Office shall by regulation prescribe.

"(B) Under the regulations, the Office may provide that paragraph (1)(A) of this subsection may be waived with respect to a spouse or former spouse if the employee or Member establishes to the satisfaction of the Office that the whereabouts of such spouse or former spouse cannot be determined.

"(3) The Office prescribe regulations under which this subsection shall be applied in any case in which the Office receives two or more such orders or decrees.";

(6) in section 8345—

(A) in subsection (f) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) The provisions of this subsection shall not apply—

"(A) to any survivor annuity payable under subsection (h) of section 8341 of this title; or

"(B) to any survivor annuity payable under subsection (b), (d), or (f) of such section which is reduced on account of any survivor annuity referred to in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph."; and

(B) in subsection (j)(3) by striking out "or the District of Columbia" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: ", the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, or the Virgin Islands, and any Indian court"; and

(7) in section 8348(a)(1)(B) by striking out "this title" and inserting in lieu thereof "this title, in administering survivor annuities and elections providing therefor under section 8339 and 8341 of this title,".

SEC. 3. Chapter 89 of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 8901—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of paragraph (8);

(B) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (9) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and"; and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(10) 'former spouse' means an unremarried former spouse of an employee, former employee, or annuitant—

"(A) who was enrolled in an approved health benefits plan under this chapter as a family member at any time during the 18-month period before the date of the dissolution of the marriage to the employee, former employee, or annuitant, and

"(B)(i) who is receiving any portion of an annuity under section 8345(j) of this title or a survivor annuity under section 8341(h) of this title (or benefits similar to either of the aforementioned annuity benefits under a retirement system for Government employees other than the Civil Service Retirement System),

"(ii) as to whom a court order or decree referred to in section 8341(h) or 8345(j) of this title (or similar provision of law under any such retirement system other than the Civil Service Retirement System) has been issued, or for whom an election has been made under section 8339(j)(3) of this title (or similar provision of law), or

"(iii) who is otherwise entitled to an annuity or any portion of an annuity as a former spouse under a retirement system for Government employees, except that such term shall not include any such unremarried former spouse of a former employee whose marriage was dissolved after the former employee's separation from the service (other than by retirement).";

(2) in section 8902—

(A) in subsection (g) by striking out "employee or annuitant" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "employee, annuitant, family member, or former spouse"; and

(B) in subsections (j) and (k) by striking out "or family member" and inserting in lieu thereof "family member, or former spouse";

(3) in section 8903(1)—

(A) by striking out "employees or annuitants, or members of their families" and inserting in lieu thereof "employees, annuitants, members of their families, or former spouses"; and

(B) by striking out "employee or annuitant or member of his family" and inserting in lieu thereof "employee, annuitant, family member, or former spouse";

(4) in section 8905—

(A) by redesignating subsections (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (d), (e), and (f), respectively, and inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c)(1) A former spouse may—

"(A) within 60 days after the dissolution of the marriage, or

"(B) in the case of a former spouse of a former employee whose marriage was dissolved after the employee's retirement, within 60 days after the dissolution of the marriage or, if later, within 60 days after an election is made under section 8339(j)(3) of this title for such former spouse by the retired employee, enroll in an approved health benefits plan described by section 8903 of this title as an individual or for self and family as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, subject to agreement to pay the full subscription charge of the enrollment, including the amounts determined by the Office to be necessary for administration and reserves pursuant to section 8909(b) of this title. The former spouse shall submit an enrollment application and make premium payments to the agency which, at the time of divorce or annulment, employed the employee to whom the former spouse was married or, in the case of a former spouse who is receiving annuity payments under section 8341(h) or 8345(j) of this title, to the Office of Personnel Management.

"(2) Coverage for self and family under this subsection shall be limited to—

"(A) the former spouse; and

"(B) unmarried dependent natural or adopted children of the former spouse and the employee who are—

"(i) under 22 years of age; or

"(ii) incapable of self-support because of mental or physical disability which existed before age 22."; and

(B) in subsections (e) and (f), as so designated by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, by striking out "An employee or annuitant" and inserting in lieu thereof "An employee, annuitant, or former spouse";

(5) in section 8907—

(A) in subsection (a) by striking out "employee" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "individual";

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) by striking out "employee enrolled" and inserting in lieu thereof "enrollee";

(ii) in paragraph (1) by striking out "employee or the employee and members of his family" and inserting in lieu thereof "enrollee or the enrollee and any eligible family members"; and

(iii) in paragraph (3) by striking out "the employee or members of his family" and inserting in lieu thereof "the enrollee and any eligible family members"; and

(C) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

"§ 8907. Information to individuals eligible to enroll";

(6) in section 8909—

(A) in subsections (a) and (b) by striking out "employees, annuitants," and inserting in lieu thereof "enrollees"; and

(B) in subsection (d) by striking out "Each employee or annuitant" and inserting in lieu thereof "Each employee, annuitant, or former spouse";

(7) in section 8913(c)—

(A) in the first sentence by striking out "employees and annuitants and members of their families" and inserting in lieu thereof "employees, annuitants, members of their families, and former spouses"; and

(B) in the second sentence by inserting "or former spouse" after "in which an annuitant"; and

(8) in the chapter analysis, by striking out the item relating to section 8907 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"§ 8907. Information to individuals eligible to enroll.".

SEC. 4. (a)(1) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), the amendments made by section 2 of this Act shall take effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act and shall apply to any individual who, on or after such effective date, is married to an employee or Member who, on or after such effective date, retires, dies, or applies for a refund of contributions under subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) Except as provided in subsection (f), the amendments made by section 3 of this Act shall take effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act and shall apply to any individual who, on or after such effective date, is married to an employee or annuitant.

(b)(1) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1) of this section, a former spouse of an employee or Member who retired before the 180th day after the date of enactment of this Act is entitled to a survivor annuity under section 8341(b) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act, if—

(A) the retired employee or Member elects, in writing, within 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, according to procedures prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management, to have the annuity of such employee or Member reduced under section 8339(j) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act, and, except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection, to deposit it in the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount determined by the Office, as nearly as may be administratively feasible, to reflect the amount by which such employee or Member's annuity would have been reduced had the reduction been in effect since such employee or Member's annuity commenced; or

(B) where the retired employee or Member dies or died on or before the 180th day after the date of enactment of this Act or does not make the election described in subparagraph (A)—

(i) the former spouse's marriage to the employee or Member was dissolved after September 14, 1978;

(ii) the former spouse was married to the employee or Member for at least 10 years during periods of creditable service under section 8332 of title 5, United Stated Code;

(iii) the former spouse is not entitled to any other retirement or survivor annuity (other than benefits under title II of the Social Security Act or under section 8345(j) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act) based on any previous employment of the former spouse or of the employee or Member;

(iv) the former spouse has not remarrried before age 55 after September 14, 1978;

(v) the former spouse files an application for the survivor annuity with the Office within 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act; and

(vi) the former spouse is at least 50 years of age at the time of filing such application.

A survivor annuity under subparagraph (B) shall commence on the day after the employee or Member dies or the first day of the second month after the former spouse's application is received by the Office, whichever occurs later.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (3), if a retired employee or Member who makes an election under subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) does not make the deposit required by such subparagraph, the Office shall collect the amount of the deposit by offset against the employee of Member's annuity, up to a maximum of 25 percent of the net annuity otherwise payable to the employee or Member, and the employer or Member is deemed to consent to such offset.

(3) An election made by an individual under subparagrah (A) of paragraph (1) of this subsection to provide a survivor annuity for any person prospectively voids any election previously made by such individual with respect to such person under section 8339(k)(1) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act, or any similar prior provision of law. Notwithstanding the provisions of such subparagraph (A), an individual who made such an election under such section 8339(k)(1) (or prior provision) shall not be required to make the deposit described in such subparagraph.

(4) A survivor annuity provided under this subsection shall be 55 percent of the annuity of the retired employee or Member, as determined under section 8339(a)-(i) and (n) of title 5, United States Code, increased by—

(A) the total percent increase the retired employee or Member was receiving under section 8340 of such title at death, or

(B) in the case of a retired employee or Member whose date of death precedes the 180th day after the date of enactment of this Act, the total percent increase the retired employee or Member would have received under such section 8340 had such individual died on the 180th day after such date of enactment, and shall not be subject to reduction under section 8341(b)(4) of such title, as amended by this Act.

(c) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1) of this section, an employee or Member who retired before the 180th day after the date of enactment of this Act and who is married to a spouse acquired after retirement for whom such employee or Member was unable to provide a survivor annuity because—

(1) the employee or Member was married at the time of retirement and elected not to provide a survivor annuity for the employee or Member's spouse at the time of retirement, or

(2) the employee or Member failed to notify the Office of the employee or Member's post-retirement marriage within 1 year after the marriage, may elect in writing, within 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, in accordance with procedures prescribed by the Office, to provide for a survivor annuity for such spouse under section 8341(b) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act, to have the retired employee or Member's annuity reduced under section 8339(j) of such title, as so amended, and to deposit in the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount determined by the Office, as nearly as may be administratively feasible, to reflect the amount by which such employee or Member's annuity would have been reduced had the election been continuously in effect since the annuity commenced. If the retired employee or Member does not make such deposit, the Office shall collect such amount by offset against such employee or Member's annuity, up to a maximum of 25 percent of the net annuity otherwise payable to such employee or Member, and such employee or Member is deemed to consent to such offset. The Office shall provide for general public notice of the right to make an election under this subsection. In cases to which paragraph (2) of this subsection applies, the retired employee or Member shall provide the Office with original documentation, or such other documentation as the Office shall decide is appropriate, that such employee or Member attempted to elect a reduced annuity with survivor benefit for such employee or Members's current spouse and that such employee or Member's election was rejected by the Office because it was untimely filed.

(d) A deposit required by subsection (b)(1)(A) or (C) of this section may be made by the surviving former spouse or spouse, as applicable, of the retired employee or Member.

(e) The Office shall determine at the end of each fiscal year—

(1) the cost of survivor annuities provided under subsections (b) and (c) of this section, less an amount determined appropriate by the Office to reflect the value of any deposits made under subsection (b)(1)(A), (c), or (d), and

(2) the cost of administering subsections (b) and (c).

The Office shall notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the amounts so determined. The Secretary of the Treasury, before closing the account for the fiscal year in question, shall credit to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such amounts, which shall be available in the same manner as provided under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 8348(a)(1) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act.

(f) An individual who is entitled to a survivor annuity under subsection (b) of this section is deemed to be in receipt of annuity payments under section 8341(h) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act, for the purpose of chapter 89 of such title, as so amended. Notwithstanding subsection (a)(2) of this section, any such individual who otherwise meets the definition of a former spouse under section 8901 of title 5, United States Code, as so amended, may enroll in an approved health benefits plan described by section 8903 of such title, under the conditions set forth in section 8905(c) of such title, as so amended.

(g)(1) For purposes of subsections (a)(1), (b), (c), (d), and (e), "employee", "Member", and "former spouse" each has the meaning given that term under section 8331 of title 5, United States Code, as amended by this Act.

(2) For purposes of subsection (a)(2), "employee" and "annuitant" each has the meaning given that term under section 8901 of title 5, United States Code.

(h) Section 827 of the Foreign Service Act of 1980 and section 292 of the Central Intelligence Agency Retirement Act of 1964 for Certain Employees shall not apply with respect to either the amendments made by section 2 or the preceding provisions of this section.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KAZEN). Is a second demanded?

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today, the House is considering H.R. 2300, the Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1984. The bill, which was introduced by Congresswoman PAT SCHROEDER, was unanimously ordered reported by the Post Office and Civil Service Committee on Wednesday, September 19.

Like the private pension bill which preceded it and applied to private sector plans, H.R. 2300 makes certain necessary reforms to the civil service retirement system to protect the rights of former spouses.

As chair of the Subcommittee on Compensation and Employee Benefits, I was pleased to conduct two hearings on the problems faced by former spouses of Federal employees when attempting to gain access to pensions. The subcommittee found that while the Office of Personnel Management honors court decrees which direct it to pay all or a portion of a retiree's annuity to a former spouse, the OPM will not honor decrees which award survivor benefits to former spouses. Similarly, Federal employees and retirees cannot voluntarily elect to provide survivor benefits to former spouses.

Of equal concern, when a divorce occurs, the former spouse and any dependents he or she may be supporting lose their right to health insurance coverage under the Federal employees health benefits program [FEHBP]. Attempting to purchase health insurance from the private sector is extremely difficult because insurance carriers are reluctant to cover single parents, and, in most cases, private insurance costs far exceed those in group plans such as FEHBP.

On September 13, my Subcommittee on Compensation and Employee Benefits considered and approved an amendment which I introduced in the nature of a substitute to H.R. 2300. The revised H.R. 2300 corrects numerous inequities in current civil service retirement law as it affects former spouses and extends greater protection to spouses or annuitants who marry during their retirement years. Basically, the bill:

First, provides that the Office of Personnel Management recognize court orders granting survivor benefits to former spouses of Federal workers;

Second, provides for a joint waiver of survivor benefits at the time of retirement;

Third, provides retroactive survivor benefit payments to certain former spouses of civil service employees;

Fourth, provides Federal employees health benefits coverage to certain former spouses of Federal employees;

Fifth, provides that certain Federal retirees who were previously denied this option can elect survivor benefits; and Sixth, provides for notice to current spouses and former spouses entitled to survivor benefits or a portion of an annuity of the lump-sum withdrawal of retirement contributions.

H.R. 2300, as revised, does not interfere with any current arrangements between Federal workers and retirees and their spouses concerning survivor benefits or annuities. We have taken great care to maintain the rights of employees, retirees, and their current spouses, as well as providing necessary protections to former spouses. Numerous groups, as well as the administration, have endorsed this legislation.

I believe the bill which is before us today achieves the overall goal of protecting former spouses and improving the civil service retirement program. It also creates parity in the treatment of former spouses between the civil service retirement system and private pensions as required by the Pension Equity Act enacted by Congress last month. In addition, according to the Congressional Budget Office, the legislation would result in short-term outlay savings. In the third year, it would result in estimated outlay savings of $0.6 million, in the fourth year $1.9 million, and in the fifth year $3.5 million.

□ 1330

Mr. Speaker, for further clarification of the bill's intent I would like to submit for the RECORD a copy of the colloquy I had with our chairman, BILL FORD, during the Post Office and Civil Service Committee's markup of the bill. I believe the colloquy will highlight important features of the bill and, again, Mr. Speaker, I do want to commend the chairman of the full committee, BILL FORD, and Congresswoman PAT SCHROEDER for their leadership and support of the legislation.

There is no doubt in my mind that former spouses of civil servants, the majority of whom are women, will benefit from these needed changes and that the system as a whole will be much stronger.

[The colloquy follows:]

Mr. FORD. I would like to ask the subcommittee chair several questions.

In 1978, we amended the civil service retirement law to require OPM to honor court orders which direct it to pay all or a portion of a retiree's annuity to a former spouse. In essence, that amendment permits courts to divide a retiree's basic annuity between a retiree and a former spouse. Does this bill in any way change what we did in 1978, or would it require or authorize a court to reopen any divorce decree and modify that decree insofar as it pertains to an employee's or retiree's basic annuity rights?

Ms. OAKAR. No; this bill pertains generally to surivior annuities. It does not change those provisions of existing law which require OPM to honor State divorce court orders to divide a retiree's basic annuity between the retiree and a former spouse. Under existing law, a court may order OPM to pay all or part of a retiree's annuity to a former spouse, and OPM will honor that order. Existing law, however, does not permit or require OPM to honor State court orders requiring a retiree to provide a survivor benefit for a former spouse. Under this bill, OPM is required to honor court orders concerning surivior annuities.

Mr. FORD. Am I correct that the provisions of this bill which require OPM to honor court orders pertaining to survivor benefits are prospective only?

Ms. OAKAR. That is correct. The provisions of this bill concerning court orders apply with respect to divorces which occur after the effective date of the bill. The bill does not affect court orders incident to prior divorces.

Mr. FORD. Could you give some examples of how existing law and this bill work?

Ms. OAKAR. Under existing law, OPM must honor court orders pertaining to basic annuities. For example, if a court orders OPM to pay 50 percent of an employee's annuity to a former spouse, OPM will honor that order. If such an employee retires and is entitled to an annuity of $1,000 per month, OPM will pay $500 each to the retiree and the former spouse.

Under the bill, OPM must honor court orders pertaining to survivor annuities. The survivor annuity or any combination of survivor annuity is limited to the maximum currently permitted under existing law—55 percent of the retiree's annuity—the survivor annuity is funded by a reduction in the retiree's basic annuity—a reduction which is always less than 10 percent—and the survivor annuity is not payable until the death of the retiree.

Assume a court awards a former spouse a full survivor annuity and the employee retires with an annuity of $1,000 per month. OPM will honor the court order and will reduce the retiree's annuity by $77.50 per month to pay the survivor benefit. The former spouse gets nothing until the retiree dies, but upon death the former spouse is entitled to an annuity of $550 per month—adjusted for COLA's since the date of the retiree's retirement.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman has consumed 5 minutes.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2300, as amended, is the product of long, hard work by the administration and this committee. It is a bill that removes bias against the spouses of Federal employees in the Federal retirement system.

The Chair of the Compensation Subcommittee, the gentlelady from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR], and the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORD], are to be commended for their cooperation and diligence in bringing this legislation to the House floor.

I said in subcommittee that if anyone intends to read this complicated bill that I had only one recommendation: Do not read this bill and attempt to drive at the same time. Thanks to the sobriety of staff of the Office of Personnel Management and this committee, we have a good bill. Special mention should be made of Jim Morrison, associate director for compensation; Claudia Cooley, deputy director for compensation; Bob Moffit, director of congressional relations; Jim Woodruff, chief of legislation and special policies; Gay Gardner, pay benefits specialist; and Ed Leong of the House Office of Legislative Counsel.

H.R. 2300, as amended, continues work begun in 1975 concerning Federal spousal rights. In 1975, Public Law 93-647 was enacted to permit garnishment of Federal wages and pensions to pay child support and alimony. In 1978, Public Law 95-366 was enacted to permit the division of an annuity—but not survivor benefits—in a divorce. In 1980, Public Law 96-391 was enacted to require notification of the spouse if an employee elects not to provide survivor benefits. In March 1983, the gentlelady from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER], introduced H.R. 2300, which would permit division of Federal survivor benefits in a divorce and require joint spousal action on waiving survivor benefits. In September 1983, President Reagan proposed the Pension Equity Act for the private sector. The proposal required written consent from a spouse before survivor benefits could be waived and provided for the division of survivor benefits in a divorce. On June 11, 1984, the administration sent up legislation—later H.R. 6273—concerning Federal spousal rights.

The main problem with respect to spousal rights and current civil service law is that the law does not give the spouse a say in an employee's decision to drop survivor benefits and does not permit division of survivor benefits in a divorce. This bill corrects those problems. Waiver of survivor benefits requires the written consent of the spouse. A spouse has access to survivor benefits in a divorce. Further, a spouse must be notified when the employee requests a refund of retirement contributions since that refund voids any survivor benefit. Interestingly, the administration bill, H.R. 6273, went even further—the spouse has a veto over the refund request. That is spouse equity.

There are other provisions in the bill that are troublesome, however. For the first time, civil service law is granting retroactive benefits. Certain former spouses divorced on or after September 15, 1978, may receive a Government-paid survivor benefit, a grant for which the taxpayer rather than the employee would be charged. In addition, Federal health plans must accept a group of nonemployees, that is former spouses entitled to a survivor benefit. These provisions are not spouse equity. They amount to preferential treatment.

Survivor benefits equal up to 55 percent of a Federal pension. A survivor benefit requires about a 10-percent reduction in a Federal pension which pays for one-third the cost of that survivor benefit. Normally, there is only one survivor benefit to a marriage. This bill grants an additional survivor benefit to certain former spouses. This retroactive benefit requires no reduction in a Federal retiree's annuity. This benefit does not encroach on the rights of a current spouse.

We are granting this retroactive benefit to an estimated 400 former spouses for humanitarian reasons. Many are over age 60, some still have families, many have not worked outside the home for over 20 years, and some have health problems.

The benefit is limited to those who are at least age 50, who were married for at least 10 years of Federal service, and who are not receiving or entitled to a retirement benefit other than Social Security.

The benefit applies to those divorced on or after September 15, 1978. That is the date on which an annuity—but not survivor benefits—could be divided in a divorce.

This retroactive feature is inconsistent with longstanding policy that benefits for spouses and former spouses are the personal responsibility of the employee, not the Government. Indeed, the enactment of law in 1978 that permitted the division of a Federal annuity in a divorce rejected an attempt to provide retroactive benefits. The civil service retirement system should not be used as a substitute for the judicial system in obtaining equity for former spouses.

These retroactive benefits will cost an estimated $4 million per year. However, I am advised that CBO estimates that the bill may actually save money due to revenues coming in from other provisions of the bill. However, that is only a 5-year projection. The real costs of retroactive benefits come in over a longer period of time when those benefits are being paid out.

I am also compelled to point out that there are potential problems in permitting former spouses to continue enrollment in a Federal health plan. What we have is the creation of a new category of individuals eligible for Federal health benefits who are no longer linked to the employer or their spouse. We do not even know how many individuals fit into this category.

The bill requires these former spouses to pay the full premium—instead of the average 40 percent paid by employees. Now I know carriers experience delays in receiving notices of changes in coverage and entitlement status. This is likely to be only magnified when the link between payroll deduction and an individual's premium payment is broken.

In the future, this may mean higher premiums for active employees and annuitants and greater contribution by the employer. If it turns out that benefits are provided for divorced spouses whose coverage has lapsed, and if carriers cannot collect premiums, who will pay? The answer of course is the active Federal employee or annuitant—because the carriers will have to raise premiums in succeeding years to cover losses.

On balance, however, the administration and the committee's minority believe that the major objectives of the amended H.R. 2300 are so important that we endorse the bill as a whole, notwithstanding strong objection to some of its provisions.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, a word about the feminization of poverty. As we sort out what is equitable and what is preferential in this bill, let us also sort out the meaning of the feminization of poverty. In any discussion of pensions these days, the label "feminization of poverty" is affixed to the debate. It suggests that women have fallen to the bottom as the economy grows. It suggests that women are getting poorer and poorer. Such is not the case.

The fact is that the poverty rate for women has fallen sharply. In 1959, the poverty rate of all adult women—18 and over—is estimated to have been 23.5 percent. For the men, the figure is 16.4 percent. By 1979, women's poverty rate had fallen sharply to 11.8 percent, while the male rate fell to 7.4 percent. The poverty rate for older women, however, while still high, has dropped considerably over time—from 32.2 percent in 1966 to 17.9 percent in 1979.

The problem is in female-headed families that are in poverty. In 1979, 30.2 percent of female family heads were still in poverty. In 1969, there were 10.4 million people, men, women, and children living in poor families headed by women. In 1980, that figured increased to 14.6 million. Some people use these figures to suggest that more and more women are getting poorer. But the figures concern those men, women, and children living in poor families headed by women. What we have to ask is why the numbers have increased?

Could it be the result of perverse incentives in the Great Society programs that have affected these families? Could it be the change in societal attitudes about divorce and illegitimacy? Could it be the result of poor child support collection efforts? These are not settled issues. But some use these numbers to suggest that the market may unfairly treat women, when in fact it may be in great part the result of Government's action, because it is these female headed families that appear to have grown in response to many Federal programs.

Mr. Speaker, returning to H.R. 2300 as amended, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. It achieves the basic objectives of the President. It achieves a greater good for the spouses of Federal employees, despite some of its provisions.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] has consumed 5 minutes.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. I rise in support of H.R. 2300, the Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1984. I want to thank and commend MARY ROSE OAKAR, chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Compensation and Employee Benefits, for her excellent work in moving this bill. She took a highly controversial matter and, through negotiation and compromise, produced a bill which received the unanimous support of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

H.R. 2300 makes three important changes in civil service survivor and health benefits. First, the bill would make divorced civil service spouses eligible for survivor benefits, either by court order or by the retiree's voluntary election. Second, the bill would strengthen protections for husbands and wives of Federal employees by requiring the spouse's consent to a waiver of survivor benefits. Third, H.R. 2300 would permit spouses of Federal employees to continue to participate in the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program after divorce.

The bill before us today has changed considerably from the version of H.R. 2300 I introduced on March 23, 1983. Gone is the spouse's presumption of entitlement to a pro rata share of retirement and survivor benefits. In its place are court orders and voluntary elections to provide survivor benefits to divorced spouses. The bill is, therefore, weaker than I would like it to be. Still, this legislation is a crucial first step toward the goal of achieving equity for spouses of Federal employees.

And we have to work for the goal. Throughout the country live elderly divorced or widowed women who face poverty in what should be their golden years; 72 percent of the elderly poor are widowed or divorced women. Those women who chose the traditional role of homemaker and stayed out of the work force to raise children are the hardest hit, since they have no retirement plans of their own. For former spouses of civil service retirees, even Social Security benefits are usually unavailable.

H.R. 2300 gives us the chance to do something for these women. The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service gave its unanimous approval to H.R. 2300 on September 19, 1984. H.R. 2300 now has strong, bipartisan support as well as the administration's endorsement. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this urgently needed legislation.

It is important to note that this bill will benefit the husbands and wives of Federal employees as well as those who become divorced. No longer will widows and widowers find out after the fact that their survivor benefits were signed away without their knowledge. H.R. 2300 makes survivor benefits for the spouses of civil service employees mandatory unless both agree in writing to waive the benefits.

The bill contains two exceptions to the joint waiver requirement. One is where the spouse's whereabouts cannot be determined; this parallels the exception in the Retirement Equity Act (Public Law 98-397) for the private sector. The survivor annuity may also be waived without the spouse's consent in exceptional circumstances. This exception is limited to truly extraordinary situations, and cannot be used. for example, to deprive a spouse of survivor benefits in cases where the parties are separated but have not divorced for religious or financial reasons. To permit a waiver without consent in such cases would make no sense. After all, the parties remain married. The federally employed spouse may have enjoyed the tax advantage of having dependents, and the homemaking spouse may be counting on the survivor benefits to live on after the death of the retiree. If the parties remain married, the surviving spouse is entitled to survivor benefits.

H.R. 2300 also allows Federal retirees to provide a survivor benefit for a spouse if the marriage occurs after the date of retirement. Currently, an employee must make an irrevocable election on the date of retirement to provide or not to provide survivor benefits. This procedure has worked a great hardship on retirees who married after the date of retirement and had not chosen a survivor benefit. H.R. 2300 requires the retiree to redeposit the amounts that would have been withheld had the survivor benefit election been in force since the date of retirement. Therefore, the costs to the Government of providing this option are not large.

Congress has not ignored the plight of divorced spouses. During the past decade Congress has made major changes in retirement law to provide greater protection for spouses. In 1965, the Social Security Act was amended to provide benefits to divorced spouses married 20 years or more. The marriage requirement was reduced to 10 years in 1977.

Public Law 95-366 was enacted in 1978 to permit direct payment of civil service retirement benefits to an ex-spouse in accordance with the terms of a court order or property settlement.

In 1980, Public Law 95-465 was enacted to permit divorced spouses of Foreign Service personnel to receive a pro rata share of retirement and survivor benefits. Those same benefits were extended to former spouses of CIA personnel in 1982.

The Uniformed Services Former Spouse's Protection Act allows a divorced military spouse to receive survivor benefits if so designated.

And in May, Congress gave its stamp of approval to equitable treatment of private-sector pension benefits in divorce. The Retirement Equity Act passed the House unanimously and was signed into law on August 23, 1984.

H.R. 2300 deals with the treatment of divorced spouses under the civil service retirement system. It does not go as far as much of the other legislation I mentioned. So, I do not see passage of H.R. 2300 as the end of the line in dealing with the problem of former spouses of civil servants. Still, H.R. 2300 is a giant step forward.

For the first time, divorced spouses of Federal retirees would be able to receive survivors benefits, either by court order or a retiree's voluntary election. The retiree's annuity will be reduced to provide the survivor benefit, just as if the parties had remained married.

The spouse's eligibility for survivor benefits is doubly important. Not only will this provide elderly spouses with income, but it will also enable them to participate in the Federal Employee Health Benefit Program [FEHBP]. Under H.R. 2300, former spouses who are receiving or will receive retirement or survivor benefits can continue participation in FEHBP by paying both the agency and employee share of the premium.

Skyrocketing health-care costs have placed adequate health care beyond the reach of many Americans. Divorced spouses of civil service retirees are particularly hard hit, since most of them are ineligible for medicare. Many order divorced women often have difficulty passing the physical examinations necessary for private health insurance. And, the cost of an individual health insurance policy is exorbitant—premiums range from $2,500 to $4,500 per year. The median income for divorced homemakers over age 65 is $3,087 per year.

The health-benefits section in H.R. 2300 provides divorced spouses with the economic benefit of participation in group insurance plans. Had the spouses remained married, as dependents of civil service retirees, they would have been covered anyway. There is simply no reason why widows and surviving divorced spouses should receive disparate treatment.

This section of H.R. 2300 will also enable former spouses of Foreign Service and CIA employees to continue FEHBP participation.

H.R. 2300 requires a Federal employee to notify his or her spouse or former spouse of the employee's intention to apply for a lump-sum credit of contributions to the civil service retirement and disability fund prior to retirement. Employees who leave the Government before they are eligible for an annuity are usually eligible to receive a lump-sum payment which equals the amount of their contributions. The problem is that a refund of the lump-sum credit cuts off not only the employee's right to an annuity, but also that of his or her spouse, dependent, or former spouse.

So the bill says the Government cannot make the lump-sum payment to the employee if such payment would violate a court order preventing the payment of the lump sum. For example, if a court has awarded a former spouse retirement benefits under section 8345(j) of title 5, United States Code, or survivor benefits under this act, and the court order refers to "any portion of the lump sum credit involved," that is, the employee's retirement account, the funds could not be withdrawn by the employee. Also, the former spouse has the right to obtain a court order specifically blocking payment of the lump-sum credit.

I would have preferred that the bill require the consent of a spouse or former spouse before the lump-sum credit could be withdrawn. The notice provision places too large a burden on the former spouse. This is one of the most serious deficiencies of H.R. 2300, which I will work to correct in the future.

The survivor- and health-benefit sections of H.R. 2300 are precedent setting. The treatment of surviving former spouses of Federal employees will generally be on a parity with the law for the private sector. And eligibility for continued participation in the FEHBP could be of benefit to many Government employees.

Spouses of Federal employees who become divorced after the effective date of this legislation will have some protection against the ravages of poverty and ill health.

But we can't forget those who are already divorced. It was the horror stories of elderly, divorced women left in poverty that prompted this legislation.

We in Congress must constantly weigh competing interests, and come to some resolution. In this instance, we are hesitant to disturb existing court orders and property-settlement agreements. The problem is, those very court orders and property-settlement agreements have forced divorced homemaker spouses into poverty. The resolution we have reached is complicated, but fair—and desperately needed.

H.R. 2300 permits a retired Federal employee to voluntarily elect to provide survivor benefits for a former spouse, no matter what the date of divorce. If the retiree has remarried, the current spouse must consent to this voluntary assignment. The retiree is allowed to divide the survivor annuity between the current and former spouse.

If the retiree has died, or does not make a voluntary election, a former spouse who meets certain criteria will receive a survivor annuity.

The administration has endorsed the bill as a whole, while opposing provisions for those already divorced. In a September 18, 1984, letter to Chairman William Ford, Office of Personnel Management Director Donald Devine stated his opposition to this section of H.R. 2300 because it would extend a Government-paid survivor benefit to certain former spouses, a grant for which the taxpayer rather than the employee would be charged. This is nonsense. The current reduction to provide a survivor annuity for spouses pays for only a small portion of the annuity. In reality, the survivor annuity is paid for by the taxpayer as it is.

H.R. 2300 contains a number of deficiencies, some of which I have already mentioned. Let me mention two more: First, there is no requirement that the written consent to waiver of survivor benefits be notarized. Such a requirement would better protect the interests of all spouses.

Second, there is no requirement that OPM make any efforts to notify employees and spouses of the changes in the law made by H.R. 2300. The Retirement Equity Act requires public service announcements. H.R. 2300 should require the same.

All that said, H.R. 2300 is a great step forward and it deserves the support of all of us.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to take this moment to again reiterate how important this bill is. Of course, the poorest person in the country is a woman who is older. One of the reasons she is so poor is that she is paid inadequately when she is younger and, of course, she gets a double whammy when she is older because of the inequitable treatment in terms of pensions, which this bill, in part, serves to correct.

Of course, some of us are still waiting for HHS to bring forward the mandate charged by the social security amendments which mandated that in July they give a report to this Congress on a bill that I introduced along with Senator CRANSTON, the Social Security Reform Act that, of course, they have chosen not to bring forward. We are disappointed that that violation of the law is taking place because so many women suffer from inequities, not only in terms of spousal benefits relative to civil service, but also within the whole social security structure. So we hope this is forthcoming.

I would just simply like to close by thanking my staff and the staff members that relate to this committee. They did an unbelievable job because it was not easy to get the unqualified support of so many different groups whose members would be affected by this legislation. I also am very pleased that the administration came on board to support this. I want to thank my colleague from California for supporting the bill as well because the consensus related to this bill was, I think, extremely important in getting this bill on the floor and passed. I want them all to know how deeply grateful I am.

GENERAL LEAVE

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material concerning the bill, H.R. 2300.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

● Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 2300 I am pleased to support final passage of this legislation. As my colleagues are aware, this legislation provides survivor annuities for former spouses of civil service employees.

The purpose of this legislation is to provide fair treatment to divorced and widowed spouses of civil service employees. At the present time many women, and some men, have been disadvantaged by civil service pension laws. Under current law, the spouse of a civil service employee is often left without any claim to survivor benefits even though the spouse may have been totally dependent upon that income their entire married life. This situation arises if the couple divorces and the former civil service employee remarries thus leaving the spouse from the first marriage without a claim to pension benefits. This situation also arises because the current law allows a civil service employee to forgo their spouse's right to widow's pension without informing their spouse.

Last month President Reagan signed into law the Retirement Equity Act of 1984 which represents a major step in recognizing the pension rights of former spouses in the private sector. This new law recognizes that married workers are part of an economic partnership, and when this partnership is dissolved, as a result of either death or divorce, both spouses' economic future, including pensions, must be accounted for. The Retirement Equity Act addressed this in the private sector, and the legislation we consider today addresses a similar situation in the public sector.

Civil service employees retire with a guarantee of a lifetime pension, an income that is shared by both husband and wife. However, if that marriage ends there is no guarantee that the remaining spouse will continue to receive this income. Under existing law, civil service retirees must elect to forgo 10 percent of their annuity if they choose to allow their spouse to be eligible to receive survivor benefits. In the past many spouses have not elected to undergo voluntary withholding, and as a result, survivors who have depended upon their spouse's income, are left with nothing.

This legislation corrects this situation by authorizing the reduction of retirement annuities of all married employees unless both spouses waive survivor benefits in writing. The employee will receive his full annuity if his spouse dies, divorces him and receives no share of benefits in the settlement, or divorces him and remarries before age 55.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support this legislation which corrects a very real problem within existing civil service pension laws. I hope that the Senate will soon act on this legislation so that we can guarantee that we do not continue to condemn spouses who depend on these pensions as their single source of income to a life in poverty.●

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2300, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended, and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide retirement equity for former spouses of civil service retirees, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CASH AWARDS FOR CERTAIN COST-SAVING DISCLOSURES

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5646) to repeal the expiration of authority for awards for cost-sharing disclosures, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5646

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a)(1) section 4514 of title 5, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 4514. Expiration of authority; reporting requirement

"(a) No award may be made under this subchapter after September 30, 1987.

"(b)(1) The Comptroller General shall submit to each House of Congress, before March 16, 1987, a report on the effectiveness of the awards program under this subchapter during the 3-year period beginning on January 1, 1984.

"(2) The report shall include the views of the Comptroller General as to whether the authority to make awards under this subchapter should be continued after September 30, 1987, and, if so, whether any modification in such authority would be appropriate.".

(2) The table of sections for chapter 45 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out the item relating to section 4514 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"4514. Expiration of authority; reporting; reporting requirement.".

(b) Section 4512 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking out subsection (c) thereof.

SEC. 2. (a) Section 1124 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting "disclosure," in subsections (a), (b), (c), and (f) before "suggestion".

(b)(1) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

"§ 1124. Cash awards for disclosures, suggestions, inventions, or scientific achievements".

(2) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 57 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"1124. Cash awards for disclosures, suggestions, inventions, or scientific achievements.".

(c) The amendment made by subsection (a) applies only with respect to disclosures made after September 30, 1984.

SEC. 3. (a) The Comptroller General shall examine various options under which the Government could provide dependent care benefits to Federal employees, including a cost-benefit analysis of each.

(b) The Comptroller General shall complete the study required by subsection (a) and transmit the results thereof, together with any recommendations for appropriate administrative action or legislation, to each House of Congress not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. PASHAYAN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. PASHAYAN] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER].

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on September 19 the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service reported out this bill. This bill deals with two things that normally you would not think are related, but we did this because it is the end of the session and we thought they were both very important and needed to be moved.

One cluster of issues in this bill deals with the cost saving disclosures award extension. Now that is an awful lot of words. What does it mean? It really means cash awards that we are able to pay out to whistle blowers, if indeed what they blew the whistle on saved money.

The second part of the bill is a dependent care study act. This is an act that has been of real concern to many of the Members of Congress around this area, including the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF], who is on our committee. It is to get a study to find out if the Federal Government cannot do a lot more in dependent care which obviously includes child care.

When we look at the first part of the bill, the whistle blower part of the bill, we see that on September 30 of this year we reach the existing expiration date for allowing cash awards. So the first thing the bill does is extend the awards program for 3 more years. It gives the President and the Inspectors General the right to pay cash awards to employees who disclose fraud, waste, or mismanagement and those disclosures resulted in savings to their agency. Then the Inspectors General and/or the President can gave them monetary rewards for their work.

Since very few of these awards have been given by the Inspectors General and none by the President, we could not fully evaluate the program. So, rather than extending it indefinitely, we extended it for 3 more years to take a look at it then.

Second, the act attempts to streamline the paperwork that is done because the Government Accounting Office pointed out that the case-by-case review requirement for each award was really a duplication. The inspectors general already have to do a case-by-case review and it did not make sense to have both the inspectors general and the GAO doing the same thing. So, as a consequence that is dropped and the inspectors general will be doing the looking.

Third, we had a request from the Department of Defense saying that they really recommended that the Department of Defense Inspector General be permitted the authority to grant cash awards to members of the military services who also make cost savings. This will do that. I think since we have seen so many disclosures of coffee makers costing so much, and hammers, and everything else, we understand how very important this can be. This is really critical.

We also, to be fair, allow the Secretary of Transportation the same authority to grant members of the Coast Guard, if they make these kinds of disclosures, the same kind of awards.

So, again, it is much more comprehensive than in the past in allowing members of the military service the same privilege.

□ 1350

I think many of them probably know about an awful lot of waste, fraud, and abuse. They certainly should be rewarded for coming forward with it.

And then let us talk about the other part of the bill. Representative WOLF is one of the people, along with a long list of bipartisan cosponsors, primarily from the Washington, DC area, who want the Comptroller General to conduct a cost-benefit analysis of providing dependent care, including child care, benefits for Federal workers. Representative WOLF and I serve together on the Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, and we have been going through the incredible scandals that have been happening in the day care area, especially the sexual abuse area and the child abuse area, and one of the interesting things that we have found out in all of this is that in day care facilities that are on the premises, these types of things do not happen because the parents are nearby, they can drop in at any hour of the day, and there is a much better monitoring of those kinds of facilities.

In the interim, we have to be very candid and admit that the Federal Government lags far behind the private sector, far, far behind the private sector, in providing these kinds of dependent care services for Federal employees.

So what we are doing is including that mandate that they do this study to find out what it would cost, how we can do it, and what the cost-benefit ratios would be. GAO should also look at the new aspects that we have seen, the very tragic aspects that we have seen, for working parents of the problems of abuse going on in so many of the day care centers around the country, the scandal that is happening.

I know of absolutely no objection to any portion of this legislation. We are very pleased that it is getting up, and I certainly urge the Members of this body to adopt it.

Mr. Speaker, on September 19, the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service reported out H.R. 5646, the Cost-Savings Disclosures Awards Extension and Dependent Care Study Act. This legislation extends for 3 years the authority of agency Inspectors General and the President to grant cash awards to employees whose disclosures of waste, fraud, or mismanagement result in cost savings to the Government.

Also, the bill directs the Comptroller General to conduct a cost-benefit analysis of providing dependent care benefits for Federal workers.

H.R. 5646 has four major provisions. First, the bill repeals the existing expiration date of September 30, 1984, and extends until September 30, 1987, the authority of the President and the Inspectors General to pay cash awards to employees whose disclosures of fraud, waste or mismanagement have resulted in cost savings for the agency.

This awards authority was established in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 to encourage and reward Federal employees for pursuing improvements in Government. Since very few awards have been given by agency Inspectors General and none by the President, the program cannot be fully evaluated. For that reason, the committee voted to authorize it for an additional 3-year period rather than to provide it permanently.

The bill requires that the Comptroller General study the effectiveness of the awards program and report to Congress before March 16, 1987. On the basis of this study, we will be able to make a decision about whether or not to make the program permanent.

Second, the 1981 act required the General Accounting Office [GAO] to examine each and every award given and determine whether the cost-savings were verified. GAO feels that the case-by-case review requirement is duplicative since agency Inspectors General are already doing the same thing. H.R. 5646 relieves GAO of this burden. Still, we expect that GAO will review the awards given and report on the numbers and amounts of awards given, the amounts and types of cost-savings, as well as the effectiveness of the program.

Third, the Inspector General of the Department of Defense, Joseph H. Sherick, recommended that the DOD Inspector General be permitted to grant cash awards to members of the military services who make cost-savings disclosures. The Committee on Post Office and Civil Service worked with the Committee on Armed Services and the Department of Defense to develop an amendment to title 10, United States Code. The amendment makes it clear that the Secretary of Defense, and the Secretary of Transportation for members of the Coast Guard, can grant cash awards for cost savings disclosures. This accomplishes the objective sought by Mr. Sherick, while protecting the chain of command.

Fourth, Representative WOLF, along with bipartisan cosponsors from the Washington, DC, area, introduced legislation to require the Comptroller General to conduct a cost-benefit analysis of providing dependent care, including child care, benefits to Federal workers. Representative WOLF and I serve together on the Committee on Children, Youth and Families. We have spent a great deal of time looking at the benefits of child care for employers and employees. The Federal Government lags far behind the private sector in this area. While the dependent care study section of H.R. 5646 is somewhat removed from the main focus of this bill, the committee has included it because of the need for moving this important legislation this year.

The administration has said that it supports a 3-year extension of the cost-savings awards program. I know of no objection to any portion of the legislation. I urge adoption of the legislation.

Mr. PASHAYAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5646, a bill that would extend the Inspectors' General Award Program for disclosures by Federal employees of fraud, waste, and mismanagement, among other purposes. The bill continues the authority of the Inspectors General to make cash awards for disclosures of fraud, waste, and mismanagement until fiscal year 1988. The administration supports this 3-year extension. The Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office is required to report to Congress 6 months before the program expires on the effectiveness of the awards program and whether it should be continued. GAO is relieved of the responsibility to verify the cost savings at their request. In the past, GAO has found the agencies' documentation of the savings has been accurate. The bill also will allow the Secretary of Defense to make similar awards to military employees for cost-savings disclosures. In addition, GAO is required to make a cost-assessment study on the options of providing Federal workers with child-care benefits.

Federal agencies are just beginning to implement their Inspector General Awards Programs. Thus far, four agencies have made eight awards. Not a bad start, but I look forward to the Inspectors General's expanding the programs and giving as many awards as are documentable in the next 3 years. Including military employees of the Department of Defense in the IG program is an equitable solution to a problem unique to the DOD: Two employees working side by side, one civilian and one military, seeing and reporting the same waste, and only one person eligible to receive a cash award. The Committee on Armed Services concurs with us that this change is a necessary step. The people in the Federal work force are in the best position to discover fraud, abuse, waste, and mismanagement. Congress and every administration must encourage its employees to operate as efficiently and economically as possible. This program is an excellent way to do this.

A study on the costs of child care for Federal workers is required by this bill. There is evidence that employers benefit from providing benefits for child care to their workers in increased productivity and decreased absenteeism. My colleague, Representative FRANK WOLF, believes the Federal Government could become more efficient if it investigates the options for dependent care for Federal workers. I look forward to seeing the GAO's analysis on the subject.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 5646 because it contributes to the efficiency of the Federal Government, rewards employees for saving taxpayers' money, and will help us to keep the Federal budget under control.

● Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5646, which contains provisions authorizing the General Accounting Office to undertake a cost-benefit study on providing child care benefits to Federal employees.

There are many fine, well-supervised day care centers operating in this country. The big problem is that there are not enough of them. In some areas, there are waiting lists of parents who are willing to pay the $5,000 to $10,000 a year for their child's care. There are even longer lists of parents who want to secure quality day care but who cannot afford the costs. Those parents have to place their children in less expensive alternatives, such as an unlicensed center operated by a woman who takes care of the children in her home for extra income. And even these alternatives are not sufficient to handle the demand.

In all cases, parents risk the chance that their children will just wind up in a kiddy warehouse, stored for the 8 or 9 hours the child would have been unattended at home.

More and more private companies are seeing that this is a real need, and they are providing day care centers for their employees. I believe it is time that the Federal Government takes a step in that direction.

Some Federal offices already are offering day care centers, among them, HUD right here in Washington. I commend all of them and offer them as examples of the need and efficacy of the proposal.

I have seen no statistics showing how many of the Federal Government's 2.8 million civilian and military employees have small children and who would want or need this service. But if it were made available, it would provide the children of Federal employees with proper, supervised, safe care. It also would remove those children from the Nation's other child care facilities, making room for the children of parents who cannot find facilities for their children.

I have supported tax credits for child care as a small step toward making the service more affordable to working parents. I believe this is another small step toward easing the problem.

This service for many years was the province of our churches and our private sector professional day care providers. In recent years, many private companies have taken an enlightened attitude about their employees' need for day care. I believe it is time the Federal Government became more enlightened and follows suit.●

● Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5646. I wish to commend my colleagues for their efforts in considering this bill in committee and thank Representative SCHROEDER for her assistance and cooperation in agreeing to include the child study bill sponsored by myself, Representatives BARNES, HOYER, HOLT, and PARRIS with this legislation.

In legislation introduced September 18, I outlined the potential savings a Federal employee dependent care assistance benefit could have for the Federal Government and the taxpayer. At that time, I urged the House to authorize the General Accounting Office, with a private consultant, to conduct a cost benefit analysis on the feasibility of providing child care benefits to Government employees. This proposal is now offered as a part on H.R. 5646.

I am pleased to support H.R. 5646 in its efforts to encourage and reward employees and military personnel who work in areas where there is potential for fraud, waste, and mismanagement. Both the child care provisions and the extension of the cost-saving awards program included in H.R. 5646 endeavor to seek out means to improve Federal Government procedure and to save the Federal Government money.

After conducting three workshops in my congressional district to acquaint employers with tax incentives and productivity advantages in offering child care benefits to assist working parents, I was overwhelmed with the amount of support and interest these conferences generated among employers, employees, and providers. News reports about our efforts have resulted in inquiries from organizations and individuals from all over the United States which demonstrate the high degree of interest in child care.

Studies by Dr. Deanna Tate of the Texas Woman's University have shown that savings are evident in the private sector for firms which have undertaken child care programs, and it is possible that the Federal Government could also improve its cost effectiveness in this way.

I am not suggesting that day care is for everyone, though. Parents should be able to choose among options they believe best meet the needs of their children—whether they choose to stay home full time, or choose full employment and need child care assistance to do so—they should be able to make such decisions with the best interest of their children as the primary concern.

I believe that with the changes taking place in work patterns, the Federal Government, as a responsible employer, must take steps to analyze the possible benefits of a child care program. It is quite likely that the successful employer of the future may be one who recognizes that child care is a benefit option which appeals to the work force and is crucial to the productivity of its business.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the House to give unanimous support to H.R. 5646.●

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KAZEN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Colorado [Mrs. SCHROEDER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5646, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for a 3-year extension in the authority to pay cash awards to Federal emloyees for certain cost savings disclosures, to clarify the authority to provide cash awards to members of the Armed Forces for such disclosures, to require a cost-benefit analysis of a Government program of furnishing workday care for dependents of Federal employees, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. SCHROEDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks, and to include extraneous material, on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

JAMIE WHITTEN DELTA STATES RESEARCH CENTER

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5513) to designate the Delta States Research Center in Stoneville, MS, as the "Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center."

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5513

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Delta States Research Center of the United States Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service, located in Stoneville, Mississippi, is hereby designated as the "Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center". Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, record, or other paper of the United States to that center shall be deemed to be a reference to the "Jamie Whitten States Research Center".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STANGELAND] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud and pleased to rise in support of H.R. 5513, a bill to designate the Delta States Research Center of the U.S. Department of Agriculture located in Stoneville, MS, as the "Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center." The bill was ordered reported by the Committee on Agriculture by unanimous voice vote.

The purpose of H.R. 5513 is simple. This legislation is designed to honor the contributions made to American agriculture and the Nation by our colleague, the Honorable JAMIE L. WHITTEN, chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations and dean of the U.S. House of Representatives.

JAMIE WHITTEN has served in Congress since 1941. He has been a member of the Appropriations Committee since 1943 and chairman of its Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development and Related Agencies since 1950. He has been chairman of the full committee since 1979.

Through his long service in Congress, and particularly in his work on the Appropriations Committee, Mr. WHITTEN has devoted himself to promoting the development and protection of the Nation's basic resources, including the agricultural resources which he has regarded as the foundation of the Nation's strength. Chairman WHITTEN's efforts and leadership have been aimed at promoting progress in all areas that affect American agriculture—from encouraging efforts to stabilize and protect farm income to the development of international markets, the conservation of our soil and water, and encouraging agricultural research.

Because of Chairman WHITTEN's great and enduring contributions in all these areas, the Committee on Agriculture has agreed with the sponsors of H.R. 5513 that the Delta States Research Center—which has grown with his help from a small unit to its present place as one of the Nation's outstanding research centers—should bear his name.

The station which will bear Chairman WHITTEN's name is a leading center for research in production and other problems of regional crops including cotton and soybeans. It also has done and continues to do outstanding work in research on the management of insect pest and weed problems. Naming this station for Mr. WHITTEN will be a reminder both of his great services to his State, region, and Nation, and of the principles he has advocated in working to help make American agriculture the envy of the world.

Chairman WHITTEN said recently that "Agriculture is our largest industry—bigger than housing, automobiles and steel put together. As to labor, it is our largest employer, normally our chief earner of dollars in world trade, and the consumer's best and most economical supplier. It is the basis of our prosperity." His record of service to the people who depend on this industry is the basis for H.R. 5513.

As chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture that has jurisdiction over agricultural research, it gives me particular pleasure to commend this legislation to the House. I know the Members will be happy to join in honoring JAMIE WHITTEN in this manner.

Mr. STANGELAND. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, H.R. 5513, that designates the Delta States Research Center in Stoneville, MS, as the "Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center."

This honor in recognition of our colleague, Congressman JAMIE WHITTEN is richly deserved. He is a true friend and supporter of American agriculture and in that role, he has been a firm supporter of agricultural research and paticularly this research center in Stoneville, MS.

This Delta States Research Center is located in the congressional district of my good friend, WEBB FRANKLIN, and he and all of the Mississippi delegation support this legislation.

I urge the adoption of H.R. 5513.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, as my good friend, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STANGELAND], has indicated, this bill was introduced with the unanimous cosponsorship of the Mississippi delegation, with the exception, of course, of the honoree, and at this time, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished leader of that delegation, my good friend, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONTGOMERY], to say a few words about it.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN], for giving us the opportunity to consider this bill today and for bringing it to the floor so quickly, and I would also like to thank the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STANGELAND] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ROBERTS] on the minority side for participating with Chairman BROWN, and also the chairman of the full committee for bringing this bill before the House. We are now in consideration of H.R. 5513. As the chairman said, all of the members of the Mississippi delegation except Mr. WHITTEN have signed this bill, with full enthusiasm.

The Delta Council in Stoneville, MS, because of Chairman WHITTEN's efforts in behalf of agricultural research, asked that the Delta States Research Center in Stoneville, MS, be named for Mr. WHITTEN. The Delta Council folks felt that their Delta States Research Center would not have been possible without Mr. WHITTEN's interest and dedication.

I must say that I agree totally. Over the years, the dean of the House has made great contributions in the area of agricultural research, and certainly he is responsible for making possible the fine work that is done in Stoneville.

The Delta States Research Center began operations in 1972, largely due to the legislative efforts of JAMIE WHITTEN. The major thrust of their work is in the areas of cotton, soybeans, rice, and farm-raised catfish, all very vital farm products in the five-State mid-South region that it serves.

The Center plays a crucial role in the economic viability of the agricultural sector both regionally and nationally, and without Chairman WHITTEN's work here in the Congress, their accomplishments would not have been possible.

The Delta Council is 100 percent behind this bill. I was pleased to have the opportunity to sponsor this legislation honoring Chairman WHITTEN in such a fitting way and I do ask that my colleagues join me in this effort today.

Thank you.

● Mr. RUDD. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of H.R. 5513, the bill to designate the Delta State Research Center in Stoneville, MS, in honor of my chairman, and good friend and colleague, JAMIE WHITTEN.

JAMIE has had a long and outstanding history of service to the people of Mississippi and the Nation, devoting much of his career to enhancing agricultural research. It is only appropriate that this research center proudly carry his name.

Since 1979, he has provided strong and able leadership as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, on which I have been privileged to serve. He is to be commended for his fairness and his ability, and I thank him for his service to this House and the Nation.

Let me also take this opportunity to wish Chairman WHITTEN continuing success and good fortune in the days ahead.

I urge this measure's unanimous adoption.●

● Mr. DE LA GARZA. Mr. Speaker, I join in urging the House to adopt H.R. 5513 as a mark of respect to one of our most distinguished colleagues.

When I came to the House 20 years ago and began working on agricultural issues, I learned one thing very quickly. I learned that the gentleman from Mississippi, who was then already a veteran as chairman of the Agricultural Appropriations Subcommittee, was a man you wanted on your side on farm and rural issues.

That is still true today and I trust will continue to be true for many years to come.

Over the years, we have fought many battles for American agriculture and the rural areas of our country. In every one of those battles, whether the issue was trade, or soil conservation, or farm income programs, Chairman WHITTEN has been an ally, a leader, and a pillar of strength. I notice that an article in one of our leading newspapers just the other day referred to him as "the permanent Secretary of Agriculture."

I believe it is especially fitting to honor Chairman WHITTEN by placing his name on the Delta States Research Center. I know that Chairman WHITTEN's influence on agriculture and related issues has been felt across the entire Nation and, indeed, on an international scale. But it is in his home county that people have known him longest, and the research center which will bear his name has become one of the Agriculture Department's most effective and efficient institutions—partly due to the financial support which Congress has provided under Chairman WHITTEN's leadership.

I believe this legislation should have the unanimous support of the House, just as it received a unanimous vote recently in the Committee on Agriculture.●

● Mr. FRANKLIN. Mr. Speaker, today I am proud to lend my support to H.R. 5513, a bill which would designate the Delta States Research Center in Stoneville, MS, as the Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center.

Congressman WHITTEN, the dean of the House of Representatives, has made many contributions in the areas of agricultural development and research. Such contributions include legislative work done in reforestation, flood control, watershed work, farm programs, farm practices, and soil conservation.

By naming the Stoneville center the Jamie Whitten Delta States Research Center, we recognize his commitment to agriculture as the Nation's No. 1 industry. His hard work and dedication to agriculture are indeed commendable and worthy of this honor.●

Mr. STANGELAND. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. BROWN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5513.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BROWN of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING THE KAHLIL GIBRAN CENTENNIAL FOUNDATION TO ERECT A MEMORIAL IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 580) to authorize the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation of Washington, District of Columbia, to erect a memorial in the District of Columbia, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.J. Res. 580

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That (a) the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation is authorized to establish a memorial on Federal land in the District of Columbia or its environs to honor the Lebanese-American poet and artist, Kahlil Gibran.

(b) In carrying out subsection (a), the Foundation shall be responsible for preparation of the design and plans for the memorial, which shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the Commission of Fine Arts, and the National Capital Planning Commission.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior—

(1) with the approval of the Commission of Fine Arts and the National Capital Planning Commission, shall select a site for the memorial;

(2) shall not permit construction of the memorial to begin unless the Secretary determines that sufficient amounts are available for completion of the memorial in accordance with the approved design and plans; and

(3) shall be responsible for maintenance of the memorial after completion of construction.

SEC. 3. The United States shall not pay any expense of the establishment of the memorial.

SEC. 4. The authority to establish the memorial under this resolution shall expire at the end of the five-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this resolution, unless construction of the memorial begins during that period.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. FRENZEL] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR].

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 580, a bill which would authorize the erection of a memorial on Federal ground in Washington, DC and or its environs to commemorate well-known American poet, philosopher, and artist Kahlil Gibran.

As one of the cosponsors of this bill, I would like to compliment the chairman of the House Administration Committee, Congressman FRANK ANNUNZIO and the ranking minority member, Congressman BILL FRENZEL for their efforts to move this legislation in an expeditious manner. Also, I would like to thank Congressman ABRAHAM KAZEN for his outstanding leadership in sponsoring this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, for many, Kahlil Gibran embodies the American spirit. At the age of 12, he came to this country as a poor immigrant from Lebanon but was fortunate to have been nurtured by the farsighted in his adopted homeland. In return, Gibran produced a prodigious body of work which stands today as an artist's legacy to people of all nations. With editions of his work appearing in over 50 languages, Gibran's message of nonpartisan, nonsectarian brotherhood, compassion, and justice has been a source of hope and vision for countless millions.

More than other nations, America has been the beneficiary of this poet's gift. Over 7 million copies have been sold of his memorable work, "The Prophet," and it is to this book that successive generations of Americans have looked for inspiration and guidance; of course he has written many other works and is an accomplished artist as well.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate that we honor this man whose message has been a source of hope and vision for people the world over. The Kahlil Gibran memorial is being offered as a gift to the American people by the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation, a nonprofit organization whose projects commemorate the work and message of this artist.

As a member of the House Administration Committee and the congressional arts caucus, as one who shares a common ancestry, I am particularly pleased with the opportunity to honor a great American artist and philosopher, Kahlil Gibran. As we all know, cultural achievement is the result of individual accomplishments.

Mr. Speaker in closing I would like to cite a passage from the Talmud which Gibran himself often quoted: "We seek peace and pursue it. Namely, seek it in your own place and pursue it in another. Immutable friendship and eternal peace among all nations dreams? No, hatred and war are dreams, from which we shall some day awake."

Mr. Speaker, I urge all my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. FRENZEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, House Joint Resolution 580, as the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio has indicated, allows for the raising of a memorial to be paid for by the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation in memory of Mr. Gibran on Federal land within the District of Columbia. As usual, we require that the Secretary of the Interior, the Capitol Planning Commission and the Commission of Fine Arts agree on the site. The memorial will be raised at no cost to the United States except the obvious cost of maintaining it, which includes grass clipping and probably very little else.

The committee agreed unanimously on this bill. The message of Mr. Gibran is timeless and concentrates on peace, love, and brotherhood. A message that can hardly be ignored at any time in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate all those who had a part in this bill, but particularly our distinguished colleague from Texas [Mr. KAZEN] who has been so tireless in helping to move this bill through and gave so much assistance to the gentlewoman from Ohio and myself and others.

I have no requests for time and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. KAZEN].

Mr. KAZEN. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me.

Mr. Speaker, let me compliment the chairman of the committee, Mr. ANNUNZIO, the chairwoman of the subcommittee, Ms. OAKAR, and the ranking member, Mr. FRENZEL, for the expeditious manner in which they handled this resolution.

The subject of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, Kahlil Gibran, was a man that belonged to all nations and in all times. His sayings, his profound thoughts, have been handed down to us through the years. He has been translated into 50 languages. He was, is, and will continue to be a man of peace, a man of brotherhood, a man for all the world for all time.

Mr. Speaker, let me thank my colleagues for the support which they have given my resolution and hope that it will be passed unanimously.

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I also would like to join in complimenting the ranking minority leader of the House Administration Committee for his total cooperation with respect to moving this bill. I also want to say that it is very fitting, I think, that the gentleman from Texas, who has given 18 years of service to this body, who will not be returning to this body the next term, have as one of his last pieces of legislation this tribute to Kahlil Gibran.

□ 1410

Like Gibran, my friend from Texas is a man of peace, of wisdom, and has always been very, very unselfish in his manifestation toward others. And so we, in a sense pay tribute not only to Kahlil Gibran's memory today, but to our good friend from Texas, Congressman KAZEN.

● Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to add my voice to the many who feel that the great poet-philosopher Kahlil Gibran should be memorialized here in Washington. I do so while thinking of all of the people who were so inspired by the works of Kahlil Gibran. Being of Lebanese heritage, as was Mr. Gibran, I am doubly proud to speak today. Born in Lebanon, an immigrant to the United States, he belongs to the world. He wrote principally of love, death, religion, and his beloved homeland. In his own life, he experienced the pain, hardship, and anguish of failure, as well as success, yet he never abandoned his faith in the human spirit.

"The Prophet," first published in 1923, remains his most memorable work. Over 7 million copies have been printed in over 50 languages, testament to his appeal to a diversified public. "The Prophet" gives its readers solace and comfort, as well as renewed strength and a purpose in life. Many people, myself included, refer to Gibran in public because his inspirational words deserve to be shared with as many people as possible.

His words are often read at christenings. A popular passage from "The Prophet" relates the feeling of Gibran on the family and children and I would like to share it with you:

You may give them your love but not your thoughts, for they have their own thoughts.

You may house their bodies but not their souls, for their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.

You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.

For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday.

You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.

It is writings such as this that Kahlil Gibran has sent forth as his living arrows and the heart and souls of all of us has become his target. Writing in "The Prophet," Gibran said, "You give but little when you give of your possessions. It is when you give of yourself that you truly give." Gibran has given himself to all of us. I feel that it would be appropriate for us to give something back. A memorial to Gibran would serve as a constant reminder of the inspiration of his work, an inspiration whose pursuit would be consistent with the message in Gibran's life.

The city of Boston, Gibran's adopted city, has seen fit to honor Gibran by naming a park in Boston in his memory. I think that the Capital City of Gibran's adopted country should also honor this great man. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of House Joint Resolution 580 and let us start to truly give of ourselves in memory of Kahlil Gibran.●

● Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Committee on House Administration, to which House Joint Resolution 580 was referred, I rise in support of this legislation.

Last year people around the world celebrated the 100th anniversary of the birth of Kahlil Gibran, the artist and writer, whose work touched the hearts and minds of so many.

Kahlil Gibran, born in Lebanon, emigrated to America with his family at age 12. By his untimely death at age 48 he had produced a body of work that conveyed a message of nonpartisan, nonsectarian brotherhood, compassion, and justice which has been a source of hope and vision for people of all nations.

Passage of House Joint Resolution 580 would provide the authority to set in motion events that would establish a living memorial commemorating the life and work of this universally revered artist, poet, writer, and philosopher.

The Kahlil Gibran memorial is being offered as a gift to the American people by the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation. The cost of establishing the memorial will be funded by private donations to this nonprofit organization. Therefore, the United States shall not be charged with any expense associated with erecting the Kahlil Gibran memorial.

I also want to commend my colleague, Ms. OAKAR, whose enthusiastic support and diligent efforts, on behalf of this memorial project, were responsible for its unanimous approval by the Committee on House Administration.●

Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on House Joint Resolution 580, the joint resolution presently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. OAKAR] that the House suspend the rules and pass the resolution, House Joint Resolution 580, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the joint resolution, as amended, was passed.

The title of the joint resolution was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution authorizing the Kahlil Gibran Centennial Foundation to establish a memorial in the District of Columbia or its environs."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FISH AND WILDLIFE RESTORATION IN THE TRINITY RIVER BASIN

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1438) to provide for the restoration of the fish and wildlife in the Trinity River Basin, CA, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1438

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

FINDINGS

SECTION 1. The Congress finds that—

(1) the construction of the Trinity River division of the Central Valley project in California, authorized by the Act of August 12, 1955 (69 Stat. 719), has substantially reduced the streamflow in the Trinity River Basin thereby contributing to damage to pools spawning gravels, and rearing areas and to a drastic reduction in the anadromous fish populations and a decline in the scenic and recreational qualities of such river system;

(2) the loss of land areas inundated by two reservoirs constructed in connection with such project has contributed to reductions in the populations of deer and other wildlife historically found in the Trinity River Basin;

(3) the Act referred to in paragraph (1) of this section directed the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Secretary") to take appropriate actions to ensure the preservation and propagation of such fish and wildlife and additional authority was conferred on the Secretary under the Act approved September 4, 1980 (94 Stat. 1062), to take certain actions to mitigate the impact on fish and wildlife of the construction and operation of the Trinity River division;

(4) activities other than those related to the project including, but not limited to, inadequate erosion control and fishery harvest management practices, have also had significant adverse effects on fish and wildlife populations in the Trinity River Basin and are of such a nature that the cause of any detrimental impact on such populations cannot be attributed solely to such activities or to the project;

(5) a fish and wildlife management program has been developed by an existing interagency advisory group called the Trinity River Basin Fish and Wildlife Task Force; and

(6) the Secretary requires additional authority to implement a basinwide fish and wildlife management program in order to achieve the long-term goal of restoring fish and wildlife population in the Trinity River Basin to a level approximating that which existed immediately before the start of the construction of the Trinity River division.

TRINITY RIVER BASIN FISH AND WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

SEC. 2. (a) Subject to subsection (b), the Secretary shall formulate and implement a fish and wildlife management program for the Trinity River Basin designed to restore the fish and wildlife populations in such basin to the levels approximating those which existed immediately before the start of the construction referred to in section 1(1) and to maintain such levels. The program shall include the following activities:

(1) The design, construction, operation, and maintenance of facilities to—

(A) rehabilitate fish habitats in the Trinity River between Lewiston Dam and Weitchpec;

(B) rehabilitate fish habitats in tributaries of such river below Lewiston Dam and in the south fork of such river; and

(C) modernize and otherwise increase the effectiveness of the Trinity River Fish Hatchery.

(2) The establishment of a procedure to monitor (A) the fish and wildlife stock on a continuing basis, and (B) the effectiveness of the rehabilitation work.

(3) Such other activities as the Secretary determines to be necessary to achieve the long-term goal of the program.

(b)(1) The Secretary shall use the program described in section 1(5) of this Act as a basis for the management program to be formulated under subsection (a) of this section. In formulating and implementing such management program, the Secretary shall be assisted by an advisory group called the Trinity River Basin Fish and Wildlife Task Force established under section 3.

(2) In order to facilitate the implementation of those activities under the management program over which the Secretary does not have jurisdiction, the Secretary shall undertake to enter into a memorandum of agreement with those Federal, State, and local agencies, and the Indian Tribe, represented on the Task Force, established under section 3. The memorandum of agreement should specify those management program activities for which the respective signatories to the agreement are primarily responsible and should contain such commitments and arrangements between and among the signatories as may be necessary or appropriate to ensure the coordinated implementation of the program.

(3) To the extent not provided for under a memorandum of agreement entered into under paragraph (2), the Secretary shall coordinate the activities undertaken under such management program with the activities of State and local agencies, and the activities of other Federal agencies, which have responsibilities for managing public lands and natural resources within the Trinity River Basin.

TRINITY RIVER BASIN FISH AND WILDLIFE TASK FORCE

SEC. 3. (a) There is established the Trinity River Basin Fish and Wildlife Task Force (hereinafter in this Act referred to as the "Task Force") which shall be composed of fourteen members as follows:

(1) One officer or employee of the California Department of Fish and Game to be appointed by the administrative head of such department.

(2) One officer or employee of the California Department of Water Resources to be appointed by the administrative head of such department.

(3) One member or employee of the California Water Resources Control Board to be appointed by such board.

(4) One officer or employee of the California Department of Forestry to be appointed by the administrative head of such department.

(5) One officer or employee of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service to be appointed by the Secretary.

(6) One officer or employee of the United States Bureau of Reclamation to be appointed by the Secretary.

(7) One officer or employee of the United States Bureau of Land Management to be appointed by the Secretary.

(8) One officer or employee of the United States Bureau of Indian Affairs to be appointed by the Secretary.

(9) One officer or employee of the United States Forest Service to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

(10) One officer or employee of the United States Soil Conservation Service to be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

(11) One officer or employee of the United States National Marine Fisheries Service to be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce.

(12) One individual to be appointed by the board of supervisors of Humboldt County, California.

(13) One individual to be appointed by the board of supervisors of Trinity County, California.

(14) One individual to be appointed by the Hoopa Tribe of the Hoopa Valley Indian Reservation, California.

Any vacancy on the Task Force shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(b) If any member of the Task Force who was appointed to the Task Force as an officer or employee of a United States department or agency or as an officer or employee of a California State department or board leaves such office or employment, he may continue as a member of the Task Force for not longer than the end of the fourteen-day period beginning on the date he leaves such office or employment.

(c)(1) Members of the Task Force who are full-time officers or employees of the United States shall receive no additional pay, allowances, or benefits by reason of their service on the Task Force.

(2) No moneys authorized to be appropriated under this Act may be used to pay any member of the Task Force for service on the Task Force or to reimburse any agency or governmental unit for the pay of any such member for such service.

AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS

SEC. 4. (a) Subject to subsection (b), there are authorized to be appropriated—

(1) after fiscal year 1985, and to remain available until October 1, 1995, for design and construction under the management program formulated under section 2(a), $33,000,000, adjusted appropriately to reflect any increase or decrease in the engineering cost indexes applicable to the types of construction involved between (A) the month of May 1982, and (B) the date of enactment of any appropriation for such construction; and

(2) for the cost of operations, maintenance, and monitoring under that management program, $2,400,000 for each of the fiscal years in the 10-year period beginning on October 1, 1985.

(b) No monies appropriated under subsection (a) may be expanded, and no monies may be expended for carrying out Grass Valley Creek activities, after September 30, 1984, until the Secretary receives assurances satisfactory to him that—

(1) the State of California and the counties of Humboldt and Trinity in California will pay during each fiscal year (on the basis of such shares as the State and the counties mutually agree upon) to the Treasury of the United States an amount equal to 15 percent of the total amount of money that is expended during that year (A) from appropriations made under subsection (a), and (B) for carrying out Grass Valley Creek activities; and

(2) the public utilities, water disricts, and other direct purchasers of water and power from the Trinity river division of the Central Valley project referred to in section 1(1) will pay (on the basis of such shares as are determined by the Secretary) to the Treasury of the United States, within such period of time and in such increments as are satisfactory to the Secretary, an amount equal to 50 percent of the total amount of money that is expended (A) from appropriations made under subsection (a), and (B) for carrying out Grass Valley Creek activities.

(c) No monies appropriated under subsection (a) may be expended for any construction described in section 2(a)(1)(A) below the confluence of Grass Valley Creek and the Trinity River until the construction of the debris dam referred to in subsection (d)(1) is completed.

(d) For purposes of this section, the term "Grass Valley Creek activities" means the following activities authorized by the Act of September 4, 1980 (94 Stat. 1062):

(1) The construction of the Grass Valley Creek debris dam.

(2) The construction, operation, and maintenance of the sand dredging system in Grass Valley Creek.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KAZEN). Is a second demanded?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX].

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before the House today is a bill that has passed the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries by unanimous vote. It was authored on the Democratic side by our colleague, DOUG BOSCO, and is supported by the California delegation as well as the administration.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1438 would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to implement a management program to restore fish and wildlife in the Trinity River Basin in northwestern California.

The Trinity River system was historically one of the most productive river systems in California for salmon and steelhead. Water resource development in the basin resulted in the diversion of over 80 percent of Trinity River water to the Central Valley of California for hydroelectric and agricultural use. The combination of drastically reduced stream flows, excessive erosion due to poor land use practices, and inadequate regulation of fish harvest has led to serious declines in salmon and steelhead stocks.

The management program mandated by this legislation would coordinate and implement habitat improvement and stock recovery efforts in the basin. The bill provides for an equitable cost-sharing program which allows each of the various groups and agencies whose actions have caused the stock declines to contribute to the rehabilitation of those stocks.

H.R. 1438 authorizes a total of $33 million for construction activities associated with management program implementation over a 10-year period. The bill also authorizes $2.4 million annually for the same 10-year period for operations, maintenance and monitoring under the management program. Water and power beneficiaries of the diversion of Trinity River waters would reimburse the Treasury for 50 percent of the funds expended under this legislation, and the State of California and Humboldt and Trinity Counties would together reimburse a total of 15 percent of the expenditures for the restoration effort. This proportional reimbursement is consistent with an agreement worked out between the Department of the Interior and the State of California.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation was unanimously approved by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries. This restoration effort is vitally important to the State of California, and is supported by the administration. I believe that this legislation makes good environmental and economic sense, and I urge my colleagues to join me in strongly supporting approval of H.R. 1438, as amended.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1438 providing for the restoration of Trinity River fish and wildlife resources.

The construction of the Trinity River Division of the Central Valley Project in California has substantially reduced stream flow, badly damaged spawning areas, and together with other activities, has caused a drastic reduction in valuable salmon and trout populations.

This bill establishes a program for the restoration of fish and wildlife populations as promised prior to the construction of these diversion facilities. This program, which includes rehabilitation of fish habitats in the Trinity River, improvements in the Trinity River fish hatchery, monitoring of fish and wildlife stocks on a continuing basis, and monitoring of the rehabilitation work, will contribute significantly to the restoration of the Klamath-Trinity Rivers salmon production.

This bill also includes a reasonable cost-sharing requirement for accomplishing the work. Fifteen percent of the overall funding will be reimbursed by the State of California and local interests; 50 percent of the funding will be reimbursed by purchasers of water and power from the Trinity River Division; and the Federal Government will fund a 35-percent nonreimbursable share.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is supported by the administration, the congressional delegation from the area, and the State of California. I, therefore, urge my colleagues to join with me in supporting this much needed restoration work. Thank you.

I would like to compliment the Congressman from California, Mr. CHAPPIE, as the prime sponsor, Mr. Bosco and Mr. SHUMWAY for introducing this legislation, and the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. BREAUX, for bringing this bill to the floor of the House, and I urge its passage.

● Mr. BOSCO. Mr. Speaker, House consideration today of H.R. 1438 marks an important step toward fulfillment of the longstanding congressional obligation to help repair the economic and environmental damage caused by construction of the Federal Government's dams on California's Trinity River some 21 years ago. After years of inaction, House passage of this legislation will signify that the Federal Government is finally serious about working with State and local interests to address this damage.

The fish and wildlife restoration program outlined in H.R. 1438 is the product of years of effort by concerned citizens and Federal, State, and local representatives of the Trinity River Task Force. I would like to commend the task force members for their tireless efforts, as well as my colleagues, Messrs. BREAUX, CHAPPIE, and SHUMWAY for their assistance in crafting a fair and responsible cost-sharing agreement that has met the concerns of all interested parties, including the administration.

Twenty-five years ago, the Trinity River supported one of the largest runs of salmon and steelhead in California, These runs reproduced naturally year after year and provided a substantial contribution to the commercial, sport, and Indian fisheries that form one of the foundations of the region's economy.

Construction of the Trinity River Division of the Central Valley Project in the early 1960's had a devastating effect on the watershed's ecological balance, initiating a decline from which the fisheries have never recovered. Trinity and Lewiston Dams blocked fish access to more than 100 miles of prime salmon and steelhead spawning grounds. Fish habitat below the dams declined by an estimated 80 to 90 percent, due largely to the diversion of more than 80 percent of the river's annual flows over the mountains to the Central Valley Project. In addition, the reservoirs behind Trinity and Lewiston Dams inundated thousands of acres of wildlife habitat, resulting in the loss of an estimated 3,500 deer—nearly half of the total population. The repercussions of this damage have been many, affecting not only environmental and economic interests but Federal, State, and local regulatory decisions over Indian tribes' historic fishing rights, and commercial and sport fishery management plans as well.

Back in 1955, when construction of the Trinity River Diversion was authorized, Congress promised to provide full mitigation for any loss of fish and wildlife associated with the project. That promise has never been fulfilled, and damage that was done then is still taking its toll on the Trinity River basin and the people who depend on its resources. This legislation is designed to effectively meet this obligation. H.R. 1438 would authorize $57 million over a 10-year period to carry out the fish and wildlife restoration program: $33 million for design and construction, and $2.4 million annually for operations and maintenance. Specific actions authorized by H.R. 1438 include construction of a debris dam to halt the inflow of granitic sediment, modernization of the Trinity River fish hatchery, and fish habitat rehabilitation and mitigation. In addition, a comprehensive monitoring program would be established to assess the efficacy of the entire management program.

The fact that more than a dozen agencies—each with its own interests and concerns—were able to unite on a plan of action is testimony in itself to the urgency of the problem and the importance of the proposed solution. Every Federal agency with a management role in the Trinity River basin has had a hand in the development of this plan, and the proposal has the strong support of elected officials ranging from President Reagan, California's two Senators, and the northern California congressional delegation, to Governor Deukmejian and the affected county boards of supervisors. Groups that have often been at odds in the past—commercial, sport, and Indian fishermen, environmental groups and the timber industry and local chambers of commerce—are all supporting H.R. 1438 because it makes sense, environmentally and economically. The restortation program is a sound, cost-effective investment in our future.

The Interior Department has estimated that these and other program actions will result in an increase in the annual run size for chinook salmon by 160,000, coho 1,800, and steelhead 13,000—resulting in an additional 30,000 to 35,000 angler days. Overall, the Department estimates that the Trinity River restoration program will yield annual benefits of $40 million, a truly remarkable cost-to-benefit ratio.

We have made a major effort in California in recent years to restore fish habitat and populations. The State, in cooperation with the timber industry and fishing organizations, has spent millions of dollars restoring hundreds of miles of spawning streams. Federal agencies, including the Forest Service, the Bureau of Land Management and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, have all devoted significant resources to fisheries restoration and enhancement. But progress in the Trinity River basin has been hampered by the Federal Government's slowness in addressing the problems caused by construction and operation of the Trinity River Division of the CVP.

Congress took one major action in 1980 when it authorized construction of Buckhorn Dam, a sediment trap on Grass Valley Creek, the biggest single source of sediments entering the river below the dams. This project is a key element in the overall restoration plan proposed in H.R. 1438, and Congress provided initial funding for the project last year through the fiscal year 1984 Energy Water and Appropriations bill. Former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus set the stage for further action in 1981 when he ordered increased flows into the river below the dams, giving us the water we need to support a major habitat restoration program.

However, neither of these actions in itself will be sufficient to restore the depleted Trinity River salmon and steelhead populations. Only the comprehensive program authorized under H.R. 1438, with its goal of restoring the fish and wildlife populations in the basin to levels approximating those prior to 1963, meets the mitigation requirements of the Trinity River Division's original authorizing legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the positive testimony presented in hearings earlier this year before the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries only underscore the clear need for H.R. 1438 and the broad support the bill enjoys. Congress made a commitment to the people of this region nearly 30 years ago, and positive action by this Congress before the October adjournment date will signify that we are serious about fulfilling it. I urge my colleagues to grant their swift approval to H.R. 1438.●

● Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1438 will provide for the restoration of the fish and wildlife in the Trinity River Basin CA, and for other purposes.

31-059 O-87-20 (Pt. 19)

The Trinity River is the primary tributary of the Klamath River in northwestern California. The Klamath-Trinity River system has been an important production area for anadromous fish, including chinook salmon and steelhead trout.

Since 1963, when the Lewiston Dam was completed, salmon and steelhead runs in the Trinity River have undergone severe declines; approximately 80 percent, in the case of chinook salmon, and approximately 60 percent for steelhead trout. Other factors involved in the decline have been poor timber harvest practices, which have encouraged erosion and sedimentation within the watershed, and inadequate regulation of fish harvest.

H.R. 1438 addresses these problems by implementing a basin-wide fish and wildlife management program and requires that the program include fish and wildlife habitat rehabilitation, hatchery modernization, and monitoring of fish and wildlife stocks.

The Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee reported this bill, as amended, by a unanimous voice vote.

I urge my colleagues to pass H.R. 1438, as amended.●

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1438, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 1438, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

WETLANDS LOAN ACT EXTENSION

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5271) to extend the Wetlands Loan Act.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5271

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the first section of the Act entitled "An Act to promote the conservation of migratory waterfowl by the acquisition of wetlands and other essential waterfowl habitat, and for other purposes", approved October 4, 1961, is amended by striking out "September 30, 1984," and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1994,".

SEC. 2. Section 3 of such Act of October 4, 1961, is amended by striking out "October 1, 1984," each place it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1994,".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX].

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5271 would extend the authorization for appropriations under the Wetlands Loan Act for 10 years. The Wetlands Loan Act was passed in 1961 to complement the wetlands acquisition program established under the Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation Stamp Act of 1934, known also as the Duck Stamp Act. Under the Duck Stamp Act, all waterfowl hunters must purchase a stamp, currently priced at $7.50, which they attach to their State hunting permits. Proceeds from the sale of the stamp are used to purchase habitat for migratory waterfowl. In 1961, Congress enacted the Wetlands Loan Act to accelerate the acquisition of waterfowl habitat. This act authorized a loan of up to $200 million against future receipts from the sale of duck stamps. The loan, of which approximately $150 million has been appropriated of the $200 million authorized, expires at the end of this fiscal year. If it expires, it must be repaid with 75 percent of future duck stamp receipts.

This legislation would allow for approximately $50 million in appropriations over a 10-year period for wetlands acquisition. These funds would be used in the same manner as duck stamp receipts. I would also point out that the Interior appropriations bill, H.R. 5973, which has passed the House, would appropriate $9 million for wetlands acquisition under the Wetlands Loan Act and the Senate version of the appropriations bill contains $20 million, so there is a real need to extend the authorization.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I would point out the support which sportsmen give to the wetlands acquisition program deserves our praise and our support. They pay approximately $15 million per year in Federal license fees, and are willing to pay more. They pay almost $100 million per year in excise taxes on firearms and ammunition, most of which goes to State wildlife management programs. They pay for State licenses. They contribute to organizations such as Ducks Unlimited and the Nature Conservancy, which purchase, lease, or manage wetlands. And they do it all willingly, as part of a sporting tradition dating back 50 years. This legislation provides a measure of support for their efforts in maintaining a Federal responsibility—migratory waterfowl. I ask my fellow Members to approve this legislation.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 5271, to extend the Wetlands Loan Act for an additional 10 years.

The Wetlands Loan Act authorized $200 million as a loan against future duck stamp receipts for appropriation into the migratory bird conservation fund. The authorization currently expires September 30, 1984, with approximately $46 million remaining to be appropriated.

H.R. 5271 will reauthorize the fund until September 30, 1994, and will delay the beginning of the loan repayment from duck stamp receipts until October 1, 1994. This legislation contains no new authorization.

Mr. Speaker, the Wetlands Loan Act has provided much needed assistance to the Federal Government for purchase of migratory bird habitat to be included in the National Wildlife Refuge System. I, therefore, ask my colleagues to join with me in supporting this valuable program.

● Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 5271, legislation to extend the Wetlands Loan Act of 10 years through 1994.

The Wetlands Loan Act, also known as the Wetlands Acquisition Act, was passed in 1961 and authorized a loan of up to $200 million against future receipts from the sale of duck stamps in order to accelerate the acquisition of waterfowl habitat. To date, approximately $154 million has been appropriated under this authority which leaves approximately $46 million available.

The current authorization expires September 30, 1984, and this bill would extend that authorization for 10 years through 1994.

Wetlands provide essential spawning, breeding, feeding, and resting habitat for fish and shellfish as well as waterfowl. Environmental economists estimate that wetlands contribute $20 to $40 million a year to the national economy. One would need to pay at least $50,000 to $80,000 per acre to replace all of the functions that a wetlands performs. The most obvious and effective method to address the loss of wetlands is through acquisition and this legislation provides money for that purpose.

The full Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee favorably reported H.R. 5271 by a unanimous voice vote on April 25, 1984.

I strongly support this important legislation and urge my colleagues to adopt it.●

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BREAUX] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5271.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 5271, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT ORGANIZATION ACT OF 1984

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 6163) to amend title 28, United States Code, with respect to the places where court shall be held in certain judicial districts, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 6163

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Federal District Court Organization Act of 1984".

SEC. 2. The second sentence of subsection (c) of section 112 of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"Court for the Eastern District shall be held at Brooklyn, Hauppauge, and Hempstead (including the village of Uniondale).".

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking out "De Kalb," and "McHenry,"; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting "De Kalb," immediately after "Carroll,"; and

(B) by inserting "McHenry," immediately after "Lee,".

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) of this section shall apply to any action commenced in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois on or after the effective date of this Act, and shall not affect any action pending in such court on such effective date.

SEC. 4. The second sentence of subsection (b) of section 93 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting "Champaign/Urbana," before "Danville".

SEC. 5. (a) Subsection (b) of section 124 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out "six divisions" and inserting in lieu thereof "seven divisions";

(2) in paragraph (4) by striking out ", Hidalgo, Starr,"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(7) The McAllen Division comprises the counties of Hidalgo and Starr. "Court for the McAllen Division shall be held at McAllen.".

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) of this section shall apply to any action commenced in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas on or after the effective date of this Act, and shall not affect any action pending in such court on such effective date.

SEC. 6. (a) Paragraph (1) of section 90(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "Fannin," after "Dawson,";

(2) by inserting "Gilmer," after "Forsyth,"; and

(3) by inserting "Pickens," after "Lumpkin,".

(b) Paragraph (2) of section 90(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking out "Fannin,", "Gilmer,", and "Pickens,".

(c) Paragraph (6) of section 90(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking out "Swainsboro" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "Statesboro".

(d) The amendments made by this section shall apply to any action commenced in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia on or after the effective date of this Act, and shall not affect any action pending in such court on such effective date.

SEC. 7. Section 85 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting "Boulder," before "Denver".

SEC. 8. The second sentence 126 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting "Bennington," before "Brattleboro".

SEC. 9. (a) The amendments made by this Act shall take effect on January 1, 1985.

(b) The amendments made by this Act shall not affect the composition, or preclude the service, of any grand or petit jury summoned, empaneled, or actually serving on the effective date of this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER].

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the House has before it H.R. 6163, the Federal District Court Organization Act of 1984. Each Congress several bills are introduced to change the geographic organization of the Federal courts and to add new statutory places of holding court in some districts. Near the end of the Congress, the subcommittee I chair—the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties, and the Administration of Justice—conducts a hearing on all legislation relating to this issue. We examine the merits of each proposal based on the information submitted to us by the sponsoring Members, the Judicial Conference, the U.S. Department of Justice, and interested bar associations and individuals. The proposals, which we find meritorious and necessary, are included in an omnibus bill which we then send forward. As a general proposition, only proposals that have no opposition are included in the omnibus bill. H.R. 6163 is the omnibus bill resulting from our consideration of such proposals in this Congress.

Before turning to the substance of the bill, I would like to thank my subcommittee members, especially the ranking minority member, the gentleman from California [Mr. MOORHEAD] for assisting in this endeavor.

In the greater scheme of things, the contents of this bill do not appear important. Nonetheless, this bill is very significant not only to the judicial and congressional districts involved, but also to the judges, jurors, lawyers, prosecutors, and litigants who participate in the judicial process and make it operate fairly and efficiently at a local level.

A brief summary of the bill is now in order. H.R. 6163 will realign the boundaries of divisions within judicial districts in Georgia, Illinois, and Texas; and will create an additional statutorily designated place of holding court in districts in Illinois, New York, Vermont, and Colorado. In addition, the bill will move the headquarters of the Swainsboro division of the Southern District of Georgia to Statesboro, rename the division as the "Statesboro Division," and eliminate the designation of Swainsboro as a place of holding court in that division.

All of the proposals have the support of the U.S. Department of Justice and the Judicial Conference of the United States as well as judges and bar associations in the affected districts. The proposal to change the Swainsboro division of the Southern District of Georgia is, in fact, opposed by the county bar associations surrounding Swainsboro, but is supported by all the Federal judges in the district and the bar associations surrounding Statesboro.

As to costs, two of the proposals to realign the boundaries of divisions within districts will redistribute the district's caseload from one courthouse to another, and will result in no additional costs to the Government. The costs of creating the McAllen division of the Southern District of Texas will be largely offset by the anticipated savings in jury fees and transportation costs currently being expended due to the large geographical area covered by the existing division. Due to the anticipated use of existing facilities in the affected districts in Vermont, Colorado, and Georgia, the cost of designating a new place of holding court in those districts will be minimal. In the eastern district of New York, and the central district of Illinois, where funds may have to be expended to acquire the necessary space for a new court, the expenditure is justified by the fact that existing facilities are inadequate and additional space will need to be acquired whether or not a new place of holding court is designated. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that no significant costs to the Federal Government would result from enactment of this bill.

The hearing testimony, supporting documents, and House report filed today have demonstrated the need for the changes proposed by this legislation. I urge your support of H.R. 6163.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to concur in the remarks of the chairman of the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties, and the Administration of Justice, and indicate my support for H.R. 6163, the Federal District Court Organization Act of 1984. H.R. 6163 is an omnibus proposal which has the support of the U.S. Department of Justice, the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts, and the congressional delegations involved.

The purpose of the proposed legislation is to realign the boundaries of divisions within three judical districts, to statutorily create an additional place of holding court in four judicial districts, and to change the place of holding court in one judicial district. As a result of these changes, H.R. 6163 will help keep the Federal judicial system up to date with demographic, economic, and societal changes in several of its districts.

I think it is important to note that proposals authorizing new places of holding court or making changes in the organizational or geographical configuration of individual judicial districts are carefully reviewed by both the Judicial Conference of the United States and the U.S. Department of Justice. It is the position of the Judicial Conference that: "* * * changes in the geographical configuration and organization of existing federal judicial districts should be enacted only after a showing of strong and compelling need." That is as it should be. Likewise, the Department of Justice consults with the U.S. attorneys offices in the affected districts, who are able to assess local needs and conditions. The Department of Justice also considers the fiscal impact of the proposals, including the cost of obtaining the necessary office space, and per diem, and travel costs for court personnel. On the issue of the costs of H.R. 6163, the Congressional Budget Office has estimated that no significant cost to the Federal Government, or to State, or local governments would result from enactment of the bill. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support the passage of H.R. 6163.

● Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. Speaker, I support the legislation before us today.

I want to thank Chairman KASTENMEIER and ranking Republican MOORHEAD of the Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties, and the Administration of Justice for their prompt attention to this legislation.

This bill incorporates the provisions of legislation I introduced in June of this year that would create an additional site for holding court in the State of Vermont.

This would involve no additional expenditure for the Federal Government. It would, however, provide a site for southwestern Vermont which will better take advantage of the experience and wisdom of Judge James Holden, who is taking senior status.

This legislation is unanimously supported in my State. I would be remiss if I did not also express my appreciation for the work Mr. Steven Flanders, circuit executive for the second circuit, and Mr. William Weller, Legislative Affairs Officer of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

I urge my colleagues to give this legislation their support.●

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 6163.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 6163, on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

CONSENT OF CONGRESS TO AMENDMENT TO DELAWARE RIVER BASIN COMPACT

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5782) granting the consent of Congress to an amendment to the Delaware River Basin Compact.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5782

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Congress consents to an amendment to the Delaware River Basin Compact which has been enacted by the States of Delaware, New York, and New Jersey and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and the effect of which is to amend section 12.9 of Article 12 of the Delaware River Basin Compact to read as follows:

"12.9 Interest. Bonds shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Commission, payable annually or semiannually.".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, a second is not required on this motion.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KINDNESS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER].

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the proposed legislation is to grant congressional consent to an amendment to the Delaware River Basin Compact authorizing the Commission to fix the interest rate applicable to bonds issued under section 12.9 of the compact.

On September 27, 1961, Public Law 87-328 was approved consenting to the Delaware River Basin Compact. Article 12 of the compact included specific provisions authorizing the Commission to issue bonds. This bill only relates to section 12.9 of that article which presently provides as follows:

12.9 Interest. Bonds shall bear interest at a rate of not to exceed six percent per annum, payable annually or semiannually.

In view of current rates of interest applicable to other bonds and securities, the 6-percent interest is totally unrealistic and has served to defeat the efforts of the Delaware River Basin Commission to fund its projects relating to water, pollution control, hydroelectric power, and other water resources in the Delaware River Basin through the sale of bonds.

Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, and New Jersey, the participating States, have all enacted this amendment and copies of each of these statutes have been appended to the report filed in the House. The final step is consent by Congress, and this bill provides for that consent.

As I have indicated, the provision which is being amended was included in the original compact as approved on September 27, 1961. It, therefore, has not been changed in the 23 years since the Congress first granted its consent. Further the provisions of the compact were formulated, considered, and adopted by each of the four participating States prior to that date which, of course, means that the provisions of section 12.9 were formulated in that earlier period. The intervening years have witnessed marked changes including those affecting interest rates. The solution proposed in the amendment and approved by the State legislatures is clearly a needed and practical one. It is recommended that the bill be considered favorably.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1430

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on its face the amendment which is the subject matter of this legislation is in the best interest of the States which are parties to the interstate compact involved, the Delaware River Basin Interstate Compact.

In addition to that, your committee can assure that the documentation is in order, which is the real function, as I see it, to be performed by the Congress in approving interestate compacts or amendments thereto. Clearly it is the States themselves who determine what is in their best interest and the terms of their agreement. The approval of the Congress is intended to assure against agreement that would be clearly against public policy, and it is quite clear that this is not against public policy, and also to ensure that the documentation is in order and that the States have indeed enacted the legislation required.

This has been done, Mr. Speaker, and I, therefore, gladly join in support of this measure and urge its adoption.

● Mr. HUGHES. Mr. Speaker, as you know, H.R. 5782 grants congressional consent to an amendment to the Delaware River Basin Compact authorizing the Commission to set interest rates on bonds which it issues. Section 12.9 of article 12 of the compact presently limits the interest rate payable on bonds issued by the Commission to no more than 6 percent per year. This provision has made it virtually impossible for the Commission to issue bonds in today's competitive financial markets.

H.R. 5782 is straightforward and noncontroversial. The States of Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, and New Jersey, which are members of the compact, have already enacted legislation approving the removal of the 6-percent limit on interest and allowing the Commission to determine the appropriate interest rate for bonds which it issues.

The Delaware River Basin Commission is presently considering the construction of several small hydroelectric powerplants for which it hopes to issue bonds in the near future. Due to the energy-producing potential of small hydroelectric units, the Commission has received strong support for these projects. Indeed, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has already approved one of the Commission's projects for licensing.

Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any opposition to this measure. Companion legislation has already been introduced in the Senate. I urge my colleagues to adopt H.R. 5782.●

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KASTENMEIER] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 5782.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 5782, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

GRANTING CITIZENSHIP POSTHUMOUSLY TO CPL. WLADYSLAW STANISZEWSKI

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 960) to confer citizenship posthumously on Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 960

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Corporal Wladyslaw Staniszewski, a national of Great Britain, who was killed in action on July 7, 1967, in the Republic of Vietnam while serving in the United States Marine Corps shall be held and considered to have been a citizen of the United States at the time of his death:

Provided, That no benefits shall thereafter derive to survivors.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI] will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KINDNESS] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI].

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, what we have today is the solution of a problem—and I might say this is the end of a long, tough road and much work, most of which has been pursued by our friend and colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY] on behalf of a young man who, while a resident alien of the United States—his home originally was Great Britain—served with honor and valor in Vietnam, which conflagration took his life at a time somewhat prior to the time that he would have normally earned his U.S. citizenship under existing law.

The service of Corporal Staniszewski was totally honorable. At no point was there anything in his military record or private life that would be a stain on the honor of this adopted Nation of his.

The amendment to the bill, to which I think there is no objection by the sponsor of the bill, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY], will insure that there can be no pensions or benefits of any sort derived by any of the corporal's surviving relatives under the terms of this posthumous citizenship.

There is, however, a certain amount of concern on the part of our committee. The matter was scheduled, as Members would know, for a hearing on tomorrow in our subcommittee, and then, of course, action would be taken there and it would be sent to the full committee and then surely it would go from the full committee to the floor. But for reasons of the need to move swiftly, since our session is winding to a close, and because of the need to honor this young man, the decision was made to move this bill extraordinarily from the subcommittee, which had not yet worked on it, right to the floor of the House. It is almost an unprecedented act. At least certainly it is unusual, if not unprecedented, and at a given point, when I yield time to the gentleman from Massachusetts, I will ask him perhaps to comment on whether or not there is any precedential value or precedential impact of this activity today.

Other legislation, Mr. Speaker, has been introduced on behalf of others who, form our inquiry, were in the very same boat as Corporal Staniszewski. For example, some 500 people, men for the most part, were in various periods of their permanent residency serving for the most part in Vietnam and, because of death, were not able to complete that period of residency leading to citizenship. So another area of precedent is whether or not this has any precedence toward that greater class of people whose names do not appear on this piece of legislation.

We have obtained from the Department of Justice of the United States a letter dated August 9 in which the Justice Department concludes that it has no objection to the enactment of this legislation, and it further advises that the Office of Management and Budget has advised the Department of Justice that it has no objection to the submission of this report, that is, the report of the Department of Justice with respect to this bill.

So to sum up, Mr. Speaker, I personally have only the highest of respect for the decedent. He served his adopted Nation nobly, with valor and honor, in a cause that led others to seek other activities than the service of their country. It happened that death intervened before he was able to serve out the fullness of his residency. Therefore, death intervened before the young man could earn his citizenship. He would have earned it. He was an honorable man in service and out of service.

I personally have no objection to this, and I am sure I speak in behalf of many of our colleagues on the Judiciary Committee, if not all. The reason I cannot speak authoritatively is that we never did have our hearings and we never did have the votes in the subcommittee and the full committee which typically would have occurred by this time in the session.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he might consume to my friend, the sponsor of this bill, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY].

Mr. DONNELLY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 960 confers posthumous citizenship on a young man who gave his life in service to the United States of America.

Wladyslaw Staniszewski was a corporal in the U.S. Marine Corps when he was killed in action in Vietnam 17 years ago.

He was born in Scotland in 1947 and he emigrated to the United States in December 1964. He was admitted to this country as a permanent resident and he had intended to spend the rest of his life here.

Less than a year and a half after he came to this country, he swore his allegiance to the United States of America when he took the oath as a U.S. marine.

There is no doubt that he took that oath very seriously. When he received his orders for Vietnam, he said it would be treasonous for him to abandon his commitment to this country and to the Marine Corps, even though he was still a British citizen and could have left this country easily. He was committed to serving this Nation because he now saw himself as an American.

Wladyslaw Staniszewski's own words speak most eloquently of his belief: "I want to make my roots here," he said. "If a country is worth living in, it is worth fighting for."

His comrades in the Marine Corps remember him as an inspiration and as a leader. Shortly after his arrival in Vietnam he was promoted to corporal. He was briefly assigned to supply duty, but he insisted on being reassigned to the front lines because he felt it was his duty to fight for his country.

A man who served with him in Vietnam recalled recently, "Scotty was a very patriotic man. He was more patriotic than most Americans were during the Vietnam war. Scotty was really impressed with the United States. He knew that one day he would become an American citizen. That was his goal in life."

That life ended abruptly on July 7, 1967. It was just 2 weeks after he turned 20. While on patrol in Quang Nam Province, Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski was killed by a Vietcong hand grenade.

At the time of his death, his parents asked the Marines one question they knew their son wanted answered: Was he now considered a U.S. citizen? They were told he was not, that he was still legally a citizen of Great Britain.

It is a sad irony of our law that an alien who serves honorably in our Armed Forces during wartime is awarded citizenship upon discharge from the service, but because Scotty Staniszewski gave his life while serving the United States, he died a foreigner in the eyes of our law.

In the 3½ years since this bill was first introduced, America has taken many important steps "to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle." We have made an effort to treat the physical and psychological wounds of those who returned from Vietnam. We have honored those who died with a state funeral for the representative of all our war dead, the Unknown Soldier. We have renewed our efforts to account for those whose fate is unknown. And we have dedicated a national monument to all who served.

Today, we try to bind up one remaining wound.

By recognizing Wladyslaw Staniszewski as a citizen, we are not honoring him so much as we are honoring ourselves and our Nation. We are saying that his patriotism, his loyalty, his courage, and his full measure of devotion are virtues that we as Americans want to be associated with.

It is an extraordinary step for Congress to grant citizenship posthumously, but there have been precedents. Other fallen servicemen from Vietnam, Korea, and World War II have been recognized in this manner.

Corporal Staniszewski's family has made it clear they do not seek and would not become eligible for any additional benefit as a result of this legislation. It will not affect the immigration status or citizenship of any other individual.

Corporal Staniszewski's cause has won the support of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, the major national veterans organizations, countless local veterans posts, the Massachusetts legislature, numerous city and town governments, and literally thousands upon thousands of individuals across this Nation who have written and petitioned Congress to grant him citizenship.

His parents, Frank and Rosina Staniszewski, his sister Lorraine, and his brother Daryl, became naturalized American citizens in 1970. His brother has just concluded 4 years service in the U.S. Navy. Corporal Staniszewski's family has kept faith with America. Now let us keep faith with them.

Wladyslaw Staniszewski swore his allegiance to the United States. He gave his life in its service. An American flag draped his coffin. Let us acknowledge, finally, that our country and our flag are his, too.

□ 1440

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONNELLY. I would be happy to yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's statement. It was eloquent in behalf of a deserving young man.

At one point—and let me first apologize for having pronounced the corporal's name incorrectly, Staniszewski.

Is it the gentleman's understanding that the family does not wish and would not accept and does not expect any benefits of any sort deriving from his citizenship?

Mr. DONNELLY. Corporal Staniszewski's family, Frank and Rosina Staniszewski, have told me from the outset that under no circumstances do they want, nor would they accept any assistance. Their goal in seeking this posthumous citizenship is so that that young man's name that appears on the Vietnam Memorial is the only name that is not an American citizen of those 57,000 young men and they feel that he gave his life for his adopted country and they feel that he deserves the honor of citizenship.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I think that is very well said.

One last observation, if I could ask my friend, and that is, the precedential value, if any, or effect of the adoption of this legislation today upon that group of several hundred that the gentleman himself has sought to sponsor by way of another piece of legislation, people who occupy the same role as Corporal Staniszewski, who had as a permanent resident gone to serve and were killed, I ask the gentleman the question, does the adoption of this bill today preclude any action that any subcommittee or any future committee would take on the other pending legislation?

Mr. DONNELLY. No; I do not think it would. Our research has shown us that there are 12 Vietnam-era resident aliens that were given posthumous citizenship in 1969, as I recall.

I firmly believe and have filed a bill that is before the gentleman's subcommittee that it ought to be an automatic granting of citizenship to any resident alien who gives his life for this country.

This case by case makes it very difficult for the committee and clearly makes it difficult for the family, and the amount of personal trials and tribulations they have to go through. I do not think they ought to have that.

I would hope that in the next session we would have an opportunity to appear before the Commission and look into this matter so we can make it possible for them to have this.

Mr. MAZZOLI. We certainly will.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join to the extent that any one of us or any of us together may have to add honor to the name of Corporal Staniszewski.

I do at the same time take note of the unusual nature of the proceedings. It has been mentioned here that it is unusual to grant posthumously the citizenship that would be conferred by H.R. 960, but that is not the matter to which I refer.

I refer instead to the fact that H.R. 960 was not on the list of suspensions for today and that there was, indeed, a hearing scheduled in the subcommittee for the bill tomorrow.

I understand the pressures that grow at the end of any legislative session. There are many Members of this House who are concerned with pieces of legislation, some of great moment, some of lesser moment, that may not be dealt with by the end of the session unless something extraordinary is done. Certainly in this case it would appear that there is merit for as much to be done on an extraordinary basis as one could imagine; but I do believe that it would be fair to allow the Members of the minority to have some advance notice of such matters, that is, those involved in the subcommittee, and I shall yield to the gentleman from California in a short while, but I would urge that when matters of this sort are done on a highly preferential basis, it is not the subject matter of the legislation that is involved, but the courtesy of extending certain notice, you know, clearly absolutely certain notice to the ranking minority member of the subcommittee that the matter is to be taken up on the House floor.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINDNESS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I am pleased that the gentleman made that statement, because there was a paucity of notice, and that is an overstatement, to tell you the truth, of when this matter would come up. I heard about it when I was home for the weekend, but I think it was spawned by a confluence of events that neither the gentleman from Ohio nor the gentleman from Kentucky really had any control over, but it has been the position of the gentleman from Kentucky, having served with the gentleman from Ohio as well as the gentleman from California, to always work collegially toward passing good legislation. Here we have good legislation, but there was not much collegiality in the sense of the lead up to it, but I think it is worthy legislation.

The gentleman from Massachusetts has indicated that he sees no precedent in this adoption toward the other cases which might be pending.

There is an amendment, to be sure, for example, that there is no derivation under this grant, so all things considered, while I share the gentleman's feeling from a majority standpoint as well that notice was not as good as it has been in the past, it is overlookable I think under the circumstances.

Mr. KINDNESS. Well, I thank the gentleman for his comment and his contribution to the development of this subject, but I feel that I must add one other point, and it has to do with the way this House operates as an institution now and in the years ahead.

Our committee system has its flaws and its faults and sometimes it is a disappointment or a frustration, but it is a part, an essential part of the effective functioning of the House of Representatives.

The committee in this case has been usurped, OK. That probably should be the will of the House and probably will be, no question about that; but if it will be on this occasion, when will it be again?

The Committee on the Judiciary has experienced quite a number of times during this Congress as well as prior Congresses the situation in which its jurisdiction is avoided and the committee does not function to perform that which it ought to for the House of Representatives.

This is such a case in a sense. I do not think there is disagreement on the subject matter, but there is disagreement as to not utilizing the procedure of the House of Representatives.

If I were the author of H.R. 960, I think I would feel the same frustration. I think I would attempt to do the very same sort of thing, get the matter accomplished.

I congratulate the gentleman from Massachusetts for his tenacity in getting it done and for having a Speaker from his State, I suppose, but it is something that I think we ought to think about before repeating it in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. LUNGREN].

□ 1450

Mr. LUNGREN. Mr. Speaker, as the ranking Republican on the Subcommittee on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law, I rise in support of H.R. 960. When you realize, going through the material, that we are talking about an individual, or when I realize we are talking about an individual essentially the same age or born the same time as I was, going through the same things I was going through at that time, one who served in Vietnam while the other was fortunate enough to remain here in the United States attending college at the time that Corporal Staniszewski was killed, you have an empathy that goes beyond the normal cases that we have appear before our committee.

I was looking forward to holding the hearings with the chairman of the subcommittee on this issue tomorrow. It had been scheduled for sometime in the regular process of business. I was under the understanding as late as an hour ago that this was not going to be considered here today, that we were going to have the hearing tomorrow and proceed to conclude this before we wrap up the session. This is the reason that I was absent when this started, having been officially informed or actually informed by my office about 3 minutes after the gentleman from Kentucky stood up.

So while I very strongly support this legislation, I just as strongly protest the procedure under which what I would consider to be normal courtesy was not extended to the members of the subcommittee working on this, certainly not to the ranking member, and I know the chairman was in the same position.

There is no doubt, however, times when Members feel they must go beyond the committee. This is one and I salute the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DONNELLY] for having successfully brought this to the floor. As someone mentioned, it is helpful to have the Speaker of the House from the same State as the author of the bill. That certainly does not hurt, and at times I wish I had the same support.

Mr. DONNELLY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUNGREN. I will be happy to yield to my friend from Massachusetts.

Mr. DONNELLY. I want to stop the gentleman before he gets in trouble, saying too many laudatory things about the Speaker from Massachusetts.

Mr. LUNGREN. I was just about ready to pause.

Mr. DONNELLY. Let me say clearly there is some confusion about how this legislation was handled. Let me assure the gentleman that I have the highest respect for the gentleman from California [Mr. LUNGREN] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI], and even higher respect for the committee and the process. There was a lack of communication and some confusion over when this bill was going to be called. I think it was just that it was a good faith confusion, and let me assure the gentleman, and I want that stated in the RECORD.

The overwhelming issue today, though, is honoring this young man's sacrifice and service to this country. I have spoken to my friend from California about this personally less than 2 weeks ago, as I recall, and he indicated to me his interest in this legislation.

I would just take this opportunity to say I am sorry for the confusion and the process they went through, and I was somewhat confused about the process when I arrived here this afternoon, too. I think we are all in the same boat. But the bottom line is, even though our feathers are a little ruffled on all edges, that we are doing the right thing and the honorable and decent thing by passing this legislation.

Mr. LUNGREN. I thank the gentleman for his comments. It does give me a deal of pleasure to be able to support this bill when we consider the temper of the times surrounding the corporal's entrance into the Army and his service in Vietnam when there were those who did not so eagerly serve their country, when there were those, in fact, that fled from the service of their country, and when in the intervening years we made provisions to excuse those under certain circumstances who fled the call of duty to the country. It seems to me altogether proper that we grant citizenship to one who not being a citizen did not have that same obligation but gave the ultimate sacrifice.

I would also say to the gentleman that I understand his frustration with the committee process at times. Believe me, as a member of the Judiciary Committee I understand it as well if not more than the gentleman from Massachusetts does.

Perhaps in the next few weeks I can manifest that frustration more clearly to the gentleman and solicit the gentleman's support in trying to overcome that frustration as we try to proceed with other good legislation. So I salute the gentleman for the work he has done on this bill and rise in strong support of this bill.

I would hope that our colleagues would pass this unanimously.

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I would just quickly say that the amendment to the bill simply adds language to this effect: "Provided, That no benefit shall thereafter derive to survivors under this grant of posthumous citizenship."

● Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with my colleagues today in honoring the memory of Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski, truly an American hero. Wladyslaw "Scotty" Staniszewski was born in Scotland in 1947, to a Polish father and Scottish mother. His parents, Frank and Rosina Staniszewski, came to this country in 1963, and Scotty joined them here in 1964. They settled in Brockton, MA, with the intention of becoming naturalized American citizens.

In 1966 Scotty enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps. As he told his mother at the time: "A country worth living in is a country worth fighting for." At that point Scotty was not yet a U.S. citizen. Normally a resident alien who serves in the Armed Forces would receive his citizenship upon being honorably discharged. Scotty served honorably, and achieved the rank of corporal, but he never received the citizenship of the country he loved and fought for. Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski was killed in action on July 7, 1967, in Quang Nam Province.

Mr. Speaker, surely it is an anomaly that Corporal Staniszewski, who gave his life for this country, should have died a foreigner in the eyes of the law. It is time this were corrected. I am grateful to my friend and colleague, BRIAN DONNELLY, for pushing this legislation. Most of all I must congratulate Frank and Rosina Staniszewski for their perseverance and for their patriotism. Surely they epitomize what is great about this country, a nation built by immigrants. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 960, so that a great American will at last be recognized as such. Thank you.●

● Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise before this Chamber today to speak on behalf of legislation before the House introduced by my colleague, BRIAN DONNELLY.

The purpose of this legislation, House Resolution 960, is to bestow citizenship posthumonously on Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski who was killed in action while fighting in the Vietnam war.

According to the Department of the Navy, Corporal Staniszewski was born on June 22, 1947 in Scotland. He emigrated to the United States in January 1965, and on June 30, 1966, he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps; despite the fact that he was still a British subject. He arrived in the Republic of Vietnam on April 9, 1967, and tragically was killed just 3 months later on July 7, 1967.

Before his untimely death, Corporal Staniszewski had an exceptionally honorable military record. He held the rank of corporal, and had such distinguished decorations as the Vietnam Service Medal with Star, the Vietnam Campaign Medal with Device, and the National Defense Service Medal.

Customarily, resident aliens that serve in our Armed Forces are granted citizenship as soon as they are honorably discharged from duty. This is done in recognition of the service they have rendered in upholding the American constitution. Tragically, because Corporal Staniszewski lost his life before being discharged, he remains a resident alien in the eyes of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

I join with my colleague, BRIAN DONNELLY, in asking for unanimous support of House Resolution 960, in order to grant this man U.S. citizenship. Corporal Staniszewski demonstrated his devotion to this Nation by the very fact that he enlisted in the U.S. Armed Forces, and fought nobly in the name of freedom and dignity for those who did not have such rights. In doing so, he gave the greatest sacrifice he could ever give to a country; his life.

At the very least, this Nation owes Scotty Staniszewski the gift of citizenship. In this case, citizenship is not a gift to be given, but a reward to be bestowed after being so honorably earned.●

● Mr. BOLAND. Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H.R. 960, which would confer citizenship posthumously on U.S. Marine Cpl. Wladyslaw "Scotty" Staniszewski, and urge its adoption by the House.

For most of us, U.S. citizenship is a gift conferred by birth. It is not something we have to earn and in spite of the tremendous benefits which it conveys, we are rarely called upon to make a direct effort in its maintenance. For some, it becomes something taken for granted and we tend to forget how highly it is prized by millions of people in countries all over the world.

Scotty Staniszewski was not born an American citizen. A native of Poland and a national of Great Britain, Corporal Staniszewski came to the United States with his family in 1963. He desperately wanted to become a U.S. citizen and volunteered to serve with the Marine Corps, fully aware of the fact that Marines were at that time fighting and dying in Vietnam. He could have easily avoided those risks, but he chose to demonstrate his fidelity to our country in a most concrete way—by bearing arms in its service. In 1967, less than 3 years after coming to our shores, Corporal Staniszewski was killed in action in Quang Nam, Vietnam. He died a U.S. Marine but not a U.S. citizen; the only U.S. serviceman to die in Vietnam in that status.

Today this House can begin the process through which posthumous citizenship can be legislatively conferred on Scotty Staniszewski. In so doing we recognize not only his sacrifice but the love of country which prompted it. By his deeds Corporal Staniszewski won the right to be called an American and it is appropriate that this country, on whose behalf he died, acknowledge that fact. H.R. 960 will accomplish that result. I want to compliment my colleague from Massachusetts Congressman DONNELLY for introducing the bill, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of it, and I commend it to the House.

Mr. Speaker, the Springfield Daily News, on August 15 carried an excellent editorial on Corporal Staniszewski. I would like to insert that editorial at this point in the RECORD.

[From the Springfield Daily News, Aug. 15, 1984]

GRANT MARINE CITIZENSHIP

The bill to grant citizenship posthumously to Marine Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski should be passed and signed by the president.

Staniszewski's family migrated to Massachusetts from Scotland, and the son could easily have avoided U.S. military service.

Instead, he volunteered, became a Marine and would have been eligible for citizenship when he completed his tour of duty in Vietnam. However, he was killed by shrapnel fire when he was 20. That was 17 years ago.

His father has been trying to achieve the son's wish to be an American citizen, and Rep. Brian J. Donnelly, D-Boston, filed such a bill in Congress.

The chairman of the House immigration subcommittee requested the U.S. Justice Department for a letter saying it had no objection to the citizenship petition. For some reason or none, the Justice Department waited 14 months before responding that it had no objection.

Congress will not go back into session until after Labor Day, but a hearing on the Staniszewski bill has been set for the week of Sept. 9.

However, the congressmen want to adjourn less than a month later to start campaigning, and so the bill must make rapid progress.

Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Springfield, and Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Pittsfield, have become cosponsors of the bill, and they should begin pushing now for a quick passage and signing of this bill.

It would be cruel to make the Staniszewski family endure more months of red tape.

The Massachusetts delegation should make this bill a priority, and make certain that it passes during the brief session next month.●

● Mr. HILLIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to voice my support for H.R. 960—a bill which would confer American citizenship on the late Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski.

It's been 17 years since a piece of shrapnel killed Corporal Staniszewski while he was serving with the U.S. Marines in South Vietnam's Quang Nam Province. "Scotty," as everyone called him, had moved with his parents to Brockton, MA, from Scotland when he was 17.

Even though he was a British national, he enlisted in the U.S. Marines just after he turned 19 and was shipped to Vietnam where he was killed in action. He died without his greatest wish being fulfilled—American citizenship.

It will take a special act of Congress through passage of H.R. 960 to grant Scotty his wish. His parents, who have since become citizens, have carried on a long fight to see this day and they are to be admired for their perseverance.

In my view, there is something terribly inconsistent and wrong with a policy which says resident aliens who survive wartime service in the U.S. military are entitled to citizenship upon discharge but those who die forever remain noncitizens.

On Memorial Day, we make so much of our appreciation for those who die serving the cause of freedom. Isn't it a bit hypocritical, then, to refute citizenship to those who died for a country they longed to call home?

Scotty Staniszewski is an example of a cold bureaucratic policy that fails to consider the love a man had for this Nation—a love so strong that he was willing to risk his life for it.

Scotty's citizenship is what we're voting on today. The sad thing is, there have been others that have deserved our vote, too.

I'm supporting this individual humanitarian action but, beyond that, I hope the Congress will consider legislation which would automatically confer posthumous citizenship on any noncitizen who honorably fought and died for this country.●

● Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 960, to award citizenship posthumously to Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski. I am a proud cosponsor of this legislation honoring a man who gave his life for the country he loved.

Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski, known to his friends and family as Scotty, was killed in Vietnam on July 7, 1967. Scotty's father served in the Polish Army during World War II spending most of the war in a POW camp. After the war, Scotty's family fled to Scotland and later emigrated to the United States in 1964 when Scotty was only 17. In 1966, before becoming a U.S. citizen, Scotty enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps.

Normally, resident aliens who serve in the U.S. Armed Forces during wartime are granted citizenship upon honorable discharge. Regrettably, Scotty never had this opportunity. As a result, this honorable and courageous man who died fighting for America is not considered a citizen of the United States.

Scotty's heroic action, in and of itself, deserves to be recognized by the U.S. Government. However, the saga of Wladyslaw Staniszewski should be brought to the attention of the entire Nation for another reason. For his commitment to this Nation, his patriotism and unwavering desire to preserve freedom is something for which we all are proud. Scotty gave the most precious gift of all for a nation of which he was not a citizen. That a man not yet a citizen, would give his life to keep freedom and America alive is truly reflective of the greatness of this Nation. Cpl. Wladyslaw Staniszewski is proof that the United States is indeed "the hope of the world."

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.●

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KINDNESS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAZZOLI] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 960, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objections to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE ABRAHAM KAZEN, JR.

(Mr. MAZZOLI asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MAZZOLI. Mr. Speaker, I send my congratulations to the Speaker in the chair now. This may be the last chance I will have to be on the floor when the gentleman is presiding, though I hope he presides over our immigration bill, which will be coming up later.

But the gentleman has a distinguished career in the House and is a good friend of the gentleman from Kentucky, a good friend of all Members of the House on both sides of the aisle, and he will be sorely missed in the 99th Congress. I wish him many good years and happiness in the years ahead.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I thank the gentleman for his kind words and I appreciate his friendship.

TRIBUTE TO JANE WOOLSEY

(Mr. WRIGHT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to include extraneous matter.)

Mr. WRIGHT. Mr. Speaker, Jane Woolsey was a dear friend of mine. She died last week after a long and debilitating illness. Diabetes had cost her sight, the loss of one hand, and two amputations. But through this long ordeal she was a magnificent inspiration to everyone who knew her.

Jane was a teacher. That was the identity she cherished. It was her choice in life to teach the physically handicapped and the mentally retarded. That was her labor of love.

Jane Woolsey left me this poem which I want to share with all my colleagues, with teachers everywhere, and with all who read this RECORD. Mr. Speaker, I believe they will find it both instructive and inspiring.

SHE WAS A TEACHER

(By Jane Butler Woolsey)

When I am gone, and over me
Bright summer grasses tremble,
Or winter's frigid tears congeal
And slide in sad confusion
Over the mound where I, sleeping, lie.

When this weary body shall have put aside
Its boundless joys and endless pains
And lies like marble, still and cold,
Upon its sandy bed,

When I am dead,
And come no more among you
You will seek an answer,
An epitaph,
Small words to surround and encompass
The gladsome days I walked complete among you,
To sum up the sole of my existence,
For you are mortal yet,
And mortals seek to find
The logic and the end
Where none exists . . .

When I am no more,
And you seek words to engrave
Into living stone
That my transient spirit may
Not have passed unsung along the trackless way,
Recollect how I loved these:
"She was a teacher,"
For they say all of me that I wish recalled.

"She was a teacher;"
A part of the roll-call of history,
One of those who lit the candle
From which the torch of civilization sprang.
Her kind taught in the streets of ancient Greece,
Expounded theory in the halls of mighty Rome,
Set liberty flaming in the hearts of men.
Vicariously, she has painted masterpieces,
Scribed immortal words,
Set living music singing
Down the winds of eternity.

At her feet they sat, then mutable
Before they were leaders of men.
Her words are reflected in the archives of government,
In the steeples and pulpits of churches,
In the courts of the world.
Her ideas span chasms, search oceans,
Lift mighty rockets into limitless space.
Her forgotten kindnesses mend broken lives
And heal new sorrows.
Her knowledge moves the fingers of surgeons
And enlivens the tongues of statesmen.
Her reason and logic unlock secrets of life
And death, and time, here and hereafter.
Her peace moves within the hearts of mighty
And lowly alike, for she knew no barriers
Too great for love.

Because she loved
And gave her best to children,
The world is a nobler, richer
Better place for all who live.

This, then, is true immortality:
She passed to children a part of the life-force
That directs the current, the streams of humanity.
The total of her existence lies in what they become.

Now, having inscribed, erase.
For from the river of immortality,
I stepped inside to teach the voiceless ones,
The retarded children.
My heart heard the muted sounds
Of the criers in the wilderness of neglect
And I answered with all I could be
I reached beyond the injury,
Beyond the hurt,
And loved the children who could never grow.
I shared their little joys
And eased their frightful sorrows.
I guided their stumbling fingers and Freed their stammering tongues to sing,
And I taught reading and writing and arithmetic,
Incidently; but I taught love and patience
And understanding by word and by deed,
Daily.

Do not think I grieve
For the turning aside,
Or that my restless spirit
Will roam the corridors of time,
Seeking to hear its name
Praised on the tongues of men.
My ghost will quietly lie,
Content with anonymity,
Neither dreaming nor asking
For more than silent bed
And peaceful sleep
Until the Master leans down from Glory
To thunder the accolade:
"Well done, thou good and faithful servant!
For inasmuch as ye have done it to
The least of these, my children,
Ye have done it unto Me."

TEXTILE AND APPAREL INDUSTRY FIGHT TO SURVIVE RISING TIDE OF IMPORTS

(Mr. SPRATT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, despite the current recovery, some U.S. industries are fighting to survive a rising tide of imports. None is in more peril than the textile and apparel industry. During the first 7 months of this year, textile and apparel imports were 44 percent higher than during the same period last year, and textile imports alone increased by 62 percent.

The textile and apparel industry provides one out of nine manufacturing jobs nationwide. It is the No. 1 employer in North and South Carolina. One can understand why the textile and apparel industry would plead that this surge of imports be slowed down, or regulated, if not frozen; but the industry has not asked for Government help without first doing all that it can to help itself. During the past 5 years, the textile and apparel industry has made new capital investments totaling $7.6 billion. And this year, it will increase its rate of investment by 21 percent to a 1-year record of $1.72 billion. To me, there is something honest and deserving about an industry that plows its capital—at the rate of 80 percent of retained cash flow—back into its own business.

Because of this capital commitment, productivity in the textile and apparel industry has grown faster than in any other industry, except for electronics. An average textile worker who in 1 hour in 1962 could process 4.1 pounds of fiber, in 1983 processed 8.2 pounds—an increase of 100 percent. While foreign producers exploit the trade advantages afforded by our overvalued currency and our poorly enforced inport laws, the domestic textile and apparel industry is fighting back; and it deserves to be applauded for its efforts and awarded with more aid against imports than it has gotten from this Government.

In a recent front-page story, the Wall Street Journal highlighted the production advances made by the U.S. textile and apparel industry. I would like to share this article with my colleagues who may not have seen or read it by having it placed in the RECORD:

The article follows:

WHILE TEXTILE MAKERS BEMOAN IMPORTS, THEY ARE MODERNIZING, TOO

(By Scott Kilman and Linda Williams)

SPARTANBURG, SC.—When prospective textile buyers from West Germany toured Milliken & Co.'s headquarters this summer, they were surprised by computer terminals along the way flashing "Willkommen." Other visitors are no less surprised by the sophistication of many textile mills in the Carolina hills.

"People don't think of us as very modern," says Roger Milliken, the 68-year-old chief of the giant, family-owned textile maker. "But this is an industry doing what you hope an industry would do."

While the textile industry is loudly bemoaning imports, it also is quietly doing something about its problems. The companies are retooling obsolete mills with new high-speed machines. According to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, their capital spending this year will rise 24 percent from 1983 to a record $1.72 billion.

MAJOR CHANGES

Not since the companies' mass migration from New England to the South has so much changed. With new looms and spinners, the nation's oldest manufacturing industry is more productive than ever, weaving more types of fabric faster and with fewer workers. And it is learning how to sell. Instead of continuing to churn out cloth for a mass market, the new mills are being targeted for niches not filled by imports.

Though hot and noisy, the new mills are more bearable for workers than the steamy, cavernous factories that haven't been modernized. Most of the brute-force work is gone. "We've eliminated a lot of pushing, pulling types of jobs," says Neil W. Yeargin, manager of a Burlington Industries Inc. denim-weaving plant in Erwin, NC.

Mr. Yeargin stops in a room where thick spools of just-spun yarn are wound onto bob bins. "At one time, there were a thousand spinning machines in here," he says, "and so much dust you couldn't see a few feet." Today, in line with federal regulations, the air appears clear—though cotton dust still clings to the machinery and to some workers' hair. In this mill, the dust is sucked through gray hoses attached to vacuums traveling on ceiling rails.

ROBOTS AND COMPUTERS

Other changes are apparent all through the industry. In some mills, robotic pluckers lift and unpack dusty cotton bales. Computers direct the tugs and conveyor belts feeding mill assembly lines. Defects in weaving yarn are spotted by electronic eyes and cut out. The severed ends of the yarn are spliced on tiny, swirling bursts of air, without any knots. In finishing plants, the dyeing cycle for fabrics such as textured polyester is being cut to two hours from eight.

But the most important change is in the mills core, the weaving room, where yarn spun from bales of cotton and man-made fiber is turned into bolts of cloth. Companies are buying European and Japanese looms, which are three and four times faster than the American-made machines being junked. The best-selling loom today and in the foreseeable future weaves with jets of air, a technological leap over conventional looms, which weave with wooden shuttles—much as they did a century ago.

INCREASING COMPLEXITY

In addition to the air jet, three other types of shuttleless looms are displacing the old machinery. The rapier loom carries the crosswise yarns, known in the industry as filling, in between theimple industry increasingly complicated, even for a textile expert such as Mr. Milliken, whose company is refitting two plants with Japanese air jets.

At a sprawling research facility outside Spartanburg, Mr. Milliken and a visitor walk into the prototype shop. Two men are assembling a box-like contraption several feet high. Mr. Milliken studies the machinery a moment, then frowns.

"I don't know what it is, but you shouldn't be looking at it," he says, and he ushers the visitor away. Milliken, the largest privately held U.S. textile company, is secretive about its retooling plans, but it is thought to be keeping pace with its big, publicly held competitors, such as Burlington.

With $3 billion in annual sales and 6% of the domestic market, Burlington has the deepest pockets. It has budgeted $200 million this year to refit mills with new equipment and has spent $1.8 billion during the past 10 years. At the Erwin mill, Burlington has invested $55 million to expand the plant, to replace shuttle looms with air-jet looms, to install new spinners and to program computers to direct everything from unloading trucks to inspecting bolts of finished denim.

Springs Industries Inc., the fourth-largest U.S. producer, expects to spend $210 million by 1987 to scrap 6,600 antiquated shuttle looms and, among other things, to install 1,160 Swiss and Japanese air-jet weaving machines. J.P. Stevens & Co., whose $1.93 billion in annual sales makes it the second-largest publicly held U.S. textile company, is spending $30 million to modernize its shirt-fabric weaving plants in Rockingham, NC.

Some smaller mills are also modernizing. Alice Manufacturing Co. in Easley, SC, threw out 1,200 shuttle looms last year. During the next three years, its president Ellison S. McKissick Jr., plans to scrap the remaining 2,400 looms in his family's five plants and to replace them with new, shuttleless looms. "We could sell them, and then they'd go to Mexico and Central America," he says. "I'd just as soon they not come back as competition."

The new looms represent about 30% of the 214,000 in U.S. mills today, compared with 15% of those five years ago, says Edward Macho, the director of business planning at Draper Corp., a loom maker in Greensboro, NC. The trend is accelerating he says, adding, "Every one of the foreign machines replaces three of the old shuttle looms."

About half of the looms operating in this country will be shuttleless "within the next few years," says Luciano Cont, the vice president, marketing, at Sulzer Ruti Inc., the U.S. unit of a Swiss textile-machinery maker, Sulzer Brothers Ltd. "That is a very drastic change, which is good for us, obviously," he says. "This is kind of a make-or-break situation for the companies. You have to modernize to stay in business."

SLOW REACTION

The industry was slow to adopt shuttleless looms, which became available in the U.S. 20 years ago. Air-jet looms, introduced in the mid-1970s, also got a lukewarm reception. "They were faster, but their cost was too high compared with the fully depreciated shuttle looms," says Neil Cahill, the vice president of manufacturing technology at the Institute of Textile Technology, an industry-supported research group. "At the time, there just wasn't the necessity to change."

Then, imports exploded. Last year, foreign-made apparel fabric and garments accounted for about 31% of U.S. apparel sales, up from 15% a decade ago, according to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute. The institute predicts that imports this year will exceed 10 billion square yards, up from a record 7.4 billion last year.

MANY LAYOFFS

Yet, the new-loom boom is making the U.S. textile industry more productive and competitive. Burlington estimates that its retooling during the past decade has increased its output per worker hour by 5% annually. "There is two to three times as much cloth coming off that one jet-air loom, and one person can still handle that one loom," says Walter Y. Elisha, Springs chairman. Springs, which placed the first big U.S. order for air-jet looms in 1977, says its productivity has increased 18% since mid-1980.

Increased productivity also brings lay-offs, however. This December, Springs is closing its 92-year-old Springsteen mill in Chester, S.C., because it can't be fitted with the new looms; it would shake apart from the pounding. "You won't be seeing these too much longer," Tommy Williams, the assistant plant manager, shouts above the din of the 348 shuttle looms beating their frames against the floor.

About 375 of the workers, including Mr. Williams, are moving down the road to the company's refitted Eureka mill. Another 125 jobs are disappearing. Similarly, J.P. Stevens is boarding up the last of its three mills in Great Falls, S.C.; the facility employs 600 in that town of 2,600.

The plant closings are contributing to a 10-year drop in the number of mill jobs in the Southeast, which accounts for 70% of the employment in the industry. The total jobs in the Southeast mills dropped to 518,600 last year from 674,100 in 1973, according to the Labor Department.

Many of the companies are leaving the mass production of commodity fabrics such as print cloth to low-wage foreign mills. These American concerns are targeting their mills on smaller markets such as bed sheets and cloth for high-fashion apparel, which are harder for foreign mills to serve because consumer tastes change quickly.

FINDING NICHES

"The modern mill has to be very versatile" so that companies can find niches, fill them and move on after the market changes again, says Mitchell D. Strauss, the assistant dean of the Institute of Textile Technology's academic program. Last year, for example, West Point-Pepperell Inc. shifted a projectile-loom mill to weaving lightweight casual-slack fabric from the glutted corduroy market in about a month—less than a third of the conversion time required in an old mill.

Textile executives also hope that their quicker deliveries will compensate for their higher prices—especially when fashions change. "We can change the quickest if polka dots go out," says David M. Tracy, vice chairman at Stevens. "Everything is marketing now."

Burlington clearly agrees. It signed up fashion designer Liz Claiborne to strengthen its line of designer towels and bed linens. "We're going to be more specialized, experimental, innovative and creative," declares Frank S. Greenberg, Burlington's president. "We're sweetening the mix to add value, fashion and style."

Some smaller companies will be broken, textile executives predict, because they can't afford to replace shuttle looms, bought in the 1960s for about $5,000 apiece, with a $35,000 air-jet loom or a $50,000 projectile loom. Ryan C. Amacher, the dean of Clemson University's College of Commerce and Industry, sees "two groups within the industry: The ones that are aggressively out there modernizing and buying the latest machines and . . . another group that isn't—and they aren't going to be around in 10 years."

DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS AT LORTON PENITENTIARY

(Mr. PARRIS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I find it ironic that I rise on District of Columbia day, when this Chamber addresses the needs of the District, to point out a glaring case where the District has failed to address the needs of others.

I refer to Lorton Penitentiary in Fairfax County, VA—the prison administered and operated in theory and in law by the District of Columbia. I use the word "theory" advisedly, for the fact is that two studies in 1984 indicate the prison is being operated by the inmates.

The most recent study, commissioned by the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors, paints a deplorable picture of open drug dealings, illegal whiskey, a thriving cottage industry of weapons manufacture, and of security measures so lax that the potential for riot and takeover by the inmates is great.

The potential for mass escape goes without saying, and this potential is a threat to the thousands and thousands of law-abiding residents who live and work in the vicinity of the prison.

Repeated complaints to the District of Columbia officials have produced nothing positive toward correcting the abominable situation. In fact, even the usual lip service by officials promising things will get better has not been offered.

I will not belabor your time by reciting the entire contents of the study, which comprises a stack of paper a foot high. But I would like to tell you of just a few items the consultants detailed:

From March 1983 through April 1984, prison guards confiscated 2,000 gallons of whiskey. There is no telling how many thousands of gallons were consumed by the inmates during that period. This amount is ludicrous. It is nearly the equivalent of 40 55-gallon drums of illegal liquor.

During that same period, searches uncovered 450 weapons.

It was almost routine for inmates to be caught with marijuana, heroin, cocaine, and barbiturates.

The corrections officers were so overworked from a serious understaffing problem that some guard posts had to go unstaffed so an officer could take over other duties.

In short, Lorton Penitentiary is a nightmare, where prisoners walk around with guns and knives, openly peddle drugs, assault guards and other inmates, and practically come and go as they please.

About the only thing I can say in defense of Lorton is that there appears to be no incentive to escape, because the prisoners can get whatever they want right in their cell blocks and exercise yards.

Needless to say, the consultants' report is filled with notations where prison facilities and procedures are not in compliance with the nationally recognized standards for prison operation established by the American Correctional Association.

The latest report, I might add, reinforces the conclusions in the report of the Federal Bureau of Prisons that was completed earlier this year.

The Federal report and the Fairfax County report buttress my call for Lorton Penitentiary to be closed, and, as many of you know, this has been my goal for a long time. The Bureau of Prisons, under the direction of this Congress, is continuing to explore the best and quickest way to accomplish the goal of removing the prison from northern Virginia and building a new prison to house District of Columbia prisoners where they should be housed—in the District of Columbia.

But until the prison is removed, Lorton remains a tangible threat to the lives and property of Fairfax County residents. Since the District of Columbia has failed to take even the simplest steps recommended by the Bureau's report last spring, I have requested that the Honorable RONALD V. DELLUMS, chairman of the District of Columbia Committee on which I am privileged to serve, convene full hearings into the Lorton situation.

I further believe it is the committee's obligation to use its oversight authority to determine why nothing has been done and to determine what the District of Columbia must do to maintain order and stem the flow of contraband at the prison.

Thousands of my constituents are threatened by this outlandish and dangerous situation, and the District of Columbia must be held accountable and action must be taken to correct this totally unacceptable situation.

This is why I have urged the District of Columbia Committee to exercise its oversight authority. The Lorton question has been well documented for some time. Both the House and Senate Appropriation Committees have addressed the issue. Yet the House District of Columbia Committee has been silent on Lorton. I believe the time for action on the part of the committee is long overdue. I would hope that the committee would take positive steps now, before the potential at Lorton becomes a reality and causes injury or death that our oversight authority might have been able to prevent.

LOOPHOLE CLOSING LOST IN THE BRANCHES OF THE CHRISTMAS TREE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. ST GERMAIN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ST GERMAIN. Mr. Speaker, in an effort to prevent a wholesale circumvention of the Bank Holding Company Act and to plug loopholes in related statutes, the Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee reported H.R. 6916 on a 32-to-16 vote on July 12.

We felt that it was important that these loopholes—through which banks, securities firms, retail conglomerates, and insurance companies were establishing a crazy-quilt banking network—be closed so that the Congress could carefully consider, in a sane atmosphere, the long-range financial needs of all segments of the economy.

The Senate, while recognizing our initiative in closing the nonbank loophole, on September 13 adopted what can only be accurately described as a Christmas tree festooned with brightly colored ornaments of all shapes and sizes—credit union amendments, export trading company provisions, a basket of new powers for bank holding companies including new securities activities, consumer leasing amendments, new rules for brokered deposits, preemption of State usury laws, green-mail, golden parachutes provisions amending securities statutes, regional banking compacts which raise significant constitutional questions, new powers for savings and loan associations—the list goes on and on. The implications of these provisions won't be known for months, and, in some cases, years. The legislation is so far ranging and so broadly drafted that at least three House committees have jurisdiction—Banking, Energy and Commerce, and Judiciary.

None of us on the House Banking Committee would feel comfortable in standing up on this floor in the remaining few days of this Congress urging our colleagues to accept any part of this conglomeration on which neither we nor the Energy and Commerce nor Judiciary Committees have had hearings or markup and on which we all know there is a wide divergence of opinion. It would be a shot in the dark which we and the Nation might regret for years to come.

The Senate has acted in its wisdom. The pressures to give the banks and others in the financial community more powers are great in that body. I congratulate Chairman GARN and his colleagues who I know worked long and hard to push the package of new powers through the Senate.

Many of us in the House had hoped that the Senate would limit its efforts to what we felt were the critical needs of the moment—the closing of nonbank bank and related loopholes.

In hopes to avoid the kind of situation we now face, I have communicated, on a number of occasions, to the Senate the very real problems that any big package of new powers would face in the House as part of some last minute banking conference. The problems are large—in fact, insurmountable.

When I became convinced last spring that we needed a bill to close the more damaging loopholes, I consulted at length with my colleagues on the Banking Committee. I consulted with the minority as well as the members on the majority and there emerged a strong sentiment to close the loopholes.

But in a series of caucuses, one point stood out above all others—there was a solid consensus against any move being made in the late hours to accept packages of new powers and new provisions that were not considered and voted on in the committee. The message was clear.

"Freddie, we don't mind taking the hard knocks, the bruises required to close the loopholes, but we don't want this to be converted into a new powers bill in a last-minute conference"—a fair paraphrasing of the overall sentiment in those caucuses.

Since the passage of the Senate bill, I have rechecked the sentiment, not only among committee members but across the House. There is no question in my mind that the Senate package—or even a diluted conference version—would fail overwhelmingly in the House. We have problems not only on the substance, but major procedural difficulties as well.

None of this is particularly startling news to anyone. Every Member of the House, I am sure, quickly perceives the difficulties of asking for consideration of a massive rewriting of key statutes covering banking, securities, and interstate commerce when there have been few hearings, votes or debate. In fact, in most cases, absolutely none.

Completely aside from the political realities in the House, we must look at the fact that we are talking about a monumental change in banking and its relationship to the rest of the economy. A fundamental shift that may well determine how credit is delivered, financial services dispensed, and the entire economy structured for decades to come. This is not the stuff of quickie midnight conferences in the closing hours of the session.

Not only is there a major concern about what these new powers may mean to the economic future of the Nation, but also to the safety and soundness of the banking industry, itself.

The Banking Committee is now in the midst of a top to bottom look at the collapse of the $44 billion Continental Illinois National Bank of Chicago. The Federal Government, through its bank supervisory system, has decided that it is responsible for everything at Continental. Billions of dollars of funds have poured from Washington to that institution to keep it afloat.

If indeed this is a precedent and the assets of big banks and bank holding companies are a contingent liability of the Federal Treasury then we must look anew at how these institutions operate and under what control. Under the Continental-style bailout, the new powers to be grabbed up would increase the exposure for the insurance fund, the discount window, the Federal Treasury and the American taxpayer.

The same regulatory mechanism that appeared so inadequate in the Continental collapse—and earlier bank failures—would now take on the assignment of examining the expanded activities as proposed in the Senate bill. After listening to hours of testimony on Continental from the regulators over the past 2 days, I do not think it would be prudent or good public policy to give them any kind of new responsibility. Judging from Continental, they're struggling and running far behind in keeping up with even their most mundane supervisory functions.

None of this is said to suggest that the Banking Committee or the House is closing out the idea that change must be considered in banking and regulation. All we are saying is that such critical changes must be accomplished with full hearings, debate and votes at all levels of the process. Such consideration must place the needs of the economy first. Let's not structure the financial industry—according to its wishes—and then turn around and tell everyone else in the economy to adjust. Above all, we must make certain that we have a better and stronger regulatory system in place before we pass out new powers unless we want to really create some banking disasters.

The Banking Committee will be considering these issues in the next session. I regret that it is not possible to move the loophole closing legislation this session, but it is obvious that the Senate will not consider it unless we buy off on new powers. Again, something that I know would be a futile effort in the House at this moment.

Many, I know, are concerned that the Comptroller of the Currency's moratorium on nonbank banks expires at the close of this Congress. I trust that the industry groups, who may be anxious to leap in when the moratorium expires, will understand that both the House and Senate bills contain almost the same cutoff dates on nonbanks—June 30, 1983 in the House; July 1, 1983 in the Senate. Senator GARN, during the debate in the Senate, clearly stated that he would hold to that date whenever the legislation was resolved and thus put the industry on notice. I concur.

Any industry group that rushes forth and goes through the expense of creating a nonbank is now forwarned that the operation will be dissolved by statute. The Comptroller, too, should be on notice. The proper thing for the Comptroller would be an extension of the moratorium until Congress picks up the issue in the next session. He has enough problems to deal with—Continental and a few others—and he doesn't need a make-work program of nonbank bank applications.●

RELIGION AND POLITICS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DANNEMEYER] is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. DANNEMEYER. Mr. Speaker, recently GERALDINE FERRARO was heard to say that Ronald Reagan is not a good Christian. What has happened in the political process to cause FERRARO, admittedly known to shoot from the hip in her comments, to question President Reagan's commitment to Christianity?

To understand what the lady meant by what she said, it is necessary to understand her definition of "Christian." By her voting record, GERALDINE FERRARO is easily identified as an enthusiastic supporter and promoter of the liberal welfare state.

□ 1500

The National Taxpayers Union noted her 1983 voting record as a big spender. She scored 16. Anyone 20 or under is a big spender. The Democratic average was 22. The Democratic median was 19. The Democratic leadership scored 20. Northern Democrats averaged 20. Eastern Democrats averaged 29. Her voting record makes clear that she has seldom encountered a spending program she did not like.

Another question, perhaps a little more difficult to answer, is why is this controversy being debated in American politics at this time? People react when the system of values which they cherish is threatened. In 1925, public schools in America taught the theory of creation, described in Genesis, as the origin of the universe. Evolution was on the outside looking for adherents. Scopes, a substitute biology teacher in the State of Tennessee, was tried and convicted for teaching the theory of evolution in public schools in violation of State law. In 1982, a Federal court judge in Arkansas declared a State law unconstitutional which required that equal time be given to the two theories, creation and evolution. At this time, most public schools in America teach evolution as the theory of the origin of the universe. Creation is the outsider considered old fashioned. In 1962, a Federal court struck down a New York State law which permitted voluntary school prayer. In 1973, a Federal court established a new-found right to privacy which gave America abortion on demand, some of it at taxpayer expense. These are just a few of the shocks to American culture in the last half century. These fundamental changes, along with others, have caused some people in America to fear that we have strayed from our roots and the philosophical underpinning of our civilization, the Judeo-Christian ethic. These people are getting better organized all the time and are responsible for the emphasis in America on traditional family values.

In Matthew 22:39, Jesus Christ said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Jesus made this statement in response to a question from certain Pharisees as to what is the great commandment in the Law. Liberal welfare state proponents look at our world and see people in distress, in need, and suffering from a variety of ills. They conclude that religious people, Christian or Jewish, have individually, and collectively through the organized church, defaulted in their responsibility as outlined by the Old Testament prophets or Jesus Christ and, therefore, it is necessary for the corporate state to, in effect, fill the vacuum which religious people have failed to fill. In order to fulfill this mandate, the corporate state should tax citizens and through the channel of the Federal Treasury redistribute the wealth of our country. Therefore, a person such as President Reagan, who has slowed down the rate of growth of Federal spending to about 11 percent per year from the annual growth under Jimmy Carter of 17 percent per year, is considered by GERALDINE FERRARO to not be a good Christian. To proponents of the liberal welfare state such as GERALDINE FERRARO, any person who seeks to resist ever growing Federal outlays is non-Christian.

The fallacy of this philosophical bias is twofold. First, proponents of religious views in America, whether Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, or any number of other religions, have not defaulted in their individual or collective responsibilities. America contains over 500 seminaries which train theologians to serve groups of religious people of whatever calling. Americans contributed $28.06 billion to religious purposes in 1982. People identified with different religious groups operate hospitals, homes for the elderly, for the handicapped, for orphans, and for unwed mothers. Before the advent of medicare and medicaid/medical, the medical care establishment took care of the needs of the medically indigent. There are literally hundreds of private colleges and universities in America that are, in many instances, church-related. Parochial schools operated by different denominations educate a significant number of the students in primary and secondary schools. The Red Cross and the Salvation Army have a long record of service to people who are destitute and in need. Service organizations of various types engage in projects to help the disadvantaged among us. It is not suggested that what the private sector is doing will ever be sufficient to meet the need, but it is suggested that the liberal welfare state cannot be justified on the basis of the failure of the professants of the Judeo-Christian ethic to love your neighbor as yourself.

The second fallacy of the liberal welfare state is the inference that it is neutral on the issue of religion in attempting to fulfill the needs of people. The philosophical underpinning of American civilization is the Judeo-Christian ethic. The philosophical underpinning of the liberal welfare state is secular humanism. No two philosophies could be more in conflict. This conflict is readily apparent when you consider how each philosophy responds to social or moral issues currently encounterd in the political forum:

Relative to the origin of man, the Judeo-Christian ethic says it is based on Genesis, secular humanism says it is based on evolution as advocated by Charles Darwin. Human life, Judeo-Christian ethics says abortion only to save the life of the mother. Secular humanism says abortion should be on demand and paid for at taxpayers' expense.

Capital punishment, Judeo-Christian ethics says limited applicability as a deterrent and for punishment; secular humanism says to abolish it.

Homosexuality, Judeo-Christian ethics describe it as a sinful aberration. Secular humanism says it is a permissible alternative lifestyle.

Human social contacts, the Judeo-Christian ethic establishes that it is based on a correlative standard of right, duty, and privilege and obligation. Secular humanism says there should be no restraints on human behavior, in essence the philosophy of permissiveness.

Pornography, the Judeo-Christian ethic proscribes pornography in any civilization; secular humanism says there should be no prior restraints on the publication of any written material.

Federal budget deficits, the Judeo-Christian ethic teaches that the theft of private property whether by Government or individual action is prohibited; secular humanism is opposed to the balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution.

Prayer in public schools; recognition of God, First Commandment is the position of the Judeo-Christian ethic and secular humanism preaches a denial of God at all.

To those of us who attempt to resolve the social issues by applying the principles of the Judeo-Christian ethic we are told that we may not do so because we are, in so doing, establishing a religion in violation of the first amendment.

To those people I ask this question: Should we eliminate the law of our secular state protecting life based on the Fifth Commandment because it comes from the Judeo-Christian ethic? Does its being a part of our law mean that its presence is establishing a religion, either Judaism or Christianity? Obviously not.

The same question can be asked for laws such as prohibiting the uttering of profanity in public based on the Second Commandment; such as Sunday closing laws still existing in some States of the Union, based on the Third Commandment; laws providing for parents supporting children and children supporting parents, based on the Fourth Commandment; laws protecting the integrity of marriage, prohibiting adultery, based on the Sixth Commandment; laws protecting private property and prohibiting the theft of it based on the Seventh Commandment; and laws regarding truthful statements between all persons, based on the Eighth Commandment.

The Christian religion describes the creation of man as being perfect in the image of God, man's fall into sin, God's promise of a Savior, the birth, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ as the son of God and Savior of the world. Jesus Christ's message to all men was to spread his Gospel; from the beginning of time the organized church has attempted in different forms to fulfill this mandate. If we seek by Federal law to impose the foregoing as the official religion of America, a course I do not advocate, this would be the establishment of a religion in violation of the first amendment. But the recognition of the principles of the Judeo-Christian ethic as found in the Ten Commandments is certainly not the establishment of a religion. It is merely the recognition of the foundation of our Western civilization.

This issue of secular humanism and what it is is relevant in the Presidential contest going on in the Nation because of that fact that the Vice Presidential candidate, GERALDINE FERRARO, the nominee of the Democratic Party, has talked about her assessment of certain issues that reflect the view of secular humanism and indeed the Presidential candidate himself, Mr. Mondale, has on one occasion, at least, in recorded history made very clear that he subscribes to the philosophy of secular humanism.

□ 1510

I will quote from the New York Times of June 19, 1983:

Walter Mondale. "Dad was basically the politician of the family," Mondale explains. "He was a devout Christian, a believer in the social gospel, a Farmer-Laborite. I wanted to fight for the things my father believed in."

While still a Senator in 1970, Walter Mondale addressed the Fifth Congress of the International Humanist and Ethical Union held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He declared:

Although I have never formally joined a humanist society, I think I am a member of inheritance. My preacher father was a humanist—in Minnesota they call them Farmer Laborites and I grew up on a very rich diet of humanism from him. All of our family has been deeply influenced by this tradition, including my brother Lester, a Unitarian Minister, Ethical Culture Leader and Chairman of the Fellowship of Religious Humanists. (To Seek a Human World by Howard Radest, p. 69, Moral Majority Report, June 6, 1980.)

As to what humanists believe, and I think this is something that the American public has a right to analyze, you only have to look to the publications of the organization.

For example in May/June 1933, there was published in America a document titled "Humanist Manifesto I." It consists of two pages and I will include it in the RECORD at this point.

The article follows:

HUMANIST MANIFESTO I

The time has come for widespread recognition of the radical changes in religious beliefs throughout the modern world. The time is past for mere revision of traditional attitudes. Science and economic change have disrupted the old beliefs. Religions the world over are under the necessity of coming to terms with new conditions created by a vastly increased knowledge and experience. In every field of human activity, the vital movement is now in the direction of a candid and explicit humanism. In order that religious humanism may be better understood we, the undersigned, desire to make certain affirmations which we believe the facts of our contemporary life demonstrate.

There is great danger of a final, and we believe fatal, identification of the word religion with doctrines and methods which have lost their significance and which are powerless to solve the problem of human living in the Twentieth Century. Religions have always been means for realizing the highest values of life. Their end has been accomplished through the interpretation of the total environing situation (theology or world view), the sense of values resulting therefrom (goal or ideal), and the technique (cult) established for realizing the satisfactory life. A change in any of these factors results in alteration of the outward forms of religion. This fact explains the changefulness of religions through the centuries. But through all changes religion itself remains constant in its quest for abiding values, an inseparable feature of human life.

Today man's larger understanding of the universe, his scientific achievements, and his deeper appreciation of brotherhood, have created a situation which requires a new statement of the means and purposes of religion. Such a vital, fearless, and frank religion capable of furnishing adequate social goals and personal satisfactions may appear to many people as a complete break with the past. While this age does owe a vast debt to traditional religions, it is none the less obvious that any religion that can hope to be a synthesizing and dynamic force for today must be shaped for the needs of this age. To establish such a religion is a major necessity of the present. It is a responsibility which rests upon this generation. We therefore affirm the following:

First: Religious humanists regard the universe as self-existing and not created.

Second: Humanism believes that man is a part of nature and that he has emerged as the result of a continuous process.

Third: Holding an organic view of life, humanists find that the traditional dualism of mind and body must be rejected.

Fourth: Humanism recognizes that man's religious culture and civilization, as clearly depicted by anthropology and history, are the product of a gradual development due to his interaction with his natural environment and with his social heritage. The individual born into a particular culture is largely molded to that culture.

Fifth: Humanism asserts that the nature of the universe depicted by modern science makes unacceptable any supernatural or cosmic guarantees of human values. Obviously humanism does not deny the possibility of realities as yet undiscovered, but it does insist that the way to determine the existence and value of any and all realities is by means of intelligent inquiry and by the assessment of their relation to human needs. Religion must formulate its hopes and plans in the light of the scientfic spirit and method.

Sixth: We are convinced that the time has passed for theism, deism, modernism, and the several varieties of "New thought."

Seventh: Religion consists of those actions, purposes, and experiences which are humanly significant. Nothing human is alien to the religious. It includes labor, art, science, philosophy, love, friendship, recreation—all that is in its degree expressive of intelligently satisfying human living. The distinction between the sacred and the secular can no longer be maintained.

Eighth: Religious humanism considers the complete realization of human personality to be the end of man's life and seeks its development and fulfillment in the here and now. This is the explanation of the humanist's social passion.

Ninth: In place of the old attitudes involved in worship and prayer the humanist finds his religious emotions expressed in a heightened sense of personal life and in a cooperative effort to promote social well-being.

Tenth: It follows that there will be no uniquely religious emotions and attitudes of the kind hitherto associated with belief in the supernatural.

Eleventh: Man will learn to face the crises of life in terms of his knowledge of their naturalness and probability. Reasonable and manly attitudes will be fostered by education and supported by custom. We assume that humanism will take the path of social and mental hygiene and discourage sentimental and unreal hopes and wishful thinking.

Twelfth: Believing that religion must work increasingly for joy in living, religious humanists aim to foster the creative in man and to encourage achievements that add to the satisfactions of life.

Thirteenth: Religious humanism maintains that all associations and institutions exist for the fulfillment of human life. The intelligent valuation, transformation, control, and direction of such associations and institutions with a view to the enhancement of human life is the purpose and program of humanism. Certainly religious institutions, their ritualistic form, eccelesiastical methods, and communal activities must be reconstituted as rapidly as experience allows, in order to function effectively in the modern world.

Fourteenth: The humanists are firmly convinced that existing acquisitive and profit-motivated society has shown itself to be inadequate and that a radical change in methods, controls, and motives must be instituted. A socialized and cooperative economic order must be established to the end that the equitable distribution of the means of life be possible. The goal of humanism is a free and universal society in which people voluntarily and intelligently cooperate for the common good. Humanists demand a shared life in a shared world.

Fifteenth and last: We assert that humanism will: (a) affirm life rather than deny it; (b) seek to elicit the possibilities of life, not flee from it; and (c) endeavor to establish the conditions of a satisfactory life for all, not merely for the few. By this positive morale and intention humanism will be guided and from this perspective and alignment the techniques and efforts of humanism will flow.

So stand the theses of religious humanism. Though we consider the religious forms and ideas of our fathers no longer adequate, the quest for the good life is still the central task for mankind. Man is at last becoming aware that he alone is responsible for the realization of the world of his dreams, that he has within himself the power for its achievement. He must set intelligence and will to the task.

Then again in September/October of 1973, "Humanist Manifesto II" was published. It consists of four pages and I will include it at this point in the RECORD.

The article follows:

HUMANIST MANIFESTO II

PREFACE

It is forty years since Humanist Manifesto I (1933) appeared. Events since then make that earlier statement seem far too optimistic. Nazism has shown the depths of brutality of which humanity is capable. Other totalitarian regimes have suppressed human rights without ending poverty. Science has sometimes brought evil as well as good. Recent decades have shown that inhuman wars can be made in the name of peace. The beginnings of police states, even in democratic societies, widespread government espionage, and other abuses of power by military, political, and industrial elites, and the continuance of unyielding racism, all present a different and difficult social outlook. In various societies, the demands of women and minority groups for equal rights effectively challenge our generation.

As we approach the twenty-first century, however, an affirmative and hopeful vision is needed. Faith, commensurate with advancing knowledge, is also necessary. In the choice between despair and hope, humanists respond in this Humanist Manifesto II with a positive declaration for times of uncertainty.

As in 1933, humanists still believe that traditional theism, especially faith in the prayer-hearing God, assumed to love and care for persons, to hear and understand their prayers, and to be able to do something about them, is an unproved and outmoded faith. Salvationism, based on mere affirmation, still appears as harmful, diverting people with false hopes of heaven hereafter. Reasonable minds look to other means for survival.

Those who sign Humanist Manifesto II disclaim that they are setting forth a binding credo; their individual views would be stated in widely varying ways. This statement is, however, reaching for vision in a time that needs direction. It is social analysis in an effort at consensus. New statements should be developed to supersede this, but for today it is our conviction that humanism offers an alternative that can serve present-day needs and guide humankind toward the future.

PAUL KURTZ,
Editor, The Humanist.
EDWIN H. WILSON,
Editor Emeritus, The Humanist.

The next century can be and should be the humanistic century. Dramatic scientific, technological, and ever-accelerating social and political changes crowd our awareness. We have virtually conquered the planet, explored the moon, overcome the natural limits of travel and communication; we stand at the dawn of a new age, ready to move farther into space and perhaps inhabit other planets. Using technology wisely, we can control our environment, conquer poverty, markedly reduce disease, extend our life-span, significantly modify our behavior, alter the course of human evolution and cultural development, unlock vast new powers, and provide humankind with unparalleled opportunity for achieving an abundant and meaningful life.

The future is, however, filled with dangers. In learning to apply the scientific method to nature and human life, we have opened the door to ecological damage, overpopulation, dehumanizing institutions, totalitarian repression, and nuclear and biochemical disaster. Faced with apocalyptic prophesies and doomsday scenarios, many flee in despair from reason and embrace irrational cults and theologies of withdrawal and retreat.

Traditional moral codes and newer irrational cults both fail to meet the pressing needs of today and tomorrow. False "theologies of hope" and messianic ideologies, substituting new dogmas for old, cannot cope with existing world realities. They separate rather than unite peoples.

Humanity, to survive, requires bold and daring measures. We need to extend the uses of scientific method, not renounce them, to fuse reason with compassion in order to build constructive social and moral values. Confronted by many possible futures, we must decide which to pursue. The ultimate goal should be the fulfillment of the potential for growth in each human personality—not for the favored few, but for all of humankind. Only a shared world and global measures will suffice.

A humanist outlook will tap the creativity of each human being and provide the vision and courage for us to work together. This outlook emphasizes the role human beings can play in their own spheres of action. The decades ahead call for dedicated, clear-minded men and women able to marshal the will, intelligence, and cooperative skills for shaping a desirable future. Humanism can provide the purpose and inspiration that so many seek; it can give personal meaning and significance to human life.

Many kinds of humanism exist in the contemporary world. The varieties and emphases of naturalistic humanism include "scientific," "ethical," "democratic," "religious," and "Marxist" humanism. Free thought, atheism, agnosticism, skepticism, deism, rationalism, ethical culture, and liberal religion all claim to be heir to the humanist tradition. Humanism traces its roots from ancient China, classical Greece and Rome, through the Renaissance and the Enlightment, to the scientific revolution of the modern world. But views that merely reject theism are not equivalent to humanism. They lack commitment to the positive belief in the possibilities of human progress and to the values central to it. Many within religion groups, believing in the future of humanism, now claim humanist credentials. Humanism is an ethical process through which we all can move, above and beyond the divisive particulars, heroic personalities, dogmatic creeds, and ritual customs of past religions or their mere negation.

We affirm a set of common principles that can serve as a basis for united action—positive principles relevant to the present human condition. They are a design of a secular society on a planetary scale.

For these reasons, we submit this new Humanist Manifesto for the future of humankind; for us, it is a vision of hope, a direction for satisfying survival.

RELIGION

First: In the best sense, religion may inspire dedication to the highest ethical ideals. The cultivation of moral devotion and creative imagination is an expression of genuine "spiritual" experience and aspiration.

We believe, however, that traditional dogmatic or authoritarian religions that place revelation, God, ritual, or creed above human needs and experience do a disservice to the human species. Any account of nature should pass the tests of scientific evidence, in our judgment, the dogmas and myths of traditional religions do not do so. Even at this late date in human history, certain elementary facts based upon the critical use of scientific reason have to be restated. We find insufficient evidence for belief in the existence of a supernatural, it is either meaningless or irrelevant to the question of the survival and fulfillment of the human race. As nontheists, we begin with humans not God, nature not deity. Nature may indeed be broader and deeper than we now know, any new discoveries, however, will but enlarge our knowledge of the natural.

Some humanists believe we should reinterpret traditional religions and reinvest them with meanings appropriate to the current situation. Such redefinitions, however, often perpetuate old dependencies and escapisms; they easily become obscurantist, impeding the free use of the intellect. We need, instead, radically new human purposes and goals.

We appreciate the need to preserve the best ethical teachings in the religious traditions of humankind, many of which we share in common. But we reject those features of traditional religious morality that deny humans a full appreciation of their own potentialities and responsibilities. Traditional religions often offer solace to humans, but, as often, they inhibit humans from helping themselves or experiencing their full potentialities. Such institutions, creeds, and rituals often impede the will to serve others. Too often traditional faiths encourage dependence rather than independence, obedience rather than affirmation, fear rather than courage. More recently they have generated concerned social action, with many signs of relevance appearing in the wake of the "God Is Dead" theologies. But we can discover no divine purpose or providence for the human species. While there is much that we do not know, humans are responsible for what we are or will become. No deity will save us, we must save ourselves.

Second: Promises of immortal salvation or fear of eternal damnation are both illusory and harmful. They distract humans from present concerns, from self-actualization, and from rectifying social injustices. Modern science discredits such historic concepts as the "ghost in the machine" and the "separable soul." Rather, science affirms that the human species is an emergence from natural evolutionary forces. As far as we know, the total personality is a function of the biological organism transacting in a social and cultural context. There is no credible evidence that life survives the death of the body. We continue to exist in our progeny and in the way that our lives have influenced others in our culture.

Traditional religions are surely not the only obstacles to human progress. Other ideologies also impede human advance. Some forms of political doctrine, for instance, function religiously, reflecting the worst features of orthodoxy and authoritarianism, especially when they sacrifice individuals on the altar of Utopian promises. Purely economic and political viewpoints, whether capitalist or communist, often function as religious and ideological dogma. Although humans undoubtedly need economic and political goals, they also need creative values by which to live.

ETHICS

Third: We affirm that moral values derive their source from human experience. Ethics is autonomous and situational, needing no theological or ideological sanction. Ethics stems from human need and interest. To deny this distorts the whole basis of life. Human life has meaning because we create and develop our futures. Happiness and the creative realization of human needs and desires, individually and in shared enjoyment, are continuous themes of humanism. We strive for the good life, here and now. The goal is to pursue life's enrichment despite debasing forces of vulgarization, commercialization, bureaucratization, and dehumanization.

Fourth: Reason and intelligence are the most effective instruments that humankind possesses. There is no substitute neither faith nor passion suffices in itself. The controlled use of scientific methods, which have transformed the natural and social sciences since the Renaissance, must be extended further in the solution of human problems. But reason must be tempered by humility, since no group has a monopoly of wisdom or virtue. Nor is there any guarantee that all problems can be solved or all questions answered. Yet critical intelligence, infused by a sense of human caring, is the best method that humanity has for resolving problems. Reason should be balanced with compassion and empathy and the whole person fulfilled. Thus we are not advocating the use of scientific intelligence independent of or in opposition to emotion, for we believe in the cultivation of feeling and love. As science pushes back the boundary of the known, man's sense of wonder is continually renewed, and art, poetry, and music find their places, along with religion and ethics.

THE INDIVIDUAL

Fifth: The preciousness and dignity of the individual person is a central humanist value. Individuals should be encouraged to realize their own creative talents and desires. We reject all religious, ideological, or moral codes that denigrate the individual, suppress freedom, dull intellect, dehumanize personality. We believe in maximum individual autonomy consonant with social responsibility. Although science can account for the causes of behavior, the possibilities of individual freedom of choice exist in human life and should be increased.

Sixth: In the area sexuality, we believe that intolerant attitudes, often cultivated by orthodox religions and puritanical cultures, unduly repress sexual conduct. The right to birth control, abortion, and divorce should be recognized. While we do not approve of exploitive, denigrating forms of sexual expression, neither do we wish to prohibit, by law or social sanction, sexual behavior between consenting adults. The many varieties of sexual exploration should not in themselves be considered "evil." Without countenancing mindless permissiveness or unbridled promiscuity, a civilized society should be a tolerant one short of harming others or compelling them to do likewise, individuals should be permitted to express their sexual proclivities and pursue their life-styles as they desire. We wish to cultivate the development of a responsible attitude toward sexuality, in which humans are not exploited as sexual objects, and in which intimacy, sensitivity, respect, and honesty in interpersonal relations are encouraged. Moral education for children and adults is an important way of developing awareness and sexual maturity.

DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY

Seventh: To enhance freedom and dignity the individual must experience a full range of civil liberties in all societies. This includes freedom of speech and the press, political democracy, the legal right of opposition to governmental policies, fair judicial process, religious liberty, freedom of association, and artistic, scientific, and cultural freedom. It also includes a recognition of an individual's right to die with dignity, euthanasia, and the right to suicide. We oppose the increasing invasion of privacy, by whatever means, in both totalitarian and democratic societies. We would safeguard, extend, and implement the principles of human freedom evolved from the Magna Carta to the Bill of Rights, the Rights of Man, and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Eighth: We are committed to an open and democratic society. We must extend participatory democracy in its true sense to the economy, the school, the family, the workplace, and voluntary associations. Decisionmaking must be decentralized to include widespread involvement of people at all levels—social, political, and economic. All persons should have a voice in developing the values and goals that determine their lives. Institutions should be responsive to expressed desires and needs. The conditions of work, education, devotion, and play should be humanized. Alienating forces should be modified or eradicated and bureaucratic structures should be held to a minimum. People are more important than decalogues, rules, proscriptions, or regulations.

Ninth: The separation of church and state and the separation of ideology and state are imperatives. The state should encourage maximum freedom for different moral, political, religious, and social values in society. It should not favor any particular religious bodies through the use of public monies, nor espouse a single ideology and function thereby as an instrument of propaganda or oppression, particularly against dissenters.

Tenth: Humane societies should evaluate economic systems not by rhetoric or ideology, but by whether or not they increase economic well-being for all individuals and groups, minimize poverty and hardships, increase the sum of human satisfaction, and enhance the quality of life. Hence the door is open to alternative economic systems. We need to democratize the economy and judge it by its responsiveness to human needs, testing results in terms of the common good.

Eleventh: The principle or moral equality must be furthered through elimination of all discrimination based upon race, religion, sex, age, or national origin. This means equality of opportunity and recognition of talent and merit. Individuals should be encouraged to contribute to their own betterment. If unable, then society should provide means to satisfy their basic economic, health, and cultural needs, including, wherever resources make possible, a minimum guaranteed annual income. We are concerned for the welfare of the aged, the infirm, the disadvantaged, and also for the outcasts—the mentally retarded, abandoned or abused children, the handicapped, prisoners, and addicts—for all who are neglected or ignored by society. Practicing humanists should make it their vocation to humanize personal relations.

We believe in the right to universal education. Everyone has a right to the cultural opportunity to fulfill his or her unique capacities and talents. The schools should foster satisfying and productive living. They should be open at all levels to any and all; the achievement of excellence should be encouraged. Innovative and experimental forms of education are to be welcomed. The energy and idealism of the young deserve to be appreciated and channeled to constructive purposes

We deplore racial, religious, ethnic, or class antagonisms. Although we believe in cultural diversity and encourage racial and ethnic pride, we reject separations which promote alienation and set people and groups against each other; we envision an integrated community where people have a maximum opportunity for free and voluntary association.

We are critical of sexism or sexual chauvinism—male or female. We believe in equal rights for both women and men to fulfill their unique careers and potentialities as they see fit, free of invidious discrimination.

WORLD COMMUNITY

Twelfth: We deplore the division of humankind on nationalistic grounds. We have reached a turning point in human history where the best option is to transcend the limits of national sovereignty and to move toward the building of a world community in which all sectors of the human family can participate. Thus we look to the development of a system of world law and a world order based upon transnational federal government. This would appreciate cultural pluralism and diversity. It would not exclude pride in national origins and accomplishments not the handling of regional problems on a regional basis. Human progress, however, can no longer be achieved by focusing on one section of the world, Western or Eastern, developed or underdeveloped. For the first time in human history, no part of humankind can be isolated from any other. Each person's future is in some way linked to all.

We thus reaffirm a commitment to the building of world community, at the same time recognizing that this commits us to some hard choices.

Thirteenth: This world community must renounce the resort to violence and force as a method of solving international disputes. We believe in the peaceful adjudication of differences by international courts and by the development of the arts of negotiation and compromise. War is obsolete. So is the use of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons. It is a planetary imperative to reduce the level of military expenditures and turn these savings to peaceful and people-oriented uses.

Fourteenth: The world community must engage in cooperative planning concerning the use of rapidly depleting resources. The planet earth must be considered a single ecosystem. Ecological damage, resource depletion, and excessive population growth must be checked by international concord. The cultivation and conservation of nature is a moral value; we should perceive ourselves as integral to the sources of our being in nature. We must free our world from needless pollution and waste, responsibly guarding and creating wealth, both natural and human. Exploitation of natural resources, uncurbed by social conscience, must end.

Fifteenth: The problems of economic growth and development can no longer be resolved by one nation alone, they are worldwide in scope. It is the moral obligation of the developed nations to provide—through an international authority that safeguards human rights—massive technical, agricultural, medical, and economic assistance, including birth control techniques, to the developing portions of the globe. World poverty must cease. Hence extreme disproportions in wealth, income, and economic growth should be reduced on a worldwide basis.

Sixteenth: Technology is a vital key to human progress and development. We deplore any non-romantic efforts to condemn indiscriminately all technology and science or to counsel retreat from its further extension and use for the good of humankind. We would resist any moves to censor basic scientific research on moral, political, or social grounds. Technology must, however, be carefully judged by the consequence of its use, harmful and destructive changes should be avoided. We are particularly disturbed when technology and bureaucracy control, manipulate, or modify human beings without their consent. Technological feasibility does not imply social or cultural desirability.

Seventeenth: We must expand communication and transportation across frontiers. Travel restrictions must cease. The world must be open to diverse political, ideological, and moral viewpoints and evolve a worldwide system of television and radio for information and education. We thus call for full international cooperation in culture, science, the arts, and technology across ideological borders. We must learn to live openly together or we shall perish together.

HUMANITY AS A WHOLE

In closing: The world cannot wait for a reconciliation of competing political or economic systems to solve its problems. These are the times for men and women of good will to further the building of a peaceful and prosperous world. We urge that parochial loyalties and inflexible moral and religious ideologies be transcended. We urge recognition of the common humanity of all people. We further urge the use of reason and compassion to produce the kind of world we want—a world in which peace, prosperity, freedom, and happiness are widely shared. Let us not abandon that vision in despair or cowardice. We are responsible for what we are or will be. Let us work together for a humane world by means commensurate with humane ends. Destructive ideological differences among communism, capitalism, socialism, conservatism, liberalism, and radicalism should be overcome. Let us call for an end to terror and hatred. We will survive and prosper only in a world of shared humane values. We can initiate new directions for humankind, ancient rivalries can be superseded by broad-based cooperative efforts. The commitment to tolerance, understanding, and peaceful negotiation does not necessitate acquiescence to the status quo nor the damming up of dynamic and revolutionary forces. The true revolution is occurring and can continue in countless non-violent adjustments. But this entails the willingness to step forward onto new and expanding plateaus. At the present juncture of history, commitment to all humankind is the highest commitment of which we are capable, it transcends the narrow allegiances of church, state, party, class, or race in moving toward a wider vision of human potentiality. What more daring a goal for humankind than for each person to become, in ideal as well as practice, a citizen of a world community. It is a classical vision, we can now give it new vitality. Humanism thus interpreted is a moral force that has time on its side. We believe that humankind has the potential intelligence, a good will, and cooperation skill to implement this commitment in the decade ahead.

We, the undersigned, while not necessarily endorsing every detail of the above, pledge our general support to Humanist Manifesto II for the future of humankind. These affirmations are not a final credo or dogma but an expression of a living and growing faith. We invite others in all lands to join us in further developing and working for these goals.

I will read just a few of the references to what secular humanism stands for in this country to give the Members a little appreciation of their philosophical basis or bias which is being advocated by those who profess this philosophy.

First, this was in the May/June 1933 publication "Humanist Manifesto I":

Religious humanists regard the universe as self-existing and not created.

Fourth: Humanism recognizes that man's religious culture and civilization, as clearly depicted by anthropology and history, are the product of a gradual development due to his interaction with his natural environment and with his social heritage. The individual born into a particular culture is largely molded to that culture.

Fourteenth: The humanists are firmly convinced that existing acquisitive and profit-motivated society has shown itself to be inadequate and that a radical change in methods, controls, and motives must be instituted. A socialized and cooperative economic order must be established to the end that the equitable distribution of the means of life be possible. The goal of humanism is a free and universal society in which people voluntarily and intelligently cooperate for the common good. Humanists demand a shared life in a shared world.

A few quotes from the "Humanist Manifesto II," published in September/October 1973:

Many kinds of humanism exist in the contemporary world. The varieties and emphases of naturalistic humanism include "scientific," "ethical," "democratic," "religious," and "Marxist" humanism. Free thought, atheism, agnosticism, skepticism, deism, rationalism, ethical culture, and liberal religion all claim to be heir to the humanist tradition. Humanism traces its roots from ancient China, classical Greece and Rome, through the Renaissance and the Enlightenment, to the scientific revolution of the modern world. But views that merely reject theism are not equivalent to humanism. They lack commitment to the positive belief in the possibilities of human progress and to the values central to it. Many within religious groups, believing in the future of humanism, now claim humanist credentials. Humanism is an ethical process through which we all can move, above and beyond the divisive particulars, heroic personalities, dogmatic creeds, and ritual customs of past religions or their mere negation.

I think I can summarize what is contained in Humanist Manifesto I and Humanist Manifesto II by the following summary.

A summary of beliefs of the secular humanist religion is described in its published manifestos. Its religious/ethical beliefs are extensive: Humanism denies and rejects God, theism, deism, faith, prayer, all divine purpose or providence, all religions that place God above human needs, the existence of life after death, traditional religious morality, national sovereignty, and a profit-motivated society.

Humanism proclaims its own set of self-serving, unproved dogmas as replacement for the tenets of traditional religion. It asserts that the universe is self-existing and not created. It says man is the product of evolution and that the joy of living and the satisfactions of life are the supreme goal of man. Ethics come from human experience, not from God.

Humanism recognizes and accepts abortion, euthanasia, suicide, and all varieties of sexual exploration and immoral lifestyles. It works for the establishment of a secular society, a socialized economic order, world government, military disarmament, and population control by government.

If that is the course for America, then those of us who have the privilege of voting can determine whether or not we seek to put people into public office who subscribe to a philosophical point of view as described as secular humanism.

From the beginning of the history of Western civilization we have based what we do and our laws and the nature of relations between men and women on the Judeo-Christian ethic.

It is my hope today not to suggest that it is the business of the secular state here in the Congress of the United States to impose a particular religion on any person in this country because that is not what we are here for.

The first amendment says that Congress shall pass no law establishing a religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.

But the observance of that first amendment and what it says to America does not in any way militate against the necessity of recognizing that every civilization of whatever age or creation is based on some philosophical basis and that we in America have long based our philosophy and our life on the basis of the Judeo-Christian ethic. I hope the people of this country in selecting people for public office will elect those to public office who recognize that that is the basis of our civilization.

SENATE BILL REFERRED

A bill of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 2456. An act to establish a commission to study the 1932-33 famine caused by the Soviet Government in Ukraine; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

Mr. ANNUNZIO, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill and a joint resolution of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H.R. 5297. An act to amend the Federal Aviation Act of 1958 to terminate certain functions of the Civil Aeronautics Board, to transfer certain functions of the Board to the Secretary of Transportation, and for other purposes; and

H.J. Res. 545. Joint resolution designating the week of September 16 through 22, 1984, as "Emergency Medicine Week."

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the Senate of the following titles.

S. 32. An act to amend title 17 of the United States Code with respect to rental, lease, of lending of sound recordings;

S. 38. An act entitled the "Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act Amendments of 1984";

S. 1989. An act for the relief of Vladimir Victorovich Yakimetz;

S. 2000. An act to allow variable interest rates for Indian funds held in trust by the United States;

S. 2155. An act to designate certain national forest system lands in the State of Utah for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System to release other forest lands for multiple use management, and for other purposes;

S.J. Res 304. Joint resolution to designate the month of October 1984 as "National Quality Month";

S.J. Res 333. Joint resolution to designate September 21, 1984, as "World War I Aces and Aviators Day"; and

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 6 of rule XXIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.J. RES. 648

Mr. CONTE:

—On page 9, after line 14, insert the following: "Payment to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting under the Communications Act of 1934 as amended for the fiscal year 1987: Provided, That for purposes of this payment, the current rate shall be the amount of the payment provided in fiscal year 1986 ;".

By Mr. DIXON:

—At the end of the resolution, add the following new section:

SEC. . (a)(1) Section 303(b) of the District of Columbia Self-Government and Governmental Reorganization Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) An amendment to the charter ratified by the registered qualified electors shall take effect upon the expiration of the thirty-five-calendar-day period (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, holidays, and days on which either House of Congress is not in session) following the date such amendment was submitted to the Congress, or upon the date prescribed by such amendment, whichever is later, unless, during such thirty-five-day period, there has been enacted into law a joint resolution, in accordance with the procedures specified in section 604 of this Act, disapproving such amendment. In any case in which any such joint resolution disapproving such an amendment has, within such thirty-five-day period, passed both Houses of Congress and has been transmitted to the President, such resolution, upon becoming law subsequent to the expiration of such thirty-five-day period, shall be deemed to have repealed such amendment, as of the date such resolution becomes law.".

(2) The second sentence of section 602(c)(1) of such Act is amended to read as follows: "Except as provided in paragraph (2), such act shall take effect upon the expiration of the 30-calendar-day period (excluding Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays, and any day on which neither House is in session because of an adjournment sine die, a recess of more than 3 days, or an adjournment of more than 3 days) beginning on the day such act is transmitted by the Chairman to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President of the Senate, or upon the date prescribed by such act, whichever is later, unless, during such 30-day period, there has been enacted into law a joint resolution disapproving such act. In any case in which any such joint resolution disapproving such an act has, within such 30-day period, passed both Houses of Congress and has been transmitted to the President, such resolution, upon becoming law subsequent to the expiration of such 30-day period, shall be deemed to have repealed such act, as of the date such resolution becomes law.".

(3) The third sentence of section 602(c)(1) of such Act is amended by deleting "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(4) The first sentence of section 602(c)(2) of such Act is amended by deleting "only if during such 30-day period one House of Congress does not adopt a resolution disapproving such act." and inserting in lieu thereof "unless, during such 30-day period, there has been enacted into law a joint resolution disapproving such act. In any case in which any such joint resolution disapproving such an act has, within such 30-day period, passed both Houses of Congress and has been transmitted to the President, such resolution, upon becoming law subsequent to the expiration of such 30-day period, shall be deemed to have repealed such act, as of the date such resolution becomes law.".

(5) The second sentence of section 602(c)(2) is amended to read as follows: "The provisions of section 604, relating to an expedited procedure for consideration of joint resolutions, shall apply to a joint resolution disapproving such act as specified in this paragraph.".

(6) Section 604(b) of such Act is amended by deleting "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(7) Subsections (b) and (c) of section 740 of such Act are ameneded by deleting in each subsection the words "resolution by either the Senate or the House of Representatives" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint resolution by the Congress".

(8) Section 740(d) of such Act is amended by deleting "concurrent" and inserting in lieu thereof "joint".

(9) The amendments made by this subsection shall not be applicable with respect to any law, which was passed by the Council of the District of Columbia prior to the date of the enactment of this joint resolution, and such laws are hereby deemed valid, in accordance with the provisions thereof, notwithstanding such amendments.

(b) Part F of title VII of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEVERABILITY

"SEC. 762. If any particular provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this Act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.".

(c) Section 164(a)(3) of the District of Columbia Retirement Reform Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3)(A) The Congress may reject any filing under this section within thirty days of such filing by enacting a joint resolution stating that the Congress has determined—

"(i) that such filing is incomplete for purposes of this part; or

"(ii) that there is any material qualification by an accountant or actuary contained in an opinion submitted pursuant to section 162(a)(3)(A) or section 162(a)(4)(B).

"(B) If the Congress rejects a filing under subparagraph (A) and if either a revised filing is not submitted within forty-five days after the enactment under subparagraph (A) rejecting the initial filing or such revised filing is rejected by the Congress by enactment of a joint resolution within thirty days after submission of the revised filing, then the Congress may, if it deems it in the best interests of the participants, take any one or more of the following actions:

"(i) Retain an independent qualified public accountant on behalf of the participants to perform an audit.

"(ii) Retain an enrolled actuary on behalf of the participants to prepare an actuarial statement.

The Board and the Mayor shall permit any accountant or actuary so retained to inspect whatever books and records of the Fund and the retirement program are necessary for performing such audit or preparing such statement.

"(C) If a revised filing is rejected under subparagraph (B) or if a filing required under this title is not made by the date specified, no funds appropriated for the Fund with respect to which such filing was required as part of the Federal payment may be paid to the Fund until such time as an acceptable filing is made. For purposes of this subparagraph, a filing is unacceptable if, within thirty days of its submission, the Congress enacts a joint resolution disapproving such filing.".

(d) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the amendments made by this section.

By Mr. FISH:

—At the end of the resolution, add the following:

"SEC. . (a) The provisions of the bill H.R. 5963 (98th Congress), as introduced in House of Representatives on June 28, 1984, are hereby enacted.

"(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.".

"(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.".

—At the end of the resolution, add the following:

"SEC. . (a) The provisions of the bill H.R. 2151 (98th Congress), as introduced in the House of Representatives on March 16, 1983, are hereby enacted.

"(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.".

By Mr. ROE:

—At the end of the resolution, add the following:

"SEC. . (a) The provisions of the bill H.R. 3678 (98th Congress), as passed by the House of Representatives on June 29, 1984, are hereby enacted.

"(b) Section 102 of this joint resolution shall not apply with respect to the provisions enacted by this section.".

SENATE—Monday, September 24, 1984

The Senate met at 1 p.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Father in Heaven, we are thankful for all that was accomplished last week but mindful of all that remains to be done. We are grateful for whatever agreements have been reached which will encourage legislation. You know, Father, the human penchant for letting things go until the last minute and the stress that builds as adjournment nears. As these two agenda-filled weeks confront the Senate, make known your presence and power, your wisdom and direction.

We confess, Father, the ease with which we departmentalize faith. We relegate it to the Sabbath and the sanctuary or sometimes when personal crisis arises. Help us to realize that faith is for the road—the daily round—the common task—the business at hand—the critical moment. Help all the Senators to be open to the real possibility of divine intervention and relief when heat and pressure build and resolution seems remote if not impossible. Grant, dear God, in spite of us if necessary, a smooth—efficient—achievement-filled 2 weeks, free of rancor and frustration for Thy honor and the benefit of all. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The acting majority leader is recognized.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, today, after the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order and the special orders in favor of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE] and the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN], there is going to be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 2 p.m.

At 2 p.m., under the provisions of rule XXII, there will be a live quorum preceding the cloture vote in relation to the motion to proceed on S. 2527, the highway bill. If cloture is invoked, and the leadership very much hopes it will be invoked, the Senate will be in a post-cloture situation on the motion to proceed on the highway bill. If it is not invoked, obviously, we shall have to continue to debate on the motion to proceed.

It is the hope of the majority leader that we shall be able to complete consideration of this bill this evening and then proceed to the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriation tomorrow.

In addition, the Interior appropriations bill is a strong candidate for consideration when the Senate completes action on the Labor-Health and Human Services appropriations bill.

Other items that may be considered include the product liability bill, the military construction appropriations bill, the conference report that accompanies the DOD authorization bill, and the conference report to accompany the first concurrent budget resolution.

I might remark that the Appropriations Committee will commence consideration of the continuing resolution in committee session tomorrow. It will also commence consideration of the defense appropriations bill for the fiscal year 1985. The practice of the Senate is to be in session but not to conduct record votes while we respect the observance of Rosh Hashanah, which will occur this week.

The balance of the week will most likely entail the consideration of the continuing resolution and the conference report, which we hope will be back from the conference committee early. The current fiscal year, this year, ends on Sunday, September 30.

Let me point out to the membership, Mr. President, after discussing matters with my good friend from West Virginia, the distinguished Democratic leader [Mr. BYRD], we have talked about the fact that this evening, following the session, the equipment will be brought in by the National Geographic in order to take a photograph of the Members of this session of Congress, and it will be put in place. That photograph will be taken at 2 p.m. tomorrow. Senators should be reminded that it is necessary to be here and be in our seats ahead of that time. I am sure there will be ample reminding of Senators tomorrow, but this reminder is made for the purpose that we do not do what I was accused of one day, wearing my hunting jacket. It was not my hunting jacket, it was a very good suede jacket, but some people thought it was a hunting jacket. So all Senators ought to be advised that tomorrow is not the day to wear their hunting jackets.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of our time.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

(Mr. WARNER assumed the chair.)

SECURITY OF AMERICAN FACILITIES IN BEIRUT

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the problem of security of American-occupied facilities and buildings in Beirut has been excruciatingly obvious for a long time. The destruction of our Marine barracks with catastrophic loss of life occurred almost a year ago, October 23, 1983.

The report of the Long Commission on December 20, 1983, concluded that, as of the end of November 1983:

> The security measures implemented or planned for implementation . . . are not adequate to prevent continuing significant attrition of the American force.

It was also made clear by the Long Commission that proposed construction of protective security barricades and structures have been "hampered by a shortage of material and labor." Such shortages should have been overcome on a top priority basis in the 9 months since the Long Commission made its findings.

It is unacceptable to compare the delay in protecting our facilities to Americans refurbishing their kitchens, as the President did in his comment reported in the New York Times today. I quote from the Times:

> Anyone that's ever had their kitchen done over knows that it never gets done as soon as you wish it would.

What does the President mean? There is no parallel between remodeling a kitchen and protecting the lives of U.S. Government personnel overseas. But with a Commander in Chief so detached from day-to-day policymaking, one might expect to have this problem.

It was an inappropriate comment. It appears he does not take this problem seriously. It trivializes the loss of American lives.

If this is the kind of out-of-touch flippant comment that we can expect from our President, it is no wonder that they keep him away from the press. It is a problem that needs to be looked at seriously, and those who are responsible for the delay in providing the best of security for Americans in Lebanon should be brought to light. I would think it appropriate for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Senate Armed Services Committee to conduct a thorough review of the adequacy and the timetable of security for our people in Beirut.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am happy to yield to anyone else my time. Does Mr. PROXMIRE have a follow-on order?

Mr. PROXMIRE. Yes. May I have 5 minutes?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, if I have 5 minutes remaining, I yield them to the Senator from Wisconsin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR PROXMIRE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair now recognizes the Senator from Wisconsin.

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE WILLIAM REHNQUIST'S TESTIMONY ON THE GENOCIDE CONVENTION

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, as the Senate prepares at long last to debate the merits of the Genocide Convention, I believe it would be helpful for my colleagues and their staff to review the key testimony that has been presented regarding the convention and its implications for Americans.

Today, I want to call attention to the testimony of Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist, who in 1970 testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on behalf of the Nixon administration in his capacity of Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel.

In the question and answer session with the Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. Rehnquist addressed three key points which have continuously been distorted by extremist opponents of the Genocide Convention.

The first is the impact of the Genocide Convention on American's constitutional right for free speech. Some organizations have alleged that derogatory comments or even racial slurs could be forbidden by the convention. As Mr. Rehnquist testified, he was satisfied that the convention did not affect the right of all Americans to free speech and, more importantly, the right of free speech, could not be affected by this or any other treaty.

The second excerpt I am presenting deals with the "supremacy clause" of the Constitution. Article VI, section II of the Constitution is often quoted by critics of the Genocide Convention as making treaties the supreme law of the land but their quotation is selective. As Mr. Rehnquist points out:

I do not think that is a full statement. The Constitution says are laws made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land . . . it puts laws and treaties of equal dignity . . .

The third excerpt picks up on that point and develops it further. Mr. Rehnquist kills two birds with one stone by describing the impact that any opinion of the world court might have on American citizens and the role of treaties vis-a-vis the Constitution when he notes that—

. . . nothing the ICJ (International Court of Justice) said on the subject would have any bearing on the rights of Americans because the Constitution is superior to a treaty no matter how interpreted.

Without question, a treaty is not valid unless it is consonant with the Constitution of the United States. Any treaty that would affect the constitutional guarantees of Americans could never be valid—and should never be valid.

As Mr. Rehnquist repeatedly emphasized in his 1970 appearance before the Foreign Relations Committee, the Genocide Convention does not affect our constitutional liberties in any way. A treaty is not superior to domestic laws enacted my Congress. As Mr. Rehnquist points out, they are on equal footing as the supreme law of the land but both must bow before the Constitution and any treaty or law that is inconsistent with the Constitution can never be valid, no matter how interpreted.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that excerpts from Mr. Rehnquist's testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee be reprinted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the excerpts were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXCERPT NO. 1

EFFECT ON FREE SPEECH

Senator CHURCH. The committee, of course, has received considerable mail on the Genocide Convention, some people making extravagant charges. For purposes of the record, I think some of those charges should be raised and some of these fears allayed by the Department of Justice. For example, in the mail many people expressed the fear that just one racial slur will make the offender subject to the charge of genocide. Would you please set the record straight on that charge?

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes, Mr. Chairman. The only form of speech that would be affected by the treaty is found in article III, subparagraph (c) referring to direct and public incitement to commit genocide. We have the recent decision of the Supreme Court in Brandenburg v. Ohio (395 U.S. 444) which makes it clear that while inciting to riot or inciting to violate the law may be punished it may only be punished under circumstances where the intent is to cause the law violation, and there is a probability of its happening. I think this is a very careful, closely drawn provision in that regard.

Senator CHURCH. In other words, you are satisfied that such constitutional protection, as presently exists in the field of free speech, would not be adversely affected in any way by the terms of this Convention?

Mr. REHNQUIST. I am satisfied, first, that they would not be and second, that they could not be.

Senator CHURCH. Yes.

EXCERPT NO. 2

LIMITATION ON SUPREMACY CLAUSE

Senator COOPER. If the Senate gives its advice and consent to the convention and it is ratified by the President, does it under the constitution become a supreme law of the land?

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes, it does.

Senator COOPER. Then it does have superiority then over a statute.

Mr. REHNQUIST. I do not think one can give an unqualified yes to that question. I think that so far as the law applied by the United States courts in cases coming before them, a subsequent inconsistent statute will be applied in preference to an early adopted treaty.

Senator COOPER. Is that what Mr. Gardner said? You are familiar with the case of Missouri versus Holland?

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes.

Senator COOPER. That is one of the leading cases; isn't it?

Mr. REHNQUIST. But I do not think there was any conflict between a Federal statute and a Federal treaty. There may have been a conflict between a law of the State of Missouri.

Senator COOPER. A State statute?

Mr. REHNQUIST. And there of course it is clear that a treaty is superior.

Senator COOPER. The reason I ask this question is, assume that the Congress enacts a statute defining genocide, and should limit it in some way as to article III, then a question would be raised concerning a conflict between the status of the treaty and the status of a statute.

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes; I think you would.

Senator COOPER. And the constitution clearly says that treaties and, I assume, conventions fall within that category, are the supreme law of the land.

Mr. REHNQUIST. Senator, I do not think that is a full statement.

The Constitution says all laws made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made under the authority of the United States shall be the supreme law of the land. I am paraphrasing, but it puts laws and treaties of equal dignity, I believe.

Senator COOPER. But the statute, to be the supreme law of the land, must be in consonance with the Constitution.

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes; it must be consistent with the Constitution, but it need not be consistent with the treaty.

Senator COOPER. Everybody is saying, though, this Convention is constitutional, and there has been the testimony to that effect. If we assume it is constitutional and a statute was passed which was not consonant with this treaty, then a question would be raised as to whether the statute controlled.

Mr. REHNQUIST. I firmly believe that the treaty is entirely constitutional. Yet I also believe it is possible that Congress, in adopting implementing legislation, could very deliberately and carefully, as a matter of considered judgment, omit one section, say, of article II, and there would be no question that statute would be constitutional.

The United States might be called before the ICJ for failing to implement the treaty, but the treaty would not prevail over clear implementing legislation.

EXCERPT No. 3

DEFINITION OF "INCITEMENT TO COMMIT GENOCIDE" SUBJECT TO CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS

Senator COOPER. On this question of definition (c) "Direct and public incitement to commit genocide," would you say that the sufficiency of the charge would be determined by our own constitutional ruling of what incitement constitutes a crime?

Mr. REHNQUIST. I have no doubt of that at all. That is the constitutional provisions such as were interpreted in the Brandenburg case, would prevail over any contrary implications or broader language in the treaty.

Senator JAVITS. Would the Senator yield?

But isn't that a matter which, if objected to by another state, the International Court of Justice could take jurisdiction of?

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes; I would think so, Senator, under article IX.

Senator COOPER. There has been a long line of rulings that public incitement as construed under the first amendment, requires the immediacy of an act being committed resulting from the incitement. Nevertheless, a complaining state could go before the International Court of Justice and say that we were not abiding by this section of article II, and ask that the ICJ say to the world and to the United States that we are not obeying the convention.

Mr. REHNQUIST. It could certainly make that request under article IX.

I might add that it is my understanding that nothing the ICJ said on the subject would have any bearing on the rights of American citizens because the Constitution is superior to a treaty no matter how interpreted.

Senator COOPER. One of the great arguments for this convention is that it is intended to give moral leadership, against this heinous crime. I must say at the committee's last hearings, Mr. Perlman, who was then Solicitor General, and also Judge Patterson, then president of the New York Bar Association, and a distinguished public servant, both said that we should not alter or place any restrictions upon this convention because we had a moral obligation to carry it out if we ratified it.

Senator JAVITS. I was just going to explore this question with you a little further, Mr. Rehnquist. Let us take a hypothetical case again. A U.S. citizen is charged by another country with inciting, with direct and public incitement, to commit genocide in that country, which brings it under the jurisdiction of this particular convention, and a request is made to extradite him.

The U.S. Government demurs. The U.S. Government submits the matter to the Court of International Justice. The Court of International Justice upholds the demanding state.

According to your version of the case, nonetheless an application to the U.S. Supreme Court or to an appropriate court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he is protected by the Constitution in terms of the U.S. courts deciding whether his rights under the Constitution are being violated by the definition which has been approved by the International Court of Justice, could conceivably result in a denial of extradition notwithstanding the decision.

Mr. REHNQUIST. Yes.

Senator JAVITS. What is the case you cited? Does the case you cited hold that?

Mr. REHNQUIST. No. The case I cited simply is a matter of interpreting domestic statutes, the Brandenburg case.

Senator JAVITS. You could not deprive a man of his constitutional rights by a treaty.

Mr. REHNQUIST. No. There is no question of that.

MOYNIHAN PREDICTS CATASTROPHE AND HE'S RIGHT

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, yesterday's New York Times carried an article by the senior Senator from New York, PAT MOYNIHAN, that every Member of this body should read and reread. I earnestly hope the President of the United States will read it and particularly his Secretary of the Treasury, Donald Regan. Senator MOYNIHAN has done something that no one has previously done, to my knowledge. He has put the Federal deficit problem in terms all of us can understand. He has gone right to the heart of why the deficit monster can eat our economy alive.

What PAT MOYNIHAN has gotten hold of is the grim fact that in the past 3 years we have put this Federal Government into the same miserable state as the victim of loan sharks who finds himself falling ever more deeply in debt. The interest burden becomes so crushing that it takes more and more of the victim's income, then it takes most of his income, and then he cannot escape a catastrophe. As Senator MOYNIHAN puts it: "This is what the Federal deficit is about. Not spending: interest."

Here is how the Moynihan analysis works: The deficit can be broken down into two parts. The primary or program deficit—that comes from subtracting revenues from the cost of all Government programs. Then there is the monster—the interest deficit. That is over and above the deficit that springs from the failure of the Federal Government to raise the revenues to cover the cost of Federal programs—the defense program, the farm program, the health programs, and so forth. Senator MOYNIHAN argues that the primary or program deficit reached its peak in 1982 when it exceeded $100 billion, but it has eased off and will average less than $50 billion for the rest of the decade. On the other hand, the interest deficit will grow and grow and grow. Senator MOYNIHAN reports that in 1980 the Federal Government paid $52 billion in interest on the national debt. This year it will pay $111 billion. By 1989, just the interest deficit, aside from the program deficit, will be $214 billion. As Senator MOYNIHAN says, program deficits are simple arithmetic. But the interest deficit is algebraic; it feeds on itself; it compounds.

Mr. President, there is another uncontrollable element of this interest deficit, if I can go a little beyond Senator MOYNIHAN. We cannot directly cut it. Of course, it's hard to reduce any Federal spending program. Every significant program has its powerful constituency—defense programs have the merit of national security and the tough push of the powerful corporate management of defense contractors, plus the large unions fighting for the jobs defense spending brings. Programs for the elderly enjoy the dedicated support of millions of voters who benefit directly from the programs.

Fighting the deficit by raising taxes smashes into the resistance of almost every voter. Could any solution to the deficit be tougher? The answer, Mr. President, is "Yes." Why? Federal spending on interest enjoys the toughest, strongest support of all. Just as it compounds and increases algebraically, it enjoys a sanctity, Mr. President, far more effective than any loan shark's enforcer. This country can and has reduced programs in the past below the claims of the beneficiaries for the farmer, for defense, for health, and for every other program. We have also raised taxes in the past. But the United States has never, and probably never will, refuse to pay the interest it has promised on what it borrows. We have pledged the full faith and credit of our Nation. It may reduce or even refuse to fund any kind of a Federal program, but we will not betray our word.

Mr. President, this is why the deficit has become a problem far greater than most of us have realized. As Senator MOYNIHAN writes, in 1982 and again this year, the Congress cut domestic spending and raised taxes. Still the deficit climbed. Even if we balance the program budget, even if we run a surplus in the program budget, the massive interest deficit will continue to grow, and it will grow more rapidly than any conceivable program surplus.

What does that mean? That means the national debt will climb; interest on that growing national debt will climb for two reasons that feed each other.

First, it is obvious that the bigger the debt, the bigger the interest cost necessary to finance that debt. Second, the bigger the debt, the more dominant that debt becomes in the Nation's credit markets. Already this year, Federal borrowing will absorb two-thirds of all new savings of the American people, plus increasing amounts of foreign capital.

As this demand for credit grows, it drives up the price of credit or interest rates. So we can expect the exploding national debt to push interest rates higher. Then what's the result? With a constantly growing national debt and skyrocking interest rates, the interest deficit takes on a life of its own. Of course, the Federal Reserve can step in with a flood of cheap credit. That could bring a temporary downward pressure on interest rates. But the key word is "temporary." Why would not lower interest rates stay down indefinitely with the Fed flooding credit into the economy? Because the flood of credit would surely ignite an inflationary surge that would, as it always has, pull interest rates right up with prices.

So what is the answer? The answer is that the first priority of our Government must be to cut program spending, and cut it sharply and we must raise taxes. We have to accept that pain, and hope it will not come too late. But we have to act fast, very fast, or the interest deficit may eventually force a repudiation of the national debt with economic consequences beyond this Senator's imagination.

Mr. President, I ask that the article by Senator MOYNIHAN in the Sunday, September 23, New York Times be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

$D_n=D_o(1+r)^n$: A FORMULA FOR TROUBLE

(By Daniel Patrick Moynihan)

WASHINGTON.—Forty years ago, on the West Side piers of New York City, if you were broke on a Monday morning there was no problem. You could borrow $20, with $30 to be paid back on payday, which was Friday. If you didn't have $30 on Friday, that was no problem. You could pay $40 on Wednesday. The extra $10, then $20, then $40, was called vigorish. (A detective friend reports that today it's called The Vig.) It kept mounting. Sooner or later, your family bailed you out in a big scene, or you ended up in St. Clare's Hospital.

This is what the Federal deficit is about. Not spending: interest.

In thinking about this wholly new situation—there has been no equivalent in American history—it helps to separate the deficit into two parts. First, the primary, or program, deficit: the amount spent on Federal programs, less Federal revenues. Second, the interest deficit: the amount paid in interest on the outstanding debt.

Contrary to what we hear, and for the most part seem to think, until recently primary deficits have been relatively rare. There were two in the 1950's, two in the 1960's. They were relatively small (1962's were $300 million.) There were six in the 1970's, but still not large ones, except for the $40 billion primary deficit in the post-recession year 1976.

This pattern continued until the walloping $105 billion primary deficit in the depression year 1982. But of late, the primary deficit has slacked off. The primary deficit this fiscal year is some $61 billion (of a total deficit of $172 billion). The Congressional Budget Office projects that the primary deficit will average about $46 billion for the remainder of the decade.

But the interest deficit has begun to go out of control. In 1980, the Treasury spent $52 billion in interest payments. This year, the bill will reach $111 billion. By 1989, $214 billion.

Program deficits are simple arithmetic. The amount spent on farm programs does not affect the amount spent on the defense program. But the interest deficit is algebraic. Change one part, and you change the whole.

What Lord Keynes called the "magic of compound interest" works with debt as well as with savings. It starts slowly, then explodes.

The deficits and the debt are exploding, then, but largely from the rapidly growing interest deficit, not from growth in the primary deficit.

The basic compound interest equation—bear with me—demonstrates what's happening: $D_n=D_o(1+r)^n$.

If the debt today (D_o) is $1 trillion, and the interest rate paid on this debt is 10 percent (r), in five years (n)—with no new primary deficits—the debt (D_n) will be more than $1.6 trillion. Today, the debt is more than $1 trillion, and the interest rate is more than 10 percent. (We talk about interest rates as percentages; economists express them as decimals: 20 percent equals 0.2. Without the 1 in the equation, interest costs would contract, not compound.)

In real life, the national debt will also be fueled by primary deficits running at about $46 billion a year. But the interest deficit is the unstable element, rising to $214 billion a year by 1989, and on from there. This means we will be borrowing money to pay interest. This always happens when the growth in interest payments is greater than the growth in the primary deficit.

Technically, this has happened before, but infrequently and at such low levels as to be of no real significance. It is wholly different now. We will be borrowing hundreds of billions of dollars to pay The Vig. The results is an exploding deficit: the interest deficit, not the program deficit, going to control.

We have been thinking arithmetic. We have to begin thinking algebra. In 1982 and again this year, Congress cut domestic spending and raised taxes. Still the deficit climbed. The problem is the algebra of compound interest that has superseded the arithmetic of spending cuts and tax increases.

This is new. We have never experienced anything like it. If we go on using the old terms, it is likely we will shorty face a crisis unlike any we have ever known.

1984 ELECTION CRUCIAL FOR ARMS NUCLEAR CONTROL

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, the progress of arms control depends on one single event: the election of the President of the United States. If the President wants to negotiate an arms control treaty, we get it. If he does not, we do not. It is that simple. Does Ronald Reagan really want to negotiate such a treaty? Mr. President, look at the Reagan record. Before he became President he had a 100-percent perfect record of arms control opposition. How about his record since he was elected? He has struck out.

This is tragic, because today the stage is set for negotiating a comprehensive nuclear arms control agreement with the Soviet Union. Those who support the President's arms control intransigence make one argument. We have lagged for years behind the U.S.S.R. in nuclear arms. Before we negotiate, we must catch up. But are we behind? For the last 25 years, without exception, there has been a rough parity in nuclear arms between the Soviet Union and the United States, with a continuous advantage for the United States in the one element of nuclear power that has the greatest significance: nuclear arms invulnerability. It is true that, for some time, the Soviet Union has had more megatonnage, more throw-weight, and recently it may have acquired more warheads. Because more than 70 percent of Soviet missiles are landbased and stationary, its missiles are also more accurate.

Why does not all this add up to a Soviet superiority in nuclear arms? The answer: The one nuclear power that counts above all is the power to survive a preemptive nuclear attack by the other side. How does the Soviet Union score in this respect? Now well. Its problem: nearly three-quarters of all its nuclear power sits in a stationary, fixed-mode, permanently located, and we know precisely where. That makes most of the Soviet nuclear weaponry vulnerable to our retaliatory attack. On the other hand, three-quarters of American nuclear power moves under water in submarines and in the air in bombers. Three times as much of our far larger nuclear launching submarines are at sea at all times compared to the Soviet Union. And much more of our much more numerous nuclear armed bombers cruise constantly in the air every minute of every day and night. Much of the rest of our mobile deterrent stands at the ready, capable of launch in a matter of minutes. Obviously, far more of the American nuclear arms deterrent would survive a Soviet preemptive attack than the Soviet deterrent that might survive an American deterrent attack. So which power has whatever nuclear advantage there is? The United States—clearly and directly.

Does that advantage mean that we could win a nuclear war? Absolutely not. No way. Why not? Here is why not: The Soviet Union's landbased missiles would suffer serious damage, but enough of their missiles would survive any nuclear attack to permit the Soviets a still devastating retaliation that would level our cities and kill tens of millions of Americans. The Russians' sea and air based deterrent would certainly survive in part and provide further retaliatory devastation.

Under these circumstances, Mr. President, it is hard for this Senator to understand how there could be a more logical time for negotiating a comprehensive arms control treaty with the Soviet Union. What would a comprehensive arms control treaty include? It would include all nuclear weapons deployment. And of course it would include the most comprehensive and aggressive kind of verification. Such a treaty negotiated right now would leave both powers with sufficient nuclear retaliatory capability to deter any nuclear attack.

So let us get on with it. Why do we not negotiate such a treaty? Do the American people oppose it? No. The American people overwhelmingly favor such a treaty. They have said so in referenda and polls consistently. Does the Congress oppose it? The House last year passed a resolution calling for such a treaty by a nearly two-to-one vote. After very considerable pressure by President Reagan, a Republican Senate specially responsive to White House lobbying said, "no." Certainly if the President had supported such a treaty, the Senate would also have supported it. In any event, neither the American people nor the Congress negotiates such a treaty. The President does. And this President will not.

Before he was elected, President Reagan made a career out of fighting every arms control agreement this country ever signed: the Test Ban Treaty, the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, SALT I, SALT II, and all the rest. Since he has become President, he has used arms control for one purpose: to win support of nuclear weapons systems that the Congress would not buy for any other purpose. The MX is sold to the Congress not for its intrinsic value but as a bargaining chip in the START arms control talks. The Pershing missile would probably not win support without the arms control crutch because it makes little military sense. It does win support now because it would give us something to trade in the INF arms-control negotiations. The immense expenditures for Star Wars might not make it through Congress on its own merit because it has very little merit. So the President sells it as a critical bargaining chip in persuading the Russians to limit antisatellite weapons.

After 3½ years in office, President Reagan has nothing, zero, zip to show in arms control. His arms control agenda will lead to further massive buildup in nuclear arms, with the Star Wars buildup alone ticketed for hundreds of billions of dollars. It will provide one rationalization after another for fueling the arms race. It will not give us arms control.

Because the Presidency is crucial in negotiating arms agreement with the Russians, the Presidency is far more important in arms control. So it is essential that we elect a Democratic President in 1984 for one reason: The election of a Democratic President would provide our only chance of securing a truly comprehensive arms control agreement which is far and away our best channel to prevent a nuclear war.

CUSHY CRUISES GET THE GOLDEN FLEECE

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, today I am giving my Golden Fleece of the Month Award for September to the State Department, which permitted its employees to use over $400,000 to frolic on posh ocean cruises.

The taxpayers were drowned in a sea of red ink by this titanic mistake, Mr. President. To be specific, this expenditure made me less than pacific.

This was no dinghy cost for the taxpayer. During 1982 and 1983, the State Department spent over $400,000 so about 70 of its employees and their families could while away the days at sea in first-class cabins aboard luxury liners like the Queen Elizabeth II.

These employees were coming back to the United States permanently or were returning briefly for a home leave. Instead of having these bureaucrats fly the friendly, cheaper skies, the State Department allowed them to sail on luxury liners like the QE-II and the Sea Princess.

Meanwhile, the seasick taxpayer is forced to swallow a travel bill that's two to three times more than what the Government pays for airline tickets.

And it looks like the only rule the State Department had for ocean liner travel was "damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead." According to the Department's own vouchers, most of the travel was first class.

In reviewing the latest State Department records for 1982 and 1983, I fished out things like this:

U.S. embassy employees in Pakistan seemed to be living it up the most with these ocean cruises. For 1982 and 1983, 26 employees and their families took ocean cruises, mainly aboard the QE-II, running up a bill of more than $160,000 for the Federal Government. Economy class airline travel from Pakistan to New York or Washington runs about $900 per person. These employees, however, were flying to London then it was bon voyage on a 5-day cruise aboard the QE-II from London to New York. Total bill for the Government: About $2,400 to $3,000 per person—about 2 to 3 times the cost of flying.

Some wanted to take the sunny route. One Embassy employee in Pakistan and his wife flew to Thailand where they boarded the QE-II and sailed for 19 days to Hawaii. They then flew from Hawaii to Los Angeles to Washington. Their total bill for just the ship travel was over $15,000.

Economy class airfare from New Orleans to St. Louis, runs about $230 per person, or about $460 per couple. But why take the plane when you can spend 11 days on a paddle boat sailing up the lazy Mississippi River. That is exactly what one couple who worked for the State Department did. Cost to the Government: $5,280.

When it comes to using ocean liner travel when air travel would be cheaper, the State Department regulations have about as much backbone as a jellyfish. Sometimes ocean travel is paid with U.S. dollars. In other instances, the travel is paid for with "excess currency" the United States owns. We accumulate this currency when another country repays the United States for aid in their local currency, which we agree not to convert to dollars. In the past, the United States has banked a considerable amount of "excess currency" and it has looked for ways to spend that money in those countries. For example, we agreed not to convert to dollars certain aid repayments from Pakistan. The ship travel from Pakistan was paid with Pakistani rupees owned by the United States.

But in this case, the State Department has gone overboard. It is time to shape up or ship out these regulations. There are many more worthwhile projects that Pakistani rupees could be spent on instead of first-class cruises for Embassy employees, such as improving security conditions at the Embassies.

Mr. President, it is time to hoist anchor on these "Love Boat" cruises, which were nothing but a hardship for the taxpayer.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR BENTSEN

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I am happy to yield whatever time I have remaining to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin.

THE ECONOMIC OUTLOOK

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, it is the political season, and all of us are watching the economy with unusual interest. Long ago, it became an article of faith that the economy and its trends can play a major role in the voting booth.

The President enjoys a good lead in the polls now, in part due to the perception that he has mastered the business cycle—that the boom/bust days of old are gone. Indeed, he and other administration officials speak glowingly of our economic future. Just last Friday, Treasury Secretary Regan speculated that the administration may revise upward its 1985 growth outlook to 6 percent in light of the continuing strength of the recovery, and others speak confidently that a 3-percent or 4-percent real growth rate can be maintained for years by the administration.

Yet, there are emerging signs that the deficit is proving too difficult for the administration to handle—that its impact on housing, on interest rates and the dollar, on exports and on agriculture is more potent than administration economic policy.

Indeed, there are significant signs that the economy is slowing more sharply than suggested by Commerce Department data.

Retail sales and housing starts fell in both, July and August—and the decline was more than a mere blip.

Personal consumption expenditures shrank to a scant one-tenth of 1 percent growth in July, and again in August.

Underlying this downturn in consumer spending is the cesation of growth in disposable real personal income. It rose only two-tenths of 1 percent in July—only one-fourth the rate in June. And it stagnated in August.

This ebbing of consumer strength rippled like wildfire through the rest of the economy. From New York to Texas to California, corporate planners took another hard look at capacity expansion plans. And they took out their red pens.

Back in May and June, corporate plans for new plant and equipment spending were robust for the fourth quarter. Spending plans called for a 12-percent annual rise in the fourth quarter—continuing the robust pattern we've seen for over a year. Yet, as consumer demand slowed, so did those plans. They were shoved back on the shelf with a vengeance. And the most recent survey of corporate spending plans shows they will be virtually flat in the fourth quarter. That nose dive in capital spending will magnify the ebbing of consumer demand. It is not good news for 1985.

Moreover, our economy over the years has tracked the index of leading indicators. They have proven good indicators of future economic activity, and they are giving us more bad news for 1985. In June, they fell 1.3 percent. In July, they fell eight-tenths of 1 percent. And the August indicators due out Friday will show little upward movement.

There are those who would take this data, and raise the alarm, charging that a recession is right around the corner. It is far too early to make that judgment.

At the same time, the third quarter GNP flash 3.6 percent estimate released Thursday showed real GNP growth falling by one-half. The 3.6 percent third quarter growth rate is about the minimum level of growth needed to prevent unemployment from rising. A higher growth rate would raise fears in financial markets that inflation might pick up because the economy was growing too fast. Investors would demand inflation premiums, and long-term interest rates would rise, threatening the recovery.

On the other hand, a third quarter growth rate below 3.6 percent would have had an equally adverse impact on the economy. It would suggest rising unemployment, and an economy slipping into the familiar old, boom/bust business cycle pattern—6 weeks before an election.

In fact, the third quarter growth figure of 3.6 percent from the Commerce Department is almost too good to be true.

And that may be exactly what it is: Too good to be true.

Underlying that 3.6 percent growth figure is a decision by the Commerce Department that the auto industry retooled this year in its normal seasonal pattern. It did not. In fact, three GM plants, which produce over 8 percent of our automobiles, were shut down for retooling in the second quarter, and not the usual third quarter. That decision sparked an intense internal debate at the Commerce Department because the treatment of that shutdown would have a substantial impact on economic growth statistics in both the second and third quarters. The Federal Reserve also debated the issue. It decided to reflect the unusual pattern of auto retooling in its seasonal adjustment statistics.

Yet, the Commerce Department did not make that same adjustment. In fact, it simply ignored the major new retooling pattern when developing its GNP data.

That was a bad decision for three reasons:

First, it artificially deflated economic strength in the second quarter because the retooling was treated as a shutdown for economic reasons—rather than the retooling it actually was.

Second, economic growth in the third quarter was inflated because the output of those plants was counted twice: Once in the actual output data collected by Commerce, and again in the seasonal adjustment.

And, third, it was a bad decision because the independent Federal Reserve took the reverse course in making its own seasonal adjustments to the exact same data. That spotlighted the Commerce Department's decision to ignore the retooling pattern this year—and casts that decision in a political light.

In light of the substantial impact this decision would have on second and third quarter growth data, the Commerce Department should have revised its figures to reflect the atypical auto retooling pattern. Indeed, the second quarter figures were revised three times since June, but not a word was said about autos. At a minimum, Commerce routinely acknowledges and even adjusts seasonal factors for significant events such as strikes and other sporadic events. The Federal Reserve considered this change in retooling patterns that significant. The Commerce Department should have done so, as well.

The effect of the Commerce Department decision to ignore the Federal Reserve, and to ignore the auto retooling pattern, was to smooth out the decline in economic growth now underway.

The Commerce Department tells us that real GNP rose at a 7.1 percent clip in the second quarter, and a 3.6 percent clip in the third. A recalculation of those growth figures by the Joint Economic Committee using the Federal Reserve's seasonal pattern, shows that real GNP rose 7.8 percent in the second quarter—and then slumped sharply to a scant 2.2 percent in the third quarter.

The Commerce Department arbitrarily changed a sharp decline into a moderate one—thereby hiding the unexpected sharp decline in economic activity. The result is that economic activity fell off a cliff during the last 3 months, and the Commerce Department didn't tell anyone.

I realize this is an election year. And I do not blame this administration for seeking a fair advantage. But playing with these numbers is a deadly game, and I want the Joint Economic Committee to investigate.

It is something I cannot recall in any previous administration—Republican or Democratic.

Our economy has taken a nosedive that is steeper and deeper than anyone expected. We now face the very real prospect of a recession next year, and the administration wants to disguise that fact. We are growing now at a rate too slow to provide jobs for our growing labor force. Unemployment is already too high, and it looks like it will not fall much further.

I will not attempt to predict the economic outlook. But there is one certainty we face: Our failure to reduce the deficits more than we did during the recovery in 1983 and 1984 has kept interest rates far above traditional levels for this stage of a recovery. That confronts our economy with a host of dangers that prejudice the economic outlook.

We have been living far beyond our means during this administration scouring the world for credit—and paying whatever price it takes. A smaller deficit would mean lower interest rates, and much better odds for attaining a sustainable recovery of the sort talked about by the administration.

Fiddling with numbers will not change that reality. What we need are deeds, Mr. President, not slanted numbers.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

Mr. BENTSEN. I am delighted to yield to my friend.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I congratulate the distinguished Senator from Texas, the former chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, a man who served on the Finance Committee, has been a brilliant success in private business, and understands our economy as well or better than anyone else in the Senate. What he just said is shocking, and frankly this Senator follows the statistics very closely, but I missed this entirely, and I am grateful to the Senator calling it to our attention.

What he shows is that, on the basis of Federal Reserve figures, and that is an independent agency, the economy slumped from a 7.8-percent growth rate in the second quarter to a 2.2-percent growth rate in the third quarter. 2.2 percent really means stagnation; 2.2 percent, as the Senator points out so well, means unemployment is very likely to rise. The fact is few people realize it but we have had no improvement in unemployment since last May. Unemployment is at the same level now as it was in May. So the economy seems to be stalling out.

As the Senator said, it is shocking that the Department of Commerce would make the kind of decision they made that made such a dramatic difference in the growth rate in the third quarter, particularly in view of the fact that it is only a very few weeks before the Presidential-congressional elections of 1984.

So I am greatly indebted to my good friend from Texas who has made a brilliant analysis here. I have had a chance to follow the text of his statement, and I think it is completely sound and accurate. I think it calls for some very tough answers on the part of the Commerce Department and the President.

Mr. BENTSEN. I thank my friend from Wisconsin.

Let me say when I first heard this information I did not believe it. I made them go back and check and then checked within the Commerce Department to try to understand how this came about. It is a serious mistake on their part and the fact that it happens just ahead of the election has to give additional concern.

I do not really recall this having been done before just ahead of an election.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I say to my good friend from Texas I do not recall that either. I have been in this body since 1957. I served on the Joint Economic Committee for more than 25 years, and I cannot recall any administration, Democratic or Republican, which has in any way been in a position where anyone could charge they cooked the books as far as figures are concerned.

I think this is a very, very serious allegation, and I think it is particularly important since the person who made this allegation is the Senator from Texas who has always been very careful and cautious in his remarks on these economic matters.

Mr. BENTSEN. What worries me is we do not know how this kind of information affects markets and financial institutions, and that type of thing. We do know that that kind of a real nosedive in the economy has to have some effect, because people go into that voting booth and they are voting what they think conditions are and what they are going to be. Obviously, the administration would not want that kind of information just ahead of an election and the correlation there that appears to be certainly is a matter of great concern.

Mr. PROXMIRE. May I say what the Senator told us this morning is entirely consistent with the other statistics we see in the dropoff in housing starts, in the very, very low increase, perhaps no increase at all in real terms in personal income the last quarter and what I have indicated about unemployment, and also the leading indicators, as the Senator pointed out, for 2 successive months have been negative, the first time in 21 months that has been the case.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 2 p.m. with statements therein limited to 5 minutes each.

JOINT REFERRAL OF THE NOMINATION OF MICHAEL HUFFINGTON, OF TEXAS, TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of Michael Huffington, of Texas, to be an Assistant Secretary of Commerce, be jointly referred to the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SILVINO RODRIGUEZ BARRIENTOS AND GUILLERMO CASASUS TOLEDO

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, in late June of this year, President Fidel Castro of Cuba released 27 political prisoners from the Boniato, Combinado del Este, and Kilo-7 prisons. While this is a positive development, the Cuban Government holds incommunicado and in extremely poor living conditions 144 plantado political prisoners.

These plantados are political prisoners who refuse to participate in the so-called political rehabilitation programs sponsored by the Cuban Government. Nearly all of these prisoners have been confined for at least 15 years and are denied adequate medical care, right to worship, access to any type of information, visiting privileges with their families, or exposure to sunlight. Some of the plantado prisoners have been taken from their prisons by Cuban security officials to unknown locations. Others have been killed.

Among the disappeared political prisoners are Silvino Rodriguez Barrientos and Guillermo Casasus Toledo. Mr. Rodriguez was a leader of a wing of the prerevolutionary 26th of July movement. In 1958, he left Cuba as a political exile from the Batista dictatorship. In January 1959, after the collapse of Batista's regime, he returned to Cuba from the United States and was commissioned as a lieutenant in the Cuban Army. In 1964, he was arrested and charged with activities against the State. He was sentenced to 12 years in prison. In 1973, he was charged with continuing to conspire against the State from prison, and was resentenced to an additional 9 years in prison. Mr. Rodriguez has served time in a number of political prison facilities, including: Isla de Pinos, La Cabana, Combinado del Este, and Boniato.

Guillermo Casasus was born in 1951 and has spent nearly half of his life in Cuban prisons. He was a fisherman with Cuba's gulf fishing fleet until 1970. In 1970, he was charged with being a CIA agent and sentenced to 15 years in a military prison. Subsequently, he was transferred to a political prison, and he has served time in La Cabana, Camaguey, Kilo-7, and Boniato prisons. Mr. Casasus became a poet in prison under the tutelage of his fellow prisoner and poet, Jorge Valls Arango.

Several political prisoners who were held at Boniato and who now live in the United States report that Mr. Rodriguez and Mr. Casasus were removed from prison by Cuban State security (G-2) agents on May 31, 1983, and were not seen again until July 14, 1983, when they were returned to Boniato for 4 days. These witnesses indicate that Rodriguez and Casasus had their bodies covered with human bite marks inflicted on them by their guards. Apparently, Casasus had been drugged and was chained to the bars of his cell.

Casasus and Rodriguez were returned to State security headquarters in Santiago de Cuba under the threat that they would be executed for acts of sabotage that occurred in Santiago in the spring and summer of 1983. The prisoners were accused of planning and directing these sabotages from Boniato. Cuban State security based these charges on confessions obtained from recently arrested civilians who were tortured into making these accusations.

Witnesses indicate that Colonel Peralta, chief of security for Santiago Province, threatened Mr. Rodriguez with death and stated that he would personally execute Mr. Rodriguez. Several other high-ranking security officials, including Maj. Arturo Vargas and Maj. Jorge Aguilera, were apparently involved in the interrogations. Mr. Rodriguez was last seen alive on July 18, 1983, while Mr. Casasus disappeared on July 20 of that year.

Senator CHILES and I are now circulating a letter requesting information on the fates of these two men. If they are still alive, we intend to urge the Cuban Government to release them without condition. I hope that other Senators will join Senator CHILES and me in cosigning a letter to the Cuban Government requesting an explanation to this matter.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have two documents printed in the RECORD pertaining to the treatment of the plantados by the Cuban Government. One of these documents lists the 144 plantado prisoners still being held by that government; the second of these is testimony by former political prisoners of conditions in the jails.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT OF FORMER CUBAN "PLANTADO" POLITICAL PRISONERS ON THE EVE OF THE 31ST ANNIVERSARY OF THE ASSAULT TO THE MONCADA BARRACKS

The undersigned, Wilfedo Martinez Roque, Basilio Guzman Marrero and Gerardo Martinex Perez (formerly at Boniato Prison) and Jose A. Lopez Rodriguez and Juan Gonzalez Ruiz (formerly at Combinado del Este Prison), all of whom were released on June 28, 1984, want to make public the following fact of which they bear witness:

The Cuban government holds incommunicado and in subhuman living conditions 144 "plantado" political prisoners in the prisons of Boniato, Combinado del Este and Kilo-7. These prisoners are kept in cells with bars covered with a solid metallic plank which has a small opening to allow the prisoners to obtain their meals. The cells have so sanitary facilities an no water.

Plantado (stand firmly) is a political prisoner who refuses to participate in the "political rehabilitation" programs sponsored by the Cuban regime which includes accepting common criminal status.

Virtually all of these prisoners have been confined over 20 years.

They are dressed in their underwear and are barefooted.

They are not allowed to receive any sunlight.

Their families have been barred from visiting them for over 3 years.

They receive no mail.

They have no access to books, educational instruction, radio or TV.

They are denied all right to worship.

Some of these prisoners have disappeared. They have been taken from their prisons by the guards and either taken by the guards to unknown locations or killed. Silvino Rodriguez Barrientos and Guillermo Casasus Toledo were taken out of Boniato prison on May, 1983 after being threatened with execution; Ramon Guin Diaz was taken out of Combinado del Este prison 17 month ago. No word of them has been heard since.

Some of these prisoners have served their sentences and have not been freed. Such as the case of Pastor Macuran Gonzalez, Santos O. Mirabal. Rodriguez. Fernando Villalon Moreira, Ramón Hernandez Padron, Jesus Hernandez Padron, Ignaciao Leal Denis and Carlos Pons Walters.

In addition to isolation, the "plantado" political prisoners are subject to various forms of torture. These include psychological methods such as: playing high-decibel tapes, continuous threats and predictions of death, withholding water, food and medical assistance. Bodily injury to prisoners is illustrated by the following examples of Boniato prison: Santos O. Mirabal Rodriguez was savagely beaten by a group of guards in 1984. Guillermo Casasus Toledo and Fernando Villalon Moreira were beaten and bitten by guards in 1983.

Medical assistance in Cuban prisons is totally inadequate. Only very serious conditions merit a visit to the physician. There is virtually no medication available. Operations and consultation with specialists are practically non existing regardless of condition. For example, elderly Pitagoras Feros Cambara remains unattended in his cell of Boniato prison suffering form throat cancer.

In these and other prisons there are thousands of political inmates who are not held incomunicado but who share subhuman living conditions. Hundreds of this group have also served over 20 years.

Those men and women were incarcerated for upholding the human rights to dignity and freedom. They must not remain buried in the terrible conditions of Cuban prisons.

We call on the people of the United States and all the people of the world to raise their voice in solidarity with the plight of Cuban political prisoners and to demanding their freedom from the Castro government.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I join the distinguished Senator from Minnesota, Senator DURENBERGER, in calling attention to the plight of two Cuban political prisoners, Silvino Rodriguez Barrientos and Guillermo Casasus Toledo, whose whereabouts is unknown and whose fate is currently in question. It is especially troubling that both of these political prisoners, last seen in July 1983, are apparent victims of torture and have appeared to be in a drugged state. Their lengthy disappearance raises serious concern as to their well-being.

To be in prison anywhere is difficult, but to be a prisoner, a plantado, in a Cuban jail is a truly horrifying experience. Beatings, death threats, isolation, mental and physical abuse, coupled with indefinite sentence terms, are all part of the Cuban Government's unique system of justice.

The regime of Fidel Castro cannot tolerate dissension. In Cuba, a difference of opinion, rightly or wrongly perceived, can cause one to be labeled an "enemy of the Revolution," with the most dire consequences. This Government's treatment of political prisoners should concern all who respect human rights. We cannot look the other way, we cannot ignore the Cuban Government's violations of human rights.

I hope that my colleagues will join in signing a letter to Ramon Sanchez Parodi, the counselor at the Cuban interest section, making clear our concern for the prisoners' well-being and requesting their eventual release. Quoting from the poet and former political prisoner, Jorge Valls, he wrote from his prison cell in Cuba:

Where I am there is no light and it is barred. Just beyond their lies a lighted space.

I ask all my colleagues to join the effort to help seek a lighted space for Silvino Rodriguez Barrientos and Guillermo Casasus Toledo.

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DANFORTH). Without objection, it is so ordered.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

CLOTURE MOTION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair announces that the 1 hour having passed since the Senate convened, pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the pending cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to the consideration of S. 2527, a bill to approve the interstate and interstate substitute cost estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

CALL OF THE ROLL

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to rule XXII, the Chair now directs the clerk to call the roll to ascertain the presence of a quorum.

The bill clerk called the roll and the following Senators answered to their names.

[Quorum No. 13]

Byrd	Goldwater	Stevens
Danforth	Gorton	Trible
Dixon	Hecht	Warner
Dole	McClure
Ford	Stafford

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is not present. The clerk will call the names of the absent Senators.

The bill clerk resumed the call of the roll, and the following Senators entered the Chamber and answered to their names:

Andrews	Glenn	Symms
Chiles	Inouye

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum is not present.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I move that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to request the attendance of absent Senators, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BAKER], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], the Senator from Washington [Mr. EVANS], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. JEPSEN], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] are necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. EAGLETON], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. MATSUNAGA], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SASSER] are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 76, nays 4, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 248 Leg.]

YEAS—76

So the motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the addition of Senators voting who did not answer the quorum call, a quorum is now present.

VOTE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Is it the sense of the Senate that debate on the motion to proceed to the consideration of S. 2527, the bill to approve the Interstate and Interstate Substitute Cost Estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes, shall be brought to a close? The yeas and nays are mandatory under the rule.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to speak for 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this will be a rollcall vote on the cloture motion. If Senators really want to end this bill, assuming that we vote for cloture, I urge them to stand by for a while after this vote has taken place, so that we can determine what procedure will be followed in the post-cloture period.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ARMSTRONG], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BAKER], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], the Senator from Washington [Mr. EVANS], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. JEPSEN], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP], and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY] would vote "nay."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN], the Senator from Arizona [Mr. DECONCINI], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. EAGLETON], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. HOLLINGS], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], the Senator from Hawaii [Mr. MATSUNAGA], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL], the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. PRYOR], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 70, nays 12, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the yeas are 70, the nays are 12. Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I would just like to talk for a moment with my colleagues about the situation since cloture has now been invoked.

I might make a parliamentary inquiry: We are still on the motion to proceed, is that not correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. SYMMS. I think it would be helpful if our colleagues would recognize that this legislation pending before the Senate needs to be passed. We all remember 1982 when the Surface Transportation Assistance Act passed and set this country on a new course to save our transportation infrastructure.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, a point of order. We would like to hear the able chairman of the subcommittee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the Chair.

The Federal gasoline tax was increased, as we all know. The machinery was put in place so that the American motorist would pay more money in highway taxes and also get immediate reconstruction started around the country. And that did happen. The Federal highway funds were apportioned to the States the day the President signed the bill and the States set a new record for obligating those funds in fiscal year 1983.

Now, to keep the momentum going, Congress had to take one simple action beginning in fiscal year 1984: To approve the interstate cost estimate, which is commonly referred to as the ICE, and the interstate substitute cost estimate, ISCE submitted by the Secretary of Transportation. Routine congressional action was needed so that billions of dollars which had already been authorized could be released to the States. Today, these funds are critically needed by the States.

Mr. DIXON. Will my friend yield for a question on that point?

Mr. SYMMS. For a question only.

Mr. DIXON. I ask my friend from Idaho whether it is not a fact that the basic thing that my friend is telling the U.S. Senate now would obtain without the Bentsen amendment or the other additional appropriations that are rife in this bill; that is to say, I have said from the very beginning that I support a clean ICE. I have no objections to the $2.1 billion allocation of funds in the 50 States. If we had a clean bill without all the additional expenditures that the President of the United States does not want, it is not true, I ask my friend, that we would get a distribution of the funds to the separate States?

Mr. SYMMS. Well, the Senator is correct that if we passed a clean ICE we could distribute the funds to the States. The Senator is correct on that fact.

However, if I could just go on and make this point. I know the Senator is unhappy about what has happened in this bill and how it affects his State. I think we all admire the tenacity for which he and Senator PERCY have carried on their crusade for the State of Illinois.

I do think that we all need to understand that to keep the momentum moving in this highway program, the Congress has to take one simple action and that is to approve the ICE and the interstate substitute cost estimate. Last year, the House tied the approval of the ICE and interstate substitute cost estimate to $140 million in special interest demonstration projects as well as a number of other provisions which would have been benefited specific congressional districts. Now there has been a long and I think proper opposition to this kind of pork barrel legislation.

In the past, Congress has allowed the States to decide for themselves where they will spend their fair share of the allocated funds from the Federal highway trust fund.

Finally, Congress approved the ICE in March 1984, but the clean ICE was only approved for a half a year. Now, at the end of fiscal year 1984, the other half of this year's and all of fiscal year 1985's funds are still tied up and without congressional action. The Federal Highway Administration will be unable to release the interstate construction and interstate substitution funds available for fiscal year 1984. In all, we are talking about $7 billion in the already authorized funds that are at stake and the money is sitting in the Federal trust fund.

That money will go to every State in the Union to fund the highway construction—and, incidentally, it will go to the State of Illinois as well. It is critical that we keep this program, and keep the momentum moving, Mr. President. I would like to see us move forward this afternoon, move on this motion to proceed, get this bill up, and see if we cannot get through this legislation.

The House bill—to approve the ICE and the ISCE—would increase the cost of completing the Interstate System by about $2 billion. So we have a problem there. It would, also, authorize over $600 million in Federal-State funds for narrow special interest provisions. These are the kinds of things that we in the Senate have tried to keep off the bill. While some of these provisions would benefit only a few of the specific areas of the country, they would be paid for by all American motorists. They would be paid for either by an increase in the highway user fees, or reduction in the future-year authorizations for the Federal highway aid programs that benefit the entire country.

All I am asking my colleagues to do is to try to set your special interests aside, and take simple action that is needed to get this whole country benefiting from the Federal highway program. We must regain the momentum that has been lost by our inaction. The ICE and ISCE must be approved so that this money can flow from the States for the needed highway construction and repair. And, in order to avoid this dilemma in the future, we should authorize the Secretary to develop the cost estimates in conjunction with the States—and apportionment funds—according to these estimates without the need for congressional action.

I urge everyone to allow this resolution to move forward, and there is much talk in the Chamber about an effort to amend the civil rights legislation to the highway bill. I am concerned by this talk. I think sooner or later my colleagues will start hearing from their State highway departments about the need for highway funds, and that it is something we all share a common interest in. We need to continue the highway program as soon as possible to get the most roads built for the dollars that we are spending, and not have this on-again-off-again Federal program.

I hope we can set aside our particular differences and move forward with this legislation.

To my colleague from Illinois, who is here on the floor, I say we have been willing to work with his State. We have certainly worked with your Governor, and I think all members of the committee have worked with your fine Director of Transportation, Mr. John Kramer, who has been literally camped in Washington at different times.

I think if you look at the record—and I say this to the other 49 States—the State of Illinois is doing very well in the Federal aid highway program with respect to Federal funds. The fact is the State gets back about what they put into the Federal trust fund on an annual basis. I think the Senator from Illinois would agree with that. They are actually a donee State.

The Senator from Texas, on the contrary, has found himself in a situation where Texas has been paying in a lot more money than they been getting back. The committee has tried to make some adjustments to bring more equity within the system so that some of these States that have paid in on the average $1 and get back 70 cents would have an opportunity to get back at least 85 cents out of a dollar. It seemed like an equitable situation. That is what we have tried to do.

I think this committee will be willing to work out something that will be agreeable to all the Senators. I hope they will stop their filibuster so that we can move forward this afternoon and get this bill passed through the Senate so that then, if it is still not settled, we can go to conference with the House. We will still have a difficult time ahead in reaching a compromise with the House. But, the Senate must accomplish this step first. This is an issue that I wish we could get completed and which needs to be done, so that we do not waste taxpayers' money by having an on-again-off-again highway program.

It is very, very costly to our current program. I think it is very unfortunate if we cannot pass the bill this afternoon.

SEVERAL SENATORS addressed the Chair.

Mr. SYMMS. I yield the floor.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, let us look at what this is all about and why my friend from Illinois is doing this. He presented his views to the committee. They were considered by the committee. The views of the other Senator from Illinois were considered by the committee, and they were rejected by the committee. When my friend talks about getting back his money, in all but 2 years they have done just that. But the State which I represent has not. What we have done with the 85 percent provision is to say that 85 percent return will be the floor; that you will get back at least 85 percent under the allocation, under the discretionary funds, under the demonstration projects. All of it, every bit of it is considered in the calculation. And, that is the way it ought to be.

My friend tells you how poorly they are doing. But what my friend does not tell you is they are getting twice as much in discretionary funds as the next State—twice as much. That is what they are getting. When the Senator talks about poor Illinois—poor Illinois—this year my State passed one of the biggest tax increases on its citizens of any State in the Union. And the State of Illinois has cut its taxes. That is how tough it is in Illinois.

That is what the Senator is talking about. But what has finally happened, you see, is that we are at the end of the session. We have reached a point where someone is supposed to hold a gun to the head of the committee, and say take my amendment or you do not proceed. That is the price. Take it just the way I have written it. Never mind that the committee has turned it down. You have to take mine, or I will bring this Senate to a screaming halt. I am not going to submit my amendment to 100 Senators. I do not want to debate my amendment on the floor, and let 100 Senators decide. Oh, no. Not at all. I want to dictate it to the Senate. You do not move unless I agree to it. And I have put you in the last 10 days of a session, and you have major, major bills awaiting action by the U.S. Senate. That is when I take advantage of this kind of situation. Sure, I am ready to give 85 percent to Illinois, and more. You bet. Include in everything you get demonstration projects, discretionary funds, and the allocation formula. Put it all in. Then let us see Illinois get it, and we protect them in that kind of a situation.

The other Senator from Illinois last Thursday admitted that they had done extremely well under the highway program. We said we have done as well in some of the others. My friend over here from Illinois says "poor Illinois." He says poor Illinois, "We are sending more money up to Washington than we are getting back."

Welcome to the club. We have been doing that a long time. But that does not mean that you make it all up under the Highway Trust Fund. That does not mean, because you have an inequity overall, that you are going to take a surplus here. That is not right. That is not fair. The Senator from Texas is surely going to oppose it. And the committee unanimously opposed it.

If you want to take your chances like the rest of us, then present it to the full committee. Let 100 Senators vote on it. Let them decide what is equity in this situation.

But do not stand there and tell us that you cannot move unless I have it my way. I write it out. I am the author of it—not 100 Senators. I decided what the allocation is going to be. The multimillions, the extras. Never mind trying to get it after the committee acted, with its staff, with its hearings, and the allocations are all finally worked out because everyone is concerned about fairness in this situation, whether it is my friend over here who is the manager of this bill for the majority, or the Senator from Texas.

Let me tell you. The return on the highway program has been down as low as 57 percent for Texas. That is why I fought for this 85 percent minimum return. We put it in the bill a couple of years ago. Then, we found out in the drafting of it, they left out the discretionary funds; they left out the demonstration projects. All of it is supposed to be in the calculation.

Mr. President, we do not do as well as Illinois, even under the Bentsen amendment.

You are still getting more funds, and that is what concerns me—the question of equity, the question of fairness—and I am going to continue to debate that issue just as long as my friend from Illinois wants to debate it.

We are seeing other things happen in this bill. You are not the only one, my friend. There are going to be some others who will attack this bill but I will say they will be on major national issues. They are going to affect all 50 of these States.

I can understand more cause for that than I can for one of these that have been presented to this committee, the committee of jurisdiction, and has been rejected out of hand.

Mr. President, I urge very strongly that my colleagues in the Senate see that we bring about fairness in this issue and support the committee bill in its entirety.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I strongly support the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1984 and want to commend Senators SYMMS and STAFFORD for their diligent efforts in shaping this important legislation.

In December 1982, Congress made a bargain with everyone in America who drives an automobile. We passed landmark legislation—the Surface Transportation Assistance Act—which nearly doubled the gasoline tax, from 4 to 9 cents per gallon.

We took this bold step because we recognized that something had to be done to stop the alarming deterioration of our Nation's roads and bridges. By increasing the Federal investment in highway and bridge repair, we have begun to reverse this trend.

However, we cannot keep our part of this bargain with American motorists unless construction and repair dollars from the highway trust fund are made available to the States in a dependable manner. Congress has encountered repeated difficulty in enacting legislation to approve the interstate cost estimate and interstate substitution cost estimate which enable the Department of Transportation to release these funds to the States.

The full apportionment of Interstate System construction funds for fiscal year 1984 has now been delayed for almost a full year due to disagreements over special interest projects and other issues. This delay has depleted the highway funds available for obligation by the States and threatens the ability of the Federal-Aid Highway Program.

Prompt approval of S. 2527 will keep highway construction dollars flowing and enable the States to continue the orderly planning of highway and bridge projects. This legislation also includes a number of important provisions designed to make the highway program more responsive to State and local problems and priorities.

Chief among these is section 105, which permits the Secretary of Transportation to administratively apportion interstate construction funds and thus avoid future protracted delays in the ICE and ISCE approval. The long-term effectiveness of our highway program could well depend upon the approval of this provision.

I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this vital legislation.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I support the remarks of the chairman and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Transportation. The action which is currently delaying the Senate is withholding needed highway funds.

Gas taxes have been increased to support more construction.

We can spend these funds if the Senate can vote and approve the interstate cost estimate.

Let consideration of the amendments go forward.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, would my friend, the manager, yield for a couple of questions I am quite sincere about? Would my friend from Idaho yield?

Mr. President, there are some provisions in this bill that I have some concerns abut. I wonder if he could elaborate on this item: I refer to lines 10 through 19 on page 9. I ask him as an old trial lawyer with some experience in these matters why the committee would put these words into this bill.

RAIL-HIGHWAY CROSSINGS

SEC. 113. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no report, list, schedule or survey compiled by or for a State for the purposes of complying with any requirement of title 23, United States Code, or the Highway Safety Act of 1973 concerning the evaluation of hazardous roadway conditions or rail-highway crossings in order to plan and prioritize projects to enhance safety, shall be required to be admitted into evidence or used for any other purpose in any suit or action in any Federal or State court.

I say to my colleague in all sincerity I believe that means that this involves serious litigation, involving serious automobile-railroad crossing accidents, where people are being seriously injured or killed and could subpoena records of the Government, which are part of the public record system of this great Nation of ours, to show a jury what was the matter with a railroad crossing.

Why would my friend have something like that in this bill?

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I think there is good reason for it. If you will note on page 24 of the committee report, I will just read from that report:

SECTION 113. RAIL-HIGHWAY CROSSINGS

Provides that information identifying and ranking hazards at rail-highway crossings, required in order to be eligible for Federal-aid funds, cannot be used as evidence in trials involving grade crossing accidents.

That is a matter of trying to reduce the litigation process that takes place in this society when we have such a high percentage of lawyers compared to the rest of the population.

Mr. DIXON. I would not like to argue about the number of lawyers in the population.

Mr. SYMMS. I know, but they all need to work, so they follow the ambulances around and start the lawsuits. I say that as one of the nonlawyers.

Mr. BENTSEN. If I might add something for my distinguished friend, let me say that the evidence that is derived is all still available. But what we are talking about here is that the lawyer would not be able to use this as prima facie evidence of neglect.

Mr. DIXON. Would either one of my colleagues want to answer this further——

Mr. SYMMS. I will only yield if we are on the Senator's time.

Mr. DIXON. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois has the floor.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. DIXON. I object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk continued with the call of the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With the addition of Senators voting who did not answer the quorum call, a quorum is now present.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we are in a post-cloture situation and it is cloture against a simple motion to proceed.

I really hope that we can work this out so that we can at least get the bill laid before the Senate today, and I do not mean to sound harsh or preemptory, but Members surely will understand that the leadership on this side is determined to get the bill up.

What happens to the bill, I cannot say. Maybe we will have another filibuster on that, and I am prepared to meet those challenges one at a time.

But may I urge Senators to consider that getting the bill up is an important next step and the range of options is fairly narrow on how that might be delayed. There are ways to delay it, but I hope Senators would let us at least go to the bill and then whatever it is they want to do with it they are going to do with it, but I urge Senators to consider that we have to get on the bill, and the leadership on this side is prepared to ask the Senate to stay as long as necessary to accomplish that.

Now, Mr. President, I hope Senators who may have speeches to make will do so and that we can get on with the matter at hand.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to proceed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois is not in the Chamber and if no Senator wishes to speak, I will suggest the absence of a quorum.

Does the Senator from New Jersey wish to speak?

Mr. BRADLEY. No.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ABDNOR). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as far as I am concerned, I am ready to go to the bill itself and the motion is pending. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to proceed is pending.

Is there further debate?

The question is on agreeing to the motion to proceed.

The motion to proceed was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the pending business by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2527) to approve the Interstate and Interstate Substitute Cost Estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill which had been reported from the Committee on Environment and Public Works and amendments.

(The parts of the bill intended to be stricken are shown in boldface brackets and the parts intended to be inserted are shown in italic, as follows:)

S. 2527

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1984".

INTERSTATE COST ESTIMATE APPROVAL

SEC. 102. The Secretary of Transportation shall apportion for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985 and September 30, 1986 the remaining sums to be apportioned for such years under section 104(b)(5)(A) of title 23, United States Code, and shall adjust and reapportion for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985 the apportionment made on March 9, 1984 under section 104(b)(5)(A) of title 23, United States Code, using the apportionment factors in table 5 of the committee print numbered 98-202 of the Committee on [Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives.] Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

INTERSTATE SUBSTITUTE COST ESTIMATE APPROVAL

SEC. 103. The Secretary of Transportation shall apportion for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1984 and September 30, 1985, the remaining sums to be apportioned for such years under section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, and shall adjust and reapportion for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984 the apportionment made on March 9, 1984 under section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, using the apportionment factors contained in the committee print numbered 98-203 of the Committee on [Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives.] Environment and Public Works and the Com- mittee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs of the Senate.

85 PER CENTUM MINIMUM ALLOCATION

SEC. 104. The Secretary of Transportation shall adjust and reallocate the allocation made on March 9, 1984 under section 157 of title 23, United States Code, to reflect the full apportionment of Interstate funds for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985 and the full apportionment of Interstate highway substitute funds for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984 made as a result of this Act.

RELEASE OF INTERSTATE CONSTRUCTION FUNDS

SEC. 105. Section 104(b)(5)(A) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the five sentences that follow "January 2, 1983." and inserting in lieu thereof: "Upon the approval by Congress, the Secretary shall use the Federal share of such approved estimates in making apportionments for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985. The Secretary shall make revised estimates of the cost of completing the then designated Interstate System after taking into account all previous apportionments made under this section in the same manner as stated above and transmit the same to the Senate and the House of Representatives within ten days subsequent to January 2, 1985 and January 2, 1987. In September of each year, the Secretary shall adjust the last estimate submitted to reflect (1) all previous apportionments and lapses of previous apportionments, (2) previous withdrawals of Interstate segments under section 103(e)(4) of this title, (3) previous allocations of Interstate discretionary funds under section 118(b)(2) of this title, and (4) Interstate transfers of funds under section 119(d) of this title. The Secretary shall use the Federal share of such adjusted and submitted estimates in making apportionments for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1986, September 30, 1987, September 30, 1988, September 30, 1989 and September 30, 1990.".

RELEASE OF INTERSTATE SUBSTITUTE FUNDS

SEC. 106. (a) The eighth sentence of section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking out the word "approved".

(b) Section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is further amended by striking the sixteenth sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Secretary shall make an estimate of the cost of completing substitute highway projects under this paragraph and transmit the same to the Senate and the House of Representatives within ten days subsequent to January 2, 1984. The Secretary shall adjust such cost estimate in September of 1984 and 1985 to reflect (1) changes in the amounts available to the Secretary under this paragraph, (2) changes in State estimates of the division of funds between substitute highway and transit projects, (3) approvals of substitute projects, and (4) the allocation and apportionment of substitute highway funds in prior fiscal years and shall use the Federal share of such adjusted and submitted estimate in making apportionments for substitute highway projects for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985 and September 30, 1986.".

(c) Section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is further amended by striking the existing twenty-second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The Secretary shall make an estimate of the cost of completing substitute transit projects under this paragraph and transmit the same to the Senate and the House of Representatives within ten days subsequent to January 2, 1984. The Secretary shall adjust such cost estimate in September of 1984 and 1985 to reflect (1) changes in the amounts available to the Secretary under this paragraph, (2) changes in State estimates of the division of funds between substitute highway and transit projects, (3) approvals of substitute projects, and (4) the allocation and apportionment of substitute transit funds in prior fiscal years and shall use the Federal share of such adjusted and submitted estimate in making apportionments for substitute transit projects for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985 and September 30, 1986.".

EMERGENCY RELIEF STATE MATCH

SEC. 107. (a) Subsection (f) of section 120 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking "shall not exceed 100 per centum of the cost thereof: Provided" and inserting in lieu thereof "on account of any project on a Federal-aid highway system, including the Interstate System, shall not exceed the Federal share payable of a project on a system as provided in subsections (a) and (c) of this section: Provided, That the Federal share payable for eligible emergency repairs to minimize damage, protect facilities or restore essential traffic accomplished within thirty days after the actual occurrence may amount to 100 per centum of the cost thereof: And provided further".

(b) Section 120(f) of title 23, United States Code, as amended by this section is effective for all natural disasters or catastrophic failures which occur subsequent to enactment of this Act.

PRIORITY FOR INTERSTATE DISCRETIONARY FUNDS

(h) Section 6(g)(4) of the Department of Transportation Act (80 Stat. 937, 49 U.S.C. 1655(g)(4)) is repealed.

(i) Tolls for passage or transit over any bridge constructed under the authority of the Bridge Act of 1906, as amended, the General Bridge Act of 1946, as amended, and the International Bridge Act of 1972, shall be just and reasonable.

RAIL-HIGHWAY CROSSINGS

SEC. 113. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no report, list, schedule or survey compiled by or for a State for the purposes of complying with any requirement of title 23, United States Code, or the Highway Safety Act of 1973 concerning the evaluation of hazardous roadway conditions or rail-highway crossings in order to plan and prioritize projects to enhance safety, shall be required to be admitted into evidence or used for any other purpose in any suit or action in any Federal or State court.

TOLL REVENUES

[SEC. 114. Section 141 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding subsection (e) as follows:

"(e) Each State shall certify to the Secretary before January 1 of each year that the State's laws do not permit the use of toll revenues from a publicly owned or operated transportation toll facility located on a Federal-aid system except as otherwise specifically provided by Federal law for any purposes other than a purpose permitted by this title; the repayment of all the cost of construction or acquisition of such toll facility, except that part which was constructed by the United States; the proper maintenance, repair and operation of the toll facility under economical management, or any other highway-related purpose. If a State fails to certify as required by this subsection or if the Secretary determines that the State's laws do permit the use of toll revenues from a publicly owned or operated transportation toll facility for a purpose other than those permitted by this subsection, Federal-aid highway funds apportioned to the State during the next succeeding fiscal year shall be reduced by amounts equal to 5 per centum of the amount which would otherwise be apportioned to the State under section 104 of this title. Amounts withheld from apportionments to a State under this subsection shall be apportioned to the other States pursuant to the formulas of section 104 of this title and shall be available in the same manner and the same extent as other funds apportioned at the same time to other States.".]

SEC. 114. Section 129 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(i)(1) Each operator of toll roads, toll tunnels, toll ferries, and toll bridges, other than an international toll facility or toll facility subject to an agreement under this section or section 105 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978 on a Federal-aid system in a State shall biennially certify to the Governor of the State that such facilities are adequately maintained and that the operator of such toll facility has the ability to fund the replacement or repair of any such facilities that are not adequately maintained without using Federal-aid highway funds. Failure to certify shall preclude Federal funding out of the Highway Trust Fund of any facilities owned or operated by the operator of such toll facility.

"(2) The Governor shall report biennially to the Secretary the toll facilities subject to paragraph (1) of this subsection, that have so certified and those which have not certified in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection. If funds from the Highway Trust Fund are used to repair or replace such toll facilities, the States' apportionments for the following fiscal year under section 104 of this title shall be reduced by the amount of Highway Trust Fund moneys expended: Provided, That such reduction shall not be made if the State has executed an agreement covering such toll facilities under this section or section 105 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978.".

RIGHT-OF-WAY DONATION

[SEC. 115. Section 120 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding a new subsection "(m)" as follows:

"(m) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title the fair market value of donations at the time of donation of right-of-way made for a project under this title shall be credited to the State matching share for such project when the donation is made to the State.".]

SEC. 115. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the State matching share for a project under this title may be credited by the fair market value of land incorporated into the project and lawfully donated to the State after the effective date of this subsection. For purposes of this subsection the fair market value of donated land shall be established after the date the donation becomes effective or when equitable title to the land vests in the State, whichever is earlier. This subsection shall not apply to donations made by an agency of a Federal, State, or local government. The credit received by a State pursuant to this subsection may not exceed the State's matching share for the project to which the donation is applied.

(b) Section 323 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) inserting after "Donations." an "(a)"; and

(2) inserting the following new subsection:

"(b)(1) A gift or donation in accordance with subsection (a) may be made at any time during the development of a project: Provided, That any document executed as part of such donation clearly indicates that—

"(i) all alternatives to a proposed alignment will be studied and considered pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act;

"(ii) acquisition of property under this subsection shall not influence the environmental assessment of a project including the decision relative to the need to construct the project or the selection of a specific location; and

"(iii) any property acquired by gift or donation shall be revested in its grantor or his successors in interest if such property is not required for the alignment chosen after public hearings and completion of the environmental document.".

(c) Section 4651 of title 42, United States Code, is amended as follows:

(1) insert after "programs" in the first sentence the following "to promote joint projects between States and landowners and other entities in order to maximize Federal and State dollars";

(2) insert new paragraph (10) as follows:

"(10) Promotion of joint projects wherein private citizens and other governmental entities participate in the cost through land donations and/or financial contributions is consistent with Federal policy and should be encouraged by all Federal agencies. To this end donations of right-of-way and/or financial contributions by a State or other political subdivision, or any person is permissible.".

RIGHT-OF-WAY PAYBACK

[SEC. 116. Section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "Sums made available to the Secretary under this paragraph for a State shall be reduced by the amount expended in Federal funds to purchase right-of-way for the withdrawn route or segment thereof in every case where the right-of-way has not been disposed of by the State as of the date of enactment of this sentence provided that such sum shall be restored if the State applies such right-of-way to a transportation project permissible under this title, to a public conservation or public recreation purpose, or to such other public purpose as may be determined by the Secretary to be in the public interest within ten years from the date of the withdrawal of approval.".]

SEC. 116. Section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentences: "Of sums made available to the Secretary under this paragraph for a State, an amount equal to the amount expended in Federal funds to purchase right-of-way for the withdrawn route or portion thereof in every case where right-of-way has not been disposed of by the State as of the date of enactment of this sentence shall not be available for release by the Secretary until the right-of-way disposition decision has been made in accordance with 103(e) (5)(B), (6)(B), or (e)(7) of this title. The amount apportioned to each eligible State pursuant to the thirteenth and nineteenth sentences of this paragraph shall be based on the full remaining value of the sums made available under this paragraph as determined by the Secretary but the total of such apportionments shall not exceed the remaining value of such sums less the amount unavailable for release by the Secretary. Sums retained by the Secretary shall be made available for apportionment upon partial or full repayment of funds in accordance with section 103(e)(7) of this title or upon determination by the Secretary that, under section 103(e) (5)(B) or (6)(B), repayment is not required.".

BRIDGE STUDY

SEC. 117. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall conduct a study of the Bridge Replacement and Rehabilitation Program. This study shall include, but is not limited to—

(1) an analysis of the progress made toward replacing and rehabilitating inadequate bridges both on the Federal-aid system and off the system; a projection of future needs of the bridge program; and an evaluation of the States' prioritization in addressing bridge repair and replacement;

(2) a review of the bridge inspection program including the adequacy of the AASHTO "Manual for Maintenance Inspection of Bridges 1983"; the adequacy of qualification requirements for bridge inspectors; the status of the bridge inventory; and the adequacy of State bridge inspections;

(3) an analysis of the effectiveness of the bridge discretionary program;

(4) a review of the bridge program's effect on the rehabilitation of historic bridges including the development of specific standards which would apply only to the rehabilitation of historic bridges, and an analysis of any other factors which would serve to enhance the rehabilitation of historic [bridges; and] bridges.

[(5) a review of the bridge formula as it affects the configuration and gross vehicle weight of large vehicles; the effect of certain large vehicles on the average life of a bridge; and the current status of and effect of grandfather rights applicable to this formula.

(b) The Secretary shall report to the Congress the results of the study under this section not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act.]

(b) The Secretary of Transportation shall report to the Congress the results of the study under subsection (a) not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c)(1) The Secretary of Transportation shall make appropriate arrangements with the Transportation Research Board of the National Research Council to carry out a study of the bridge formula as it affects the configuration and gross vehicle weight of large vehicles; the effect of certain large vehicles on the average life of a bridge; and the current status of and effect of grandfather rights applicable to this formula. The study shall be done in consultation with the Federal Highway Administration and the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

(2) The Transportation Research Board shall report to the Congress the results of this study not later than eighteen months after the appropriate arrangements have been made.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

SEC. 118. (a)(1) Section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is further amended by striking out the sixth, seventh, and eighth sentences and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The sums apportioned and the sums allocated under this paragraph for public mass transit projects shall remain available for the fiscal year for which apportioned or allocated, as the case may be, and for the succeeding fiscal year. The sums apportioned and the sums allocated under this paragraph for projects under any highway assistance program shall remain available for the fiscal year for which apportioned or allocated, as the case may be, and for succeeding fiscal year. Any sums which are apportioned or allocated to a State for a fiscal year and are unobligated (other than an amount which, by itself, is insufficient to pay the Federal share of the cost of a substitute project which has been submitted by the State to the Secretary for approval) at the end of such fiscal year shall be apportioned or allocated, as the case may be, among those States which have obligated all sums (other than such an amount) apportioned or allocated, as the case may be, to them for such fiscal year. Such reapportionments shall be in accordance with the latest approved estimate of the cost of completing substitute projects, and such reallocations shall be at the discretion of the Secretary.".

(2) The last sentence of section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking out "designed" and inserting in lieu thereof "designated".

(5) The third sentence of section 108(d) of such Act is amended by striking "this title," and inserting in lieu thereof "title 23, United States Code,".

(c)(1) The analysis of chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, is amended (1) in the item relating to section 127 by striking out "and width", and (2) by striking out the item relating to section 146 and inserting in lieu thereof:

"146. Carpool and vanpool projects.".

(2) Section 120 of such title is amended by redesignating the second subsection "(i)", and subsections "(j)" and "(k)" as subsections "(j)", "(k)", and "(l)", respectively.

(3) The first sentence of section 122 of such title is amended by inserting "or for substitute highway projects approved under section 103(e)(4) of this title" before "and the retirement".

(4)(A) Subsection (b) of section 125 of such title is amended by striking out "the Interstate System, the Primary System, and on any routes functionally classified as arterials or major collectors," each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "the Federal-aid highway systems, including the Interstate System".

(B) Subsection (c) of such section is amended by striking out "routes functionally classified as arterials or major collectors" and inserting in lieu thereof "on any of the Federal-aid highway systems".

(5) Subsection (e) of section 144 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Funds apportioned under this section shall be available for expenditure for the same period as funds apportioned for projects on the Federal-aid primary system under this title. Any funds not obligated at the expiration of such period shall be reapportioned by the Secretary to the other States in accordance with this subsection.".

(6) The second sentence of section 204(b) of such title is amended by inserting "the Secretary or" before "the Secretary of the Interior".

(7) The last sentence of section 402(j) of such title is amended by striking out "chapter" and inserting in lieu thereof "section".

(d) Section 111 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting "(a)" before "All agreements" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a), any State may permit the placement of vending machines in rest and recreation areas, and in safety rest areas constructed or located on rights-of-way of the Interstate System in such State. Such vending machines may only dispense such food, drink, and other articles as the State highway department determines are appropriate and desirable. Such vending machines may only be operated by the State. In permitting the placement of vending machines, the State will shall give priority to vending machines which are operated through the State licensing agency designated pursuant to section 2(a)(5) of the Act of June 20, 1936, commonly known as the 'Randolph-Sheppard Act' (20 U.S.C. 107a(a)(5)). The costs of installation, operation, and maintenance of vending machines shall not be eligible for Federal assistance under this title.".

(e)(1) Section 145(c) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 is amended to read as follows:

"(c) The total amount which may be obligated for qualifying projects in any State under subsection (a) for each of the fiscal years 1983 and 1984 shall not be greater than the excess of—

"(1) the sum of the amount of obligation authority distributed to such State for such fiscal year under section 104(b) of this Act, plus the amounts, if any available to such State for such fiscal year under section 157 of title 23, United States Code, pertaining to minimum allocation, over

"(2) the amount of obligational authority distributed to such State for fiscal year 1982 under section 3(b) of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981.".

(2) Section 145(e) of such Act is amended by inserting "section 108 of this Act and" after "such State under", and by striking out "104(b)(1) of title 23, United States Code," and inserting in lieu thereof "108 of this Act".

I-395 DEMONSTRATION CORRECTION

SEC. 124. Public Law 98-205 is amended by striking section 3 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"SEC. 3. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Transportation shall assist the Commonwealth of Virginia and the District of Columbia, in carrying out a demonstration project on Interstate Highways 95 and 395 in Virginia and the District of Columbia for a period of not less than twelve months commencing within thirty days after the District of Columbia completes reconstruction of George Mason Bridge. The use of the express lanes on such highways shall be restricted under the experiment to buses, emergency vehicles, and other vehicles carrying four or more persons during the hours of 6 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. on Monday through Friday, exclusive of holidays, on northbound lanes and during the hours of 3:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Monday through Friday, exclusive of holidays, on southbound lanes during the demonstration period provided, that the Commonwealth of Virginia and the District of Columbia in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation may adjust such hours and refine the demonstration to enhance safety, minimize congestion, and maximize the use of the facility. During the demonstration period, the Commonwealth of Virginia and the District of Columbia in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation shall carry out an environmental assessment of the effects of the high occupancy vehicle restrictions including, but not limited to, capacity of the facility, congestion on the facility and its approaches, modal choice in the corridor and air quality, and shall, upon completion of such assessment, report to the Congress the results of the assessment and the demonstration project.".

DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

SEC. 125. (a) Section 120 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new subsection:

"(m) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Federal share payable for any individual project which is authorized by statute after September 30, 1983, for construction at a particular location and for which authorizations are provided out of the Highway Trust Fund, shall not exceed 50 per centum of the total cost of such project of $12,500,000, whichever is less".

(b)(1)(A) The Secretary of Transportation is authorized to provide funding for a demonstration project in Cattaraugus County, New York, for the purpose of demonstrating the extent to which the economy of an Indian reservation can be improved by completion of key elements of a modern, grade-separated access controlled highway which serves the reservation.

(B) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $12,500,000 for fiscal year ending September 30, 1986.

(C) Funds authorized by this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned in accordance with section 104(b)(1) of title 23, United States Code.

(2)(A) The Secretary of Transportation is authorized to carry out a demonstration project in the vicinity of Buckhannon, West Virginia, for the purpose of demonstrating the efficient movement of traffic around an area of active coal mining and light industrial development.

(B) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.

(C) Funds authorized by this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, and such funds shall remain available until expended.

(D) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Congress a report on the results of such project within one hundred and eighty days after completion.

(3)(A) The Secretary of Transportation is authorized to provide funding for 69.2 miles of reconstruction work in the State of Montana to demonstrate the improved serviceability of rural roads when provided with overlap and other such reconstruction.

(B) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph, out of the Highway Trust Fund, (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $10,000,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984 and shall remain available until expended.

(C) Sums authorized by this paragraph shall be available to the same extent and in the same manner as if such funds were apportioned in accordance with chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code.

(4)(A) The Secretary of Transportation is authorized to carry out a demonstration project in the vicinity of Cleveland, Texas, for the purpose of demonstrating the reduction in congestion by providing a four-lane divided highway with interchanges in an area with at-grade crossings.

(B) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984, to carry out the project authorized by paragraph (4)(A).

(C) Funds authorized by this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, and such funds shall remain available until expended.

(D) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to the Congress a report on the results of such project within 180 days after completion.

(5)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out a high-technology developmental highway project to demonstrate the economic and social benefits of providing adequate transportation facilities for promoting the use and development of existing human, natural, and educational resources of an area for high-technology industry and to demonstrate new approaches to State and national economic development goals. In addition to the above benefits, the construction will demonstrate the use of latest technology in addressing sensitive environmental concerns in a mixed rural and urban environment. The highway will be located and designed to link existing air, water, rail, and transportation facilities with educational and research facilities in a manner that will make accessible land areas suitable for high-technology industrial development. The project shall be carried out in the vicinity of Knoxville, Tennessee in cooperation with the State. The project shall demonstrate the contribution adequate transportation can make in improving the quality of life in a region when the other human and natural resources for high-technology development are present. The Secretary shall provide the necessary technical assistance to the Department of Transportation in the planning, design, and construction of the project and upon completion, the project shall be added to the Federal-Aid Primary System.

(B) Not later than one year, six years, and eleven years after the completion of the high-technology development highway demonstration project, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit reports to the Congress, including but not limited to the social, economic, and other environmental impacts of such project, with recommendations relative to applying the developmental concept to highway projects in other areas of the Nation.

(C) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out the demonstration project out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985. Such funds shall be available until expended, shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, and shall not be subject to any obligation limitation.

(6)(A) The Secretary of Transportation, in cooperation with the State of Idaho, shall conduct a demonstration project within a transportation corridor to determine the economic and social impact of controlled-access highway services—including conversion of railroad rights-of-way to highway and other transportation uses—on a redeveloping central business district of a metropolitan area of two hundred and fifty thousand population.

(B) There is authorized to be appropriated, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), to carry out this subsection not to exceed $7,500,000.

(C) Funds authorized by this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, and such funds shall remain available until expended.

(D) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the demonstration project not later than one year after completion of the project.

(7)(A) The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out a project to demonstrate the feasibility of replacing a functionally obsolete and structurally deficient bridge in Manchester, New Hampshire, located in part in an historic district, with a modern structure while preserving the integrity of the district.

(B) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985.

(C) Such funds shall be available until expended, shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code.

(8)(A) The Secretary of Transportation, in cooperation with the State of Washington, shall conduct a demonstration project within a transportation corridor to determine the economic and social impact of utilizing the air space above a controlled-access highway to mitigate the impact on a major urban area of construction of the highway and for other transportation uses.

(B) There is authorized to be appropriated, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), to carry out this subsection not to exceed $12,500,000.

(C) Funds authorized by this paragraph shall be available for obligation in the same manner and to the same extent as if such funds were apportioned under chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, and such funds shall remain available until expended.

(D) The Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the demonstration project not later than one year after completion of the project.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the projects authorized by subsection (b) shall not be subject to any obligation limitation.

(d)(1) The Secretary of Transportation is authorized to carry out a demonstration project in the Brunswick-Topsham area, Maine, for the purpose of demonstrating increased access to defense related facilities by the construction of a limited access highway connecting a major interstate highway corridor with a naval air station and a shipyard engaged in defense production activities.

(2) There is authorized to be appropriated, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), not to exceed $12,500,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1984. Sums authorized by this subsection shall be available to the same extent and in the same manner as if such funds were apportioned in accordance with chapter 1 of title 23, United States Code, shall remain available until expended, and shall not be subject to any obligation limitation.

(3) Notwithstanding the provision of section 120(m) of title 23, United States Code, the non-Federal share required for this project shall be satisfied by provision of 25 per centum of such share from State funds and 25 per centum from funds which are apportioned to the State under section 104(b)(1) and (2) of title 23, United States Code, and which would not otherwise be obligated. Funds provided from such apportionments shall not be subject to any obligation limitation.

(4) In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Navy concerning defense activities related to the project.

(5) The Secretary shall report to Congress, upon completion of this project, the result of this demonstration project together with any recommendations the Secretary deems necessary.

(e) Section 131(g)(3) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 is amended by striking "not to exceed $4,500,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "not to exceed $6,000,000".

BUY AMERICA

SEC. 126. Section 165(a) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 is amended to read as follows:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Transportation shall not obligate any funds authorized to be appropriated by this Act or by any Act amended by this Act or, after the date of enactment of this Act, any funds authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act, title 23, United States Code, the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, or the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978 and administered by the Department of Transportation, whose total cost exceeds $500,000, unless steel and manufactured products used in such project are produced in the United States.".

WASTE INSULATION PILOT PROJECT

SEC. 127. For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and thereafter, there is authorized to be appropriated $58,000,000 for the upgrading of certain highways in the State of New Mexico for the transportation of nuclear waste generated during defense-related activities.

OBLIGATION LIMITATION

SEC. 128. (a) Nothwithstanding any other provisions of law, the total of all obligations for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction programs shall not exceed $13,550,000,000 for fiscal year 1985. These limitations shall apply to obligations for emergency relief under section 125 of title 23, United States Code, or projects covered under section 147 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978, or section 9 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981, or section 118 of the National Visitor Center Facilities Act of 1968. No obligation constraints shall be placed upon any ongoing emergency project carried out under section 125 of title 23, United States Code, or section 147 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1978.

(b) For the fiscal year 1985, the Secretary of Transportation shall distribute the limitation imposed by subsection (a) by allocation in the ratio which sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which are apportioned or allocated to each State for such fiscal year bears to the total of the sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which are apportioned or allocated to all the States for such fiscal year.

(c) During the period October 1 through December 31, 1984, no State shall obligate more than 35 per centum of the amount distributed to such State under subsection (b) for fiscal year 1985, and the total of all State obligations during such period shall not exceed 25 per centum of the total amount distributed to all States under such subsection for such fiscal year.

(d) Notwithstanding subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary shall—

(1) provide all States with authority sufficient to prevent lapses of sums authorized to be appropriated for Federal-aid highways and highway safety construction which have been apportioned or allocated to a State, except in those instances in which a State indicates its intention to lapse sums apportioned under section 104(b)(5)(A) of title 23, United States Code;

(2) after August 1, 1985, revise a distribution of the funds made available under subsection (b) for such fiscal year if a State will not obligate the amount distributed during such fiscal year and redistribute sufficient amounts to those States able to obligate amounts in addition to those previously distributed during such fiscal year giving priority to those States having large unobligated balances of funds apportioned under section 104 of title 23, United States Code, and giving priority to those States which, because of statutory changes made by this Act and the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1981, have experienced substantial proportional reductions in their apportionments and allocations; and

(3) not distribute amounts authorized for administrative expenses and Federal lands highways.

RICHMOND-PETERSBURG TURNPIKE TOLL PAYMENT

SEC. 129. (a) Upon the repayment by the Commonwealth of Virginia to the Treasurer of the United States of an amount equal to all Federal-aid highway funds heretofore paid on account of the immediate connectors and approaches to the Richmond-Petersburg Turnpike, said turnpike shall be free of all restrictions with respect to the imposition and collection of tolls or other charges on or for the use thereof which are contained in title 23, United States Code, or section 1 of the Federal Highway Act, or any regulation or agreement thereunder.

(b) The amount to be repaid shall be deposited to the credit of the appropriations for the Federal-Aid Highway Trust Fund. Such a repayment shall be credited to the unprogrammed balance of the Federal-Aid interstate funds last apportioned to the Commonwealth of Virginia. The amount so credited shall be in addition to all other funds then apportioned to said State and shall be available for expenditure in accordance with the provisions of title 23, United States Code.

FOREST HIGHWAYS

SEC. 130. (a) Notwithstanding section 202(a) of title 23, United States Code, the Secretary of Transportation shall, after making the transfer provided by section 204(g) of title 23, United States Code, on October 1, 1984, apportion $33,000,000 from the authorization for forest highways provided for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, by section 105(a)(6) of the Surface Transportation Act of 1982 and, on October 1, 1985, apportion $33,000,000 from the authorization for forest highways provided for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1986, by section 105(a)(6) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982, in the same percentage as the amounts apportioned for expenditure in each State and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico from funds authorized for forest highways for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1958, adjusted to (1) eliminate the 0.003,243,547 per centum for the State of Iowa, because of the conveyance of all national forest lands in Iowa to the State by deed executed May 26, 1964, and (2) redistribute the above percentage formerly apportioned to the State of Iowa for the other participating States on a proportional basis. The remaining funds authorized to be appropriated for forest highways for the fiscal years ending September 30, 1985, and September 30, 1986, shall be allocated pursuant to section 202(a) of title 23, United States Code.

(b) Not later than January 1, 1985, the Secretary shall report to the Congress on the criteria developed for the allocation of forest highway funds.

BICYCLE PROJECTS ELIGIBILITY

SEC. 131. The second sentence of section 217(b)(1) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by inserting "and sums apportioned or allocated for highway substitute projects in accordance with paragraph (e)(4) of section 103 of this title" after the word "title".

INTERSTATE TRANSFER CONCEPT PLAN

SEC. 132. The third sentence of section 103(e)(4) of title 23, United States Code, is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting in lieu thereof "Provided, That the States may adjust their Interstate substitution programs which were approved in concept by the Secretary on or before September 30, 1983, to drop and add projects until September 30, 1985, without altering the existing entitlement.".

FEASIBILITY STUDY

SEC. 133. (a) The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out a project to study the feasibility of constructing a new East-West Highway linking the Delaware Memorial Bridge with the Atlantic City Expressway and other north-south arteries in southern New Jersey.

(b) There is authorized to be appropriated, out of the Highway Trust Fund (other than the Mass Transit Account), to carry out this subsection not to exceed $100,000 for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985. The Federal share payable shall not exceed 50 per centum of such project cost.

SEVERAL SENATORS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, now that we are proceeding to the highway bill, I suppose I would like to say first of all that I feel badly in one sense because we have a lot of important issues, as important as the highway bill, many issues which ought to come before this body, but which have failed to be considered yet by the 98th Congress.

Everybody knows that we are now in the last 2 weeks of the session. I regret that we fail to recognize that a number of vital issues which ought to have been scheduled for Senate debate have not been scheduled as yet.

Mr. President, one of those that I am particularly interested in is a constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. That was recently reported by the Senate Judiciary Committee, yet it has not been scheduled in this body. I think we ought to have an opportunity for a full consideration of that measure just as much as the highway bill.

I think that concerning a bill such as the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget, which has in recent polls 80 percent of the people responding to that poll in support of that legislation, it is a travesty that that constitutional amendment has not been brought up, for I feel that this issue is one of the most important to the American people.

A balanced budget constitutional amendment would insure a fiscal discipline in this branch of government that is not here, and it would bring about economic stability for our Nation.

Then there is another vital issue that we have failed to address in this body, one that has been reported out of a subcommittee in the Senate and one that we ought to proceed with. That is the measure involving the Enmons decision which bars Federal prosecution for union violence.

Along that line, I introduced a bill, S. 462, which would close the Enmons loophole. This would be a loophole that has been created by a court case called the Enmons case, that interpreted the Hobbs Act differently than I think it was intended to be interpreted by Congress in 1946, when it was adopted. As a result of the Enmons case, I think there is a disallowance of prosecution of violence which disallowance cannot be allowed to happen. I think, frankly, that we ought to prosecute all violence wherever it occurs.

Mr. President, the Committee on the Judiciary has now established a conclusive record that violence is an all-too-common occurrence in labor strife; that prosecution of the violence by State and local authorities is conspicuous by its absence and barred by the Federal Government under the Enmons decision, which ruled that extortionate violence was a legitimate union objective.

Further, the FBI has testified before this committee that the Enmons loophole in the Federal extortion law protects organized crime in that it provides them with an additional tool with which they gain control of legitimate businesses and organizations.

I do not consider this an antiunion measure, because the average rank-and-file union member does not believe he has a right to use violence as a means of getting his way at the bargaining table; but some apparently do. That is the reason, No. 1, why this bill is needed at this time.

Reason No. 2 is that when these bad apples who bring about violence do decide to use it to get their way at the bargaining table, there is little or nothing that can be done about it. If people being beaten up or having their property destroyed call for help from the authorities, they are unlikely to find an elected county sheriff, an elected prosecutor, or the city police under the control of the elected mayor willing or, if willing, able to direct themselves to the controversy in a fair and responsible manner. The State attorney general is not likely to act because they are not likely to have the necessary authority to initiate a criminal prosecution. If they call the FBI, they will be told the Federal Government can do nothing because of this Enmons decision that was rendered by the Supreme Court in the 5 to 4 verdict in 1972.

Citizens of our States will be victims of violence and the threat of violence for economic gain and no Government entity will be there to protect them. I do not believe that is what Congress intended when it enacted the Hobbs Act in 1946 or the National Labor Relations Act in 1935. But that is what is happening today. That is why I ask each of my colleagues to support passage of S. 462.

Federal law required Bob Wohlsen to prove that the picketers at his eastern Pennsylvania construction site were blocking the entrance before he could get a court order to limit their number. So Bob took his lawyer and son-in-law along with him, along with a video camera, that morning in June of 1983. After all, Bob thought, what could be better proof to a Federal judge about the harassment his employees faced than a picture of that harassment.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Could the majority leader clarify that?

Mr. BAKER. Yes, Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for the Senator from Iowa to yield to me without losing his right to the floor and without the interruption counting as a second speech when he resumes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. President, the dynamics of the situation are such that I do not think we are going to get much further on the highway bill tonight. I hope we can do that tomorrow and perhaps even get to the next pending measure in the pipeline, which is the HHS bill. Having conferred with the minority leader and the two managers of the bill, I see there is no point in going forward tonight unless the Senator from Iowa has a burning desire to speak. If that is not the case, I shall suggest that we have a period for the transaction of routine morning business.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the majority leader withhold that request without losing his right to the floor and will the Senator from Iowa yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think all of us are quite aware of what the situation is on the floor now. We are about to debate the highway legislation. I notice the Senator from Iowa has strong views about some matters that we must take up, particularly the balanced budget amendment. There are some others, about 63 Members of the Senate, including Members of the majority leader's own party, who feel that we should have an opportunity to debate for at least a reasonable period of time the Civil Rights Act of 1984. We recognize, as the leader has pointed out, that time is short. But we do realize that there are some 63 Members of the Senate who are supporting that legislation. This is legislation that has passed overwhelmingly in the House of Representatives. I think we would probably see more expeditious action in the Senate in terms of the highway bill and the rest of the agenda if we were at least given some opportunity for the Senate to work its will.

The majority leader has certainly been fair with regard to the proponents of this legislation as well as those who have expressed a reservation. But it seems to me it would probably save the Senate a good deal of time if we were at least given some opportunity for debating this issue in a reasonable and rational way. It does seem that those of us who support this legislation would be quite willing to enter into a time agreement so the Senate would be able to consider other business as well.

I am just wondering at this time, since it is quite apparent what is happening on the floor of the Senate, whether the majority leader is prepared to give us any sense of hope that at least this body might be able to debate this extremely important issue and come to some resolution on it before we recess the first week in October.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, in reply to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, let me say that what I am about to utter is not a plaintive cry, it is rather a statement of fact: I am a loser either way. What I mean by that is if I were to choose to bring up the civil rights bill, almost surely, we would be jammed up here in a filibuster that would take us a good bit of time and preclude the possibility of completing the list of legislative items that I have discussed now for some days as the preferred agenda for the balance of this session. That is one loss.

I had entertained the brief hope and thought that we might work out the details of compromise since all the parties to this controversy had indicated that they have one objective; that is, to restore the status quo prior to the Grove City situation. But I find, after what seems countless meetings, that while they agree on the objective, they cannot agree on the words to implement it.

So, finally, Mr. President, I simply threw in the sponge and indicated that I would not participate any further in efforts to negotiate and that, indeed, I would just go along with the agenda of the Senate and see what happens next.

What happened next is what is happening now. That is, Grove City is going to be offered, I am sure, as an amendment to something—perhaps this bill; if not this bill, then some other bill. Then it will hang as a sword over the throat of every Senator and maybe every appropriations bill that comes along between now and the end of the session. So I lose that way, too.

But, Mr. President, I have got to do what I have got to do. What I have got to do is try to move the schedule of the Senate on those items that I consider crucial and critical. Mr. President, it is not that the civil rights bill is not crucial and critical. I have a strong sympathy for it. But this Senate session must be devoted primarily to appropriations and a handful of other things that must be dealt with. The highway bill is one of them. I am not trying to take sides right at this minute, although it may be that the civil rights bill will be offered as an amendment to this bill or the CR, or the debt limit and goodness knows what else, and we shall just stand here and work it out one way or the other.

I just had an energetic conversation with my friend from Utah on whether we are going to get up this bill or not.

I indicated to him that we are going to get this bill up, if it was humanly possible to do so, under the rules of the Senate. Indeed, we have. I am now about to say the same thing to the Senator from Massachusetts. We are going to have to deal with the civil rights issue, I suppose, and it is going to come on something. I am not trying to play a role in how or where it comes up. But what I am trying to do is pass as much of the agenda as I announced earlier. From that standpoint, Mr. President, I am prepared to say that we will just put our heads down and plow through the highway bill and we will see what happens next.

But the specific answer to the Senator from Massachusetts I think he already knows, that is, I am not inclined to schedule the Grove City or civil rights bill as a freestanding measure at this time. We will just have to see what happens.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the majority leader yield for just one more moment?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I think all of us have been around here long enough to know at this time in the session we either have the votes on a measure of this importance or we do not. I speak for myself at the present time. It seems to me that if we do have those votes, we ought to be entitled to have the consideration of the Senate rules. It seems to me that we could enter into time agreements with the leader to have a vote very soon. If we are not able to get cloture, then the matter would by necessity go over to the next Congress. But if we were able to invoke cloture, I hope we could follow the time-honored procedures by which we could dispose of germane amendments and reach a final resolution. I am sure it is not asking too much even in the final hours to say, well, if there are 60 Members of the Senate who support this legislation, a reasonable period of time could be allocated to it prior to the end of the session rather than being involved in a series of parliamentary maneuvers which add no light to the particular subject matter, but bring a good deal of heat to this body. If that is the disposition of the leader, I am quite prepared to cooperate with him in trying to seek a time limit and see if we cannot have disposition of this issue in away which reflects the views of a majority of Senators.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts. I will certainly consult with him, with the Senator from Utah, and others and make one last effort to see if we can figure out a time agreement in this matter and some regular way to appropriate it. But I must say I do not think that is going to happen tonight. Therefore, I would like now to put us in morning business.

Now, Mr. President, there is a lot of work to be done if we are going to get this thing unraveled. I will consult with the Senator from Massachusetts, the Senator from Utah, and the two managers to see if we can get something worked out that will let us proceed in an orderly way. But in the meantime, Mr. President, we will be back on the highway bill in the morning. I know the Senator from Illinois has worked out an agreement that I believe ought to be adopted promptly. I hope that we can do that first thing in the morning and get that part out of the way.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business not past 6:15 p.m. in which Senators may speak for not more than 3 minutes each with the exception of the two leaders against whom no limitation will apply.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Chirdon, one of his secretaries.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. SASSER:

S. 3015. A bill to amend the Federal Reserve Act to increase the number of class C directors of Federal Reserve Banks; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

By Mr. BYRD:

S. 3016. A bill for the relief of Benefrido C. Santiago; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BAKER (for Mr. DOLE) (for himself, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. JEPSEN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. COHEN, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. HEINZ, and Mrs. HAWKINS):

S. 3017. A bill to improve and extend certain domestic food assistance programs, and for other purposes; read the first time.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. SASSER:

S. 3015. A bill to amend the Federal Reserve Act to increase the number of class C directors of Federal Reserve Banks; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK DIRECTORS ACT

● Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I am taking this opportunity to urge the leadership of the Senate Banking Committee to take action on legislation aimed at broadening the representation on the boards which govern the regional banks of the Federal Reserve System, H.R. 5278, the Federal Reserve Bank Directors Act of 1984.

And I am today introducing legislation similar to H.R. 5278, which the House of Representatives has approved without opposition.

I am taking this step to expedite action on this legislation because this bill promotes fairness, a quality and a goal that can never be pursued too hastily.

Fairness is a word and concept that we heard very much debated during the consideration of S. 2851 during the past 2 weeks. Yet, none of the debate focused on the need for fairness where it is most needed in our banking system today. We need to open up the policy debate within the banking system itself, and the Federal Reserve Bank Directors Act of 1984 would take a step toward this objective.

It would add two "class C" directors to the boards of each of the regional banks. This legislation has received voice vote approval in both the House Banking Committee and the full House. The measure which we are now considering provides a ready and relevant vehicle for consideration of language affecting the way the Federal Reserve System establishes banking policy.

There are nine directors at each of the Federal Reserve System's 12 regional banks. There are class "A," "B," and "C" directors.

The three "A" members are representatives of the stockholding member banks. The three "B" directors are supposed to be actively engaged in commerce, agriculture or some other industrial pursuit; both the "A" and "B" directors are elected by the member banks.

Both the "A" and "B" directors are elected by stockholder members banks. It is the Fed's Board of Governors, however, which appoints the remaining three class "C" directors. And it is this class that would be affected by the legislation.

Why this legislation now? Over the past 4 years joint, concurrent and Senate or House resolutions calling for essentially the same broadening of membership and viewpoints in the policymaking and decisionmaking machinery of the Federal Reserve System have had little impact, despite the language of the Federal Reserve Act, which calls for directors to be selected with due but not exclusive consideration for the interests of agriculture, commerce, et cetera.

H.R. 5278 adds thrifts to this category, the reason being that banks which are not members of the Fed system are nonetheless bound by reserve requirements and other policy decisions ought to have some say in those decisions.

Since the summer of 1980, I have pointed out time and time again that the Federal Reserve System is devoid of adequate representation by farmers and small businesses. A 1980 Library of Congress survey which I requested showed that, of the 108 regional directors of the 12 regional banks, only three had backgrounds in farming; all three in huge agribusinesses. As a matter of fact, it was President Dwight Eisenhower who made the last appointment of a farmer to the Federal Reserve's Board of Governors.

A followup survey by the Library of Congress 2 years later showed that nothing had changed. Still no one with a real farm background was a director.

My decision to pursue yet another followup survey this summer—4 years later—brought me in contact with the House Subcommittee on Domestic Monetary Policy, which is reviewing biographical data supplied by the Fed itself on all the directors of the regional banks as well as the branch banks—over 500 individuals. This comprehensive profile should be completed sometime by the end of September.

I suspect that the House subcommittee study will illustrate to us in the Senate and the people across the Nation something we sense in the debate on this banking bill, namely the insensitivity of the Fed toward small businesses, farmers, and small banks.

It just isn't fair for the institutional arrangement which sets money and credit policy for millions of key players in the American economy to ignore those same people in shaping these policies.

So, the concept for which I now argue is as clear and the question is as fundamental as that raised by American patriots over two centuries ago: It is, in effect, an argument against the unfairness of taxation without representation.

I am not suggesting that a farmer or neighborhood banker or small businessman on the board of a regional bank will drastically alter, shape, or influence Fed policies.

I do suggest, however, that the presence of such individuals will help to promote fairness in deliberations by broadening the intellectual environment in which the Federal Reserve System's policymaking and decisionmaking machinery operates.

And I would also suggest that the Fed's Board of Governors—through the systematic exclusion of such individuals in its appointments to the regional bank boards—has demonstrated contempt for intellectual fairness.

Once again, I want to emphasize that, in urging the support of my colleagues for this measure, I seek fairness. It is only fair to the House, which has already approved this language unanimously. It is fair to the shaping of an environment which promotes the thorough discussion of issues. And it is fair to those millions of Americans who are now affected by policies unfairly considered, unfairly approved, and, as such, unfairly applied. I urge my colleagues to lend their support to H.R. 5278 and bring it to the floor for quick action.●

By Mr. BAKER (for Mr. DOLE) (for himself, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. JEPSEN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. COHEN, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. HEINZ, and Mrs. HAWKINS):

S. 3017. A bill to improve and extend certain domestic food assistance programs, and for other purposes; read the first time.

DOMESTIC FOOD ASSISTANCE ACT

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, although it is late in this session, I am introducing the Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984, along with eight of my colleagues: Senators BOSCHWITZ, JEPSEN, LEAHY, COHEN, DANFORTH, SPECTER, HEINZ, and HAWKINS. I would request that this legislation be placed on the Senate Calendar, rather than be referred to committee.

This bill would implement most of the recommendations of the President's Task Force on Food Assistance, which were presented in January. At a joint congressional hearing on January 26, held by the Senate and House Subcommittees on Nutrition, I had announced my intention to introduce legislation of this nature and was pleased to have the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee, Senator DOMENICI, join in this endeavor, along with five of my Republican colleagues. At that time, however, we did not receive any support from the other side of the aisle, and we thought it best not to proceed without a bipartisan effort.

The Senator from Kansas is pleased to have the Senator from Vermont, Senator LEAHY, as a cosponsor now. It was a pleasure working closely with him when he was ranking minority member of the Nutrition Subcommittee.

ACTION OF 98TH CONGRESS

In the meantime, my House colleagues introduced the Hunger Relief Act on March 15, which was reported from the committee on May 15, and finally passed the House on August 1. This bill which we are introducing today is very similar to H.R. 5151 in some respects, and I believe that these types of proposals, which represent modest increases in benefits for food stamp recipients, will set the framework for deliberations during next year's reauthorization of the Food Stamp Program.

There are many changes in the program that Members in both Houses of Congress are already in agreement on, and no doubt we will discover many other improvements that can be made in the program as we conduct further hearings at the subcommittee and full committee level. There are only 2 weeks remaining in the 98th Congress, before we adjourn for the election-year recess, and I do not expect any action on this legislation.

RECONCILIATION CHANGES

Mr. President, as chairman of the Nutrition Subcommittee, I feel that the changes the Congress made in the Food Stamp Program during the reconciliation process of 1981 and 1982 resulted in better targeting of benefits to those most in need, as well as the implementation of many program reforms to address fraud and abuse, and improvements in program administration at the State level. In the process of making these changes, we were able to reduce program spending by about $7 billion during the period fiscal year 1982-85. There may still be ways to achieve further savings in this program, but the Senator from Kansas believes that such savings should not come from reducing food stamp benefits to low-income families and individuals.

ECONOMIC CLIMATE

This country has seen some tough economic times in recent years, and the Food Stamp Program was responsive to the needs that existed, as can be demonstrated by the fact that the Federal Government spent more money on this program than ever before, despite budget cuts.

This fiscal year the Food Stamp Program cost $12.5 billion compared with $9.2 billion in 1980. At the same time, the program is providing benefits to more individuals and families than ever before. Average monthly participation for fiscal year 1984 was about 23 million, while 21 million were being served back in 1980.

In the future it may be necessary to do some fine tuning in the Food Stamp Program, along the lines of what the President's task force recommended. Our economy has been steadily improving, and, with it, the unemployment rate has been decreasing. As the everyday lives of millions of Americans have improved, reports of serious hunger problems throughout this country have receded. Ultimately, economic recovery is the best solution to widespread food assistance problems, and we are well on our way—thanks to the leadership of President Reagan and his economic policies.

I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section summary of this bill appear following my statement, along with the language of the bill itself.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DOMESTIC FOOD ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1984—SECTION-BY-SECTION SUMMARY

Section 1. This section establishes the title of the Act: the Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984.

Section 2. This section contains Congressional findings that hunger and malnutrition in the United States are deplorable and without justification, and that they require the coordinated efforts of government, public and private for profit and nonprofit organizations, and affected families and individuals. It also states that it is the policy of the Congress to periodically review Federal domestic food assistance programs, make any necessary changes in a manner which will diminish hunger and malnutrition, and provide maximum assistance to those with particular nutritional needs.

TITLE I: AMENDMENTS TO THE FOOD STAMP ACT

Thrifty Food Plan

Section 101. Food stamp benefits reflect the cost of purchasing food using the Agriculture Department's Thrifty Food Plan, the Department's lowest cost food plan. As amended in 1982, existing law requires that maximum allotments be equal to 99 percent of the cost of the Thrifty Food Plan, rather than the full cost. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended increasing food stamp benefits to all households by increasing maximum allotments to the full cost of the Thrifty Food Plan.

This section would increase food stamp benefits by requiring that maximum allotments be equal to the full cost of the Thrifty Food Plan.

Earned Income Deduction

Section 102. In order to recognize the taxes and work expenses associated with earning income and provide an incentive for food stamp recipients to work, existing law requires that 18 percent of any earned income be disregarded when a household's counted income is determined to establish its eligibility and benefit. Prior to amendment in 1981, the disregard for earnings was 20 percent.

In recognition of the President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommendation to strengthen work incentives, this section would increase the proportion of earned income to be disregarded from 18 to 20 percent.

Financial Resources

Section 103. Existing law requires that eligible households have limited liquid assets. Individuals and households of two or more without elderly members may have no more than $1,500 in liquid assets. Households of two or more with an elderly member may have up to $3,000 in liquid assets. In counting liquid assets, a household's home, personal belongings, vehicles used to transport the physicially disabled, and income-producing property, tools, and vehicles are disregarded. However, to the extent that it exceeds $4,500, the fair market value of any non-excluded vehicle is counted as a liquid asset. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance is increasing the existing limits on liquid assets by raising the overall dollar ceilings and the threshold used for counting a portion of the value of a vehicle.

This section would raise the liquid asset limit applied to individuals and households of two or more without elderly members from $1,500 to $2,250. Similarly, it would raise the limit applied to households of two or more with an elderly member from $3,000 to $3,500. The exempt value of any non-excluded vehicle would be increased from $4,500 to $5,500.

Categorical Eligibility

Section 104. Under existing law, households in which all members are recipients of benefits under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program are exempt from meeting the food stamp liquid assets eligibility test, but must meet the food stamp income test. All other households must meet food stamp income and assets eligibility tests, irrespective of their receipt of cash welfare assistance. Pilot projects are authorized under which households with AFDC, Supplemental Security Income (SSI), or medicaid recipients may be deemed to have met food stamp income and assets eligibility tests. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended that AFDC and SSI households be considered to have met food stamp eligibility tests.

This section would require that households in which all members receive AFDC or SSI benefits be considered to have satisfied food stamp income and assets eligibility tests.

Issuance of Coupons

Section 105. Existing law does not specifically allow for the issuance of food stamps at dates staggered throughout the month. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended that specific permission for such staggered issuance be adopted.

This section would specifically allow the issuance of food stamps at various times during a month.

Alternative Means of Coupon Issuance

Section 106. Existing law permits the Secretary of Agriculture to require States to use alternative methods of issuing food stamps if he determines, in consultation with the Agriculture Department's Inspector General, that it would improve the integrity of the food stamp program. Alternative methods include using automatic data processing and information retrieval systems, or issuing, instead of food stamps, reusable documents (similar to credit or bank cards) that can be used by and returned to recipients at food stores.

This section would promote the use of alternative means of issuance by requiring the Secretary to have States use alternative methods if he determines, in consultation with the Inspector General, that it would improve program integrity.

Redemption of Coupons

Section 107. Existing law has no specific provisions governing fees that banks or other financial institutions may charge retail food stores for redeeming (converting into cash in the store's account) food stamps accepted by food stores.

This section would prohibit banks or other financial institutions from requiring that a retail food store pay a charge or fee for the redemption of food stamps.

Hours of Operation

Section 108. Existing law contains no specific provisions governing the hours during which food stamp offices should be open. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended that States be encouraged to keep food stamp offices open during some non-business hours.

This section would require States to assess, from time to time, the need for operating food stamp offices during evening and weekend hours.

Eligibility of the Homeless

Section 109. Existing law contains no specific provisions regarding whether a household must have a fixed address in order to receive food stamps. Food stamp regulations stipulate that a fixed residence is not required. However, administrative practices vary among the States and methods for certifying and issuing food stamps to households not residing in permanent dwellings (or at fixed mailing addresses) are sometimes lacking. In pointing this out, the President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended that procedures be put in place to ensure that those not having a fixed address be served by the food stamp program.

This section would require States to provide a method of certifying and issuing food stamps to eligible households not residing in a permanent dwelling (or without a fixed mailing address). In carrying this requirement out, States would have to take necessary steps to ensure that food stamp participation is limited to eligible households.

Prohibition Against Transfer of Funds

Section 110. Under present practice, a portion of each year's annual food stamp appropriation is transferred to the Agriculture Department's Office of the Inspector General for use in food-stamp-related investigative activities. A separate appropriation for these activities is not sought or made.

This section would prohibit any funds appropriated under the authority of the Food Stamp Act from being transferred to the Office of the Inspector General, thereby requiring a separate appropriation.

Transfer of Sales Tax Imposed on Food Purchased With Food Stamps

Section 111. Under present law, some States collect sales tax revenues on food, including food purchased with food stamps.

This section would require States imposing a sales tax on food bought with food stamps to rebate the revenues collected on food stamp purchases within 15 months of the end of each fiscal year. Provision is also made for adjustment of the amount to be rebated to reflect variable food sales taxes, and for withholding the amount, if necessary, from a State's Federal reimbursement for food stamp administrative costs.

Community Work and Training Program

Section 112. Under existing law, most able-bodied adult (between 18 and 60 years of age) food stamp recipients who are not taking care of very young children are required to register for employment and must accept a suitable job offer; States are reimbursed by the Federal government for 50 percent of the administrative cost of work registration operations. In addition, if a State negotiates an agreement with the Agriculture Department, it may require work registrants to seek employment following specific requirements similar to those used for the unemployment insurance recipients; States receive a specific amount, determined by the Argiculture Department, for administering these job search activities. Over and above work registration and job search activities, States and localities may opt to operate a workfare program in which work registrants are required to work in return for their household's food stamp allotment; operating jurisdictions are reimbursed for 50 percent of the administrative costs of running a workfare program and receive half the initial food stamp benefit savings accruing from a workfare participant who gets a job.

This section would add a new option for States wanting to initiate activities providing work experience and limited training to food stamp recipients, or strengthen any similar existing efforts. It would place into the Food Stamp Act authority for States to operate Community Work Experience Training (CWEP) program similar to the authority granted to States for their AFDC recipients in 1981. However, these food stamp CWEP programs could, in addition to work in return for benefits, provide for a broader range of work experience and training activities than now done under existing workfare or other authorities and could limit participation to specific recipient groups most likely to benefit. For example, limited training or assistance in seeking employment through job clubs could be initiated. Each program would be State-designed and would be aimed at improving the employability of participants through actual work experience and training in order to enable participants to become employed promptly in the public or private sector. As with existing food stamp workfare authority, the number of hours of work experience or training would be limited to the value of the household's allotment divided by the minimum wage, protections for recipients and against displacement of existing employees would be required, and States would receive a reimbursement of half of their administrative and participant support costs up to limits established by the Secretary of Agriculture.

TITLE II. NUTRITION SURVEILLANCE

Nutritional Status Monitoring

Section 201. The President's Task Force on Food Assistance recommended that the Federal government devote more effort to developing standards and means to measure nutritional status.

This section would amend Section 1428 of the National Agricultural Research Extension and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 to require that as part of our comprehensive nutritional status monitoring program, periodic special surveys be included to determine the nutritional status of particularly vulnerable low-income groups (including low-income mothers; single parents; pregnant women; single, elderly households, and homeless individuals). This amendment also would require that longitudinal surveys be conducted to determine the status, over time, of nutrition related health problems in the United States.

TITLE III: FOOD DISTRIBUTION AND EMERGENCY SHELTERS

Transfer of Section 32 Commodities

Section 301. This section would amend Section 32 of the Act of August 24, 1935 to allow public or private nonprofit agencies receiving Section 32 commodities to transfer such commodities to other public or private nonprofit organizations which agree to use them to assist low-income groups.

Temporary Emergency Food Assistance

Section 302. In order to expand the types of commodities available to organizations serving low-income and unemployed persons, this section would amend the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Act of 1983 by authorizing the Secretary to make Section 32 surplus commodities available to outlets receiving price support commodities under that Act.

Donations by Military Commissaries

Section 303. This section would amend section 2428 of Title 10 of the U.S. Code to allow a commissary store of the Department of Defense to donate surplus, unmarketable food to a local food bank. This was recommended by the President's Task Force and Food Assistance.

Grants for Homeless Individuals

Section 304. In their report, the President's Task Force on Food Assistance highlighted the problems of the homeless and indicated that the needs of this group went beyond food assistance.

This section authorizes up to $50 million for each of fiscal years 1984, 1985 and 1986 for grants to the States to assist the homeless. The provision would allow the Secretary of Agriculture to make grants to States to provide food, health and shelter assistance to such persons, and would require consultations with the Secretaries of Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Defense, and Director of the Federal Emergency Management Relief Agency and the Administrator of Veterans Affairs.

TITLE IV: EFFECTIVE DATES

S. 3017

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984".

DECLARATION OF POLICY

SEC. 2. (a) The Congress finds that—

(1) existing hunger and malnutrition in the United States are deplorable and without justification; and

(2) hunger and malnutrition are complex, social and human resource problems which require the coordinated efforts of Federal, state, and local government, public and private for profit and nonprofit organizations, and affected families and individuals.

(b) It is the policy of the Congress—

(1) to review periodically all federal domestic food assistance programs;

(2) to make any necessary changes in such programs in a manner which will diminish hunger and malnutrition; and

(3) to provide the maximum amount of assistance under such programs to individuals with particular nutritional needs.

TITLE I—FOOD STAMP PROGRAM

THRIFTY FOOD PLANS

SEC. 101. The second sentence of section 3(o) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2012(o)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "and October 1, 1984," in clause (7); and

(2) by striking out "1985" in clause (8) and inserting in lieu thereof "1984".

EARNED INCOME DEDUCTION

SEC. 102. The third sentence of section 5(e) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2014(e)) is amended by striking out "18 per centum" and inserting in lieu thereof "20 per centum".

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

SEC. 103. Section 5(g) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2014(g)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "$1,500" and "$3,000" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "$2,250" and "$3,500", respectively; and

(2) by striking out "$4,500" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,500".

CATEGORICAL ELIGIBILITY

SEC. 104. (a) Subsection (j) of section 5 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2014(j)) is amended to read as follows:

"(j) Notwithstanding subsections (a) through (i), a State agency shall consider a household in which each member of the household receives either benefits under a State plan approved under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) or supplemental security income benefits under title XVI of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1380 et seq.) to have satisfied the income and resource limitations for participation in the food stamp program prescribed under this section.".

(b) Section 11(i) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 2020(i)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A State agency may not deny or terminate benefits to a household under the food stamp program solely on the basis of the denial or termination of benefits to such household under the aid to families with dependent children program established under part A of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) or the supplemental security income program established under title XVI of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1381 et seq.) without a separate determination by such agency that such household has failed to satisfy the eligibility requirements for participation in the food stamp program.".

ISSUANCE OF COUPONS

SEC. 105. (a) Section 7(a) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2016(a)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A coupon issuer may issue coupons to eligible households at various times during a month.".

(b) The first proviso of section 7(b) of such Act is amended by inserting before the colon at the end thereof the following: ", except that a participating retail food store or wholesale food concern which is located in an area in which food stamps are commonly used (as determined by the Secretary) may not increase the price of food at any time during a month if the increase is the result of the issuance of coupons to customers of the store or concern".

ALTERNATIVE MEANS OF COUPON ISSUANCE

SEC. 106. Section 7(g)(1) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2016(g)(1)) is amended by striking out "may" in the matter preceding clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "shall".

REDEMPTION OF COUPONS

SEC. 107. Section 10 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2019) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A financial institution may not require a retail food store to pay a charge or fee for the redemption of coupons.".

HOURS OF OPERATION

SEC. 108. Section 11(e)(2) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2020(e)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking out the semicolon at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a period; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "The State agency shall assess, from time to time, the need for operating food stamp offices within the State during evening and weekend hours.".

ELIGIBILITY OF THE HOMELESS

SEC. 109. Section 11(e)(2) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2020(e)(2)) (as amended by section 108 of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "The State agency shall provide a method of certifying and issuing coupons to eligible households who do not reside in permanent dwellings or who do not have fixed mailing addresses. In carrying out the preceding sentence, the State agency shall take such steps as are necessary to assure that participation in the food stamp program is limited to eligible households;".

PROHIBITION AGAINST THE TRANSFER OF FUNDS TO OFFICE OF THE INSPECTOR GENERAL

SEC. 110. Section 18 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2027) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) No funds appropriated to carry out this Act may be transferred to the Office of the Department of Agriculture.".

TRANSFER OF SALES TAX IMPOSED ON FOOD PURCHASED WITH FOOD STAMPS

SEC. 111. Section 18 of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2027) (as amended by section 110 of this Act) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g)(1) If a State participated in the food stamp program in any fiscal year and in such fiscal year imposed a tax on the sale of food purchased with coupons, the State shall transfer to the Secretary of the Treasury as soon as practicable after the end of such fiscal year, but not later than December 1 of the fiscal year following the fiscal year in which the tax was imposed, an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

"(A) the total value of coupons issued by the State agency of the State to all households during such fiscal year; by

"(B) the rate of tax imposed by such State on the sale of food purchased with coupons during such fiscal year (as determined by the Secretary of Agriculture).

"(2) If a State fails to transfer to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount of funds described in paragraph (1)—

"(A) the Secretary of the Treasury shall notify the Secretary of Agriculture of such failure; and

"(B) the Secretary of Agriculture may withhold, from funds which the State would otherwise be entitled to receive under section 16(a), the amount which the State failed to pay.".

COMMUNITY WORK AND TRAINING PROGRAM

SEC. 112. (a) The Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2011 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"'COMMUNITY WORK AND TRAINING PROGRAM

"SEC. 21. (a) A State agency may establish a community work experience program in accordance with this section.

"(b)(1) The purpose of a community work experience program shall be to provide experience and training for individuals not otherwise able to obtain employment in order to assist them to become regularly employed.

"(2) Such program shall be designed to improve the employability of participants through actual work experience and training and to enable individuals employed under such program to become employed promptly in the public or private sector.

"(3) Such program shall be limited to projects which serve a useful public purpose in fields such as health, social service, environmental protection, education, urban and rural development and redevelopment, welfare, recreation, public facilities, public safety, and day care.

"(c) In carrying out a community work experience program under this section, a State agency shall—

"(1) utilize, to the extent possible, the prior training, experience, and skills of a participant in making appropriate work experience assignments;

"(2) prescribe appropriate standards for health, safety, and other conditions applicable to the performance of work;

"(3) take such steps as may be necessary to assure that the program does not result in the displacement of employed persons or the filling of established unfilled position vacancies;

"(4) provide reasonable conditions of work, taking into account the geographic region, residence, and proficiency of the participants;

"(5) not require participants, without their consent, to travel an unreasonable distance from their homes or remain away from their homes overnight;

"(6) provide that the maximum number of hours in any month that a participant may be required to work is that number which equals the value of the allotment of the household of which such individual is a member divided by the greater of the Federal or the applicable State minimum wage; and

"(7) provide for the payment of transportation and other costs, not in excess of an amount established by the Secretary, reasonably necessary and directly related to participation in the program.

"(d) The facilities of State public employment offices may be used to find employment opportunities for participants in the community work experience program.

"(e)(1) A State agency may not use funds provided to carry out the community work experience program under section 16(a) to compensate participants for the performance of work.

"(2) A participant in such program shall not be entitled to a salary or to any other work or training expense provided under any other provision of law by reason of participation in such program.

"(3) Nothing in this Act shall prevent a State agency from operating a community work experience program in accordance with this section and in accordance with such other terms and conditions as the State agency may determine to be necessary, whether or not consistent with section 6(d)(1)).

"(f)(1) Each person who is required to comply with section 6(d)(1) or is described in section 6(d)(2)(A) shall participate in a community work experience program, upon referral by the State agency, unless such person is currently employed at least eighty hours a month and is earning an amount not less than the applicable minimum wage for such employment.

"(2) In addition to a person described in paragraph (1), a State agency may also require to participate in such program a person who would be required to comply with section 6(d)(1) but for the exception contained in section 6(d)(2)(B) if the person is caring for a child over three years of age or an incapacitated person and care for such child or incapacitated person is available.

"(g) The State agency shall coordinate a community work experience program operated under this section, the requirements prescribed under section 6(d)(1), and a pilot program operated under section 17(e) so as to assure that job placement will have priority over participation in the community work experience program.

"(h) Section 6(d)(1) shall apply to any individual referred to a community work experience program who fails to participate in such program in the same manner that such section applies to an individual who is required to comply with section 6(d)(1).

"(i) Funds provided to carry out the community work experience program under section 16(a) may not be used—

"(1) to make or acquire materials or equipment in connection with the work performed under such program;

"(2) to pay the cost of supervision of work under such program; or

"(3) to pay other costs unless such costs are attributable to such program and the payment of such costs is approved by the Secretary.".

(b) Section 16(a) of such Act (7 U.S.C. 2025(a)) is amended—

"(1) by striking out "and" at the end of clause (3); and

"(2) by inserting ", and (5) a community work experience program" after "(4) fair hearings".

TITLE II—NUTRITION SURVEILLANCE

NUTRITIONAL STATUS MONITORING

SEC. 201. Section 1428 of the National Agricultural Research, Extension, and Teaching Policy Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 3178) is amended to read as follows:

"NUTRITIONAL STATUS MONITORING

"SEC. 1428. (a) The Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall establish a comprehensive nutritional status monitoring program which shall include the following:

"(1) An assessment system consisting of periodic surveys and continuous monitoring to determine the extent of risk of nutrition-related health problems in the United States, which population groups or areas of the country face the greatest risks of such problems, and the likely causes of risk and changes in such risk factors over time.

"(2) A surveillance system to identify remediable nutrition-related health risks to individuals or for local areas, in such a manner as to tie detection to direct intervention and treatment.

"(3) Program evaluations to determine the adequacy, efficiency, effectiveness, and effects of nutrition-related programs in reducing health risks to individuals and populations.

"(4) Periodic special surveys to determine the health and nutritional status of particularly vulnerable low-income population groups, including low-income mothers; single parent, pregnant mothers; single, elderly person households; and homeless individuals.

"(b) In carrying out the monitoring system required under subsection (a), the Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall conduct longitudinal surveys in order to determine the status over time of nutrition-related health problems in the United States.

"(c) In carrying out the surveillance system required under subsection (a)(2), the Secretary and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall use screening and other information available from other health programs, including programs funded under titles V, XVIII, and XIX of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 701 et seq.) and section 330 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 254c).".

TITLE III—FOOD DISTRIBUTION AND EMERGENCY SHELTERS

TRANSFER OF SECTION 32 COMMODITIES

SEC. 301. Section 32 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A public or private nonprofit organization which receives agricultural commodities or products under clause (2) of the second sentence of this section may transfer such commodities or products to another public or private nonprofit organization which agrees to use such commodities or products to provide, without cost or waste, nutrition assistance to individuals in low-income groups.".

TEMPORARY EMERGENCY FOOD ASSISTANCE

SEC. 302. Section 202 of the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Act of 1983 (7 U.S.C. 612c note) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) In addition to any commodities described in subsections (a) and (b), the Secretary may use to carry out this Act agricultural commodities and products made available under clause (2) of the second sentence of section 32 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c).".

DONATIONS BY MILITARY COMMISSARIES

SEC. 303. (a) Section 2482 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after the section designation; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) A commissary store of the Department of Defense may donate surplus, unmarketable food to a local food bank.".

(b) The caption of section 2482 of such title is amended by striking out ": private operation".

GRANTS FOR HOMELESS INDIVIDUALS

SEC. 304. (a) As used in this section, the term "State" means the fifty States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands of the United States.

(b) The Secretary of Agriculture may make grants to States for the purpose of providing food, health, and shelter assistance to homeless individuals.

(b) In carrying out subsection (b), the Secretary of Agriculture shall consult with the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, the Secretary of Defense, the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, and the Administrator of Veterans Affairs.

(d) For each of the fiscal years ending September 30, 1984, September 30, 1985, and September 30, 1986, there are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 to carry out this section.

TITLE IV—EFFECTIVE DATES

EFFECTIVE DATES

SEC. 401. This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall become effective as soon after the date of the enactment of this Act as the Secretary of Agriculture determines is practicable, but no later than forty-five days after such date.

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I rise today along with Senator DOLE to introduce legislation designed to improve the Food Stamp Program. As a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, I more recently joined the Nutrition Subcommittee because of my growing interest and concern regarding the issue of nutrition and hunger and the Federal role in helping alleviate hunger. The Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984 would be a positive and significant step toward improving the Food Stamp Program's effectiveness in alleviating hunger in the United States.

Under Senator DOLE's leadership and guidance, sensible reforms have been made recently in the Food Stamp Program. In fiscal year 1979, the first year I served in the Senate, an average of 17.7 million people participated in the Food Stamp Program each month at a total cost of $6.9 billion. Two years later, in fiscal year 1981, the program was serving an average of 22.4 million people monthly at a total cost of $11.4 billion. Participation in the Food Stamp Program grew 26.5 percent in 2 years and costs rose 65.2 percent. In sharp contrast, in fiscal year 1983, for the first time since the Food Stamp Program was enacted on a nationwide basis in 1964, average monthly participation dropped to 21.6 million, a decrease of 3.5 percent. At the same time prices rose to $11.9 billion, an increase of only 4.4 percent.

Slowing the rate of growth of the program from 65.2 percent to 4.4 percent was a phenomenal achievement, particularly because the changes made were sensible and pragmatic. States will be required to get their error rates below 5 percent by fiscal year 1985. Siblings that live together are now required to apply together for food stamps and are considered a single household. Administering agencies were given the authority to reduce benefits immediately whenever a household provides information in writing that their circumstances have changed. Previously, an agency had to wait at least 10 days after receipt of such information before it could reduce benefits and, in some cases, an additional full month's benefits had to be provided. This is just a sample of the changes that were made when we reauthorized the Food Stamp Program in 1982.

Having worked long and hard to slow the growth of the Food Stamp Program in 1982, we are now introducing legislation that would somewhat increase costs in an effort to ensure that the Food Stamp Program remains effective in reducing hunger and malnutrition. Many of these changes are based on recommendations of the President's Task Force on Food Assistance.

The asset limit of $1,500 was set more than 10 years ago, and needs to be increased. This legislation would raise the asset limit to $2,250. If the household has two or more members with an elderly member the asset limit is raised from $3,000 to $3,500.

The maximum food allotment would be increased from 99 to 100 percent of the thrifty food plan. The thrifty food plan is supposed to be based on a nutritious low-cost diet. There is no rationale for giving food stamp beneficiaries 99 percent of what is needed to purchase adequate foods.

To increase the incentive for food stamp recipients to work we need to increase the earned income deduction from 18 percent back to 20 percent. In addition, provisions in this bill would streamline application procedures for AFDC recipients and the homeless. These are several of the many improvements in the Food Stamp Program included in the Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984. I strongly support this legislation and urge my colleagues to also support these improvements.●

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today I am joining with Senator DOLE and others to introduce the Domestic Food Assistance Act of 1984.

Earlier today, Senator DOLE and I visited a food stamp distribution office and welfare check distribution office at 1414 South Broad Street, in Philadelphia, PA. There, we talked to food stamp and welfare recipients and also to governmental officials who were administering the plans.

We heard complaints and concerns about a number of subjects which this legislation addresses. For example, this legislation seeks to target most directly to those individuals who need food. We heard concerns expressed about the ineligibility of so-called street people who do not have any address and thus are ineligible for food stamps. This bill corrects that problem.

We heard further complaints about senior citizens who were reluctant to apply for food stamps because of the assets test. This legislation seeks to ameliorate that problem.

It is very difficult to talk to people in food stamp lines and welfare lines in evaluating the appropriate scope of governmental action. In seeing and talking to such people, it is apparent that this legislative effort is very important.

Beyond targeting the truly needy, we also discussed ways to eliminate fraud and abuse of the food stamp program. We also discussed the proposed computer system for having food recipients present their identification cards where a computer advises the store owner about their balance and benefits so that food could be obtained without the stamps and the attendant opportunities for fraud.

In reviewing the procedures in effect at 1414 South Broad Street, I was reminded of my days as district attorney of Philadelphia when my office prosecuted and convicted welfare cheats in the late sixties and early seventies. As part of the reform from role interpretations and prosecutions, we instituted the procedure that checks would no longer be sent through the mail but instead welfare recipients would have identification cards with their photograph and signature and would be required to come to an office and receive their checks. That system initiated in the early 1970's is still in effect and has foreclosed many potentially fraudulent practices. This legislation takes significant steps forward to fight against potential fraud and abuse.

The primary thrust of this bill is to implement many of the recommendations of the President's Task Force on Hunger so that our resources dedicated to feeding the underprivileged and unemployed will achieve maximum results by improving targeting and administration.

The major provisions of the bill include raising the food stamp benefits to all households by requiring that food stamp allotments be equal to the full cost of the "Thrifty Food Plan"—the Department of Agriculture's lowest cost food plan meeting basic nutritional requirements. Current law requires that maximum allotments be equal to 99 percent of the cost of the food plan, and this bill would raise that to 100 percent.

The bill would also raise the asset limits for eligible households. This is aimed primarily at the "new poor" households which have lost income due to recent unemployment and do not qualify for food stamps because they own too many assets such as autos or nonresidential property. Households used to having a steady source of income that suddenly find themselves in the unemployment line generally have acquired assets that are not readily marketable and which often require steady monthly payments that drain available resources, leaving few if any funds for food. Raising the asset limit will help these families obtain access to food stamps.

The homeless are also targeted by this legislation. The bill would require States to provide a method of certifying and issuing food stamps to eligible households not residing in a permanent dwelling or without a fixed mailing address. Addressing the plight of the homeless has been a priority concern of mine throughout my Senate term, and I am particularly pleased to see this provision.

A continuing problem with this and other welfare programs is finding a way to provide for those in need without providing an incentive not to work. This legislation contains several provisions aimed at achieving this balance. For example, it contains a provision to increase the amount of earned income that is disregarded when a household's income is counted to determine its eligibility and the level of its benefit.

In addition, the bill would require States to assess, from time to time, the need for operating food stamp offices during nonbusiness hours, so that working people can have easier access. The bill would also add a new option for States wanting to initiate activities providing work experience and limited training to food stamp recipients, or strengthen any similar existing efforts. It would give States authority to operate community work experience training programs which could provide for a broader range of work experience and training activities than now done under existing workfare or other authorities and could limit participation to those most likely to benefit. Each program would be State-designed and should be aimed at improving the employability of participants through actual work experience and training so that they could become employed promptly in the public or private sector.

In addition to other provisions, the bill would also require that households in which all members receive AFDC (aid to families with dependent children) or supplemental security income benefits be considered to have satisfied food stamp income and assets eligibility tests. It would require the Secretary of Agriculture to have States use alternative methods if he determines, in consultation with the inspector general, that it would improve program integrity. Such an alternative means of distribution will be implemented in Reading, PA, on October 1, 1984, on a trial basis, and I am optimistic that it will result in significant savings by reducing the high level of theft and other trafficking in food stamps that diverts the benefits from those in need.

These improvements in targeting and administration reflect the results of careful study of the current system, and whatever criticisms there may have been of the Task Force on Hunger, the fact remains that in any program there are inefficiencies and oversights that prevent the maximum return on our dollars and thus limit our ability to reach those in need. This bill goes a long way toward resolving some of these problems within the food stamp program, and I commend Senator DOLE for his leadership on this issue and am pleased to join with him in introducing the bill.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

WATER RIGHTS OF THE AK-CHIN INDIAN COMMUNITY

GOLDWATER (AND DECONCINI) AMENDMENT NO. 4391

(Ordered referred to the Select Committee on Indian Affairs.)

Mr. GOLDWATER (for himself and Mr. DECONCINI) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (H.R. 6206) amending the Act of July 28, 1978 (Public Law 95-238) relating to the water rights of the Ak-Chin Indian Community, and for other purposes; as follows:

Paragraph (2) of subsection (g) is amended to read as follows:

(2) Such two hundred and fifty thousand acre-feet of water shall not be used to irrigate more than thirty-seven thousand one hundred and eighty seven acres of land in the Yuma Mesa Division, specifically: six thousand five hundred and eighty-seven acres in the North Gila Valley Irrigation District; ten thousand six hundred acres in the Yuma Irrigation District; and twenty thousand acres in the Yuma Mesa Irrigation and Drainage District. Additional land in the Yuma Mesa Irrigation and Drainage District may be irrigated if there is a corresponding reduction in the irrigated acreage in the other districts so that at no time are more than thirty seven thousand one hundred and eighty seven acres being irrigated in the Yuma Mesa Division.

Subsection (k) of section 2 is amended to read as follows:

(k) The water referred to in subsection (f)(1) shall be for the exclusive use and benefit of the Ak-Chin Indian Community, except that whenever the aggregate water supply referred to in subsection (f) exceeds the quantity necessaary to meet the obligations of the Secretary under this Act, the Secretary shall allocate on an interim basis to the Central Arizona Project any of the water referred to in subsection (f) which is not required for delivery to the Ak-Chin Indian Reservation under this Act.

At the end of the bill insert the following new section:

SEC. 10. (a) Section 311 of the Southern Arizona Water Rights Settlement Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 1283) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 311. The provisions of section 2415 of title 28, United States Code, shall apply to any action relating to water rights of the Papago Indian Tribe or of any member of such Tribe which is brought—

"(1) by the United States for, or on behalf of, such Tribe or member of such Tribe, or

"(2) by such Tribe.".

(b) The amendment made by this section shall not apply with respect to any action filed prior to the date of enactment of this Act.

Immediately following section 6, insert the following new section; and renumber the following sections accordingly;

SEC. 7. (a) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 for payment to the fund referred to in subsection (b). Subject to appropriations, the Secretary shall pay a sum of $1,000,000 to such fund.

(b) No portion of the sum referred to in subsection (a) shall be paid unless—

(1) The Central Arizona Water Conservation District establishes a fund to be administered by the District for voluntary acquisition or conservation of water from sources within the State of Arizona for use in central Arizona in years when water supplies are reduced; and,

(2) The Central Arizona Water Conservation District has contributed the sum of not less than $1,000,000 to such fund: Provided, That if the contribution of not less than $1,000,000 by the District to such fund has not been fully paid as provided in this section within two years of the date of enactment of this Act, the authorization for appropriation and payment of the sum referred to in subsection (a) shall terminate.

APPROVAL OF INTERSTATE AND INTERSTATE SUBSTITUTE COST ESTIMATES

THURMOND (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4392

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. THURMOND (for himself, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. ANDREWS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (S. 2527) to approve the interstate and interstate substitute cost estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the end of the bill add the following new section:

FUNDING FLEXIBILITY

SEC. 134. (a) Section 104 of title 23, United States Code, is amended by repealing subsections (c) and (d) and inserting a new subsection (c) as follows:

"(c)(1) Sums apportioned under paragraphs (b)(1), (b)(2), (b)(5)(B) and (b)(6) of this section shall be available for expenditure for projects on the primary, secondary, Interstate, or Urban Federal-aid systems without limitation as to the amount of any class of funds, primary, secondary, Interstate resurfacing, or urban, apportioned for projects on any system provided that beginning with fiscal year 1984 not less than 40 per centum of primary, secondary and urban funds shall be expended on the Federal-aid system for which they were apportioned for projects for resurfacing, restoring, rehabilitating, and reconstructing existing highways except where the State certifies to the Secretary that such percentage of funds is in excess of the resurfacing, restoring, rehabilitating, and reconstructing needs of existing highways in the State and the Secretary accepts such certification and provided that the preceding requirement shall apply only to that portion of a State's apportionment not used for reimbursing such State for bond retirement under section 122 of this title or for advance construction 115 of this title and provided that the provisions of section 150 of this title concerning the allocation of urban systems funds shall remain in full force and effect.

(2) The Federal share payable of any project on the Federal-aid primary, secondary, and urban systems shall be that set forth in section 120(a) of this title and of any project on the Federal-aid Interstate system shall be that set forth in section 120(c) of this title."

(b) Section 105(d) of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 is repealed.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the amendment we are filing today would add a new section to S. 2527, the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1984, containing provisions identical to those of S. 2738, introduced by me on June 7, 1984, and also cosponsored by Senators HOLLINGS and ANDREWS. Under the provisions of this amendment, States would be able to use the total of their apportionment for Federal-aid primary, secondary, and urban systems, and for 4-R work among any one or all of these four categories as their individual needs require.

MOYNIHAN AMENDMENT NO. 4393

(Ordered to lie on the table)

Mr. MOYNIHAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2527) to approve the interstate and interstate substitute cost estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes; supra, as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. 134. (a) Section 411 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. 2311) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(i)(1) If the Governor of a State, after making the consultations specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, determines that any specific segment of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating motor vehicles having the lengths set forth in subsection (a) of this section or motor vehicle combinations described in subsection (c) of this section, the Governor may notify the Secretary of such determination and request that the Secretary exempt such segment from one or both of such subsections.

"(2) Before making such notification, the Governor shall consult with units of local government within that State in which the specific segment of such System is located, as well as the Governor of any State adjacent to that State that might be directly affected by such exemption. As part of such consultations, consideration shall be given to any potential alternative route that—

"(A) can safely accommodate motor vehicles having the lengths set forth in subsection (a) of this section or motor vehicle combinations described in subsection (c) of this section; and

"(B) serves the area in which such segment is located.

"(3) The Governor shall transmit with such notification specific evidence of safety problems that supports such determination, and the results of consultation regarding any alternative route under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(4)(A) If the Secretary determines, upon request by a Governor under paragraph (1) of this subsection or on the Secretary's own initiative, that any segment of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating motor vehicles having the lengths set forth in subsection (a) of this section or motor vehicle combinations described in subsection (c) of this section, the Secretary shall exempt such segment from one or both of such subsections. Before making such determination, the Secretary shall consider any possible alternative route that serves the area in which such segment is located.

"(B) The Secretary shall make such determination within a period of 120 days after the date of receipt of notification from a Governor under paragraph (1) of this subsection or the date on which the Secretary initiates action under this paragraph, as the case may be, with respect to such segment. If the Secretary determines that such determination will not be made within such time period, the Secretary shall immediately notify the Congress and shall furnish the reasons for the delay, information regarding the resources as assigned, and the projected completion date, for any such determination.

"(C) The Secretary shall make such determination only after affording interested parties notice and the opportunity for comment. Any exemption granted by the Secretary under this paragraph before the date on which final rules are issued under subsection (a) of this section shall be included as part of such final rules. Any such exemption granted on or after such date shall be published as a revision of such rules.".

(b) Section 416 of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (49 U.S.C. 2316) is amended—

(1) By redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e)(1) If the Governor of a State, after making the consultations specified in paragraph (2) of this subsection, determines that any specific segment of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safely accommodating motor vehicles having the width set forth in subsection (a) of this section, the Governor may notify the Secretary of such determination and request that the Secretary exempt such segment from such subsection for the purpose of allowing the State to impose a vehicle width limitation of less than 102 inches on such segment.

"(2) Before making such notification, the Governor shall consult with units of local government within that State in which the specific segment of such System is located, as well as the Governor of any State adjacent to that State that might be directly affected by such exemption. As part of such consultations, consideration shall be given to any potential alternative route that—

"(A) can safely accommodate motor vehicles having the width set forth in subsection (a) of this section; and

"(B) serves the area in which such segment is located.

"(3) The Governor shall transmit with such notification specific evidence of safety problems that supports such determination, and the results of consultation regarding any alternative route under paragraph (2) of this subsection.

"(4)(A) If the Secretary determines, upon request by a Governor under paragraph (1) of this subsection or on the Secretary's own inititative, that any segment of the National System of Interstate and Defense Highways is not capable of safety accommodating motor vehicles having the width set forth in subsection (a) of this section, the Secretary shall exempt such segment from such subsection for the purpose of allowing the State to impose a vehicle width limitation of less than 102 inches on such segment. Before making such determination, the Secretary shall consider any possible alternative route that serves the area in which such segment is located.

"(B) The Secretary shall make such determination within a period of 120 days after the date of receipt of notification from a Governor under paragraph (1) of this subsection or the date on which the Secretary initiates action under this paragraph, as the case may be, with respect to such segment. If the Secretary determines that such determination will not be made within such time period, the Secretary shall immediately notify the Congress and shall furnish the reasons for the delay, information regarding the resources assigned, and the projected completion date, for any such determination.

"(C) The Secretary shall make such determination only after affording interested parties notice and the opportunity for comment. Any exemption granted by the Secretary under this paragraph before the date on which final rules are issued under subsection (a) of this section shall be included as part of such final rules. Any such exemption granted on or after such date shall be published as a revision of such rules.".

CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 1985

HAWKINS (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 4394

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mrs. HAWKINS (for herself, Mr. DODD, and Mr. CRANSTON) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 648) making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1985, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 26, after line 3, insert the following:

CHILD SURVIVAL FUND

SEC. 119. (a) Section 104(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended—

(1) by striking out "In" at the beginning of the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "(1) In"; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2)(A) In carrying out the purposes of this subsection, the President shall promote, encourage, and undertake activities designed to deal directly with the special health needs of children and mothers. Such activities should utilize simple, available technologies which can significantly reduce childhood mortality, such as improved and expanded immunization programs, oral rehydration to combat diarrhoeal diseases, and education programs aimed at improving nutrition and sanitation and at promoting child spacing. In carrying out this paragraph, guidance shall be sought from knowledgeable health professionals from outside the agency primarily responsible for administering this part. In addition to government-to-government programs, activities pursuant to this paragraph should include support for appropriate activities of the types described in this paragraph which are carried out by international organizations (which may include international organizations receiving funds under chapter 3 of this part) and by private and voluntary organizations, and should include encouragement to other donors to support such types of activities.

"(B) In addition to amounts otherwise available for such purpose, there are authorized to be appropriated to the President $25,000,000 for use in carrying out this paragraph. Amounts appropriated under this subparagraph are authorized to remain available until expended.

"(C) Appropriations pursuant to subparagraph (B) may be referred to as the 'Child Survival Fund'.".

(b) There are appropriated to the President for necessary expenses to carry out section 104(c)(2) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 for the fiscal year 1985, $25,000,000.

● Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, today I am offering an amendment to the continuing resolution that would authorize the creation of a new child survival fund for promoting low-cost, effective health care methods that could save up to half of the 21 million children that die each year in developing countries.

Children are the unrepresented, and in many developing countries they are pushed aside to make way for grandiose development projects. With this amendment we will be taking a great step forward in improving the chances for survival for millions of children.

This amendment will create a new account in the foreign aid budget, and will fund that account at $25 million. The amendment directs that these funds are to be used to finance the use of simple, available technologies which can significantly reduce childhood mortality. We do not need expensive research programs. We can begin saving children's lives through proven programs that have a record of success. As examples of these types of programs the amendment points to expanded immunization programs, education programs aimed at improving nutrition and sanitation, and oral dehydration.

Over half of the children under the age of 5 who die in the Third World, die of dehydration due to diarrhea diseases. In the past a mother would need to transport her child to a clinic to receive the kind of care that would help a child suffering from dehydration recover. In most countries this kind of care is scarce, and often at great distances from a child in need. Now, however, a way has been discovered to take the cure to the child. A small packet of salts and sugars costing roughly 5 cents when combined with water and correctly administered will provide the child with the necessary means for a full recovery. These are the types of programs that we need and these are the types of programs that this amendment calls for.

In addition, the amendment calls on AID to seek outside advice on what programs and measures to support in order to expand the base of expertise being used to implement this legislation. Furthermore, this amendment authorizes the use of international organizations, private and voluntary organizations [PVO's] as well as government to government programs to carry out the purpose of this act.

Finally, this amendment not only authorizes the creation of the child survival fund and funds it at $25 million, but it also appropriates the funding needed to get this program underway. It is not by preference that I and the other cosponsors of this legislation resort to placing authorizing language on an appropriations bill. We have tried to do this the right way. During the foreign relations committee's markup of the foreign aid bill, I offered this amendment as an amendment to that measure and it was accepted without dissent. Unfortunately, however, a decision has been made not to bring the foreign aid bill to the floor this year—and I for one do not want to see hundreds of thousands if not millions of children needlessly die because of the legislative schedule in an election year.

This amendment has a wide measure of support. Not only has it passed the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee, but it has also passed the House when they acted on their version of the foreign aid bill. Furthermore, the House subcommittee on Foreign Operations offered it as an amendment to their version of the foreign aid appropriations bill, as well. This is an amendment supported by liberals and conservatives and by Republicans and Democrats. On some things we may disagree, but I would hope that we could agree on these basic points:

There is no child's hurt beyond our healing;
There is no child's need beyond our caring;
And no child's sorrow beyond our love.

Through this amendment we can turn pretty sounding words into effective action.●

NOTICES OF HEARINGS

SUBCOMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS AND RESERVED WATER

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the information of the Senate and the public the scheduling of a public hearing before the Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Water on Tuesday, October 2, beginning at 9 a.m. in room SD-366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

The subcommittee will receive testimony on S. 2471 and S. 2949, to improve the land ownership patterns and management of State and Federal lands in the State of Utah, and for other purposes.

Those wishing to testify or who wish to submit written statements for the hearing record should write to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, Subcommittee on Public Lands and Reserved Water, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC 20510. Due to the number of people expected to testify, witnesses will be placed in panels and oral testimony will be limited to 3 minutes. Witnesses are requested to submit 25 copies of their written statement to the subcommittee 24 hours in advance of the hearing, as required by the committee rules, and 75 copies on the day of the hearing.

For further information regarding this hearing you may wish to contact Mr. Tony Bevinetto of the subcommittee staff at 224-5161.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

SUBCOMMITTEE ON TOXIC SUBSTANCES AND ENVIRONMENTAL OVERSIGHT

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Toxic Substances and Environmental Oversight, of the Committee on Environment and Public Works, be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Monday, September 24, at 2 p.m., to hold a markup of S. 2649, the Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1984.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

NICARAGUA

● Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, Robert Leiken is a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. In recent months, Mr. Leiken is perhaps best known as the editor of Central America: Anatomy of Conflict. This book appeared at approximately the same time that the Kissinger Commission's report on Central America was issued. Many critics of the Kissinger Commission cited Mr. Leiken's book as one which offered an alternative program for Central America. I think that this view sells Mr. Leiken's proposals short, because many of these are worthy of serious consideration by policymakers who are concerned about the crisis in Central America.

Mr. Leiken has just completed an extremely important article for the New Republic on the current situation inside Nicaragua. I strongly urge my colleagues to read this article for a better understanding of recent events in Nicaragua and along its borders. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Leiken's article as well as another article by Joshua Muravchik be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the articles were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follow:

NICARAGUA'S UNTOLD STORIES

(By Robert S. Leiken)

The 72-year-old señora lives in a solid stone house constructed by the Sandinista government. Her son, German Pomares, was a founder of the Sandinista National Liberation Front (F.S.L.N.) who perished leading the final offensive against Somoza in 1979. Set off by a well-kept garden from the shacks of the cotton field workers of El Viejo, Mrs. Pomares' home appears comfortable. But inside, the mother of the nationally revered martyr sleeps on a cot covered with rags, and she hobbles through bare, unfurnished rooms. She lives on a pension equivalent to $10 a month. She has made four trips to the local hospital, but has yet to succeed in getting a doctor's appointment. Three times she has requested an audience with Comandante Tomas Borge, now the sole surviving founder of the F.S.L.N. Each time, her son's old comrade has refused to receive her.

For one who has sympathized with the Sandinistas, it is painful to look into the house they are building, but it is unwise not to. I spent ten days in Nicaragua in August, accompanied by my brother, a trade unionist from Boston. It was my sixth visit since the revolution, and my longest since 1981. I have testified in Congress against aid to the contras and have supported (and continue to support) negotiations to end the civil war in El Salvador. Yet each succeeding trip to Nicaragua drains my initial reservoir of sympathy for the Sandinistas. Last year I wrote in my introduction to a book treated by the press as the "Democratic alternative to the Kissinger Report" that the Sandinistas' "failure to preserve the revolutionary alliance with the middle class and small producers as well as sectarian political and cultural policies [had] polarized the country, led to disinvestment, falling productivity and wages, labor discontent, and an agrarian crisis." This visit convinced me that the situation is far worse than I had thought, and disabused me of some of the remaining myths about the Sandinista revolution.

Everywhere we went we confronted the disparity between these myths and the unpleasant truth. The Sandinistas blame Nicaragua's economic crisis on the contra war and U.S. economic sanctions. Yet the standard of living in Nicaragua was deteriorating well before the U.S.-backed contras turned to economic sabotage in the spring of 1983.

A December 1981 internal staff memorandum of the International Monetary Fund found that real wages had fallen 71 percent since July 1979. They have continued to decline in succeeding years. And even with the U.S. "economic boycott," over 25 percent of Nicaragua's exports still go to the United States, not much less than under Somoza. Nicaragua can no longer sell sugar at subsidized prices to the United States, but what it has lost in this market it has sold to Iran at prices above those of the world market. The war and U.S. sanctions have compounded a mess created by the Sandinistas themselves.

Nicaraguans themselves do not seem to accept Sandinista claims that Yanqui agression is responsible for the general scarcity of consumer goods. Peasants are obligated to sell their goods to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, and contend that its prices are too low to enable them to make ends meet. A large portion of the peasantry is now producing only for its own consumption, and the resulting shortages have dramatically driven up prices. The marketplace, once the bustling center of Nicaraguan life, is now a daunting experience for buyers and sellers alike. As shoppers make the rounds looking for rice, beans, milk, toilet paper, soap, or light bulbs, the shopkeepers' constant reply is "No hay" (There isn't any). For anyone unable to afford the inflated prices or without the foreign exchange to shop at the new foreign currency stores, Eastern European-style queuing is now routine.

One of the most depressing aspects of our trip was to hear from so many that their lives are worse today than they were at the time of Somoza. Before the revolution Nicaraguans ate well by Central American standards. Thanks to the country's fertile soil and its small population, even poor Nicaraguans were accustomed to beef and chicken. Now consumer goods available to the masses in other Central American countries are no longer obtainable. Barefoot children are hardly uncommon in the region, but I had never seen so many completely naked. As we encountered them, their distended stomachs displaying the telltale signs of malnutrition, Nicaraguans would bitterly recall the government slogan, "Los niños son los mimados de la revolucion" ("Children are the spoiled ones of the revolution").

The shortage of basic necessities is also breeding pervasive corruption. When we asked a rural storekeeper why he was able to sell Coca-Cola while many restaurants in Managua were not, he said that he had obtained the soft drink with a bribe. We later met Ramiro, a Coca-Cola deliveryman in León and a former member of the F.S.L.N., hitchhiking home from the city of Chinandega. He was returning from his five-hour weekly excursion after work to procure the three bottles of milk his children need. The milk cost him 150 cordobas, 30 percent of his weekly wages. (The official exchange rate is 28 cordobas to the dollar; the real, or black market, exchange rate is 250 to 1.) To get the money, he told us, he accepts bribes from some of his customers for extra cases of Coke. "This system is corrupting me against my will," he said.

Ramiro's desperate measures hardly merit censure. But others, especially high-ranking Sandinistas, are turning big profits from the scarcity. Members of a leather workers cooperative in Masaya told us that they are officially allotted 10,000 meters of leather a month; they receive between 5,000 and 7,000 meters. The cooperatives' Sandinista directors sell the remainder in Managua's Eastern Market and pocket the money. It is now a general practice for coordinators of the neighborhood Sandinista Defense committees (C.D.S.) to sell part of the provisions allotted to them by the government on the private market. The people are then informed that provisions have run out.

In the village of El Transito, two hours northwest of Managua, most of the people belonged to the C.D.S. at the outset of the revolution. Now there is but one member, the coordinator, formerly the village's leading Somocista. (The transformation of Somocistas into Sandinistas and of Sandinistas into oppositionists is very common. In every town we visited we were told that former Somoza officials are now running C.D.S.s.) The coordinator enriches himself by selling C.D.S. foodstuffs and supplies in the Eastern Market. As we passed his house, we were able to peer through the window and see him standing there in his dark glasses, isolated and reviled.

The life-styles of the new rich contrast vividly with that of the rest of the country, and with official rhetoric. A Sandinista nomenklatura has emerged. Party members shop at hard-currency stores, dine at luxury restaurants restricted to party officials, and vacation in the mansions of the Somoza dynasty, labeled "protocol houses." Vans pull up daily at government and party offices, to deliver ham, lobster, and other delicacies unavailable elsewhere. In a private state dining room, I ate a sumptuous meal with a comandante at a long table, attended by five servants. The image of the protruding stomachs of the "spoiled ones of the revolution" intruded while we consumed our lemon meringue pie.

Intellectuals and former officials claim that decadence is endemic in upper government and party echelons. A former Sandinista diplomat recounted tales of high jinks and extravagance by Sandinista officials on foreign junkets, and women state employees complained of the same sexual harassment and blackmail that is common elsewhere in Central America. The swinging Sandinista leadership cynically presents an image of revolutionary asceticism to the outside world while being addicted to the very vices that it routinely denounces in "degenerate bourgeois society."

The widespread corruption from the lowest to the highest levels of government makes it hard for Nicaraguans to accept the notion that their problems originate from abroad, or that they should endure further sacrifices "to confront the imperialist enemy." A jobless worker in the Indian town of Monimbo complained, "The C.D.S. insists that we unscrew the street lights to conserve energy in the fight against imperialism. People are falling in holes while the Sandinistas get rich on our misery. What are their sacrifices?"

Those Sandinistas who have refused to be corrupted recognize that their dreams have turned into a nightmare. One governmental official, a good friend, told me, "We have given birth to a freak. But we must keep him alive." Yet what is to be done when the freak becomes a menace to its people and neighbors? There is a general impression among those in the United States properly aghast at the C.I.A. mining of ports and U.S. support for the professional torturers among the contras that the Sandinistas are the victims, not the victimizers. Inside Nicaragua, however, the image is reversed.

The word Nicaraguans employ the most frequently to describe the Sandinista government is engaño (hoax or trick). In the city of Chinandega, we talked with transport workers from an opposition union who on their own time and with their union dues had painted road signs to make the city safer for driving. The Sandinista government took credit for the improvement. The national literacy campaign is one of the most vaunted achievements of the revolution, praised even by many of the government's critics. Yet two "graduates" of the literacy program in a peasant village told us they could not read their diplomas. We couldn't find one student from the campaign there or in the neighboring village who had learned to read. The campaign did somewhat better in the larger cities such as León, where, we were told, some had learned to read in follow-up courses. But most had forgotten the little they had learned, and at best could now only sign their name for election registration.

The most outrageous engaño occurred during Pope John Paul II's visit to Managua in March 1983. According to Sandinista accounts, the Pope's mass had been "spontaneously" interrupted by the crowd, offended by the Pope's failure to heed the request of mourning mothers who wanted him to pray for their sons killed in the battle against the contras.

Two former government officials, who are still Sandinista supporters, told us a different story. They had been appalled at the interruptions made by cadre from the Sandinista women's organization, furnished with microphones and loudspeakers. After the Pope left, the crowd departed in disgust and the Sandinista leadership was left awkwardly standing on the platform. The two officials, depressed by the spectacle, retired to a bar located next to the offices of the F.S.L.N. radio station. They overheard a group of Sandinista radio employees at an adjoining table bragging about how they had played pre-recorded tapes of crowds chanting Sandinista slogans into the sound system.

The Sandinista engaño has been most successful among the resident foreign press. Journalists familiar with the atrocities of the right-wing tyrannies of Central America wish to believe, quite understandably, that the Sandinistas present an alternative. In today's Nicaragua it is easy to confuse desire with reality. The resident press also frequently merges with the larger population of "internationalists," a term which embraces all those foreigners expressing solidarity with the Sandinistas, from Bulgarian and Cuban apparatchiks to idealist North Americans and West Europeans. It is the general feeling among Nicaraguans that the foreign press in Managua strongly sympathizes with the government, and that it is dangerous to speak openly with them. Disaffected Sandinista intellecturals, friends of friends, who poured their hearts out to me in Managua were afraid to meet with reporters from the U.S. press. We spoke with a resident of Monimbo, where a spontaneous insurrection had ignited the revolution against Somoza in February 1978. We had spent an evening together a year before with a mutual friend, yet initially he was still distrustful. He told us that the revolution had produced "many advances for the people"; two hours later, he was saying, "Monimbo appears to be sleeping, the way it was during the time of Somoza, but the people are united. One day soon they will stand up again."

One of the most common means of sustaining the myth of popular support is the Sandinistas' use of the rationing system as a lever. In numerous villages and cities, we learned that ration cards are confiscated for nonattendance at Sandinista meetings. In Masaya we were told that before one of the "Face-the-People" meetings (in which comandantes meet with local residents) the ration cards of the members of cooperatives were collected; their return was made conditional on attendance. At one such meeting in Chinandega, Ortega branded talk of inflation "a counterrevolutionary plot." A pound of beans could still be purchased for five cordobas, he claimed. A man in the audience stood up and shouted, "Comandante, here's ten cordobas. Please get me a pound of beans." According to his neighbors, he was imprisoned later that day.

Although Nicaraguans still for the most part bow to government pressure, they do so sullenly and without conviction. We witnessed two Sandinista demonstrations, one in Masaya and the other in Chinandega, two historically pro-Sandinista cities. The Chinandega rally, held at 10 on a Wednesday morning, celebrated the fifth anniversary of the literacy campaign. It was attended entirely by students obligated to go by school authorities. As they marched through the streets chanting slogans distributed to them on small pieces of paper by their Sandinista instructors, pedestrians did not so much as turn their heads. None of the presumably grateful presumably literate, people came to greet the comandante sent from Managua.

In Masaya the demonstration did not even benefit from student participation As we approached the gathering in the fading afternoon, a large group of students stood on the steps of the Catholic school. They had refused to join the demonstration because the Sandinistas had removed several of their Catholic teachers. The small group of demonstrators had glazed looks in their eyes as the last speeches wound down. I asked a campesino in attendance whether any of the comandantes had come. He answered, "I don't know. I slept through it."

The Nicaraguan populace has been saturated with Sandinista bombast which issues from radio, television, newspapers, local and national political meetings, and block committees, and which is propagated in the schools, the factories, and the cooperatives. The people resist in different ways: with the indifference and boredom we saw in Chinandega and Masaya; with a resurgence in religious feelings which has filled churches and Catholic schools; with suspiciousness and bitter humor.

Jokes and wisecracks against the Sandinistas are proliferating. The two pro-Sandinista newspapers, Barricada and Nuevo Diaro are referred to as Burricada (as in bore) and Nuevo Diablo. The F.S.L.N. is "the Somocista National Liberation Front." "Why do people prefer Tona [one of the two Nicaraguan beers]? Because the other, La Victoria, is bitter." Suspicions of the government are so deep that families of the war dead no longer believe that the government coffins shipped back from the front contain the bodies of their sons. (The coffins are sealed as a matter of policy.) People believe, improbably, that the coffins hold rocks or banana tree trunks. In Monimbo we were told that when a family and friends tried to open a coffin with a hammer and chisel, they were carried off by the police.

Nor is popular discontent restricted to these forms of passive resistance. Sympathy with the contras is becoming more open and more pervasive. I was stunned to hear peasants refer to the contras as "Los Muchachos," the boys—the admiring term used to describe the Sandinistas when they were battling the National Guard. It was apparent that many Nicaraguans are listening to the "Fifteenth of September," the contra radio station. It must be noted, however, that the contras do not operate in the areas we visited, and sympathy toward them may well be proportionate to absence of direct contact.

Draft resistance has become a mass movement in Nicaragua. The government passed legislation last September under which Nicaraguan men between the ages of 16 and 40 can be drafted for two years. When we were in Nicaragua, four hundred women gathered outside the draft board in La Paz Centro, a trading town thirty-five miles northwest of Managua, to protest forced recruitment of their sons. The demonstration was the latest in a string of anti-draft demonstrations in cities and towns throughout Nicaragua. New York Times correspondent Stephen Kinzer, one of the few resident reporters to sniff out the engano of Sandinista policies, reported on June 26 that "draft evasion is widespread," and found that high school attendance in six major provincial capitals had declined by as much as 40 percent. A student in Leon said that his high school class of forty-five had fallen to fourteen during the past year. Honduran researchers say Nicaraguan draft evaders pay 25,000 cordobas to be transported across the border, part of the money going to Nicaraguan Army officials in bribes. The demand is so great that border smugglers are now requiring groups no smaller than five. Draft resistance strikes a powerful blow at the myth of widespread popular support for the government. Young people have historically been the mainstay of Sandinista support.

Perhaps the most illuminating political event in the five years of Sandinista rule was a rally held for opposition presidential candidate Arturo Cruz in Chinandega on August 5. On that Sunday morning, Sandinista chicanery, censored domestic and lackadaisical international press coverage, and the growing vigor of the opposition converged.

Chinandega, a city of approximately 60,000, was historically the heart of Sandinista organizing efforts and support. These efforts radiated out to the surrounding cotton and sugar fields, to the country's two largest sugar refineries nearby, to the stevedores at Corinto, Nicaragua's largest port, and down to León, another center of anti-Somoza resistance. One would have expected that here the opposition would be weakest, the government strongest.

The Chinandega demonstration was the last series of six held in support of Cruz. Each rally had been larger than the last. The organizers were denied access to Sandinista-controlled TV stations. They were able to place an ad on the one local non-Sandinista radio station, but they relied chiefly on two vehicles with loudspeakers, and on word-of-mouth. Two days before the rally three "angels," as members of the state security are commonly known, called on the organizers of the demonstration and accused them of being C.I.A. agents. The turbas divinas, "divine mobs" of Sandinista supporters, circled their houses at night beating sticks against cans and chanting until the small hours of the morning. (Somoza's version of the turbas—the Nicolasa—used to employ the very same method against the opposition.) Meanwhile, Sandinista newspapers and television branded the opposition as consisting of contras and agents of American imperialism, and announced that further "aggressions" by them would not be permitted. Local authorities implied that the demonstration would be declared illegal. The day before the rally, Daniel Ortega, the head of the Sandinista government and the Sandinista presidential candidate, spoke to two hundred youths in El Viejo, a village three miles away. El Viejo's residents later claimed that the youths had been incited against the demonstration's leaders.

Fearing an attack by the turbas, organizers did not put up the banners or placards until early on the morning of the demonstration. But as they were working, fifty turbas burst into the soccer field, tearing down the banners and dispersing the organizers. They returned later during the day to try to repair the damage.

We spoke with two organizers—middle-class, professional women who had belonged to the F.S.L.N. before the revolution. (According to one, "the F.S.L.N. says that the opposition is Somocista. But most of the old Somocistas are working with the government. The opposition has remained the same. It is the F.S.L.N. that has changed.") They told us that after the turbas' nighttime serenading, they went to complain to the offices of the party representative, the chief of police, and the chief of state security, and to the Sandinistas. They were assured that the turbas would be controlled and that the demonstration would not be obstructed. After the early-morning attack, the two women went to the house of the local party leader. The door was open, and they entered. In the next room they heard the turbas informing him of the success of their mission.

There is no question that many who wished to go to the Cruz rally stayed at home. On the day of the rally, local authorities impeded traffic from outlying areas into Chinandega. As Cruz marched through the city, many people opened their doors, gave him the "V" for victory sign, and then ducked back into their homes to avoid the everpresent eyes of the C.D.S. One woman said she did not go to the demonnstration because she lived too close to the Sandinista youth office. She told of others who received threatening phone calls. Two weeks after the demonstration, a gas station attendant in Managua told us he had gone to the rally and that three friends who had accompanied him were in jail.

As might be expected, estimates of the turnout vary. Opposition figures soared as high as 20,000; local newsmen said 7,000. Given Sandinista efforts to reduce attendance, even 7,000 seems an impressive number, especially since three months before, the F.S.L.N. only managed to get 2,500 to Chinandega for the country's principal May Day rally. NBC taped the entire Cruz demonstration. Should this tape ever be shown publicly, experts will be able to make an accurate judgment about the number of demonstrators. When I viewed the tape it was evident that these thousands of demonstrators were hardly "bourgeoisie," as the Sandinistas claimed. They were overwhelmingly workers, peasants, and young people. I learned later that workers had hired their own trucks to come from the San Antonio Refinery and from the port of Corinto. They chanted slogans like "El frente y Somoza son la misma cosa." ("The Sandinistas and Somoza are the same thing.")

When Cruz began to speak, dozens of turbas armed with sticks, stones, and machetes surrounded the field. They came in on what appeared to be army trucks chanting, "Power to the people." They proceeded to break the windows and puncture the tires of demonstrators' cars. The police seemed to make no serious effort to restrain them. When the turbas attacked the demonstrators themselves, opposition youths dispersed, only to return wielding their own sticks and stones. Outnumbered, the turbas were routed.

The almost complete absence of foreign and domestic press coverage enabled Sandinista officials to characterize the demonstration their own way. We encountered a Sandinista official drunk at midday on the streets of El Viejo. He told us that the demonstration had taken place at the private home of a bourgeoisie and was attended only by a handful of plutocrats. In Managua, the Sandinistas told us that there had been several hundred demonstrators. The following day the Nicaraguan press carried no mention of the events except for one photograph in the official newspaper Barricada which purported to show the turbas attacked by "fascist" demonstrators. La Prensa had devoted several articles and photographs to the demonstration and the clashes, but these were all censored, and the paper did not appear. This was the very day that Daniel Ortega had announced the lifting of press censorship.

The demonstrations for Cruz's candidacy tested the popular mood and the prospects for "the first free elections in Nicaragua," as the Sandinistas' slogan puts it. Among the conditions that Cruz and his supporters have laid down as indispensable for participation are guarantees of freedoms of movement, assembly, and equal access to the press and television; sufficient time to campaign; international observers; and, most importantly, guarantees that if he won the election he would be allowed to take office. What happened at Chinandega strongly suggests that neither a genuine election nor a genuine campaign can take place.

Chinandega also exposed the Sandinistas' electoral stratagem. Their decision to hold elections in November was based on a rudimentary political calculation. They judged that the external legitimacy provided by elections would more than compensate for their internal cost. They knew that power does not often change hands in Central America through elections. Somoza's elections had proven that, and the Sandinistas are in a far better position to control elections than Somoza ever was.

Yet their calculations were wrong on two counts. First, they failed to account for the Nicaraguan people. High-level Sandinista officals to whom I have spoken seem to live, along with their international supporters, in a dream world. They deem that the "anti-imperialist sentiments" of the Nicaraguan people allow them to bear any sacrifice even when their "anti-imperialist" leaders bear none. They receive favorable reports from lower-level cadre whose jobs depends on the perception of success. The Sandinistas knew that after five years of enforced political paralysis, the opposition was poorly organized, divided, and amateurish. The spontaneous popular reception for Cruz took them by surprise. Second, they failed to recognize the degree to which they have alienated progressive opinion in Latin America and Western Europe. Cruz's recent highly successful trip to Costa Rica, Venezuela, and Colombia, and his support from European Social Democrats like Spanish Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, has confounded the F.S.L.N.'s electoral plans.

Thus the Sandinistas find themselves in a quandary. Will they back down and permit Cruz to run under reasonable conditions, or will they go ahead with a discredited election? Thus far at least, the Sandinistas seem unwilling to pay the price of submitting their rule to a popular test. One Sandinista official, whom I have always considered a moderate, told me privately that they would prefer a U.S. intervention because it would "vastly accelerate the Latin American revolution against U.S. imperialism." He told me that the Nicaraguan Army would immediately invade Honduras and Costa Rica and be greeted as "liberators" by the people.

One can only hope that cooler Sandinista heads will prevail. Authentic elections may be the last chance to avert full-scale civil war. If democratic channels cannot be opened, the civilian opposition will be forced to link up with the armed opposition—which is exactly what happened in the 1970s in El Salvador after fraudulent elections. The United States, which has a monstrous record in Nicaragua, can do something to help. What is needed now most urgently is a bipartisan effort in support of authentic elections in Nicaragua.

As we pulled out of Managua in the fading light of a Sunday afternoon, we found ourselves directly behind an army convoy made up of about twenty vehicles. But unlike the army convoys I have seen in El Salvador, Honduras, and elsewhere, it would not permit traffic to pass. A large vehicle with a blinking light occupied the left lane, forcing vehicles coming toward us off the road. A soldier with a machine gun was poised on the rear truck. It took us four hours to cover the fifty miles to León. It was a grueling microcosm of Nicaragua today: the Sandinistas in the "vanguard" preventing the normal flow of traffic, whether out of real fear, paranoia, or bullying. Behind them the rest of the population followed, inconvenienced, irritated, and enduring another pointless "sacrifice" for the Sandinistas' militarism. Our inconvenience was only four hours: the Nicaraguan people experience this twenty-four hours a day. Their patience has worn thin.

Labor Under Siege

In the last several years, a number of union friends of mine have returned from Sandinista-sponsored tours of Nicaragua with enthusiastic reports of the achievements of the revolution. I visited Nicaragua myself this summer, meeting with members of both the official Sandinista labor federation and the independent unions. I didn't expect to discover a workers' paradise in this underdeveloped and crisis-ridden region, or to see workers running the factories. But I did hope to find signs of progress toward empowering the workers and peasants. Instead, I saw a labor movement battling a "Socialist" government which resists worker demands with tactics ranging from state-controlled unions, to spurious arrests and violent goon squads.

In the 1970s labor was united against the Somoza regime, and workers expected that it would remain united to rebuild the country in the aftermath of Somoza's fall. But after assuming power, the Sandinistas sought a large measure of control over the workers by enrolling all Nicaraguan unions in the Central Sandinista de Trabajadores (C.S.T.). In 1980 the C.S.T. joined the World Federation of Trade Unions, headquartered in Prague. "The F.S.L.N. wanted to impose a central union, not build one," one opposition labor leader told me.

When centralizing efforts failed, the Sandinistas used state power to penalize unions unwilling to affiliate with them, to organize disruptive factions, and ultimately to jail opposition union leaders. I was told of death threats, beatings, police raid on union headquarters, military conscription of union dissidents, and blacklisting. Opposition leaders are now reluctant to use the recently restored right to strike for fear of being charged with "economic sabotage" and "abetting imperialism."

I talked with truckers from the port city of Corinto who had voted to disaffiliate their local from C.S.T. and to join the independent C.U.S., which is associated with the A.F.L.-C.I.O. through the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Soon thereafter, the local's office was attacked by police and turbas. Later some had their drivers' licenses revoked, and a half-dozen union leaders were jailed. In another incident a leader of the other independent union, the C.T.N., said he had been beaten and his nose broken by turbas at the Managua airport in full view of military and civil police.

The Sandinistas have also alienated workers in their own unions, which has led to increasing numbers of wildcat strikes. Several years ago, when the Sandinistas nationalized the German Pomares sugar works, they ousted the independent union. Then, to ensure a docile new leadership, they stacked the vote by trucking in illiterate cane cutters. This summer workers at the refinery defied their leaders: they struck after the union allowed management to cut back worker access to the company store's superior goods and low prices.

While we were in Managua there was a wildcat sit-in at the government-owned Victoria Brewery. Truck drivers there earn 3,000 cordobas a month. Rents average 1,000 a month, and a pair of pants costs 1,000. One deliveryman told me, "We've had the same salaries for the last five years and now hunger has made us explode." The Victoria workers knew that to return to work without a contract can spell defeat. Forced to go back on the job, they effected a slowdown as a way to sustain their leverage.

The official F.S.L.N. newspaper, Barricada, carried a single article on the Victoria "labor dispute." It quoted Sandinista union leaders as saying that they offered "full support to the workers," but also said that they were urging them to return to work immediately. In contast, La Prensa carred a front-page picture of 200 Coca-Cola drivers parading their trucks in solidarity with the Victoria workers. I was able to confirm La Prensa's report that solidarity brigades were sent by the competing brewery Tona, La Milca fruit punch, Pepsi-Cola, and Standard Steel. Several of these unions also have announced impending strikes.

The dissident labor leaders I met were plainspoken, accustomed to dealing with concrete facts. The C.S.T. official I spoke with talked grandly about how the Sandinistas reorganized Nicaragua's tiny, undeveloped labor unions "by industrial branch." Yet he was at a loss to explain why they had abolished the Nicaraguan equivalent of the U.S. National Labor Relations Board (Tribunales de Trabajo).

He often contradicted what the workers had told me. The workers at the San Antonio sugar refinery said that they had launched a wildcat strike last February to uphold a wage agreement reached between workers and management. According to the workers, the labor minister, backed by the C.S.T. leadership, disallowed the labor contract because its wages exceeded government guidelines. The C.S.T. official claimed that the labor minister had rejected the contract because its wages were too low, and even credited the C.S.T. with leading the strike to raise wages. He went on to dismiss the Victoria wildcatters as "backward" and "disobedient." He saw his role not as a representative of the workers, but as their "intermediary" with the employer.

Numerous dissident union leaders described their situation as closely resembling that of the Solidarity movement. One leader, comparing Nicaragua to Poland, told me: "We are both small countries and have suffered may invasions. We both experience long lines and scarcity while many of our products are shipped off to the Soviet bloc. We are Catholic countries with close ties between unions and the church. We live under regimes where citizens can be jailed at will. And both governments brand independent unions 'anti-Socialist agents of imperialism.'" Listening, I found myself wishing that some of my fellow union activists had come with me to Nicaragua. They would have been as shocked and disappointed at the repressiveness of this "government of workers and peasants" as I was.—SAM LEIKEN.

THE CRUZ ALTERNATIVE

(By Joshua Muravchik)

The last best hope for a peaceful and humane resolution to Nicaragua's recent agonies may be slipping away. The hope arises from the government's plan to hold national elections on November 4 and the unprecedented cooperation, in response to that plan, that has been achieved among various elements of the opposition.

Three centrist political parties, two labor federations, and the organization representing businessmen and professionals banded together to form the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinator, known as the "Coordinadora." It chose Arturo Cruz as its presidential candidate, and announced it would not participate in the elections unless the government consented to a "national dialogue" about the terms of the elections and their aftermath.

The Sandinista government originally refused this demand, citing one of the Coordinadora's conditions for the talks: that representatives of the anti-Sandinista guerrillas also be included. But in August that demand was dropped. Both prinicpal rebel groups—the Frente Democratico Nicaragüense (F.D.N.), and the Alianza Revolucionario Democrático (ARDE) have pledged to lay down their arms if an agreement is reached through the dialogue.

Shorn of the demand for including the rebels in the national dialogue, the nine-point program of the Coordinadora is so manifestly reasonable that the Sandinista government has had trouble justifying its resistance. But thus far it has shown no signs of moving toward an agreement; indeed, it has underscored its tough stance by depriving the three parties that belong to the Coordinadora of their legal standing as political parties.

But the opposition believes that the last word is yet to be heard, and Cruz and his colleagues are hoping to bring international pressure to bear on the Sandinistas. They recently visited five other Latin American countries and were received by the President of each. They are also looking for support from the United States and from Europe. Their immediate demand is for a postponement of the elections so that fair terms can be negotiated.

The Coordinadora program rests on the simple premise that there are elections and there are "elections." It embodies two goals. The first is to win assurances that the elections themselves will be fair and free. The second, more far-reaching, goal is summed-up by Cruz in the phrase, "respect for the results of the election."

To secure the first, Cruz and his colleagues are calling for international oversight of the elections by either the O.A.S. or the Contadora group, or by representatives of the Socialist International or other Latin American states agreeable to both the opposition and the Sandinistas. They have requested that all polling places be organized so that citizens do not have to cast their ballots, as Cruz puts it, "under the eyes and ears of the so-called 'Committees for the Defense of the Revolution,'" the Sandinistas' internal surveillance network. In addition, the Coordinadora seeks guarantees of freedom of expression, information, and movement; an end to censorship of the press, freedom of assembly; and equal access to the airwaves.

The Coordinadora's second set of conditions focuses on what will follow the elections and poses perhaps an even more important test of the Sandinistas' willingness to share power with the Nicaraguan people. "Basically," says Cruz, "it's the separation of party and state. What if the opposition wins the elections? We have to be sure that we have the capacity to govern. If you have the army as it is now, an instrument of the Sandinistas, how can you expect that?" Cruz is referring to the fact that Nicaragua's overgrown army is officially the army of the Sandinista Party. If Cruz is elected President, will the army then belong to the opposition? an analogous situation applies in other crucial institutions such as the militia, the police, and television.

In a fair election, the Sandinistas might find Cruz a formidable adversary. Against him they would have difficulty sustaining the argument that opposition to them is tantamount to "counterrevolution" and the posthumous restoration of Somocismo. Cruz himself served two prison terms under the Somozas, and was one of a group of prominent citizens, called "The Twelve," whose public alliance with the Sandinistas was crucial to the overthrow of Somoza. He served as head of the Central Bank during the early months of the revolutionary government. After Alfonso Robelo and Violeta Chamorro, the two original non-Sandinista members of the revolutionary junta, resigned from it in protest, Cruz accepted a seat on it in their place, thereby demonstrating his willingness to walk the extra mile with the Sandinistas. That was something he demonstrated a second time by agreeing to come to Washington as ambassador. For most of a year he labored to secure U.S. acceptance of the revolution even while his own differences with the Sandinista government were widening.

The Coordinadora's platform aims not at repealing the revolution, but at fulfilling its original promises. Cruz says: "We want the revolution to really go to the three parameters on which it is predicated—nonalignment, mixed economy, and pluralism."

The touchstone of Cruz's policy of nonalignment would be a strong focus on relations with the rest of Central America. He twits the Sandinistas for pursuing an ideological foreign policy that has engaged Nicaragua in unlikely causes ("It was not until the Sandinistas came to power that we heard of the Frente Polisario in North Africa"), and that has left it as entangled as ever in its relations with the United States. He would "demilitarize Nicaragua completely," leaving only a police force. "For the protection of the country against aggression, we would do as the Costa Ricans do, invoke the Rio Treaty of collective security."

The Coordinadora's case is a good one, and it deserves more attention from North Americans than it has gotten. Not only does it offer a basis for bringing peace to Nicaragua, it also can be the basis for a cease-fire in the battle within the United States over policy toward Nicaragua. Indeed, one reason for the lack of attention to the Coordinadora's struggle may be that elections are approaching in North America too, and all political factions here are looking to sharpen their differences with their opponents. The Coordinadora's stance offers neither hawks nor doves much that they can disagree with or disagree about.

But the United States now has a moment of opportunity in Nicaragua, and it will not wait for the U.S. elections to pass. Those who have been advocating a more conciliatory U.S. policy toward Nicaragua ought to wield the stick, pressing the Sandinistas to meet the demands of the Coordinadora. Those who have supported aid to the contra rebels ought to proffer the carrot—an end to that support if the Sandinistas agree to genuine dialogue resulting in free elections.

The Sandinistas now have power, the kind that grows out of the barrel of a gun. In the end, they may decline to put it at risk. But they can't have it both ways. An election without the participation of the Coordinadora would be an empty exercise conferring no legitimacy on its predictable victors. This is a message that the Sandinistas ought to be hearing over and again from those in Latin America, Western Europe, and the United States, of whatever political stripe, who hope for a peaceful resolution to Nicaragua's turmoils.●

A TRIBUTE TO THE NATIONAL PARK SERVICE AND THE FRIENDS OF THE HAMILTON GRANGE NATIONAL MEMORIAL

● Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to pay special tribute to the National Park Service Manhattan Sites Unit and the Friends of Hamilton Grange for their splendid efforts to restore and preserve the Hamilton Grange National Memorial.

This building is the only national memorial to one of the founders of our country, Alexander Hamilton. As the creator of America's banking system, it is all the more fitting that Alexander Hamilton be honored in the financial center of the world, New York City.

The National Park Service and the Friends of Hamilton Grange have done a splendid job preserving the Grange's beautiful architecture and gardens. Their efforts will be appreciated by generations to come.

The Grange, named in honor of the ancestral seat of the Hamilton family in Scotland, was cherished by Alexander Hamilton as a place of refuge. Cultivating the gardens was a particular source of pleasure for Hamilton.

As a national historic monument, the Grange provides its visitors with a beautiful place to contemplate and appreciate Alexander Hamilton's manifold contributions to the political and economic development of the United States. The National Park Service and the Friends of Hamilton Grange have done the Nation a great service by preserving this important part of our heritage.

I am certain my colleages will join with me in extending best wishes and warmest thanks to these individuals from the private sector and Government for their commitment to this most worthy cause.●

PEACE CORPS ANNIVERSARY

● Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I would like to note today that nearly 23 years ago, the legislative existence of the Peace Corps was assured when the U.S. Congress passed the Peace Corps Act September 22, 1961. Looking back, passage of the act capped off several months of excitement and frenetic activity on the part of Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver and his dedicated staff as they worked to bring President Kennedy's vision of a corps of willing Americans serving the poorer peoples of the world to life.

The ideals of Peace Corps seized this Nation's imagination; it was a novel concept that Americans of all ages would spend 2 years of their lives in a completely different culture, speaking a new language, working with the rural and urban poor of Latin America, Africa, Asia, and the Pacific to help them improve their lives. The first volunteers were already at work in their assignments in Ghana, West Africa, when Congress passed the legislation that outlined the three goals of Peace Corps—goals which made it apparent that Peace Corps would not only benefit the peoples of the Third World, but the people of our Nation as well.

The goals are:

First, to help the people of interested countries and areas in meeting their needs for trained manpower;

Second, to help promote a better understanding of Americans on the part of the peoples served;

Third, to help promote a better understanding of other peoples on the part of Americans.

The concept of understanding between peoples has been illustrated in the many aspects of Peace Corps, including through historical bipartisan support for the activities of this person-to-person program. It continues to flourish under the current administration, where volunteering for Peace Corps is one way to answer the President's call to perpetuate the American spirit of voluntarism.

That call does not cease when a volunteer returns to the United States; in fact, more than 100,000 returned Peace Corps volunteers are contributing their skills and insights to their jobs, families and communities across the Nation.

I salute Peace Corps, the 100,000 Americans who have served as volunteers, and Members of Congress past and present who have supported this fine example of American humanitarianism and concern for the developing nations of the world.●

EXTENSION OF THE FEDERAL CRIME INSURANCE PROGRAM

● Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I strongly support the current effort to extend the Federal Crime Insurance Program for 1 year through September 30, 1985. This program is important to urban centers throughout the Nation by enabling homeowners and small businesses who would otherwise be unable to secure affordable crime insurance to remain in their neighborhoods. In its 14-year history, the program has issued up to 85,000 policies a year in some 30 States. There are currently 23 States and the District of Columbia in the program.

The Federal Crime Insurance Program has worked especially well in Massachusetts. In my State there are 1,419 active policies—93 percent of these are residential policies. By coincidence, 93 percent of the total is within the greater Boston Metropolitan area. In Massachusetts there is $9.5 million worth of coverage for homes and businesses and 803 different agents handling FCIP policies in the State.

The need for continuation of this Federal insurance program is not only demonstrated by this participation, but also by the broad support for this legislation throughout the country. Groups who have expressed strong support for continuation of authority for the FCIP include:

National Urban League.
National Conference of Mayors.
National Neighborhood Coalition.
Congressional Hispanic Caucus.
National Association of Retail Druggists.
National Grocers Association.
National Shoe Retailers Association.
Jewelers of America.
National Association of Retail Dealers of America.
American Insurance Association.

We need to assist our urban communities where the fear of crime, and uncompensated financial loss from crime, create special problems that cannot adequately be met by the private sector alone. Studies show that without the Federal Crime Insurance Program, reasonably priced crime insurance would be unavailable in many areas suffering the most serious crime burden. The availability of crime insurance is a key factor in the decision of a homeowner or business to remain or locate in these communities.

I urge the Senate to support the reauthorization of the Federal Crime Insurance Program, because it is a proven method of combating urban deterioration and because it provides compensation for crime victims. I note that the administration endorses significantly larger Federal efforts embodied in the current victims of crime legislation and the Urban Enterprise Zone legislation that are directed toward the same goals. Any serious commitment to dealing with the effects of crime includes support for continuation of the Federal Insurance Program.

An editorial that appeared in the Washington Post this past weekend persuasively explains the need for a 1-year extension of the program. I ask that the editorial may be printed in the RECORD.

The editorial follows:

PROTECTION FOR THE INNER CITY

How do the Mom and Pop grocery, the corner candy store and the neighborhood diner survive in high-crime inner-city areas where they are needed? How can the residents of these areas, who have little in the way of material goods, protect themselves from the predators who would steal even the oldest television and the most broken-down furniture? These people have security problems, certainly, but until 1970, they had another problem, as well: in such high-risk areas they could not buy insurance at an affordable rate. Many could not purchase it at all.

Fourteen years ago, Congress addressed this problem by creating the Federal Crime Insurance Program. Under the program, the federal government issues policies covering homeowners and businesses against property losses from burglary and robbery up to a maximum of $10,000 for residences and $15,000 for commercial establishments. This crime insurance is available only in areas where adequate private insurance cannot be obtained. Until recently, the premiums paid for this coverage were supplemented with funds from another federal insurance program—one offering protection against riot damage—in which large surpluses had accumulated. But Congress ended the riot insurance program in 1983, so the federal government will soon have to borrow if it is to continue to subsidize the crime insurance program. The cost is minimal—about $12 million a year—but for the 50,000 policyholders, the program helps to make survival in the inner city possible.

This small but important federal program is due to expire at the end of the month, and the administration has opposed continuation. Such a position runs directly counter to the administration's professed concern for victims of crime and support for urban enterprise zones in the inner city. It may be pennywise to save $12 million, but in this case it would certainly be pound-foolish. The House Appropriations Committee has added to the continuing resolution a one-year extension of the insurance plan, and the Senate Appropriations Committee will consider the matter on Monday. This program deserves support.●

FLINT BIG BROTHERS 40TH ANNIVERSARY

● Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, on October 2, the Big Brothers of Greater Flint will celebrate their 40th anniversary. Since the beginning of the organization, over 11,000 boys have been helped to achieve their fullest potential. During this same time, over 6,000 adults have given one of the most precious gifts, their time, to the development of the boys in the Big Brother program.

Big Brothers of Greater Flint has grown with the times. It was originally founded as outgrowth of efforts to help children placed on probation by the courts. The tireless efforts of Father Sheridan of Flint, and the enthusiasm of the entire community—the Mott Foundation, the Optimist Club, YMCA, Catholic Social Services and the police department and many others—forged a partnership between Flint and the Big Brothers that has lasted and strengthened since 1944.

They began a relationship with the United Way in the 1950's which expanded their scope and involvement in the community. They are now a permanent, self-sustaining part of Greater Flint, and the dependence of the community on the Big Brothers has increased. The dramatic rise in households led by single parents, unable to devote as much time or attention as they wish their children, has underscored the need for the Big Brother program. In Flint more than 21 percent of all families are headed by single parents, and there are over 200 little brothers waiting to begin the program.

The Big Brothers of Greater Flint are to be congratulated for the 40 years of service in the community. They have touched the lives of 11,000 boys, and made those lives richer, more successful, and happier; and that is a reward of incalculable value for all of the volunteers in the organization. I would like to extend my thanks and my wishes for another 40 years of success to the Big Brothers of Greater Flint.●

APPROPRIATIONS FOR UNREQUESTED C-12's

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I rise, once again, to bring to the attention of this body and, hopefully, to put a stop to a practice that has gone on here in the Congress far too many years.

Since fiscal year 1978 the Congress has authorized and appropriated funds to procure the C-12 aircraft for the military services that were not—I repeat, not—requested by the administration. Since fiscal year 1980 alone, Congress has appropriated $65.5 million and procured 46 more C-12 aircraft than the administration had requested. In this year alone, fiscal year 1985, the House Armed Services Committee has proposed $36 million and 18 more aircraft than requested.

Now, as bad as that may sound, this procurement has been awarded on a sole-source basis with no competition since fiscal year 1973. Only the original procurement of 34 aircraft was competed.

Since that time, literally hundreds of these aircraft have been procured on a sole-source basis from Beech Aircraft, in spite of the fact that the services have not even requested them.

Now, I am not saying it is a bad aircraft. It is a very fine aircraft and, as a matter of fact, it was the winner in a recent competitive lease/buy agreement run by the Air Force. But what I do question is, first off, the basic need for adding these aircraft that have not been requested by the services and then, second, if there is a valid requirement to have them, why is it done on a competitive basis.

Well, I have been railing against this practice for years to no avail, and in anticipation of the probability it would recur this year, I have gone to the trouble of specifically asking every military leader who has appeared before our committee in any capacity, if they had any intention of requesting C-12 aircraft this year. The answer in every instance was no. The Navy, however, did come in with a request for 12 aircraft which the Senate Armed Services Committee does not recommend in our bill. However, true to form, the House Armed Services Committee has not only approved the Navy request but added an additional 18 aircraft and $36 million more than was, again, requested by the service.

To say that I feel strongly about this particular issue is a gross understatement. Some of my colleagues may recall that Senator HOWARD METZENBAUM and I filed a lawsuit in February 1978 in Federal district court to try to block the purchase of 22 aircraft being secured, without competitive bids, by the Navy at that time. We got thrown out of court, not because of the merits of the case, but because we did not have any standing before that court, and the Navy went on and purchased those aircraft, again on a sole-source basis from Beech Aircraft.

Since that time I have watched, year after year, the House Armed Services Committee authorize and the Appropriations Committee appropriate funds for literally hundreds of unrequested aircraft and, sad to say, that position was also supported here in the Senate.

Now supporters of this practice would have you believe that purchasing C-12's from a sole source is no different than purchasing an F-15 or any other aircraft since the contract was originally completed back in 1973. However, I must point out that we do not have four or five companies in this country building F-15's as we do with aircraft that are very competitive with the C-12.

Now, I have reached the limits of my patience in this matter, and I fully intend to publicly embarrass any Members who persist in this shameless practice of authorizing aircraft and funds for their purchase, for whatever reasons, on a sole-source basis. I remind those Members of Congress who are continually carping about the Department of Defense's $7,000 coffee makers and $400 hammers, all the waste of the taxpayer's money is not being caused exclusively by the Pentagon. Much of it is being done right here in Congress. It is high time we put a stop to this terrible waste of the taxpayer's money and that is exactly what I intend to do.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD various figures in connection with this matter.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[2] SASC.

Thus far (between fiscal year 1980 and fiscal year 1984) the Congress has appropriated $65.3 million more than requested to procure C-12 aircraft.

In fiscal year 1985 alone, the HASC has proposed $36 million more than requested for C-12 procurement.

Only the original fiscal year 1973 procurement was competitive. All subsequent procurements have been sole source to Beech Aircraft.

Total funds appropriated 1973-84 equal $230.8 million; this year (1985) equals $68 million; total, $298.8 million.

SENATE PROCEDURE ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, a number of Senators have inquired about the situation in the Senate on a religious holiday that begins at sundown on Wednesday of this week and ends at sundown on Thursday of this week.

I am told that it has been the policy and practice of the Senate in the past to remain in session during this religious holiday but not to have record votes between those times. Therefore, it is the policy of the leadership on this side to continue that policy once more on Wednesday of this week from sundown, approximately 6 p.m., until Thursday at sundown, approximately 6 p.m., when there will be no record votes.

This will be an exception to the leadership rule on this side that the votes are not stacked from one day to the other. We may stack votes on Wednesday, to occur on Thursday after sundown. But there will be no record votes between Wednesday sundown and Thursday sundown.

We will be in session on Friday. We will be in session on Thursday night. We will be in session during the day on Thursday, but there will be no record votes during the day.

Mr. President, I make that announcement so that Members will be aware of the arrangements for this occasion.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding about when sundown occurs on Wednesday and Thursday, I should like to amend my statement so that it will say from 6 o'clock on Wednesday until 6 o'clock on Thursday. That may not exactly coincide with sundown, but I think the value of exactness will prevail in this case.

S. 3017—DOMESTIC FOOD ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1984

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, on behalf of Senators DOLE and SPECTER, I send a bill to the desk and ask for first reading.

May I say, Mr. President, before the Chair proceeds, that what I am doing now is preceding at their request under the provisions of rule XIV, and after first reading I intend to object to further proceedings beyond first reading in order to actuate provisions of the rule.

The objection, of course, has nothing to do with the substance of the bill but rather to comply with the requirements of the rule.

Now, Mr. President, I ask for first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3017) to improve and extend certain domestic food assistance programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask for second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. BAKER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

ORDERS FOR TUESDAY

RECESS UNTIL 10 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until 10 a.m. tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER FOR RECOGNITION OF CERTAIN SENATORS TOMORROW AND ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow, after the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, three Senators be recognized on special orders of not to exceed 15 minutes, as follows: Senators PROXMIRE, SPECTER, and GOLDWATER.

I further ask unanimous consent that after the execution of the special orders, there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business until 11:15 a.m. in which statements will be limited to 5 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRASSLEY). Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, on tomorrow the Senate will convene at 10 a.m. After the recognition of the two leaders under the standing order, three Senators will be recognized on special orders, to be followed by a period for the transaction of routine morning business until 11:15 a.m.

At 11:15 a.m., Mr. President, the Senate will resume consideration of the highway bill. At 12 noon, Mr. President, it is anticipated the Senate will once more recess until 2 p.m. in order to accommodate Senators who wish to attend caucuses on both sides of the aisle. It is hoped, Mr. President, that we can finish the highway bill tomorrow and begin consideration once more of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill.

RECESS UNTIL 10 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, no Senator is now seeking recognition. I move, in accordance with the order previously entered, that the Senate now stand in recess until the hour of 10 a.m. on tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and, at 6:04 p.m., the Senate recessed until tomorrow, Tuesday, September 25, 1984, at 10 a.m.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

NATIONAL HISTORY DAY

HON. CHARLES McC. MATHIAS, JR.

OF MARYLAND

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, there has been a great deal of activity throughout our country focusing on the improvement of education. This is a healthy sign for our Nation as we identify and recognize outstanding educational programs.

I am particularly pleased that the University of Maryland played host to an especially innovative and creative education program in June—National History Day.

We are all familiar with the science fairs held throughout our country but how many of us are aware of similar activities for students interested in history? When National History Day began 10 years ago, only 100 students were involved, all from one State. The project has grown tremendously so that this year over 150,000 students from 43 States participated. Fifteen hundred winners progressed to the culminating event at the University of Maryland. Awards were given for historical papers, media presentations, group performances, and group projects. It is reassuring that we have so many students throughout the country absorbed in the study of history and engaging in projects to make history a living reality for others. The next generation, if it knows and appreciates the lessons of the past, will be well girded to confront the difficult decisions the future poses.

Dr. Lois Scharf, the executive director of National History Day and the moving force for the event, received outstanding cooperation from numerous Marylanders and from the University of Maryland. Before the awards ceremony at the University of Maryland, almost 4,500 students, parents, teachers, and observers heard an address by the Assistant Secretary of Education for Educational Research and Improvement, Donald J. Senese. Mr. Senese, a doctor of philosophy in history, addressed the assembly on the topic "The Importance of the Study of History for Students." I commend his remarks to my colleagues and request that they be included in the RECORD.

The remarks follow:

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE STUDY OF HISTORY FOR STUDENTS

(By Dr. Donald J. Senese)

I am pleased to be here speaking to all of you here on the occasion of the events for "National History Day."

I know all of you are anxiously awaiting the announcement of winners. Let me say to all of you—you are all winners because by your participation in this contest you have enhanced your knowledge of history, demonstrated your proficiency in a crucial area of study, and realized the importance of history to the education of all.

I always loved history. I received my bachelors degree, masters degree and doctorate degree in the field of history. It has been an exciting adventure and my background in history has been a tremendous asset in preparing me for a variety of posts I have held since graduating—a college professor of history, a legistative aide to a U.S. Representative and a U.S. Senator, a member of a legislative research committee on Capitol Hill, and presently an Assistant Secretary for Educational Research and Improvement, U.S. Education Department, appointed by President Reagan.

I will keep you only a short while but I did want to make some comments on the importance of history. Some of you may have become interested in your project because of encouragement from a parent or parents, the inspiration of a history teacher, or a desire to know more about a certain historical event or personage. I hope whatever future career any of you may pursue that you will keep an interest in history.

Let me start with a basic question: Why does one study or write history? First of all, the study of history satisfies a quest of knowledge which is part of our human existence. The quest for knowledge for its own sake is one that underlies all branches of knowldege—science, philosophy and religion. It is especially an important trait in our own Western civilization; we are fundamentally a historicist civilization.

A second reason relates to the benefit of history. We have all heard of the saying or cliche history repeats itself. Well, we know history never repeats itself exactly. (We also know that "History never repeats itself but historians repeat each other").

Although history does not repeat itself or provide models for future action, history is still relevant for the future. The fact is history enables us to understand the present, thus assisting us to make wise decisions for the future—wiser decisions than if we were ignorant of the past. George Santayana, that wise philosopher, has told us: "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

History tells us about our country and nation; it provides us important information about the builders of our nation and heritage. It tells us about our culture and the culture of other people. It tells us the importance that politics, economic theories, and religious beliefs have played in our society and the societies of other people. It tells us about the qualities of great people in history and the qualities of those who were not so great. It reveals to us the heroes and villains, the winners and the losers, the champions and the charlatans. It can help all of us get a deeper understanding of our civilization, our country, and even ourselves as we explore the past.

One of the questions and myths I heard as a young person may be familiar to all of you: what can you do with a history major? Then the standard response: You can teach and since there are not too many teaching jobs, you might as well go into another field.

Teaching history is only one possibility. History is a great training for many professions—law, journalism, business, public relations and government work.

Why is history such a great training program?

The methods of the historian provides great training. These methods develop people with broad general knowledge who can place problems in a broad historical content and search for cause and effect among a great number of variables. The historian or student of history learns how to: Collect, analyze, interpret and organize useful data; write with grammatical accuracy and clarity; prepare well-documented reports; present an argument and debate it logically and succinctly; exercise originality and creativity in using research material; make judgments and deal with complexity; reduce a large quantity of raw data into manageable concepts that allow for meaningful thought.

History offers you an opportunity to put order in your life and to get more meaning out of life.

Historical events are always upon us and we who love history can better understand these events.

We celebrated less than two weeks ago the fortieth anniversary of D-Day—the great invasion of the coast of Normandy by leaders of the Free World which led to the defeat of one form of totalitarianism which had swept Europe. It showed the world a Free World standing for a moral idea and that when challenged, it can produce. For the historian it was a dramatic picture—freedom's mighty armada in a storming sea. D-Day helped to secure an important principle—that your parents, and yourselves and others like yourselves would live under freedom for at least another generation.

We are also celebrating this year the 350th anniversary of the creation of the first counties in the New World in Virginia. Jamestown was founded in 1607 and in 1634 in order to bring government closer to the people counties were created. Presently 48 of our 50 states use counties as the major form of a political subdivision. This was another step for local government and freedom in our country.

I recently attended a meeting sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities preparing for another great event in 1992—the five hundredth anniversary of Christopher Columbus discovering America. We all know what a great change that discovery brought to the history of the world.

We can ponder these great events—the discovery of America which opened up this great continent where all of us reside, the establishment of counties in Virginia which helped to provide a system where people had a meaningful voice in government policy, and D-Day where the tide of totalitarianism was rolled back so that the light of freedom could continue to burn for all of us.

Those of you who have an interest and love for history have a special appreciation for these events. Keep up your fine work. I wish all of you the best in your academic work. All of us are part of a historical process and the work all of you have done in this contest gives you a great role in making history come alive for yourself and for others.●

BAD TIMES FOR THE WOOD PRODUCTS INDUSTRY

HON. SID MORRISON

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. MORRISON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, the wood products industry in the Pacific Northwest has been through some harrowing times; 1981 and 1982 were among the grimmest years since the depression of the 1930's. Activity picked up in 1983, but now, again, the industry is suffering hard times. A combination of factors are contributing to this severe economic problem, which is affecting employment for tens of thousands of workers.

The Wall Street Journal, on September 18, carried an article by Patricia A. Bellew, which explains the various factors that are contributing to the woes of the forest products industry in the Northwest. This region has abundant timber resources that can serve the social and economic needs of our country forever. Mr. Speaker, the workers and the mills they depend on for jobs need our help. It's time Congress took a look at this situation and provided some measure of help for this distressed region.

NORTHWEST WOOD-PRODUCTS INDUSTRY FACES RESTRUCTURING DUE TO IMPORT COMPETITION

(By Patricia A. Bellew)

Only 12 months ago, the mill towns of the Pacific Northwest reverberated with the shriek of buzz saws as the wood-products industry emerged from a long and deep recession.

The recovery, however, was short-lived.

Within months, dozens of lumber and plywood mills again fell silent, idling thousands of workers. Now, evidence is mounting that the new slump is permanent. Stiff competition from Canadian imports and over-optimistic projections of the demand for wood products are causing a painful and far-reaching restructuring of the industry.

"This isn't a classic slump," says Michael D. Sullivan, spokesman for the Industrial Forestry Association, which represents 85 forest-products companies in the Northwest. "The housing market has recovered, demand for lumber and plywood is quite healthy, but prices remain very depressed."

MILL CLOSINGS

Weyerhaeuser Co., the Tacoma, Wash.-based forest-products giant, has closed two of its 40 lumber and plywood mills and curtailed production at one other since April. San Francisco-based Potlatch Corp. has closed three of its 17 mills and reduced output at two others. Meanwhile, many small, family-held companies are quietly closing their mills and auctioning off equipment.

"The only thing keeping a lot of companies in business is the fact that their bankers don't know how to operate sawmills," says M.J. Kuehne, executive vice president of the Northwest Independent Forest Manufacturers Association, which represents the owners of 40 sawmills. "Everyone is losing money."

Competition from Canadian wood-product manufacturers is the industry's biggest problem. Because of the availability of cheaper, government-owned timber, Canadian companies have been able to substantially undercut the prices of their U.S. competitors. Additionally, the strength of the U.S. dollar has made Canadian lumber cheaper for American builders to buy.

As a result, Canadian producers have now seized about 40% of the U.S. market for lumber and plywood, and several industry officials say the figure may climb as high as 50% by year-end.

CANADIAN EXPORTS

In 1975, for example, Canadian producers exported 5.67 billion board feet of lumber to the U.S., garnering a 19% share of the domestic market. By last year, their share had grown to 34%, and their lumber exports to U.S. markets had doubled to 11.95 billion board feet.

The plentiful supply of Canadian wood has put severe pressure on lumber and plywood prices, which have fallen 45% and 30%, respectively since 1978. "Builders are buying two-by-fours for the same price they paid in 1946," grumbles a lumberman.

In recent months, lumber and plywood manufacturers have pressed for government restrictions on imports, without success. Now, among many companies, there is a growing sense that "we are just going to have to learn to deal with a permanently smaller domestic market," says John J. Stephens, president and chief executive officer of Roseburg Lumber Co., a closely held concern in Roseburg, Ore. "We are going to have to become more competitive by lowering our costs and pushing into offshore markets."

But export markets have proven tough to crack: Foreign countries such as Japan have enacted measures to protect their wood-products industries, and most American mills aren't tooled to cut wood to the metric standards required by foreign builders.

Although small amd midsized companies have been hit hardest by the slump, signs of the downturn are also evident in segments of the Northwest's biggest forest-products concerns.

For example, Boise Cascade Corp.'s building-products business posted a loss of $3 million on sales of $679.8 million in the first six months of 1984. In the year-earlier period, that segment earned $6.6 million on sales of $595.6 million. (The company's overall performance for the first half reflected booming sales in paper and pulp products. Earnings more than doubled to $61.4 million from $28.1 million a year earlier on a 19% gain in sales to $1.95 billion from $1.64 billion.)

Boise Cascade says it has idled 15% of its lumber-manufacturing capacity and 20% of its plywood-making capacity since last year. Even so, the company's losses in its building-products business may deepen, says John R. Forrest, Boise Cascade's senior vice president of timber and wood products. "The situation may worsen because home building is already starting to slide."

Although imports have done the greatest damage to the industry, inflated expectations of the demand for wood products have also contributed to the slump.

Convinced that maturing baby boomers would make the 1980s the golden age of single-family homes, lumber and plywood makers borrowed heavily and expanded rapidly to meet the anticipated need for wood products. But high interest rates have restricted the demand for housing and the industry remains burdened with excess capacity and heavy debt.

"We have the capacity to produce 40 billion board feet of lumber, and the current market demands 37 billion board feet," says John Hampton, president of Willamina Lumber Co. in Willamina, Ore. "There are going to have to be permanent mill closures to bring things in line."

At the same time, the industry is being squeezed by higher costs for its logs and labor than those paid by its competitors in the Southeast.

Unlike the Southeastern producers, who mostly harvest logs from closely held tree farms and forests, the Pacific Northwest relies heavily on federal timeberlands for its logs. The bright economic outlook in the 1970s prompted companies to bid up the price of federal timber contracts. Now, the companies are legally bound to pay premium prices for timber for which the market value has plummeted.

RETHINKING ROLE

"A lot of companies—big and small—are seriously rethinking their role in the industry," says Delos Knight, spokesman for San Francisco-based Crown Zellerbach Corp. "The industry that survives this period is not going to look exactly like the one we see now."

Adjustment has been painful for the Northwest. The Industrial Forestry Association estimates that 50,000 jobs have been permanently lost as mills have closed or severely curtailed production. Six years ago, when the lumberjacks could hardly fell trees fast enough to satisfy an insatiable housing market, the industry employed 200,000 in the Pacific Northwest, the association estimates.

Those out of work are often unable to find new employment in a region so dependent on the wood-products industry. In Sutherlin, Ore., the town's biggest employer—Mount Mazama Plywood Co.—closed its doors in early August and idled Harold Wright, who spent 29 of his 62 years making plywood for the concern.

"This town lives on venison when the mill shuts down," says Mr. Wright. "Folks shoot some does, catch some fish, pick some berries. But when the unemployment checks stop and folks get sick of venison, they'll leave, and this place will be a ghost town."●

CANCER PROGRESS: ARE THE STATISTICS TELLING THE TRUTH?

HON. MARY ROSE OAKAR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with my colleagues an article which appeared in the September 18, 1984, edition of the New York Times. The article states that a small but growing band of distinguished analysts is challenging proclamations by Government officials and leading cancer scientists that great advances have been made in "curing" cancer patients. Some experts believe that there has been very little progress made in increasing the survival rate for victims of the biggest cancer killers.

I have recently held a hearing on breast cancer, and the evidence garnered concurs with this point of view. Breast cancer is the No. 1 killer of women in the Western World. Yet breast cancer survival statistics have not changed in half a century. What we need now is to explore more innovative methods of dealing with this dread disease. It is necessary for research grants to be given in the field of immunology since many experts believe that is where the breakthrough will come. Vaccines must be developed. Research money must be given to study nutrition's role in preventing and curing cancer. Stress factors and the role they play in contributing to this disease have to be studied. It is time for our Government to support research in other methods of dealing with cancer since the methods that are now being used have raised the survival rate very little if not at all. The medical profession must bring some fresh air into this field of research.

[From the New York Times, Sept. 18, 1984]

CANCER PROGRESS: ARE THE STATISTICS TELLING THE TRUTH?

(By Philip M. Boffey)

WASHINGTON, September 17.—A small but growing band of distinguished analysts is challenging proclamations by Government officials and leading cancer scientists that great advances have been made in "curing" cancer patients.

The analysts suggest that the highly touted gains in "survival rates" among cancer patients in recent years are partly, or perhaps even largely, a statistical mirage, caused more by changes in the way cancer is detected and defined than by any real gains in the ability of doctors to cure cancer once it is detected.

However, leaders of the nation's cancer research and treatment establishment dismiss the criticism as the undocumented assertions of analysts who do not fully understand the latest advances in the clinical detection, diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

"I think it's a bunch of nonsense," said Vincent T. DeVita Jr., director of the National Cancer Institute. "We're savings thousands of lives today that weren't saved 20 years ago. To me, that's pretty damn exciting."

SAME NUMBERS, OPPOSITE VIEWS

The disagreement over the extent of progress in treating and curing cancer reflects several factors. In some cases, analysts are looking at different sets of numbers that show differing degrees of progress in curing cancer. In other cases, they are looking at the same set of numbers but disagree on whether the apparent gains are "real" or caused by statistical artifacts. And in many cases they are now even arguing over the numbers but are simply reaching opposite subjective judgments as to whether the apparent gains in survival rates are encouraging or disappointing.

The issue has implications for patients, doctors and planners of national cancer policy. If cancer treatments are less effective than officially portrayed, some doctors and patients might have second thoughts about the wisdom of resorting to treatments with high risk or severe side effects and little prospect of success. Moreover, if treatment results have shown little improvement over time, policy planners might want to emphasize other approaches to curbing cancer, such as more extensive efforts to find and eliminate the causes of cancer so as to prevent the disease before it needs to be treated.

SMALL GROUP OF SKEPTICS

Those skeptical of the degree of progress appear to be a relatively small group of analysts bearing distinguished credentials. Among them are these men:

Richard Peto, a British epidemiologist who is the author of a major study of cancer mortality for the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment, contends, "There has been disappointingly little progress in curative treatment since the middle of this century." He said in a telephone interview that he saw no reason to expect substantial progress for the rest of this century.

John Cairns, a cancer analyst at the Harvard School of Public Health, likens the statistical advances reported by official cancer agencies and leading cancer scientists to the inflated and meaningless body counts used to measure progress in the Vietnam War. "Their body counts are way too high," he said in an interview. "It's like interrogating a general in Saigon. They come up with statistics that don't add up."

John C. Bailar 3d, a Harvard biostatistician who is the statistical consultant for The New England Journal of Medicine, one of the nation's most prestigious medical journals, said he "tends to agree that survival rates for cancer victims are not going up very much" and that statistical measures of those gains often turn out to be "rubber numbers" by which people are "very seriously misled."

Haydn Bush, director of a regional cancer center in London, Ontario, wrote in the September issue of Science 84, a magazine published by the American Association for the Advancement of Science. "We're not curing much more cancer than we were a generation ago. There has been very little progress on the biggest cancer killers of the last 25 years."

These views stand in sharp variance to the tone of Dr. DeVita's assertion, in a major speech two years ago, that "the best kept secret today is that cancers, as a group, are among the most curable of chronic diseases."

Dr. DeVita also said that "good solid data" from the most up-to-date registry of cancer patients—the Cancer Institute program that monitors the annual occurrence of cancer in some 10 percent of the population—shows a steady increase in survival rates in recent years, over a short period of time in which it is unlikely that changes in reporting practices would have an enormous effect.

However, the monitoring data cannot yet definitively answer the key questions raised by the skeptics. Earl S. Pollack, chief of the biometry branch at the cancer institute, said the program had not yet followed patients long enough to be able to tell whether the survival rates were being inflated simply because early detection was starting the survival clock sooner. He also said he knew of no documentation of the extent to which the survival statistics might be improving because doctors today were finding more and more tumors that would not kill people. But on a subjective basis, Dr. Pollack said he believed such statistical artifacts were not the main driving force behind better survival rates.

"My feeling is that most of these survival changes are real," he said. "They reflect real improvements in the handling of the disease."●

CONSENSUS ON EQUAL ACCESS GUIDELINES

HON. DON BONKER

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. BONKER. Mr. Speaker, the equal access amendment was given final and overwhelming approval by Congress on July 25. However, since this legislation to prevent discrimination against certain student groups was modified before it was attached to the math-science bill, there is no congressional report on the bill to explain the provisions of the measure.

A number of private groups, representing civil libertarians, religious groups, teachers, and school administrators have reached an agreement on practical guidelines which will facilitate the interpretation of this new law (Public Law 98-377). This consensus statement has broad backing and is presented in a question-answer format. As the House sponsor of the Equal Access Act, I believe it is consistent with congressional intent. I recommend the guidelines, reprinted below, to anyone having questions about the equal access amendment.

THE EQUAL ACCESS ACT GUIDELINES

The organizations listed below were all involved with The Equal Access Act in the 98th Congress. Some actively supported the bill, others remained publicly neutral, and some opposed the bill. All are deeply interested in seeing the equal access concept implemented in the secondary schools of America in accordance with law.

After consideration over a two year period, The Equal Access Act became law on August 11, 1984, passing the Senate 88-11 and the House 337-77. The final version reflects the usual give and take of the legislative process. This brief explanation of the Act is designed to help school administrators, teachers and student groups who must live under the Act in real school situations to understand what this new legislation means. For your convenience The Equal Access Act (Title VIII of Public Law 98-377) follows: [—the act—]

The congressional intent in passing The Equal Access Act was to develop legislation that strikes a balance between the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise and Free Speech Clauses of the First Amendment, so that secondary school students may organize meetings. While Congress recognized the constitutional prohibition against state-prescribed religious activities in public schools, it also believed that student religious speech should not be excised from the school environment. At the same time, Congress affirmed that it is local school boards and administrators who have the right and responsibility to implement equal access in conformity with the Act.

The title—The Equal Access Act—explains the essential thrust of the Act. There are three basic precepts.

The first basic precept is equal treatment. If a public secondary school permits student groups to meet for student-initiated activity not directly related to the school curriculum, it is required to treat all such student groups equally. This means the school cannot discriminate against any students conducting such meetings "on the basis of the religious, political, philosophical, or other content of the speech at such meetings." Sec. 802(a). This language was used to make it clear that religious speech was to receive equal treatment, not preferred treatment.

The second basic precept is protection of student-initiated and student-led meetings. With respect to religious activities in the public schools, the Supreme Court has held unconstitutional state-initiated and state-sponsored religious activities. (This Act leaves the "school prayer" decisions undisturbed.) The Court has not ruled on student-initiated and student-led religious activities that are not state-sponsored but merely given equal access with other noncurriculum related student activities.

The third basic precept is preservation of local control. The Act does not limit the authority of the school to maintain order and discipline or to protect the well-being of students and faculty. It only marginally limits other authority to make policy about student meetings.

While the Act does not specifically cover every situation, an understanding of the three basic precepts of the Act should be a sufficient guide in addressing most situations.

Here are some questions and answers which indicate how the Act is intended to work:

Question. What is meant by "limited open forum"? Sec. 802(a) and (b).

Answer. A limited open forum is created when a secondary school provides an opportunity during "noninstructional time" for students to organize meetings to discuss subject matter not directly related to the school curriculum and permits those meetings on school premises. The forum created is said to be "limited" because it is only the school's own students who can take advantage of the open forum. Outsiders are not granted any affirmative right of access by The Equal Access Act.

Question. Does a school have to provide a limited open forum for students?

Answer. No. The school or local policymaking body has the exclusive authority to determine whether it will create or maintain a limited open forum. If a school has a limited open forum, it may not discriminate against a student group because of the content of its speech. If a school does not have a limited open forum, the request of a single student group to organize a meeting or a club which is not directly related to the school curriculum requires the school to determine whether it wants to create such a forum.

Question. Do meetings of curriculum related student groups trigger implementation of The Equal Access Act?

Answer. No. Only allowing meetings of noncurriculum related student groups triggers implementation of the Act.

Question. What is meant by "noncurriculum related student groups"? Sec. 802(b).

Answer. A noncurriculum related student group is a group or club which is interested in a subject matter not directly related to the school curriculum. The math club, the Spanish club, the drama club, and athletic teams would normally be curriculum related. A religious club, political club or service club would be considered noncurriculum related.

Question. Who determines which student groups are curriculum related?

Answer. Local school authorities. However, a school cannot defeat the intent of The Equal Access Act by some all-encompassing definition that arbitrarily results in all but one or a few student clubs being defined as curriculum related.

Question. When can noncurriculum related student groups meet?

Answer. A limited open forum requiring equal access may be established during "noninstructional time." Sec. 802(b). The Act defines "noninstructional time" as time set aside by the school before actual classroom instruction begins or after actual classroom instruction ends. Sec. 803(4). It includes time before an individual student's school day begins or after it ends even though other students may be receiving classroom instruction at the time because of split sessions or staggered school schedules.

Question. Can noncurriculum related student groups meet during the school day?

Answer. The Act is silent on whether a limited open forum requiring equal access may be established for student clubs during the instructional day. The constitutionality of equal access for religious clubs during the school day is currently being litigated in the Federal courts.

Question. May a school establish regulations for meetings which take place in its limited open forum?

Answer. Yes. The Act does not take away a school's authority to establish time, place and manner regulations for its limited open forum. For example, it may establish a reasonable time period on any one school day, a combination of days, or all school days. It may assign the rooms in which student groups can meet. It can enforce order and discipline in the meetings. The key is that regulations must be uniform and nondiscriminatory.

Q. Can a school require a minimum number of students to form a noncurriculum related club?

A. No. Care must be exercised that the school not discriminate against numerically small student groups which wish to establish a club by setting a requirement of a minimum number of students to form a club. Sec. 802(d)(6). The key is to be flexible in dealing with small student groups and to accommodate student groups that want to meet. For example, one teacher could monitor several small student groups meeting in a large room.

Q. Should a school formulate a written policy for the operation of a limited open forum?

A. If a school decides to create a limited open forum or if such a forum already exists, it is strongly recommended that a uniform set of regulations be drawn up as soon as possible and be made available to administrators, teachers, students and parents. The importance of having such a document will become clearly evident if the school either denies a student group the opportunity to meet or is forced to withdraw that opportunity. When the rules are known in advance, general acceptance is easier to obtain.

Q. What does "student-initiated" mean? Sec. 802(c)(1).

A. "Student-initiated" is one of the key precepts of the Act. It means the students themselves are seeking permission to meet and will direct and control the meeting. It means that neither a teacher or other employee of the school nor the school itself is initiating the meeting. Further, nonschool persons may not direct, conduct or control student meetings. Sec. 802(2)(5). This does not mean that students are forbidden to seek advice from nonschool persons.

Q. May teachers be present during student meetings?

A. Yes, but there are limitations. For insurance purposes or by local policy or state law, teachers are commonly required to be present during student meetings. However, the Act permits teachers only a custodial role (acting in an emergency or to preserve order). In order to avoid any taint of state sponsorship of religion, teachers or employees are to be present at student religious meetings only in a "nonparticipatory capacity." Sec. 802(c)(3). The Act also prohibits teachers or other school officials from influencing the form or content of any prayer or other religious activity. Sec. 802(d)(1).

Q. May outsiders attend a student meeting?

A. Yes, if invited by the students, unless the school adopts a policy barring all "nonschool persons." However, the nonschool persons cannot, in fact, be running the student group. "Nonschool persons may not direct, conduct, control, or regularly attend activities of student groups." Sec. 802(c)(5). A school may decide not to permit any outside resource people to attend any club meetings, or it may determine how many times during a school year an outside resource person may attend any club meetings, or it may limit the number of outside resource people who may attend a single meeting.

Q. Can a teacher or other school employee be required to be present at a student meeting if that person does not share the beliefs of the students?

A. No. Sec. 802(d)(4) provides that no school employee can be required to attend a meeting "if the content of the speech at the meeting is contrary to the beliefs" of that employee. However, if a school establishes a limited open forum, it is responsible for supplying a monitor for every student group meeting if a monitor is required.

Q. What is meant by "no sponsorship of the meeting by the school, the government, or its agents or employees"? Sec. 802(c)(2).

A. Neither the school, the government, or its agents or employees may promote, lead, or participate in a noncurriculum related student meeting. Sec. 803(2). The assignment of a teacher or other employee to a meeting for custodial purposes (that is, in a nonparticipatory capacity) is not considered sponsorship. Sec. 803(2). Expenditure of public funds for the incidental cost of providing the space (including heat and light) for student-initiated meetings is not considered sponsorship. Sec. 802(d)(3).

Q. If a school pays a teacher for monitoring a student religious club, does that constitute "sponsorship"?

A. Congressional debate apparently took for granted that payment of a school-required monitor for any club was an "incidental cost of providing the space for student-initiated meetings." Sec. 803(d)(3). However, there are some who maintain that schools may not expend money to monitor religious clubs in view of the Establishment Clause.

Q. Does the use of school media to announce meetings of noncurriculum related student groups constitute "sponsorship" of those meetings?

A. The Act does not directly address this issue. If only information about all meetings is given, the use of school media—the public address system, the school paper, the official bulletin board—would not constitute sponsorship of meetings. However, schools should be cautioned that the Act forbids their promotion of these meetings, and the singling out of one or a few of them for special attention would be promoting them. Because a basic precept of the Act is student-initiation, each noncurriculum related student group is responsible for its own promotion.

Q. Do school authorities retain disciplinary control?

A. Yes. The Act emphasizes the "authority of the school, its agents or employees, to maintain order and discipline on school premises, to protect the well-being of students and faculty, and to assure that attendance of students at meetings is voluntary." Sec. 802(f). Furthermore, the school must provide that "the meeting does not materially and substantially interfere with the orderly conduct of educational activities within the school." Sec. 802(c)(4). These two provisions do not authorize a school to prohibit certain student groups from meeting because of administrative inconvenience or speculative harm. For example, a group cannot be barred at a particular school because a similar student group at a different school has generated difficulties.

Q. What about groups which wish to advocate or discuss changes in existing law?

A. Students who wish to discuss controversial social and legal issues such as the rights of the unborn, drinking age, the draft and alternative lifestyles may not be barred on the basis of the content of their speech. However, the school must not sanction meetings in which unlawful conduct occurs. Sec. 802(d)(5).

Q. What if some students object to other students meeting?

A. The rights of a lawful, orderly student group to meet are not dependent upon the fact that other students may object to the ideas expressed. All students enjoy free speech constitutional guarantees. It is the school's responsibility to maintain discipline in order that all student groups be afforded an equal opportunity to meet peacefully without harassment. The school must not allow a "hecklers' veto."

Q. What about so-called "hate" groups?

A. Student groups which are unlawful, Sec. 802(d)(5), or which materially and substantially interfere with the orderly conduct of educational activities, Sec. 802(c)(4), can be excluded. However, a student group cannot be denied equal access because its ideas are unpopular. Freedom of speech includes ideas the majority may find repugnant. A "time, place and manner" regulation stating that all group meetings during the limited open forum must be open to all students without regard to race, religion or national origin could forestall the request for meeting space by some groups.

Q. What may a school do to make it clear that it is not promoting, endorsing or otherwise sponsoring noncurriculum related student groups?

A. A school may distribute a disclaimer which plainly states that in affording such student groups an opportunity to meet it is merely making its physical facilities available, nothing more.

Q. What happens if a school violates The Equal Access Act?

A. The law contemplates a judicial remedy. An aggrieved person could bring suit in a U.S. district court to compel the school to observe the law. No cutoff of federal funds is involved. Sec. 802(e). Moreover, indications are that the Department of Education has no plans to issue regulations with respect to this Act.

Q. What about situations not addressed in this exploration?

CAPTAIN MICHAEL SANDLOFER OF NORTH WIND UNDERSEA INSTITUTE RECEIVES ROLEX AWARD

HON. MARIO BIAGGI

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. BIAGGI. Mr. Speaker, at this time I would like to extend my congratulations to Capt. Michael Sandlofer of the North Wind Undersea Institute in City Island, NY, for being named an honorable mention recipient of the prestigious Rolex Award for Enterprise, 1984. This award will be given to Captain Sandlofer at a ceremony in New York City on Wednesday, September 26, 1984.

Captain Sandlofer was accorded this honor because of his development of an ingenious rescue kit for saving stranded whales and other marine mammals. This rescue kit—which has been successfully tested and used on several occasions—represents a revolutionary development in the effort to protect and save endangered marine mammals.

Once again Michael and the North Wind Undersea Institute has made me proud—because the Institute is based in my home district and they have done so much to preserve the beauty and vitality of the ocean environment. This most recent honor, being the recipient of an award that is respected worldwide, is yet another example of the type of international recognition this small Institute and Bronx native Captain Sandlofer, have received. The accomplishments of the Institute through the efforts of Captain Sandlofer and a small group of dedicated men and women, have added significantly to the development of new techniques, equipment, and ideas relative to the safe treatment and handling of stranded marine mammals.

The Rolex Awards for Enterprise were first awarded in 1976, and this marks the third time that they will be awarded. These awards are given to individuals chosen from among literally thousands of applicants from around the world. Five main awards are given out, along with 20 honorable mention awards. The fact that Captain Sandlofer was chosen to receive an honorable mention award is reflective of the importance and significance of his work in the field of mammal safety. It is also a reflection of both his and the members of the Institute's Whale Rescue Team's hard work and dedication.

Director and curator of the North Wind Undersea Institute, Captain Sandlofer is a professional deep sea diver and an innovative designer of whale rescue gear. He is a graduate of the Divers Institute of Technology in Seattle, WA; he attended the Massachusetts Maritime Academy; and is a lifelong member of Explorers' Club. Michael was a former member of the U.S. Navy Counter-Insurgency Team during the Vietnam war. He was awarded the Purple Heart, the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry and the Navy Commendation Ribbon. Captain Sandlofer has dedicated his life to the preservation of the ocean environment and has been a leader in the area of whale preservation. His being given a Rolex Award for his efforts in developing revolutionary gear to safely transport and handle stranded marine mammals is justly deserved. His untiring efforts in this area have led to the development of rescue gear that has recently been tested successfully in different situations. His methods and equipment are fast becoming internationally accepted as the best and safest way to handle and transport stranded marine mammals.

In April 1981, Captain Sandlofer participated in the dramatic rescue of a 25-foot, 12½ ton sperm whale, that was found stranded in the waters of Fire Island, NY. Michael used his sensitivity to and knowledge of whales to actually hand feed the whale, affectionately nicknamed "Physty." He spent considerable time actually in the water feeding and petting the beleaguered mammal. Eventually "Physty" was guided safely out to the open sea.

That emotional and uplifting experience inspired Michael to pursue new and more efficient ways to treat and handle stranded marine mammals. In March of this year Captain Sandlofer led an expedition to Baja, Mexico to test new whale-saving gear in the lagoons off Baja. Every year the gray whale migrates from the Bering Strait to these treacherous lagoons to have their young. Swift tides often leave wayward youngsters stranded and stuck on the shorelines of Baja. With no way for their mothers to reach them, these stranded calves die of starvation, sunburn, or from predators.

The primary objective of the March mission was to test and perfect special equipment designed by Michael and members of the North Wind Undersea Institute, to help scientists work with the thousands of whales that become hopelessly stranded all over the world. The mission was a success as the gear proved to be both an efficient and valuable way to transport and handle stranded whales. This was the first concerted effort to directly aid beached whales. The revolutionary new gear, which includes a whale harness, enables rescuers to gently guide a stranded whale into deep water without drowning or severely harming the creature.

Last month, Captain Sandlofer and the North Wind Undersea Institute again made history when their special equipment was used to transport two young manatees from the Miami Seaquarium to the wild habitat of Florida's Homosassa River. This special equipment was developed by Michael and the Institute exclusively to rescue stranded and entrapped marine mammals. Dr. Jess White of the Miami Seaquarium was aware of Sandlofer's development of equipment to humanely handle and transport stranded marine mammals, and he requested Captain Sandlofer's help in transporting the manatees. Captain Sandlofer sent down the North Wind sea sled, designed in the Bronx, to help insure the success of the manatee release effort. The sea sled carried a combined 1-ton weight of man and manatees against a strong current up the river where the manatees were eased into the waters of their new home.

This successful effort proved that Captain Sandlofer's equipment works and works well. It is Captain Sandlofer's hope that this initial success will lead to the development and production of this whale rescue gear for use around the world in saving stranded marine mammals. Already internationally recognized for his innovative and revolutionary accomplishments in this area, Captain Sandlofer has received many urgent letters from countries like New Zealand, Canada, and Australia requesting his rescue equipment.

It is my hope that Captain Sandlofer will continue to receive more international recognition and that this recognition will lead to the widespread use of his equipment. Captain Sandlofer should be proud of his accomplishments—especially this most recent honor. As a recipient of the 1984 honorable mention Rolex Award for Enterprise, Captain Sandlofer stands among an elite group of individuals who have distinguished themselves for their innovation, hard work, dedication, and industriousness. I can't think of a more deserving recipient than Captain Michael Sandlofer. His efforts to provide assistance and aid to suffering whales and marine mammals and his success in developing gear to safely handle these creatures is a clear indication that man can approach the environment in a constructive, positive and beneficial way.●

TRIBUTE TO ERIK McMILLAN

HON. WILLIAM (BILL) CLAY

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to share with my colleagues a recent newspaper story about a very special, promising young athlete, Erik McMillan. The son of one time most valuable football Cardinal, Ernie McMillan, Erik McMillan is a star freshman defensive end with the University of Missouri. Erik is also a former student intern in my office and it is with special pleasure that I offer him my warmest congratulations on his outstanding athlete achievement, and I wish him every continued success in all his future endeavors.

[From the St. Louis Post Dispatch]

ERIK McMILLAN HAD HEAD START

(By Mike Smith)

With apologies to Bubba Smith and Deacon Jones, some of Ernie McMillan's toughest workouts were against a 6-year-old at Heman Park in University City.

That's where the 275-pound All Pro tackle would sharpen his pass-blocking technique in his spare time away from the football Cardinals, with the rush being provided by the only athlete at his disposal 6-year-old son Erik.

"If you have to baby sit them, you might as well put them to work, too," Ernie said. "He had some jitterbug moves. I had to chase him all over the park."

McMillan laughs and allows that the sessions did more for strenthening the bond between father and son than they did for his blocking form.

But for Erik McMillan, those days in the park would start him toward a promising football career at the University of Missouri. After sitting out a redshirt season in 1983, the freshman defensive end was the leading tackler in the season opener at Illinois and returned an interception 42 yards against Wisconsin.

At 6 feet 3 inches and 190 pounds, Erik McMillan's physique bears no resemblance to that of his 6-foot-6 father.

"He's not a fat fellow like his dad," Ernie said. "He's a much better athlete than I ever thought about being."

But the diligence that was McMillan's hallmark in a 15-year pro career, one that began with his being drafted out of Illinois in the 13th round, is manifest in his son.

"I look like my mom, but I act like my dad," Erik said. "He would get pretty mean on the field. He was a different person out there."

Erik's recollections of his father's pro career are vivid because Ernie involved his son in his work. When Erik wasn't pass-rushing in the park or riding his bicycle alongside his jogging father, he was tagging along to workouts at Busch Stadium or socializing at other players' houses after Big Red games.

Ernie would even sneak his son into strategy sessions with Jim Hanifan, who then coached the offensive line. "It was good for Jim," Ernie said. "It made him watch his language."

Jamie Rivers, Tom Banks, Bob Reynolds and Dan Dierdorf were among Erik's boyhood chums.

"They took me in like I was their kid," Erik recalled. "I'd throw the football around with them and try on their shoulder pads. They used to tell me, 'You ought to be just like your dad. He's a good guy.' "

"Everybody was always asking me, 'What's it like to be a football player's son?' But I always looked at it like, 'That's just my dad's job.' When he said he was going to a game, it was like he was going to the office. His office was Busch Stadium."

While father and son concur that Erik was not pushed into football, this is not to suggest Ernie was an impassive observer. Erik recalls playing a junior league game at Heman Park when he was 10 or 11 with his father watching from the sidelines.

"I was the tailback and they called a play where my job was to kick out the end," Erik said. "I was kind of scared to hit and I just brushed the guy.

"My dad saw it and he just started talking real loud in front of my teammates: "You want to play this game? If you do, you've got to get in there and get after people. If you don't want to play, let's go home." I was embarrassed, but I was fired up, too.

"The coach called the same play and this time I put the end on his back. My dad got real loud again, like, 'Yeah, get fierce.' I think I learned my lesson that day."

When Erik's parents divorced in 1977, he moved with his mother from University City to the Washington suburb of Silver Springs, Md. He was a defensive end and kicker in high school who was good enough to attract feelers from Pittsburgh and Ohio State. But only Wichita State asked him to make an official recruiting visit.

That was before his cousin, former Missouri standout Howard Richards, hit town with the Dallas Cowboys for a game against the Washington Redskins in late 1982.

"He called me to see if I wanted tickets to the game and wanted to know how recruiting was going," McMillian said. "When I told him my only visit was to Wichita State he said, 'Naw, man, you don't want to go there. I'll get back to you.' "

Richards contacted a Missouri recruiter on the East Coast who arranged for McMillan to receive an official visit to Mizzou on the last weekend before letters of intent would be signed.

"It was a natural for me—my cousin played there, I was from St. Louis, there was a good communications school," said McMillan, who aspires to a career as a television producer. "Missouri had everything I needed to be a better person the rest of my life."

"If Missouri didn't ask me, I guess I was going to Wichita. When (Mizzou) called back and said, 'You've been accepted,' I was real pumped up."

He's been pumping ever since—weights, that is, Missouri coaches saw striking similarities between McMillan and another defensive end with good bloodlines, Bobby Bell, son of the Hall of Fame linebacker.

Bell also arrived at Mizzou as a lightweight with exceptional all-around abilities, which influenced the decision that McMillan would remain an end despite his free safety's body. He has been timed at 4.45 seconds in the 40-yard dash, and Coach Warren Powers said McMillan is the best athlete on the Mizzou defense.

"They tell me all the time, 'We've got to get some meat on those bones,'" McMillan said. "We'll be at the dining hall and they'll say, 'Here, Erik, have another steak.'"

"I'm drinking these special milkshakes, washing cookies down with them, but it's not doing anything except making me go to the bathroom."

Self-doubts because of his weight vanished in his debut at Illinois, when he made seven unassisted tackles and was one of only two Tigers given positive grades for their performance.

"I showed I can fly to the ball and make some hits," McMillan said. "If I can't beat a person physically, I'll beat them with determination. I just won't let anybody knock me down. That's something I come by naturally."

His inspiration is 120 miles away, working as a talent scout for the football Cardinals. Ernie has been unable to attend a Missouri game because of work commitments, but Erik has leaned hard on him for advice after the Tigers lost their first two games.

"I get discouraged, but all I have to do is call my dad," Erik said. "He talked to me Sunday about what a great story it would be if we turned this thing around. He told me we had to work hard, that we had to bear down on fundamentals and technique, and that we couldn't hang our heads.

"If I can't talk to him, I keep his picture around. I still idolize him. That's my No. 1 man right there."●

TARENTUM HONORS FIVE FOR SERVICE

HON. JOSEPH M. GAYDOS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker, it is always gratifying to learn of communities which take the time to single out for public recognition those individuals who give unstintingly of their time and talent in the service to others.

One such municipality is the Borough of Tarentum in the 20th Congressional District of Pennsylvania. On Friday, October 5, Tarentum officially will recognize the civil contributions and humanitarian work of five people. These individuals will be the honored guests at the borough's fifth annual "Community Awards Night."

Those to be cited are:

Dr. Hymel Fishkin, a native of Tarentum who began the practice of medicine in 1933. Dr. Fishkin is a veteran, his military career spanning 29 years from 1932–61, including 5 years of active duty during World War II. He has been on the staff of Allegheny Valley Hospital since 1933.

Dr. Joseph A. Borrison, also a Tarentum native, who worked for Tarentum Ice & Coal. Co. to earn money for his schooling. Dr. Borrison, active in many medical organizations, has been at Allegheny Valley Hospital since 1938 and currently is the senior surgeon there.

Elizabeth Meniz Schottenheimer, another borough native, who was graduated from the Pittsburgh College of Pharmacy at the University of Pittsburgh in 1929. A year later she opened her own pharmacy which is still operating.

Nick Petrishen, an area resident who established a business branch in Tarentum in 1955. An automobile dealer, Mr. Petrishen's establishment employs 35 people and he is active in community affairs.

The Rev. Harry C. Coleman, Jr., born in Beaver Falls, PA, has been pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church in Tarentum since December 15, 1961. He has been extremely active in youth work, teaching gym, bowling, and basketball at the First Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh Boys' Club for 30 years; serving as a counselor at the church's boys camp for 21 years and as a staff member on the church's summer camp youth conference for 29 years.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the Congress of the United States to join me in recognizing the work of these outstanding citizens and in congratulating the Borough of Tarentum upon its practice of paying tribute to its own.●

MUCH NEEDS TO BE DONE BY FDA

HON. MARY ROSE OAKAR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Ms. OAKAR. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, September 17, 1984, the Washington Post published an article about the conclusion of a 22-year study on the merit of prescription drugs. As a result of that study, more than 1,100 drugs were taken off the market for lack of proof of effectiveness. Among these were highly profitable drugs for treating obesity. Some 2,300 drugs were declared effective, but with any questionable claims removed from their original labels. About 7,000 drugs similar to those reviewed were changed or removed from the market as a result of this project.

But much remains to be done. There are many over-the-counter drugs that need immediate review. A study is needed for nonprescription products. As a result of a hearing I held last year, I sponsored H.R. 4675 to require that over-the-counter diet drugs containing phenylpropanolamine [PPA] be dispensed only upon prescription. Many experts and victims testified about the ineffectiveness and danger of these preparations. The witnesses, who were victims, had suffered strokes due to a spike in blood pressure caused by PPA [phenylpropanolamine]. The FDA is still reviewing this drug. The proposed review completion date was for some time in 1977, but at this point, will not be completed before the year 2000. For this reason, I felt compelled to introduce this legislation in order for this dangerous combination to be supervised by medical doctors. In addition, this o-t-c preparation is being used and abused by teenagers. The molecular structure is similar to amphetamines—"speed" in street talk. These pills, according to an article in the September 8 issue of the Washington Post, are the most abused drug taken by teenage girls.

Diet pills containing PPA is just one example on an o-t-c drug that is unsafe and/or ineffective. These drugs are easily accessible and are very often abused. Over-the-counter drugs often contain addictive substances and are used for that purpose rather than for curative purposes. I believe that a study to determine the efficacy and/or safety of over-the-counter drugs should be initiated by the Food and Drug Administration immediately.

The study should not take years but months. FDA should be protecting the consumer. Unless they properly study the most easily accessible drugs, they are not doing their job.●

ON THE BASE BROADENING TAX ACT OF 1984

HON. FORTNEY H. (PETE) STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I am today introducing legislation that would raise over $150 billion through the next 5 fiscal years by making a temporary across-the-board reduction in all existing tax expenditures. This legislation is quite simply a reverse surtax. Rather than raise revenue by merely increasing taxes, the legislation seeks to raise revenue from those who make the greatest use of the tax preferences in the Code. While many of the tax preferences in the Code serve useful economic purposes, in a time of high deficits it seems only fair that we look first at cutting back excessive use of existing tax preferences. While there is no doubt that some tax preferences, such as the deduction for charitable contributions, are much more socially useful than others, such as the provision for Foreign Sales Corporation tax reductions, the political realities are such that it is more likely that we can cut them all across-the-board rather than picking and choosing between all the various competing political concerns.

We have heard a great deal about tax reform and there are many proposals currently pending that would simplify the Code and reduce rates. Some of these are meritorius and deserve careful consideration. A major restructuring of the Code unfortunately is not something that can be done in a short period of time; it requires careful consideration, drafting, and analysis. This is a process that is likely to take several years. The deficit crisis looms ever larger and must be faced at the earliest possible date. My legislation allows a first step toward a more broad-based tax system, while meeting the urgent need to raise additional revenue, of course, in conjunction with spending reductions.

Simply stated, my bill proposes a temporary across-the-board reduction in tax expenditures. Individual itemized deductions would be reduced by 10 percent and all other tax preferences would be reduced by 20 percent. The legislation attempts to be as broad as possible. It reduces the investment tax credit by 20 percent, stretches out depreciation periods by 20 percent, and carries this reduction through to all of the other provisions that clutter the Code, such as incentive stock options, FSC benefits, deferral of tax on income of controlled foreign corporations, disallowance of certain shipping income, IDB's and mortgage subsidy bonds, luxury cars, dividend reinvestment, intangible drilling costs and mineral and exploration costs, R&D expenses and circulation expenses, special life insurance company deductions, possessions tax credits, income of citizens living abroad, to name just a few.

The legislation is intended to be tempoary and would be in effect for what I call the "revenue enhancement years" of 1985-89. The proposal would not impact at all on the 60 percent of the American people who file a short form, since the legislation would not reduce personal exemptions or the zero bracket amount. This legislation is clearly not a solution to the complexity of the Code but it does raise revenue in the most equitable and broad-based manner that I can think of. With a major step taken to reduce the budget deficits, we can devote our attention to streamlining and simplifying the Code, and reducing rates.

I hope that this proposed legislation will serve as another focal point in the discussion of tax reform and deficit reduction. It is intended to be a discussion draft and I gladly solicit comments and suggestions from other Members and the public at large.●

HATS OFF TO PRESIDENT REAGAN

HON. WILLIAM S. BROOMFIELD

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. BROOMFIELD. Mr. Speaker, let me take this opportunity to call the attention of my colleagues to the President's speech at the opening session of the U.N. General Assembly. President Reagan held out the olive branch to the Soviets. I trust that they will take it. I commend our President for his message of hope and his encouraging remarks concerning peace in the world.

The President pointed out that the objectives of American foreign policy—peace in the world and the importance of human freedom—are the same values embodied in the U.N. Charter. President Reagan went on to say that our great Nation has done much in the past to promote the cause of peace. America is still devoting much effort in this quest.

Through the efforts of the United States and our allies, major progress has been made in resolving regional conflicts and disputes around the world to include Angola, Mozambique, and Namibia. American diplomatic efforts made the Camp David accord possible. This was followed by the return of the Sinai to Egypt. The United States is also involved in trying to peacefully resolve the problems in Cambodia, Cyprus, and Afghanistan. Our President restated his deep commitment to the use of negotiations, rather than the use of force, to resolve international disputes.

The President rightly stated that now, more than before, the world believes in the value of human freedom. Economic freedom and economic growth are closely linked to political freedom in our rapidly shrinking planet. Man's creative spirit must be fully utilized in order to improve life here on the Earth.

In the area of United States-Soviet relations, the President pointed out that there is no alternative to continuing and expanding negotiations with the Soviets. In the past, the United States and the Soviet Union have signed numerous agreements and accords. Our country is presently engaged in talks with Soviet negotiators in Geneva, Vienna, and Stockholm, and has agreed to upgrade our Hot-Line link with Moscow. Our Government has also extended a 10-year economic agreement with the U.S.S.R., and expanded the Consular Convention with that country. In addition, he granted the Soviets fishing rights off our coast.

President Reagan is to be praised for proposing that our two nations begin a program of ministerial exchanges, as well as exchanging observers to visit nuclear test sites and other facilities. The President also announced his willingness to have a summit meeting as long as the meeting is well prepared in advance to the meeting.

I was impressed by the President's sincere desire to move forward in building a realistic, constructive, long-term relationship with the Soviet Union. Our President has again held out his hand in an effort to improve the climate of understanding. Although I regret to say that Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko failed to applaud the President's most impressive and encouraging speech, I trust that our two countries will be able to work together in arms controls talks so that the human family can move away from the threat of nuclear war. Let us hope that our adversaries will positively respond to the overtures of our President.

Again, I congratulate the President for his vision and frankness at the United Nations today.●

AMERICANISM CONTEST

HON. NORMAN D. SHUMWAY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. SHUMWAY. Mr. Speaker, today I am proud to recognize Miss Elizabeth Morely, a young woman in the 10th grade of Oakmont High School in Roseville, CA. Elizabeth was recently awarded the honor of first place for her grade level in the U.S. Fleet Reserve Association's annual Americanism Contest for her essay entitled "Why I'm Proud to be an American."

In her essay, Elizabeth displays not only an accomplished ability in writing but, moreover, a deep, personal insight into this Nation's constitutional foundation—an insight, Mr. Speaker, which would make America's Founding Fathers proud. I am submitting a copy of Elizabeth's award winning essay for inclusion in the RECORD and recommend its reading to all.

WHY I AM PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

I am proud to be an American because of what America represents: freedom, honor, achievement, unity, peace, education, strength in laws and character, and self-government—"by the people, of the people, and for the people." America symbolizes the opportunity for people of all races, colors, nationalities, and religions to come together and to enjoy exactly the same rights and freedoms.

I am proud to live in a country that promotes free education of the masses. It is mainly through education that individuals learn about America's cultural and religious heritage. It is through education that people can learn to value and preserve their freedoms. Education is vital to promoting one's personal happiness, success, and political liberties.

I am proud that our American forefathers chose a system of government that permits private enterprise, allowing individuals to pursue any vocation or business endeavor of his own choosing without the fear of unnecessary or undue government interference (provided the business is legal!). An American may take pride in his own endeavors and enjoy the positive outcome he can create. I believe being able to reap the profits of one's own labors is a critical liberty not enjoyed everywhere in the world. The American system encourages creativity, growth and happiness in the nation more than any other system.

I am proud to be able to practice the freedom of religion—how, where, and when I choose to worship. I know that this freedom is especially precious because my own ancestors sacrificed personal comforts, wealth and even health to travel to a foreign land, America, in order to practice their religion freely. In the past wars were fought to secure such freedom, and even now conflicts are many where such freedom does not exist.

I am proud to be an American and to engage in the free pursuit of happiness. I am thankful for all the freedoms and civil liberties that Americans enjoy. I am proud to have a country based on a constitution that has served and endured more than two hundred years, even a constitution that is copied by other countries. I feel privileged to be an American and to live in such a choice country.●

McCOLLUM BLASTS LEADERSHIP FOR DROPPING BANKING BILL

HON. BILL McCOLLUM

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, late last Thursday the chairman of the House Banking Committee, the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. ST GERMAIN] sent a letter to the chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, Senator GARN, advising him that neither the Senate nor the House banking bills dealing with the matter of closing the "nonbank" bank loophole would be taken up on the floor of the House during this Congress because of a lack of time.

The banking industry is in turmoil, and it is incredible that the House leadership suddenly finds that it does not have time to take up a critical banking bill on the floor. The bill which came out of the Banking Committee before the August recess is very simple and straightforward and would not take long for the amendment process under an open rule. If there were a fear that delaying tactics might be used by its opponents, a modified closed rule to allow just appropriate key amendments would certainly be in order and could assure the use of only a reasonable amount of time.

The decision not to allow floor consideration of the loophole closing banking bill is especially hard to understand with the light schedule the House has been keeping since the August recess. Since we are coming to the end of this session within the next 2 weeks and there are a number of important bills that should be considered, a person really has to wonder about the judgment of the leadership in looking at last week when we did not work past 6 p.m. any evening and had no session on Friday and only consideration of suspension measures with no votes today. Are we really fulfilling our duties?

The banking measure is no frivolous matter. Longstanding prohibitions against interstate banking are being circumvented by every major bank that can find its way through a loophole. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency has more than 300 applications pending for new "nonbank" banks, many of them to be established in my State of Florida. The Comptroller has said that if Congress has not acted by the time it adjourns this October 4 or 5 he will start approving those 300-plus applications. It makes no sense at all to allow this development to occur and then attempt to address it after the fact. Congress should have acted long ago and should act promptly now to stop the mad dash of these large money center banks across State lines and into businesses they've been barred from over the years. It is to this end that a banking bill was passed out of the committee prior to the August recess and it is to this end that the Senate recently passed S. 2851. Of course there are some who would oppose the closing of this loophole, but they are in the distinct minority.

There are a few related issues that appear in either the House or Senate bills that should be addressed in any floor consideration, but they are straightforward and could easily be disposed of one way or the other. The House committee bill contains some minor divestiture provisions and the Senate bill goes slightly in the opposite direction by allowing banks to obtain the right to a limited underwriting of municipal securities. The Senate bill also contains a provision sanctioning the concept of regional interstate banking among the States within the region. Again, none of these issues require extended debate and the offering of amendments directed to them could easily be tailored within the time constraints in the remainder of this session.

Today the chief culprit in the banking industry turmoil is Congress. Long ago it was determined that the ultimate responsibility for the safety and the soundness of American banking institutions and the maintenance of a healthy competitive marketplace for the banking consumer rested with Congress. However, in recent years, Congress has failed to live up to its responsibilities and its leadership has failed to advance legislative initiatives to meet the challenges of aggressive banking innovations.

The gentleman from Rhode Island, Chairman ST GERMAIN is to be commended for drafting and pushing through committee H.R. 5916, but the failure to act in this Congress now that we have the issues defined and a Senate bill passed and a House bill out of committee is the height of irresponsibility. There is much more that needs to be done in the next Congress, but there is no reason to further delay the resolution of the matters represented in the pending legislation.

With all due respect I strongly urge Chairman ST GERMAIN and the House leadership to reconsider this matter and schedule the reasonable and minimal amount of time necessary for the House to consider the "nonbank" bank legislation before adjournment.●

THE SOCIAL SECURITY COLA RIPOFF

HON. BARBER B. CONABLE, JR.

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, Earlier today I reported on the COLA rip off being perpetrated by the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare. For the record I wish to submit not only the petition to Congress, but the "contribution reply form," which solicits a 5-percent kickback for the 1985 COLA. The petition, of course, was to have been detached from the kickback form. Again, I must express my dismay at this organization's flagrant exploitation of senior citizens. It plays on the politics of fear—when the reality of the situation is that from the day President Reagan proposed waiving the 3 percent trigger, the proposal has had broad bipartisan support—in no small measure because this is an election year.

I introduced H.R. 6019, a bill to waive the 3-percent trigger permanently, in part to remove this issue from future election-years politics—a COLA bill is too tempting a potential Christmas tree. Now it appears that H.R. 6019 is needed to remove the issue from unscrupulous special interest groups as well.

I want to report that it appears—based on Bureau of Labor Statistics for August, which were released last Friday—that the COLA issue is moot this year. That is, the consumer price index rise in August assures a COLA in January—barring an actual decline in prices in September. So, I wish to reassure Social Security beneficiaries and SSI recipients—that with or without legislation—they will receive the COLA in January.

However, precisely to prevent this unfortunate scenario from repeating itself, I intend to urge the Ways and Means Committee to report favorably H.R. 6019.

PETITION TO THE U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES TO BE TRANSMITTED BY THE SPEAKER

Whereas, the U.S. Senate has enacted legislation to restore to Social Security recipients their badly needed cost-of-living increases; and

Whereas, without this legislation the average couple on Social Security will have lost about $37.00 in monthly payments due to denial of scheduled cost-of-living payments in 1983 and 1984, and

Whereas, the most majority of Social Security recipients are on a very tight budget and are impacted more than average by inflation, and

Whereas, cost-of-living adjustments are fair, have been committed to recipients and are essential to maintaining the very modest standard of living of Social Security recipients:

Therefore be it Resolved, that I (we) call upon the United States House of Representatives to act promptly and favorably on legislation pending before you to restore the cost-of-living increases due to Social Security recipients next year.

CONTRIBUTION REPLY FORM

To: James Roosevelt, Chairman, 1300 19th St. N.W., Washington, DC, 20036.
From:

Yes, I (we) have sent Senate Post Cards to insist on passage of legislation to restore our Social Security cost-of-living increase.

Yes, I (we) are ready to help fund our National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare's fight to get the cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients restored. Please find enclosed:

$12.60 which represents 5% of just one year's additional payments to the average couple receiving Social Security.

$7.50 which is 5% of the average single Social Security recipients increased payments the first year.

$10. A nice even amount between $7.20 and $12.60.

No. I (we) can't help meet the financial crisis the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare faces as a result of this intensive fight to restore the Social Security cost-of-living increase, but (we) enclose our petition.

Please make your check payable to: NCPSSM (National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare).●

MR. N.B. BARODY CELEBRATES 100TH BIRTHDAY

HON. ROBIN TALLON

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. TALLON. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to extend my congratulations and best wishes to Mr. N.B. Baroody, Sr., of Florence, SC, who is celebrating his 100th birthday.

Mr. Baroody is a native of Lebanon who immigrated to this country at the turn of the century at the age of 16. Speaking no English, he first settled in Massachusetts. After a year in America he could speak English passably and had an idea of how he could be successful in business. He spent time in Massachusetts and Virginia, where he had relatives in the candy manufacturing business.

Then he chose Florence as the place to settle down and start his own business, because he says, "Florence is the best place in the world to live." He opened a small grocery story which later grew into food and beverage wholesale businesses.

Mr. Baroody has been at the forefront of practically every worthwhile civic endeavor in Florence and has received many honors and awards. He is a long-time member of the Masons and the First Presbyterian Church; has worked with the Boy Scouts, the Florence YMCA, the Salvation Army, the United Way, the Pee Dee Educational Foundation (which led to the establishment of Francis Marion College) and the Greater Florence Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Baroody can enlighten us with his stories of the past in Florence—getting stuck in his Model T Ford when the dirt streets turned to mud; deliveries in his pickup truck, the first bought in Florence; the panic when the Depression hit; and how prohibition affected his beverage business.

His wisdom is also noted in his philosophy. To Mr. Baroody, all Americans are immigrants. He says that everybody except the Indians "came from across the water." He is particularly proud of his American citizenship because he is "an American by choice, not by birth."

Mr. Baroody's contributions to Florence and the surrounding communities cannot be measured. Florence and its citizens have benefited greatly from his guidance, leadership, and humanitarianism.

I join with hundreds of my constituents and friends today in wishing Mr. Baroody a healthy, happy, and joyous 100th birthday.●

SAFE AUTOMOBILES ARE PREVENTIVE "MEDICINE"

HON. DOUG WALGREN

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. WALGREN. Mr. Speaker, the article that follows describes in very real terms not only how cost effective safe cars would be, but how humane.

I commend it to my colleagues:

AIR BAGS ARE A PROVEN "VACCINE"

(My Turn/Jeffrey Cressy)

The spinal cord is only about as big around as your little finger. Because it carries impulses between the brain and the rest of the body, bringing messages of movement and sensation, it's one of the most important structures in the body. If these impulses are interrupted, paralysis results.

I am no casual observer of spinal-cord injury. Eight years ago, my neck was broken and my spinal cord was damaged at the C-6 cervical level, leaving me with only limited use of my arms and hands. I have been a quadriplegic living in a wheelchair ever since. Were my neck broken about an inch higher, I would have been on a respirator for the rest of my life.

I was 18 years old and I had just finished my first year of college when a split-second, 25-mile-per-hour crash permanently changed my life. I remember sitting there waiting for the rescue crew, unable to remove my hands from the steering wheel. I hadn't had the luxury of an air bag, nor the common sense to buckle up. I wish I had had both.

In the past eight years not a day has passed that I haven't thought of my life before wheels. My "new wheels" constantly remind me of how inadequate the safety devices in our larger vehicles are.

Last year, more than 42,000 people died in auto accidents; 5,000 who survived were left with serious spinal-cord injuries. A spinal-cord injury—a permanent disabling condition—takes only a fraction of a second to happen. But in that same split second, an air bag would inflate. Since the first patent was applied for more than 30 years ago, the air bag has become a proven, relatively cheap device which work automatically.

Lifesaving: Auto crashes are the leading killer and crippler of people like me, those who are under 35 years in age. The air bag is a proven "vaccine" for this most deadly and disabling "disease." But tragically, it has been withheld from the American public. After limited experiments, the automakers—with one exception—decided not to allow you and me to have this lifesaving device in our cars. And even last week, the federal government seemed reluctant to force the industry to provide it.

I recently testified before a Department of Transportation hearing in Los Angeles on auto safety, and while waiting my turn, I heard incredible things. People standing on two legs criticized the air bag because it only works in frontal crashes. More than half of the fatal car crashes are frontal crashes. Others maintained that the air bag is just another example of government regulation. Yet the issue here is not one of airline fares or gasoline prices but unnecessary injuries and deaths. I had the freedom not to wear my seat belt so now I'm confined to a wheelchair. What about my freedom to choose to use an air bag?

During the Los Angeles hearing, I also heard American auto manufacturers complain that the cost of installing an air bag is too high—that the extra cost would discourage potential buyers of new cars at a time of growing sales and renewed prosperity in their industry. A poll conducted for the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety has found that 9 out of 10 car buyers favor passive restraints as standard or optional equipment in new cars. And in a recent Gallup poll, Americans were increasingly concerned about auto safety. By a margin of 2 to 1, 60 percent to 31 percent, those surveyed said they favored a law that would require air bags in all new cars.

A few hundred dollars extra to install an air bag hardly compares to the catastrophic cost of caring for a person with a severe spinal-cord injury. Lifetime costs for one victim average $350,000. And there are about 10,000 new victims in the United States every year, 40 percent of them injured in auto accidents. That's $1.4 billion in health-care costs incurred each year because of car crashes, a tab for spinal-cord patients that is paid for in part by taxpayers through the Medicaid system. The hidden costs to society include higher health-, auto- and life-insurance premiums and an increased tax burden. The price tag on the psychological effects of a disabling injury are impossible to calculate. Air bags are a cost-effective measure for everyone.

At Rancho Los Amigos Hospital where I work, we get about 170 new spinal-cord-injury patients every year. Half of them are under the age of 25, and 70 percent are on Medi-Cal, California's Medicaid system. The hospital is full of patients who were injured in car crashes: most were not wearing seat belts at the time of their accidents. And as you might expect, many are now air-bag supporters. Unfortunately, some cannot speak.

Paralyzed: My crash was a very simple one. I was driving around a sharp turn on a country road when my back wheels went off the pavement. I ended up careening front-end first into a small ditch. A simple accident paralyzed me.

Last November a man in Texas was driving 50 miles per hour when his car left the road and flew 40 feet through the air, landing in a deep ravine. Bob LaRoche walked away from that accident—similar to mine yet a more powerful crash—because he was driving an air-bag-equipped Mercedes. His wife suffered a broken back and severe bruises and lacerations; the passenger side of the car was not air-bag equipped.

How many Americans can afford a $45,000 Mercedes-Benz? Should auto safety be reserved only for the wealthy? Seat belts work, I know, and I wish I had been wearing mine that summer night eight years ago. But now when I think of auto safety, I also think of a fire extinguisher. Hanging on the wall, it is useless in putting out a fire unless someone has the presence of mind to point it toward the flame. But a sprinkler system, mandatory in many places, is automatic.

That's the beauty of the air bag. It is truly the proverbial ounce of prevention that is worth a pound of cure. "Procrastination," someone once said, "is the thief of time." In the continuing case of air bags, procrastination is the thief of young lives. As a victim and as a provider of health care, I know that air bags would significantly reduce the incidence of spinal-cord injuries—and the waste of human lives.●

PLANT CLOSINGS PRODUCE MISERY

HON. JOSEPH M. GAYDOS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. GAYDOS. Mr. Speaker, there is growing misery for millions of Americans who were the casualties of the recent economic recession and are the orphans of the recovery.

I am speaking of the workers who lost their jobs, permanently, because of plant closings—7 million of them between 1980–82, according to a Brookings Institution study. The result is a massive disruption of a life, a family, a community. In some cases, the result is total destruction, culminating in tragedy.

These are facts which underscore the necessity of Federal intervention in providing some sort of assistance to the displaced worker, his family and his community, in cases where that community may be a one-industry municipality.

The situation is particularly critical in areas such as western Pennsylvania where the shutdown of 55 steelmaking facilities translated into the permanent loss of 7,600 jobs alone in district 15 of the United Steelworkers of America. These statistics were outlined in testimony recently presented a blue-ribbon State House Committee by Mr. Andrew Palm, director of district 15.

I would like to extract some of Mr. Palm's remarks for inclusion in the RECORD for I believe they dramatically emphasize the need for governmental legislation to help affected workers, businesses, and communities; to strive for preserving a threatened industry and the jobs it represents.

This assistance, in terms of loans, loan guarantees, interest subsidies, improved job placement and job retraining programs, could be rendered under provisions of H.R. 807, which I introduced early in this 98th Congress and which I intend to reintroduce in the 99th Congress next year.

Mr. Palm makes a valid point when he states that while stockholders invest money in a company, workers of a community invest their lives. A plant closing, therefore, becomes catastrophic. Homes and life savings are lost; children's education is foregone; families are broken; suicide and disease rates climb; small businesses go bankrupt and once-active communities are ruined.

"To understand the injury currently being inflicted upon our members," Mr. Palm testified, "you only need to look behind the unemployment statistics * * *." He cites a study done last year among 440 laid-off workers at a steel plant in Duquesne, PA.

Only 9 percent of the workers had secured part-time work. Unemployment compensation had run out for 44 percent. Company paid health insurance had ended for 65 percent of the families. Approximately 80 percent of the workers had experienced psychologically related distress.

The displaced worker, Mr. Palm goes on, finds himself "limited to whatever public assistance might be available, including minimal unemployment compensation, a degrading welfare system and job training and relocation programs now severely cut by the Reagan administration."

"* * * Corporate responsibility includes something more than responsibility to a company's profit structure," Mr. Palm declares. "We firmly believe that corporations have a minimum responsibility to their workers, the community and to the public as a whole, particularly when a shutdown decision involves something other than complete financial bankruptcy."

"* * * Where profits come before people and their communities, the Steelworkers Union is in support of State legislation that provides workers some measure of economic protection and justice when victimized by a plant closing."

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Palm pointed out in his testimony before the Pennsylvania House Committee that only three States have plant closing laws. He strongly believes Pennsylvania should develop a workable legislative proposal to combat the growing trend of indiscriminate plant shutdowns. I wholeheartedly concur in that concept but I believe it should be drafted at the Federal level, along the lines of my bill, H.R. 807.●

AUTOMATION IN THE WORKPLACE

HON. SILVIO O. CONTE

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing legislation today to respond to concerns expressed by a great number of people in our Nation concerning automation in the workplace.

Automated production is becoming increasingly common in this country, and is already widespread in other nations, including Japan and West Germany. Recent technological advances in the area of robotics have made automated equipment more sophisticated, cheaper, and more widely available. Automation is viewed by business as an excellent way to increase productivity while minimizing costs. Robots do not require salaries, or health and retirement benefits. Humans have been liberated from many hazardous jobs, thus avoiding injury and lowering insurance premiums. Robots are not subject to boredom, fatigue, carelessness or absenteeism.

However, the use of automation in the workplace raises numerous and important questions concerning the workers who are displaced. Does automation create new jobs to replace those it has eliminated? Are the displaced workers capable of filling these new jobs? What is the overall effect of increased use of automation on national unemployment? These questions reflect important concerns which, given the attractiveness of automated equipment, need to be addressed

My legislation requires that comprehensive studies be done of the effects of increased automation in the workplace.

The bill requires the Secretary of Labor to determine the effects of increased automation on the extent of unemployment in the United States during the 3 fiscal years prior to the enactment of the bill. It requires the Secretary of the Treasury to study the impact of increased automation on revenues for self-employment tax purposes during this time. It also requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to study the effects of increased automation on the amount of benefits paid under the Social Security Act during the years covered by the study.

The bill requires the Comptroller General of the United States to conduct an independent study of these matters and gives the Comptroller General's office free access to the information collected by the other studies upon request.

Finally, this bill requires reports of all four studies be submitted to the Ways and Means and Appropriations Committees of the House, and the Finance and Appropriations Committees of the Senate not later than 180 days after the enactment date of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that legislation is necessary to study these issues as the United States moves into an age of high technology. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.●

TRIBUTE TO MART NIKLUS

HON. NEWT GINGRICH

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. GINGRICH. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to take this opportunity to recognize the efforts of Mart Niklus, a leading human rights activist and a fighter for the rights of the Estonian nation. Niklus is a political prisoner in Estonia.

Mart Niklus has made enormous efforts to promote close cooperation of Estonian, Latvian, Lithuanian human and national rights for the Baltic nations. And he's been severely penalized for these altruistic efforts.

When he was 24 years old, Niklus was imprisoned for sending 15 photographs of the conditions in Soviet-controlled Estonia to the West. He was sentenced to 10 years hard labor and 3 years of internal exile. Niklus spent the next 8 years in Soviet prisons and labor camps, finally being released in July 1966.

Despite continuous harassment by the KGB, Niklus has continued to work for Estonian human rights. Niklus signed the Baltic Appeal of August 23, 1979, which called for the Soviet Union and both Germanies to announce the 1939 Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact criminal and void and to renounce it entirely. This pact inaugurated World War II and the occupation of the Baltic States. Niklus has also led several hunger strikes in opposition to the severe repression Estonia is now experiencing.

Niklus is now serving a 10-year special regime sentence and a 5-year internal exile which he received in January 1981 for "anti-Soviet propaganda." He's very ill and his health is continuing to decline.

Mart Niklus is an accomplished scholar and has translated scientific works in six different languages. While he's suffering in deplorable prison conditions, the people of Estonia and also the world are at a tremendous loss. I hope that our efforts in Congress to promote his cause will help make Americans more aware of Mart Niklus' plight and perhaps we'll be able to alleviate some of the pain he experiences.●

TRIBUTE TO A.C. TAYLOR

HON. RONALD V. DELLUMS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, a compassionate and caring human being from the Eighth Congressional District has passed from this Earth. I want to share with the Nation the life and accomplishments of Mr. Albert Charles "A.C." Taylor, an outstanding attorney and community leader.

"A.C." was born in Beaumont, TX, on July 12, 1942, to Murphy Taylor, Sr. and Marjorie Taylor. He moved with his family to Oakland, CA, at the age of 3 months. "A.C." attended Clawson Elementary School, Hoover Junior High School, and graduated from McClymonds High School in 1960. He was a proud member of "Mac's" renowned varsity basketball team and later played basketball for the then Oakland City College.

From City College he entered San Francisco State College where he received his baccalaureate. After college, "A.C." worked for a period of time at the Alameda County Health Department and later at the University of California. At the age of 12, "A.C." conferred his life to God and was baptized at the True Gospel Missionary Baptist Church in Oakland. On August 31, 1968, he pledged his love to Diane Willis and they were united in a marriage that lasted 16 years. Out of this union they were blessed with two sons, Jason and Julian.

In 1971, "A.C." returned to school at the University of California's prestigous Boalt Hall School of Law where he received his juris doctor in 1974. After being admitted to the California Bar Association, he gained experience as an attorney with the State of California in Sacramento; as a corporate attorney with Western Pacific Railroad; and as a private practice attorney in association with Attorneys William Dixon, Kenneth Smith, and Thomas Broome.

In 1978, "A.C.," along with his law school classmates Johnnie Harrison and Leo Bazile, formed the law firm of Harrison, Taylor, and Bazile. He served as the firm's managing partner and guiding light from its inception until his untimely death.

"A.C." was involved in numerous community organizations and activities, but the humility of his character was manifested in his insistence upon remaining behind the scenes in many successful efforts. In his endless hours of service to the Boys Club of the bay area and in other civic affairs, "A.C." inspired many young people, assisting them in attaining their life and career goals. Young professionals and aspiring attorneys gained from his guidance and his willingness to share his knowledge and expertise. "A.C." will be greatly missed by our community because he was loved by all those whose lives he touched. The loss of our fellow worker, our friend, a pillar of our community cannot be measured. His memory will live on in our hearts for eternity.●

SOCIAL SECURITY COLA INCREASE WILL BE BOTH AUTOMATIC AND INADEQUATE

HON. EDWARD R. ROYBAL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, there has been much talk recently about passing legislation to guarantee a Social Security cost-of-living increase [COLA] in January. As you know, the President has proposed to allow beneficiaries an increase if the adjustment would be less than 3 percent. However, due to a resurgence of inflation in August, a cost-of-living adjustment of about 3.3 percent will be automatic even without legislation. Simply stated, the President's plan guarantees beneficiaries less than will be paid under current law.

Our Nation's retirees bore the brunt of the costs of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 which were designed to solve the Social Security system's financing problems. The most obvious reduction was the permanent provision to delay adjustments for 6 months and make COLA's payable in January rather than July. Last year the Office of Management and Budget estimated that this 6-month delay will cost the average retired couple $1,698 in benefits by the end of the decade.

The 1983 amendments also changed the COLA measuring period from the first quarter to the third quarter of each year. This means there will be no adjustment for the 2.4-percent increase in prices which occurred between the first and third quarters of 1983. When this factor is taken into account, the actual inflation adjustment older Americans are due is really 5.7 percent rather than the 3.3-percent increase they will receive.

Since beneficiaries are assured an automatic 3.3-percent adjustment this year, the least we should do is permanently eliminate the 3-percent trigger for future COLA's. Therefore, I support H.R. 6019, the bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act to eliminate the 3-percent trigger. I commend the gentleman from New York, Mr. CONABLE, for introducing legislation to ensure that older Americans receive every future adjustment to which they are entitled. It is characteristic of his farsightedness which we shall all miss. I hope we will have an opportunity to vote on it while he is still a Member of this body.

However, I do not believe the elimination of the 3-percent trigger is enough. In all, current and future retirees paid for more than two-thirds of the costs of saving the Social Security system under the 1983 amendments. The reduction and annual delay in the COLA, the taxation of benefits, and the increase in the retirement age have put Social Security on a financially sound footing by taking money out of the pocket of beneficiaries. The Social Security and medicare programs will actually save 3 cents out of every dollar taken in next year while the rest of government spends $1.40 for every dollar received. There can be no doubt that the Social Security trust funds are healthy and that retirees have paid more than their fair share to bail out the Social Security system.

In recognition both of the relative financial strength of the system and the tremendous price beneficiaries are paying for its solvency, what we really should do is pass legislation to give older Americans the full 5.7-percent adjustment which they are due.●

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MIKE SYNAR

OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. SYNAR. Mr. Speaker, as I was not able to make it to the floor of the House in time to record my vote on the Seiberling amendment to the Emergency Wetlands Resources Act, H.R. 3082, I would like to take this opportunity to record how I would have voted. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye" on the Seiberling amendment, rollcall No. 407.●

THE PLIGHT OF SOVIET JEWRY

HON. NORMAN Y. MINETA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. MINETA. Mr. Speaker, last year, only 1,314 Soviet Jews were allowed to emigrate. For vast numbers of Soviet Jews, the outlook is bleak. They can only look forward to continued harassment, oppression, and separation from their loved ones. The Congressional call to conscience vigil for Soviet Jews is an opportunity for us to call attention to this tragedy.

Today, I call attention to the plight of Alexander Kushnir. Last week, his mother and brother came to visit me, and told me of Alexander's situation. They had been able to emigrate to Israel in 1973; they are still waiting for Alexander. Mrs. Kushnir has not seen her son in 11 years. The continued separation of Alexander from his family is an egregious violation of their human rights.

Alexander served in the Soviet Navy from 1969 to 1970. Since there is a customary waiting period of 5 years after demobilization before one is allowed to leave the Soviet Union, Alexander was unable to emigrate with his mother when she left in 1973. Her departure was precipitated by the untimely death of her husband, who had been a construction engineer. Alexander's grandparents were able to join his mother in Israel, so now Alexander is without his family.

Alexander has repeatedly applied for a visa to join his family in Israel. He has been refused on the grounds that during his military service he was privy to important military information. Presumably, this is the reason for the 5-year wait after demobilization. But Alexander has been out of the Navy for 14 years. By this time, any information he gained is commonplace and obsolete. Alexander is not a security risk.

In 1980, after several attempts to obtain a visa, Alexander received call-up papers for reserve duty in the military. Understandably, he has been reluctant to answer the papers, because it would only delay his emigration for several more years.

Alexander worked as a porter by day while he earned his engineering degree at night. Unfortunately, he has never been allowed to work as an engineer. He has had to work as a building technician, in order to support himself.

Since moving to Odessa in 1980, Alexander has attempted to preserve his cultural heritage, and practice his religion. He was told in December 1982, however, not to associate with other activists among Jewish refuseniks.

Alexander is alone in the Soviet Union, without his family. Although he has an engineering degree, he is not permitted to make his full contribution to Soviet society. When he seeks out other Jewish friends, he is told not to associate with them. And as a final insult, he is asked to do further reserve military duty, which would only perpetuate the meager grounds on which he is denied his visa.

Alexander has a right to better treatment than this. He is being deprived of his basic right to be with his family. Sadly, his case is not unique. I have written to Secretary General Chernenko and other high Soviet officials on behalf of Alexander Kushnir. I encourage all my colleagues to do the same for other refuseniks. By calling attention to the plight of Soviet Jews, we can stimulate Soviet compliance with international law. In this regard, the call to conscience vigil serves a vital function.●

CREATING A PARK IN NILES CANYON

HON. FORTNEY H. (PETE) STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, last week I introduced legislation that would validate the transfer of land from the Southern Pacific Railroad to the East Bay Regional Park District headquartered in Oakland, CA.

The railroad right of way runs approximately 11 miles through the beautiful Niles Canyon along Alameda Creek. The route connects Fremont with Pleasanton, CA. Preserving the right of way as a park will provide, at a minimum, an ideal hiking trail. Additionally, the right of way could be used for horseback riding or for an historic train route.

The Federal Government's involvement is needed because the railroad received the land from the Federal Government under the land grant acts to persuade railroads to go to the west coast. The transfer needs Federal approval.

I would urge my colleagues to support the land transfer which will provide an excellent addition to the East Bay Regional Park District system.●

CALL TO CONSCIENCE 1984

HON. SILVIO O. CONTE

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. CONTE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this short time today to call to your attention a heartening development in the case of Alexander Paritsky. A Soviet physicist, Paritsky was condemned to 3 years in a Soviet labor camp for allegedly not filling his work order, and "defaming the Soviet state" by attempting to obtain a visa to live with his family in Israel. Alexander Paritsky has been released from the labor camp after 3 years of physical, mental, and emotional anguish. Paritsky's release is encouraging, but his struggle, and that of all the Soviet Jews, is far from over.

In violation of the Helsinki Final Act, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and their own constitution, the Soviet government continues to restrict arbitrarily the emigration rights of Soviet Jews. In fact, their plight is worsening. In 1979 the Soviets allowed 51,370 Jews to emigrate; in 1984 only 1,314 were allowed. Paritsky's ultimate emigration, and that of thousands of others, remains a matter of great doubt.

The 1984 Congressional Call to Conscience Vigil is a manifestation of our continued support for the rights and freedom of Soviet Jews. The Soviet Government must know that we, who share the oppression of these people, will not rest until their fundamental human rights are recognized. Though Soviet authorities have tried to isolate these people, Soviet Jews have friends everywhere who do not recognize these artificially created barriers. Their fight is our fight until it is won.●

THE 1984 CONGRESSIONAL CALL TO CONSCIENCE VIGIL FOR SOVIET JEWS

HON. SHERWOOD L. BOEHLERT

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, one of the fundamental goals of American foreign policy must be the elimination of human rights violations throughout the world. One violation that is particularly saddening is the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union. These Soviet citizens, as you know, are faced with discrimination, hostility, and in all too many cases, abused solely because of their religious and ethnic heritage. More than 400,000 of them have been denied exit visas needed to escape this grinding oppression.

The plight of Isaak Shkolnik, a Soviet Jewish refusenik, brings home to us the stark realities faced by Jews in the Soviet Union. Isaak has been repeatedly denied the visa he needs to join his wife and daughter in Israel, where they were allowed to immigrate almost 11 years ago. In 1973 he was put on trial on a trumped-up charge and was sentenced to 7 years hard labor. Since his release he has been constantly harassed and pressured to remain silent and "toe the line."

On Isaak's behalf, I have written to Soviet officials, including Chairman Chernenko and Ambassador Dobrynin, urging that Isaak be allowed to emigrate, that he be allowed to enjoy the basic human right of freedom. I have also written to President Reagan and Secretary of State Shultz to enlist their support. Finally, I have brought Isaak's plight to the attention of the House in a speech last March. I hope that in the coming weeks these efforts and the efforts of others will have a positive impact on Isaak's situation.

We have seen in this century the ghastly consequences that can result when the world sits back and does nothing in the face of religious and ethnic persecution. We who live in this land of freedom have a responsibility to act. We must be advocates for all those whose voices have been stilled, for those who now can only yearn for freedom with their tears. We must remember the Isaak Shkolniks of this world and the warning of the great philosopher Edmund Burke, who said "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is for good men to do nothing."●

HON. BARBARA B. KENNELLY

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, this September marks 40 years of Soviet control of Estonia, and September 22 marks the 50th birthday of Mart Niklus. This outstanding Estonian freedom fighter and outspoken defender of human rights, will spend his birthday in solitary confinement at the infamous Christopol Prison.

Niklus has been repeatedly sentenced to years of imprisonment in various Soviet labor camps and prisons for "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda." His health is deteriorating rapidly as a result of hunger strikes and medical problems.

Over the years this brave man has been instrumental in coordinating the efforts of human rights activists in Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. His work in this area brought him into close contact with Andrei Sakharov with whom he formed a close friendship. Like Sakharov, Niklus has been adopted by Amnesty International.

Niklus is just one of many Estonian dissidents who actively protest the daily violation of human and national rights in their country. Despite his weakened condition, Niklus has begun yet another hunger fast which many fear will be his last. For his consistent struggle he has earned the deep respect and admiration of his fellow countrymen, who regard Niklus as a national symbol of resistance to the Soviet occupation of their homeland.

Mart Niklus will be especially remembered on this 50th birthday. I hope that his freedom will be speedily restored to him.●

THE BEIRUT TERRORIST BOMBING

HON. HAROLD S. SAWYER

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 1984

● Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, once again, the courageous men representing the United States in Beirut became the victims of violent terrorist fanatics. On Thursday, September 18, 1984, our Embassy, located in West Beirut, became the target of a suicide bombing mission. Two Americans were killed and 20 were wounded. One of those who lost his life was a brave man from Grand Rapids, MI.

Army CWO Kenneth V. Welch began his service in the U.S. Army as an enlisted man in 1972. Over the course of the next decade, his tours included the dangerous and volatile countries of Vietnam, Ireland, and Iran. In 1981 he became part of the Army Defense Attaché as a warrant officer. It was in the capacity of chief warrant officer in charge of operations that he was sent to Beirut in May 1984.

Too much cannot be said about the bravery and gallantry of the men and women who daily risk their lives to maintain the freedoms and principles of the United States and its allies. The unselfish manner in which they serve our great country should be an example for us all. It is with great pride that Grand Rapids and the American people will remember Mr. Welch.●

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Any changes in committee scheduling will be indicated by placement of an asterisk to the left of the name of the unit conducting such meetings.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, September 25, 1984, may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

SENATE—Tuesday, September 25, 1984

(Legislative day of Monday, September 24, 1984)

The Senate met at 10 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Richard C. Halverson, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

God of justice, peace and love, when we consider the hundreds, if not thousands of agendas which converge in the Senate, it is awesome that any issue is resolved. As constituent requests, local, State, regional, national and international needs, in addition to all the special interests, beg for attention, we wonder at the physical, intellectual and emotional capacities of public servants to process information and find agreement. Thank You Lord, for the understanding, resilience, spirit of cooperation and compromise, the patience, of leaders, Senators, and staffs. Thank You Lord, for the unity which prevails midst such broad diversity. May the peace of God infuse this place and the love of God fill all hearts as the Senate pursues its monumental task. In the name of incarnate love, we pray. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

THE CHAPLAIN'S PRAYER

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I often do in commenting on the Chaplain's prayer, he understands and I wish all those who may hear or read these remarks understand, that they are made in good spirit and in jest.

Certainly in his prayer this morning when he commented on the patience of staff, that caught my attention. I have always contended that there is a fundamental confusion in the minds of staff and the Senate about who works for whom. And there is no doubt in my mind that they think we work for them, which indeed is more often the case than not.

But being willing to acknowledge that does not mean that I am willing to go the next step and agree with the Chaplain that staff is patient. They are impatient, they are cruel and demanding, and they are tough taskmasters. I thought I would take that modest exception to the Chaplain's prayer this morning.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have nothing but bad news today. Let me say that I guess we have an impending filibuster on the highway bill. If so, I will say as I did on yesterday, it is my intention, I believe, to file cloture. If cloture is filed, Mr. President, I would hope then that we could get on with some of the appropriation bills. I have not yet talked to the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee or the minority leader about these matters but I will. But we have Labor-HHS, which was temporarily laid aside and the leadership on this side would like to finish that today if we can. We may have the Interior appropriations bill that is available—I hope so—maybe even today.

Mr. President, in addition to that, we have our old friend the continuing resolution. I am not talking out of school, I believe, when I share with Senators my conversation with the Speaker of the House this morning who indicated to me that he was going to try to get up the CR in the House today but that that would require unanimous consent and that he feared that unanimous consent might not be granted, in which event the CR could not be taken up in the House until tomorrow. In either case, that will make a difficult situation for the Senate because it means we are not going to have the CR for another day or 2, or 3, depending on how the situation unfolds in the House of Representatives.

Mr. President, that also means that we will have almost certainly if not 100 percent, I would say 95 percent, the prospect of a Saturday session, because if we do not get the CR until tomorrow at the earliest or the day after or the day after that, we have so few days left that I feel we must go ahead with the CR the moment it is received. And, of course, even after we deal with that matter, and if everyone in the Senate shows remarkable and unaccustomed restraint and does not offer their favorite amendment to the CR, even if we get a CR out of here in fairly short time, there is going to have to be a conference, it will have to be presented to both Houses, and then the bill will have to be presented to the President for his consideration.

I do not know what the CR will look like, but prudent planning in these last days of the Senate force me to take account of at least the possibility that we might have a veto of that measure. I hope not. I am not predicting that. I have no such word from the White House. But, once again, prudent planning suggests that we have to take account of that. So next week will have to be available to us to deal with that if we are faced with that unhappy prospect.

Once again, Mr. President, we are running out of time. Almost surely we will be in session on Saturday. Almost surely we will have late sessions some nights this week, maybe every night this week, and almost surely that will barely make a dent in the other things that we have to do.

In addition to the CR, we have another old friend, the debt limit. And as soon as the conference report on the budget resolution is adopted in both Houses, the House will be relieved of that onerous burden, but we will not. So we will have to take up a debt limit at some point and do so as promptly as possible.

Mr. President, there are other matters that I mentioned on previous occasions that I will reiterate now for action as and when we can, including this week if possible or more likely next week. They include such things as the balanced budget amendment; the Genocide Convention; product liability; the two water bills, that is water resources and the clean water bill; and perhaps other matters. But those matters are not as clearly in focus as is our responsibility under the circumstances to pass the continuing resolution and the debt limit.

This is a more extensive report than I anticipated this morning, but I want to keep Members advised as best I can. May I repeat, in summary, I do anticipate cloture will be filed today on the highway bill, I do anticipate that the Senate then will be asked to return to the consideration of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill and perhaps to the Interior appropriations bill, as well. The vote would occur on cloture, if it is filed on the highway bill, on Thursday but not until after 6 p.m. on Thursday because of the previous arrangements made for the religious holiday that will intervene. We will be in session on Friday perhaps dealing with the CR if it is received then from the House of Representatives. Almost certainly we are going to be in on Saturday, as well, probably for the same purpose.

Mr. President, next week I will announce when I can work out the courage and strength and stamina to face those further challenges.

Mr. President, I have used more time than I planned. If there is any time remaining, I offer it to the minority leader under his control.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GOLDWATER). The minority leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN], 5 minutes of my time. I ask unanimous consent that I may reserve the remaining 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EMERGENCY FUNDS TO IMPROVE SECURITY IN U.S. EMBASSIES

Mr. BIDEN. Mr President, I noted with some great interest today that in every major newspaper in the country there is going to be the report of a $372 million request for emergency funds to improve security in U.S. embassies. I want to make it clear at the outset of this that I have no intention of doing anything but supporting that.

But, I want to set the record straight, Mr. President. The fact of the matter is we in the Congress have since 1980 appropriated, and authorized, I should say, over one-half a billion dollars.

I am not just talking about Lebanon, Mr. President. I am talking about the whole panoply of our embassies. And no one knows this better than the chairman of the Intelligence Committee and the Presiding Officer as I speak; that is, according to a recent GAO report, the administration reduced the number of posts planned for security enhancement from 125 to 62. Of those, only 10 have so far been completed.

The fact of the matter is I want it clear that I am not blaming the President nor anyone else for what happened in Lebanon.

But I want to make it absolutely clear that the failure, if there was one, of not having sufficient security in place in Lebanon, or any other embassy in the world, is not because of any footdragging by the U.S. Congress. The reason I have my ire up a little bit, Mr. President, is as the President knows because he is always finding me walking in late to his meetings, and I commute every day from Delaware. I stand on the train platform every morning at 7:38, and ride down with a group of commuters from Wilmington and Philadelphia to Washington. I am standing on the platform with the usual panoply at 35 or 40 business women and men And one walks up to me and said, "Joe, I saw you on ABC on Sunday and you were talking about the embassy. What I did not know, Joe, is you failed to tell us that you fellows did not appropriate the money."

That got me so angry, not at that man, but at the notion—even though the administration does not say that—that impliedly in all of this talk about urging supplementals, they asked us and we did not say yes. I want to go on record this morning in saying, Mr. President, read the RECORD. I am sure the President and members of the administration read it every morning. You tell us what you want. Whatever you want, one Senator at least—I suspect 100 of us—will stand on the floor and say, "You got it. If you want crews to work triple time, overtime 24 hours a day, and for the next 6 months straight, you got it."

But do not play games with us. Do not turn back our money. Do not fail to spend it. Do not fail to include the embassies and then say we need more money. That is the only thing I want to make clear. The Congress will give you, I am sure almost any number the administration comes up with to rationalize in any way the need to improve embassy security. They will have whatever they want.

I would add that they have had whatever they wanted up to now. They did not spend all of it. They cut back on the number of embassies; they, not the Congress.

That is the only point I want to make. I apologize for taking my colleagues' time because it is preaching to the choir. The ultimate preaching to the choir is for me to say this to the Senator from Arizona who is the guy who would probably go over there and help them install the devices if they needed that help.

I am not being facetious. I mean that really and truly is something that gets my ire up.

I hope that whoever covers this for the press makes it clear—not this speech, but this issue—it is not a failure on the part of the Congress to give the President whatever he wants, and I hope this time we will not treat it like a kitchen. We will treat it like an emergency. We will treat it like a crisis, and we will have people 24 hours a day, if need be, working on the embassies; that is, where the experts in the administration tell us we need the security.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR PROXMIRE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE], is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

UNITED STATES HAS ENJOYED CONSISTENT NUCLEAR SUPERIORITY

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, does the Soviet Union enjoy a significant advantage in nuclear armed power over the United States? This question lies at the heart of the difference between the Reagan administration and its supporters on the one hand, and those who oppose President Reagan's nuclear arms policies on the other. The administration argues that the Soviets have a nuclear arsenal that has these advantages: greater megatonnage, greater throw-weight, superior accuracy, and, now for the first time, more warheads. The administration also claims the Soviets have a civil defense system far more advanced than ours that would permit a much larger proportion of the Soviet population to survive a nuclear exchange between the two superpowers than the surviving American population. The administration also contends that the Soviets believe they can win a nuclear war. Finally, the administration sees Soviet arms control policy not designed to reduce the prospects of nuclear war, but for the sole purpose of stopping the United States from overcoming the inferiority in nuclear arms that gives the Soviet Union military dominance.

From the administration analysis, these conclusions follow: (1) For those Americans who believe that either superpower can in fact win a nuclear war—I do not know how many there are, but there are some people who believe that—for them the argument is that we should build up our nuclear arms to a point where we can win; (2) and, for those who believe that a nuclear war would be a total catastrophe with no winners and maybe even no survivors—the best prospect for preventing a nuclear war is to win the nuclear arms race with the Soviet Union. The Soviets would then perceive that superior U.S. nuclear military would surely deny them victory. And they would not attack.

So in the administration view, the key to victory or peace is nuclear arms superiority. Ah, and most compelling of all: we can win the nuclear arms race by simply unleashing the conspicuously superior American economy and technology. The Soviets have nothing to approach the magic of Americans nuclear arms technology genius. The Soviet economy lags far behind the American economy and cannot begin to deliver the quality and quantity of new nuclear weapons the way the American economy can. So what is wrong with this? Why not cut our American military technology loose, take the shackles off our defense contractors, go out, and win victory or peace?

What is wrong with this view? Mr. President, the answer is everything. First, at this moment, and indeed throughout the age of nuclear arms beginning with Hiroshima in 1945 and continuing through every year and every administration since then, the United States has consistently held a decisive advantage in nuclear arms over the Soviet Union. What is more, the Soviet Union has known this. There has not been a year or month when that United States advantage has not been clear and conspicuous. We still possess it. There is no prospect we will lose it. Does that mean we have the advantage in every respect over the Soviet Union in nuclear arms? Of course not. They do have greater megatonnage. They do have greater throw-weight. They may currently have more nuclear warheads. Their land-based missiles have greater accuracy than most of our missiles. Where then is the American superiority? It is in a category that outweighs all the other considerations combined. We can hit and knock out their weapons. They cannot find, let alone hit and knock out, many of ours. Consider that more than 70 percent of our missiles are sea based or air based. A large proportion of these are at sea and in the air at all times, and a very large proportion can be sea bound or air bound in a matter of minutes. Our top experts have testified that these nuclear weapons are invulnerable, or very nearly invulnerable. Oh, yes, the Soviets also have sea- and air-based nuclear weapons. But their sea and air missiles have two weaknesses. First, this invulnerable part of their nuclear force is far less than ours. And, second, a much smaller proportion of this much smaller force is in the air or at sea at any time. What does all this mean? It means the U.S. nuclear force is superior to the Soviet force because the U.S. nuclear armed force would largely survive a nuclear exchange. The Soviet force would be much more vulnerable.

This American advantage has increased in recent years. But it has persisted throughout the years. Recent assertions by the administration that the Reagan administration has overcome a Soviet nuclear arms advantage and begun to provide a new American nuclear arms advantage overlook the clear fact that this country has had a consistent and never-lost nuclear arms advantage over the Soviet Union for the full 40 years of the age of nuclear arms.

Does this mean that we could win a nuclear war in any meaningful sense? Absolutely not. No way, not ever, and no matter how thoroughly our nuclear weapons ravaged the Soviet Union. No matter how many Russians lost their lives, even if we flattened every city, town and village, silenced every Soviet military weapon and left that vast country a steaming, radioactive dump. Why would not this mean a U.S. victory? Because our country would be totally—and I mean totally—devastated too: our cities leveled, most of our people dead, our country a wretched garbage heap. Of course, if the world's outstanding scientists are right, such a war would also constitute the worst environmental disaster in more than 50 million years with weeks of darkness, months of sub-zero cold and a famine that would destroy plant life, most of the animal life and much or all of mankind. Some victory.

This is why it is not simply a moral imperative to stop the arms race. It is a practical necessity. When we choose between the end of the nuclear arms race on the one hand or its continuance, on the other, it is simple: We choose between life and death.

THE DEMISE OF THE TASMANIANS

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, James Morris, in his book "Heaven's Command," describes the tragic disappearance of the Tasmanian Aborigines. He chronicles their descent from placid independence to miserable subjugation, followed by their complete elimination, all within a period of 1 century.

The nomadic Tasmanian natives, who probably numbered no more than a few thousand in the year 1800, lived in serene isolation on their island near the coast of southeastern Australia until the European discoverers began to arrive in the 17th century. The natives reacted positively to the early temporary intrusions of the white men, who reported that the Tasmanians were trusting, unafraid, pacific, and ingenuously affectionate.

By 1803, however, the British had claimed Tasmania as another jewel in their empire. The interlopers established settlements and penal colonies, and they transported some of the worst offenders from their own society to disturb the tranquil environment of the aborigines.

According to Mr. Morris, a multitude of heinous abuses ensued. The natives were frequently driven off their lands, enslaved, hunted for sport, and captured as pets. Although common criminals committed the majority of the atrocities, the actions and attitudes of the authorities and the other settlers were not much more sympathetic.

Understandably, the Tasmanians became increasingly hostile toward their oppressors. They staged violent reprisals, which in turn led to even more abuse by their tormentors. As the degree of bitterness rose in conjunction with the death toll, the government officials decided that they were no longer willing to pretend to coexist with the natives.

The Tasmanian final act consisted of forcible relocation to a settlement on a neighboring island, where their population continued to dwindle rapidly. Deprived of their natural environment and unable to wander independently, they lost the will to live and they lost the desire to reproduce. By 1876, 73 years after the British invasion, the last Tasmanian had perished.

The tale of the Tasmanians, the story of the complete extermination of a race of people, must be unquestionably classified as a historical rarity. Unfortunately, the same cannot be said for genocidal actions resulting in partial elimination of groups, which continue to occur throughout the world. As citizens of the world's most powerful and influential Nation, therefore, we must strive to ensure that national, ethnical, racial, and religious groups, or parts thereof, do not suffer the Tasmanian fate.

We can aid this cause significantly by consenting to ratification of the Genocide Convention of 1948. During the 35 years of Senate neglect of this important treaty, perpetrators of genocide have come and gone, and we must bear the burden of knowing that we have not taken even the first step to do what we could have done to protect their victims. Our acceptance of the international accord signed by 92 nations including every developed nation on Earth, is long overdue.

THE DANGEROUS NATIONAL DEBT

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, yesterday I submitted for the RECORD an article on the national debt written by Senator MOYNIHAN, who pointed out that an exploding national debt and compound interest were deadly partners.

Today, I would like to alert my colleagues to two other dangerous aspects of skyrocketing national debt.

First, we have no easy way to escape from this trap. In the past, economic growth kept its jaws from snapping shut. The national debt mushroomed during the Second World War but the economy grew rapidly after the end of the war.

Throughout the 1950's and 1960's the public debt, as a percentage of our gross national product [GNP], went down. It dropped from over 60 percent in the early 1950's to below 30 percent in the early 1970's. The Federal Government ran a deficit during most of these years and added to the debt. But the economy grew even faster than the additions to the debt.

We were in the happy position of a private company which borrows a little and sees its sales and profits grow a lot. That kind of performance means management gets sizable bonuses, workers see their wages increase, and stockholders make a bundle as the price of the company's stock takes off.

Look at the administration's estimates of Federal debt as a percentage of GNP for the next few years. This ratio hit a low point of about 25 percent during the mid-1970's. As the economy sputtered during the rest of the decade, it remained between 25-30 percent. But the administration estimates that this ratio will increase to over 40 percent by 1987.

It will increase despite a vigorous economic expansion. Consider that fact for a moment, Mr. President. Here we have an economy which is projected to expand for 5 years without a pause. And throughout each of those 5 years, the Federal debt will be increasing even faster than the economy. If that is not a recipe for disaster, this Senator has never seen one.

We are now in the position of a private firm which borrows money and sees its sales and profits stagnate or even go down. Under those circumstances, the firm's management is ousted, workers approve givebacks, and the stockholders take a beating.

Mr. President, who manages the Federal Government? The President, the House of Representatives, and the Senate—that is who.

Mr. President, this growing debt is a threat not only to our economic future but also to simple fairness. Interest payments are becoming one of the largest income transfer programs in the budget. This transfer is paid without any means test whatsoever and it is the one Federal program absolutely immune from cuts.

Who owns the national debt? Those who buy Federal bonds—savers, in other words. Those who can afford to save have money left over after paying the mortgage, the car payment, and buying food for the family. This Senator is happy that people do save and that many lend that money to the Treasury. Yet this Senator is saddened to see a decreasing proportion of Federal spending going to people who need it.

Liberals used to comfort themselves by saying that we owed the debt to ourselves—no need to get in a lather over the national debt. That comforting proposition is no longer true. Foreign and international interests now own about 10 percent of the national debt and that percentage has been growing by leaps and bounds.

We have seen what happens to our economy when foreign interests impose an oil embargo. What would happen if foreign nations, acting in concert for political reasons, decided to dump their Federal bonds? By running up the debt, we are quietly creating hostages on our economic future.

Mr. President, the best way—the only way—to contain these dangers is to cut the deficit. The fact that this will not be easy is no excuse. The only thing worse than action is no action at all.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR SPECTER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized for not to exceed 15 minutes.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

S. 3018—PROSECUTION OF TERRORISTS

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation designed to provide an effective weapon against terrorism aimed at U.S. citizens throughout the world by making it a crime punishable under U.S. law in a U.S. courtroom for anyone, anywhere, to kill, assault, strike, wound, imprison, or make any other violent attack upon any officer, agent or employee of the United States, or attempt to do any of the foregoing.

The urgent need for this kind of legislation was tragically reinforced by the recent explosion at the new U.S. Embassy in East Beirut that claimed at least a dozen lives, including at least two Americans. But the absence of an effective plan to deal with terrorism has also manifested itself in other, more subtle, ways in the Middle East which severely limit opportunities for peace in that region.

For many years, about a quarter of a century, I have been concerned with fighting criminals, and terrorists are international criminals. They have to be dealt with as criminals, and I think they can be dealt with effectively as criminals. To catch them, to incarcerate them, to punish them, and to deter other criminals, other terrorists, by the examples of our tough approach to the terrorists whom we can apprehend if we work at it with sufficient diligence—that is the way our criminal justice system works, and it can work in the international field as well, although there are some unique problems because of fanaticism which grips some of the international criminals known as terrorists.

I recently had an opportunity to visit the Middle East in August of this year and it became apparent during my trip that, while there is some potential for peace in that region, particularly with President Mubarak and King Hussein, the overriding problem is terrorism. Terrorism severely threatens negotiations in the Middle East by threatening men and women of courage who would negotiate.

I was in Cairo on August 14, 1984, the day that President Mubarak made his statements about the terrorist mining of the Red Sea. I met with the President to discuss that subject as part of the overall problems of the Middle East, and he acknowledged that terrorism in the Middle East is preventing negotiations and a resolution of the problems which exist between Israel and the Arab nations.

I observed in my discussions with King Hussein during that trip that he is unwilling to take the lead in discussions with Israel at the present time without collaboration from the PLO. Although the PLO really should not be a part of such negotiations, because they are avowed terrorists, King Hussein obviously must recollect the assassination of his own grandfather, at which he was present. It is understandable then why King Hussein is reluctant to take the lead, lest he fall victim to assassination, as did Anwar Sadat and Bashir Gemayel.

In talking to the Saudi leaders, there is an overcloud of concern about terrorism. The Saudis are unwilling to move forward as they should, in a leadership role. Again, terrorism is the obstacle preventing negotiations in the Middle East today.

When I had the opportunity to meet with the Syrian foreign minister, we discussed the issue of the Lebanese-Israeli border, which also is an issue of terrorism. The Israelis have announced in a change of position that they are prepared to withdraw from Syria unilaterally even if Syria does not withdraw from Lebanon, but they are not prepared to do so if the northern border of Israel is insecure.

There is precedent on the Syrian-Israeli border for a demilitarized zone, a zone free of terrorism. It has worked since 1973. I asked the Syrian foreign minister the fundamental question, why not put into effect what has been on the Syrian-Israeli border on the Lebanese-Israeli border? Again, terrorism looms as the major obstacle to peace.

If we do not act to combat terrorism, it will proliferate beyond the Middle East to the worldwide scene. It is an enormous concern to have the potential of nuclear power in the hands of the terrorists. I suggest we may be coming to that unless we devise an effective way to deal with the terrorism which plagues us.

We must take specific steps to combat the activity of these criminals. I previously introduced, on June 15, 1984, legislation, S. 2771, to make the use of a firearm to commit a felony by foreign diplomats in the United States a Federal felony. Accompanying this legislation was a sense-of-the-Senate resolution directing the executive to renegotiate the Vienna Convention rules on diplomatic immunity. This legislation was prompted by the shoot-out of the Libyan Embassy in London during which a British policewoman was killed and others were wounded. We cannot allow rules designed to protect diplomatic relations between civilized countries to protect murders, which is what happened in that situation.

The legislation I am introducing today goes further and provides for criminal prosecution by the United States against any terrorist who attacks any officer or agent of the United States, regardless of where the attack occurs. Thus, when a U.S. marine is killed or wounded in a bomb attack, an investigation can be initiated and the culprits can be brought to this country and prosecuted.

This act will in no way contravene or conflict with either international or constitutional law. Though U.S. courts have traditionally been reluctant to apply our criminal law outside our borders, they have done so increasingly in recent years, and must do so if Congress so directs. It is well-established constitutional doctrine, stretching back more than 60 years, that Congress has the power to apply U.S. law extraterritorially if it so chooses. (See e.g., United States v. Bowman, 260 U.S. 94, 98 (1922)).

Criminal jurisdiction is customarily limited to the place where the crime occurred. However, international law also recognizes broader criminal jurisdiction based on the protective principle. Under this principle, if the alleged crime occurs in a foreign country, a nation may still exercise jurisdiction over the defendant if the crime has a potential adverse effect upon its security or the operation of its governmental functions. This basis for jurisdiction over crimes committed outside the United States has been applied by the Federal courts in contexts ranging from drug smuggling to perjury. Pizzarusso 388 F.2d 8 (perjury on a visa application); Rivard v. United States, 375 F.2d 882 (5th Cir.) cert. denied sub nom, Groleau v. United States, 389 U.S. 884 (1967) (drug smuggling). Clearly, then, the exercise of U.S. criminal jurisdiction is also justified to prosecute the terrorist who assaults or murders American personnel abroad. Such attacks undoubtedly have an adverse effect upon the conduct of our Government's foreign affairs, and potentially threaten the security interests of the United States as well.

Even without this direct nexus between U.S. interests and the terrorist attack, jurisdiction over such an international criminal could be justified by analogy to the universal crime of piracy. Piracy was defined as a universal, or international, crime years ago in response to public outcry against this international problem. The law evolved on piracy so that a pirate could be prosecuted wherever he was found, by whatever country found him. That is a fundamental deviation from the general criminal law which permits a prosecution only in the jurisdiction of the offense. But piracy was perceived as an offense affecting all States, regardless of where it was committed. Thus, any State that captured the offender could prosecute and punish that person on behalf of the world community.

If a pirate can be prosecuted wherever he is found, so should a terrorist be prosecutable wherever the terrorist is found.

Similarly, terrorism should be regarded as a crime which affects all States regardless of where it is committed. Certainly, terrorism in this day and age is a much more horrendous and world-threatening offense than piracy was in its own era. Like piracy, terrorism anywhere affects states everywhere by spreading fear and paralysis that chills the free exercise of sovereign authority with the threat that lawless fanatics will display their disapproval through violent means.

This bill provides, in accord with constitutional and international law, the necessary subject matter jurisdiction to prosecute those who attack U.S. personnel abroad. But to obtain personal jurisdiction over the culprit himself, the suspect must first be seized or arrested and brought to the United States to stand trial. Under current constitutional doctrine, both U.S. citizens and foreign nationals can be seized and brought to trial in the United States without violating due process of law. See, for example, Frisbie v. Collins, 342 U.S. 519, 522 (1952); Ferr v. Illinois 119 U.S. 436 (1886).

It may surprise some to hear that abduction or kidnaping is an appropriate way to bring criminals to trial. If someone is charged or chargeable with an offense and is at liberty in some foreign country, it is an accepted principle of law, shocking as it may seem or surprising as it may seem at first blush, to take that alleged criminal into custody by abduction if necessary and return him to the jurisdiction which has authority to try him. That prosecution and conviction is sustainable and is proper under the laws of the United States and under international law.

This principle has been in effect for almost 100 years, going back to 1886, in the landmark case of Kerr versus Illinois, where the State of Illinois kidnaped a defendant in Peru, a man being charged with a crime in Illinois, and brought him back to Illinois for trial, where he was convicted. The case went to the Supreme Court of the United States and the Supreme Court of the United States said it was appropriate to try that man in Illinois and to convict him notwithstanding the means which were used to bring him back to trial in that jurisdiction.

No country in the world, no country in the history of the development of law, has more rigorous concepts of the due process of law than the United States of America and the U.S. Supreme Court. That doctrine was upheld in an opinion written by Justice Hugo Black, well known for his concern about defendants' rights, in the case of Frisbie versus Collins, handed down by the Supreme Court of the United States in 1952 and upheld in later decisions.

In the Frisbie case, Justice Black stated:

> This court has never departed from the rule announced in Kerr v. Illinois, that the powers of a court to try a person for a crime is not impaired by the fact that he had been brought in the court's jurisdiction by reason of a forceable abduction.

I would suggest to Senators that in dealing with the crime of terrorism, we ought to find the terrorists when we have some reason to believe we know who they are. It requires an investigation. It requires pursuit. It may require extradition or, where extradition is not possible, it may require abduction to bring these vicious criminals to trial.

Resort to such tactics will not ordinarily be necessary. The nation where the offender is found may prosecute that person itself or that nation may extradite him or consent to a seizure by U.S. agents within its territory. In the rare instance, however, where there exists in effect no government capable of arresting or prosecuting the offender—and I would suggest that that situation exists in a nation like Lebanon today where there is hardly a government capable of enforcing law and order—in that extreme situation or wherever the terrorists may be found in nations which flagrantly violate international law or harbor international terrorists, then the United States may be compelled to use forceful methods to bring a terrorist to justice. And I would suggest that on a balancing test, that is an appropriate course of conduct.

It is this kind of forceful, effective action that the United States must be in a poistion to employ where necessary to respond to terrorist attacks against our citizens abroad. The legislation that I am introducing today will accomplish that result.

We currently have laws on our books which make it a crime to murder or assault an internationally protected person if the alleged offender is present in the United States, regardless of where the offense was committed or the nationality of the victim or the alleged offender. This bill would extend this protection to employees and agents of the United States such as our servicemen, our marines, and others stationed abroad who so desperately need this kind of protection.

The primary goal of this legislation, aside from protecting our marines and others, is to provide clear evidence of forceful congressional intent that our country should respond in a meaningful and effective way to terrorist attacks.

Other countries that are fighting for their very survival may find it necessary to respond with instant retaliation. Given our power and world role, and our commitment to the rule of law, this is a questionable response by the United States. It may be that if these terrorist attacks continue and we are unable to deal with them, we will have to consider such retaliation. But it is my view that, as a first step, we ought to enact legislation in this country to make it a crime punishable in the courts of the United States and pursue a policy to apprehend terrorists by abduction if necessary as outlined in the course of my statement.

Legislation making terrorism a crime prosecutable in the United States, backed up by clear national intent to vigorously enforce that law by whatever means may be necessary, will send a signal throughout the world that will not go unnoticed—a signal, Mr. President, which is long overdue.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 3018

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Protection of United States Government Personnel Act of 1984".

SEC. 2. (a) Part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 113 the following:

"CHAPTER 113A—TERRORIST ACTS AGAINST UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES ABROAD

"Sec.
"2321. Terrorist acts against United States government employees abroad.

"§ 2321. Terrorist acts against United States government employees abroad.

"(a) Whoever kills or attempts to kill in any foreign country, or in international waters or air space, any officer, agent or employee of the United States Government shall, if found guilty in a court of the United States, be sentenced to any term of years or imprisonment for life, and any such person found guilty of attempted murder shall be imprisoned for not more than 20 years.

"(b) Whoever assaults, strikes, wounds, imprisons or makes any other violent attack upon the person or liberty of any officer, agent, or employee of the United States Government in any foreign country or in international waters or air space, or, if likely to endanger his or her person or liberty, makes violent attacks upon his or her official premises, private accommodation, or means of transport, or attempts to commit any of the foregoing, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than three years, or both. Whoever in the commission of any such act uses a deadly or dangerous weapon shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both.

"(c) The United States may exercise jurisdiction over the alleged offense if the alleged offender is present in the United States, irrespective of the place where the offense was committed or the nationality of the victim or the alleged offender, or the manner in which the alleged offender was brought before the court.

"(d) In enforcing subsections (a) and (b), the Attorney General may request and shall receive assistance from any Federal, State, or local agency, including the Army, Navy, and Air Force, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Central Intelligence Agency, any statute, rule, or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding.".

(b) The table of chapters for part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item for Chapter 113, the following:

"113A—Terrorist acts against United States government employees abroad..... 2321".

RECOGNITION OF SENATOR TOWER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

BETTY NELSON, AIR FORCE-SENATE LIAISON

Mr. TOWER. Mr. President, I should like to bring to the attention of my distinguished colleagues a woman with whom I have worked throughout my 24 years in the Senate. I am speaking of Betty Nelson, Air Force Senate Liaison who retired August 31, 1984, after 34 years of Federal service. Betty has served with the Air Force Liaison Office since it took up residence in the Russell Senate Office Building 24 years ago.

Her colleagues assigned to the Liaison Office during the last 24 years have been made to feel right at home by Betty. No one was more patient, no one was more understanding and certainly no one was more knowledgeable in offering guidance to new personnel—and, I might add, to new Senators. I am sure all Members of the Senate are grateful to have had the benefit of Betty's wisdom and friendship through the years.

The story of Betty Nelson is one of hard work, loyalty, dedication and compassion. It is a story of a woman continually performing her duties without complaint and often under extremely stressful circumstances. Each day when Betty left for home—however later it might be—you knew the job was done, and it was done well. Any task in the hands of Betty Nelson was performed with efficiency, promptness and cheerfulness. Anyone who had encountered Betty can attest to her warmth, intelligence and sensitivity. As the years passed, she gained a reputation around the Senate as a person who could be relied upon. Few people are more widley known and respected for their professionalism than Betty. She is known throughout Washington as an expert in dealing with a full range of constituent issues relating to the Air Force and many other military matters. Betty was far and away the best expediter in this town.

Betty has been honored time and time again by her superiors who recognized the valuable resource they had in Betty. The record of awards she has accumulated is testimony to her service. While working for the Air Force, Betty received 19 outstanding performance ratings, three quality salary increases, seven cash awards for sustained superior performance, a Meritorious Civilian Service Award, and an Exceptional Civilian Service Award. This is certainly one of the most impressive records that I have seen.

I must say that we will sorely miss her. In fact, she has been retired only a few weeks and her absence already is noticed. This is the first time since I have been in the Senate that Betty was not working around the corner from my office. But Betty has worked hard and has earned her retirement. A native of St. Louis, MO, Betty plans to spend her retirement with her two lovely daughters, Patricia and Leslie Ann. She also plans to participate in a wide range of community activities in Springfield, VA. You will find out, out there in Springfield, that asking Betty to do something is like watering the lawn with a fire hose. The residents of Springfield will certainly learn to love and cherish Betty as we all have. I think I speak for all Members of the Senate as well as their staffs when I say thank you to Betty for her many years of devoted service and wish her the best of luck in the years to come.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

(Mr. TOWER assumed the chair.)

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas made some remarks about our very good mutual friend Betty Nelson on the occasion of her departing this body.

We have offices in Congress known as legislative liaison which are staffed by officers and enlisted men from the Pentagon, representing the different services, to whom we refer questions that come from our constituents relative to the problems of the military or problems of people serving in the military. Betty Nelson has served as sort of the operator of the legislative liaison office for all the years I have been here.

While I have to admit that it is very difficult to feel affection for a man officers or an entlisted man, we have no difficulty feeling affection for Betty. She is absolutely superb in her job. While she fundamentally represents the Air Force, she represents all the services and has done an outstanding job.

I join my friend from Texas in wishing her well and happiness in the years ahead.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I should like to compliment the distinguished senior Senator from Arizona for his remarks about Betty Nelson, who is departing the Senate this year.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, undoubtedly, there will be time set aside in the remaining days of this session of Congress to pay our respects to some of our brethren who are not returning. I have not been informed when that time might be. I have prepared remarks with respect to three of them. One of them happens to be the present occupant of the chair.

I ask unanimous consent that these remarks be printed in the RECORD as if read, and then when the day is set aside for eulogies, that they be repeated. But I should like to read what I have written about my friend who is in the chair.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, not to extend beyond 11:15 a.m., with statements limited therein to 5 minutes each.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REPEAL OF NEW RULES ON IMPUTED INTEREST

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I have just been visiting with my warm friend, the distinguished junior Senator from Idaho, about a matter that is close to the hearts of both of us, this question of the new imputed interest rate rules imposed recently upon the real estate industry but more importantly upon consumers in the country.

Mr. President, I call the attention of my friends in the Senate, particularly those in their offices right now who are listening to the proceedings here in the Chamber on their squawk boxes, to an excellent advertisement that appears in the Washington Post of today, Tuesday, September 25, 1984, at page A9.

It says: "Members of Congress: Don't Hurt Homeowners, Renters, Farmers, and Small Business!"

And it goes on to say:

"A mistake in the 1984 Tax Reform Act is going to cause big problems for many homeowners, renters, farmers, and small business."

And it points out that time is running out. I am not going to read the whole thing, but let me read this down here:

"If these rules are allowed to stand, then next January 1"—that is this coming January—"your constituent property owners will find it difficult—if not impossible—to sell their property if they must help buyers with financing. The higher interest rates go, the tougher the problem. Telling a property owner who faces foreclosure, and who needs to transfer that property, that he must charge the highest of high interest rates, is like telling a drowning swimmer that he must swim to shore for help."

And I want to read the close:

"It's up to you to act before Congress adjourns. You can help your constituents"—this is addressed to us in Congress—"you can help your constituents by working to repeal the new imputed interest rate law and correcting Congress' mistake. Don't have Congress increasing interest rates that buyers of property will have to pay."

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the Members of Congress ad which appears on page A9 of the Washington Post of today.

There being no objection, the ad was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS: DON'T HURT HOMEOWNERS, RENTERS, FARMERS, AND SMALL BUSINESS!

A mistake in the 1984 Tax Reform Act is going to cause big problems for many homeowners, renters, farmers and small business.

Only a few days remain before Congress adjourns for the national elections. We hope you will use this brief time to work to change the new rules on imputed interest that increase interest rates affecting homeowners, renters, farmers and small business people.

Unless you work to change them, the new rules will go into effect January 1. The government will force your constituents to charge higher interest rates when they assist the buyer in financing the sale of their property. In fact, the new interest rate is, in effect, mandated to be at least 3 percentage points higher than the freely negotiated interest rates—higher even than what the U.S. Treasury pays to finance the federal deficit.

That's not fair—or just—or wise—or what you intended when Congress passed the Tax Reform Act. Indeed, every member of Congress we've spoken to has told us that the new imputed interest rates are a mistake that must be corrected.

If these rules are allowed to stand, then next January 1 your constituent property owners will find it difficult—if not impossible—to sell their property if they must help buyers with financing. The higher interest rates go, the tougher the problem. Telling a property owner who faces foreclosure, and who needs to transfer that property, that he must charge the highest of high interest rates, is like telling a drowning swimmer that he must swim to shore for help.

You were told that the new imputed interest rate rules would increase tax revenues by $2.2 billion. Actually, the new rules would cut revenues by about $1 billion. These new rules could stop about $30 billion of apartment building, commercial and industrial property sales and cut about 95,000 full time jobs. And for those people who rent their apartments, it means higher rents and a lower budget for food and clothing.

It's up to you to act before Congress adjourns. You can help your constituents by working to repeal the new imputed interest rate law and correcting Congress' mistake. Don't have Congress increasing interest rates that buyers of property will have to pay.

National Association of Realtors.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I congratulate my friend across the aisle from me, my friend from Idaho, for the work he has done in this Senate and my friend, the senior Senator from Montana, for the work he has done on this.

I wish to say, Mr. President, that I enthusiastically join them in their attempt to reverse this serious error in judgment by Congress which tries to tell people in their private affairs when they sell their own private home to someone else who wants to buy it from them what they can charge in interest rates. I think that is positively absurd. It is the furthest extension I can imagine of Big Brother imposing his will in the lifestyle of ordinary private people in their private exchanges with one another in a very simple area of commerce. The biggest single thing the average person does in his life is to sell his own home and to buy his own home. For the average working person that is a commercial fact of life.

Mr. President, I think this ad is absolutely correct, and I call it to the attention of my colleagues.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. DIXON. I am delighted to yield to my friend from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Illinois for yielding.

Mr. President, I compliment him for bringing that ad to the attention of Congress. I agree with him that this Congress still has the opportunity to repeal that section of the 1984 tax law that passed Congress, and it should be repealed.

We do not need any compromise. We need to outright repeal it because of what this does to the law. If we believe at all in markets in the United States, which I think we all do, whether we be Republicans or Democrats, we do believe in markets and the impact competition has on interest rates, and the imputed interest section of the tax code which was to go into effect January 1, 1985, will have a tendency to force interest rates upward when we need to have competition to bring high interest rates downward.

I only say to my friends on the Finance Committee listening that I think the Finance Committee still has the opportunity to act on this and redeem a mistake which was made, and I hope that when we do have a markup of that committee, we will consider addressing this particular point in the committee and attaching it to legislation which would be germane.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, may I say to my distinguished friend from Idaho I wish to make this prediction now: If we do not repeal this it will be the first order of business in the next Congress anyway.

I remember speaking and voting against that withholding tax provision that the Senate went ahead and passed, and when we got back here we could not act quickly enough to repeal it.

My own personal experience is I received 650,000 letters from people in my State in adverse reaction to that withholding tax provision.

We finally repealed it, and if we do not do this before we leave here October 5 may I say to my friend from Idaho then I predict that when we get back here in January the first rush of business will be to see how quickly we can repeal this then.

I wish to ask all my colleagues in the Senate to avoid receiving 650,000 letters apiece, and repeal it now.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will my colleague yield again?

Mr. DIXON. I love to yield again to my friend from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I say to my colleagues that in case my colleagues have not checked in the mail, I have a Dear Colleague letter out to all Senators now asking for cosponsors to repeal this, and I hope that Members will tell their staffs to put them on that bill so that we get momentum rolling for this and it could be repealed and still be repealed between now and the end of this Congress.

I think we definitely should do it. The Senator is absolutely correct in his assessment of this. People are not going to put up with this kind of legislation in the United States. We still are a sovereign people. We still can have an impact if they flood Washington with enough mail from the folks at home, and it is unnecessary to put them through this trauma. We should repeal it now and get it settled.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. MELCHER] and I have been working on this. At the time we were calling it to the attention of the Members of the Senate here in the Chamber that it should have been repealed before we pass the act, but it is not too late to redeem this situation and save a lot of people a lot of headaches.

The Senator from Illinois is absolutely correct. It is the most outrageous example of Big Brother trying to tell people what Big Brother knows best what they should charge for interest, and that is a decision that should be made by the buyer and seller and the seller certainly should have the right to sell something for his own interest rate.

THE HOUSE-PASSED HIGHWAY BILL—H.R. 5504

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I would like to call my colleagues' attention to sections 148 and 217 in H.R. 5504, the House-passed highway bill. These two sections interfere with the way State and local governments manage their highway rights-of-way and public transit properties. They prevent local authorities from removing private structures from public land, even though they are acting under the terms of a valid lease, unless they pay the renter relocation assistance.

The purpose of these provisions appears to be to prevent Americans from making their cities and towns more attractive by removing billboards and advertising from public property. Community appearance standards have always been the prerogative of local governments. In fact, a recent Supreme Court decision, City Council of Los Angeles against Taxpayers for Vincent, upheld the rights of cities to prohibit signs on public property. The House bill is an unwarranted intrusion on this right.

In addition, the provisions sweep far too broadly than those needed to accomplish even this objectionable purpose. They require relocation assistance to remove, from highway or transit property, any private structure owned by anyone who pays rent to the State or local government. This would include not only billboards and signs on highway rights-of-way, but posters on the sides of buses, parking lots under highway bridges, even newspaper vending machines at bus stops. I would oppose any similar provisions in the Senate bill, and, if we do go to conference with the House on H.R. 5504, I hope the conferees will delete them from the conference report.

Mr. STAFFORD. I share the concern of the Senator from Washington. These two provisions were floor amendments in the House. Their purpose is ostensibly to prevent a local official from arbitrarily removing structures from highway or transit property. But this protection is not needed, because any renter who is the victim of arbitrary action has available already all of the remedies in the lease. These provisions grant a windfall to existing leaseholders at the expense of State and local taxpayers. They also give private parties unprecedented rights in public lands.

The amendments' sponsor in the House said that these provisions would encourage States to make money from public property by making it difficult to cancel leases. In fact, the provisions would do just the opposite. It is now common for States to enter into short-term leases with occupants of public property for many reasons. Under the House bill, however, including new standards on relocation assistance, agencies acting under valid terms of a lease would still be required to pay at least $1,000, and possibly up to $20,000, per structure for removal, or else lose highway funds. Under these conditions State and local governments are far more likely not to lease their property, and to leave it idle.

Mr. GARN. I join my colleagues in protesting this intrusion into the affairs and contracts of State and local governments. Under the House bill, one way for a State or local government to avoid having to pay relocation assistance for displacing rental structures is if the State passes a law expressly authorizing this displacement.

The Federal Government should not lightly mandate changes in State laws, either directly or through the pressure of withholding highway or transit funds. In this case, States are being put in the position of needing State laws to reverse the effects of a completely unnecessary Federal mandate. There is simply no reason for the Federal Government to interfere with these leases. They are not unconstitutional, they are not illegal, and they are not unfair. The House provisions disregard the traditional right of cities to manage their environments, and their property, as they see fit.

Mr. STAFFORD. I have received several letters from State transit authorities, which I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT,
Boise, ID, August 13, 1984.

Re H.R. 5504—Section 148.

Senator ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Senate Environment and Public Works Committee, Senate Hart Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STAFFORD: Section 148 of H.R. 5504 would adversely impact the Idaho Transportation Department in its dealings with private lessees of state owned property and structures.

After the Idaho Transportation Department purchases land and structures for highway purposes there is usually a period of time between the vacation of the premises by prior owners and the time the property is needed for highway purposes. Up to now, the Idaho Transportation Department has routinely entered into short-term leases with private individuals concerning such property. Such leases provide that the lessee understands that the leased premises will be needed for highway purposes shortly and that the lease can be cancelled upon thirty days notice. If the State of Idaho would be required to pay relocation benefits to such lessees as provided in Section 148, the effect would be that this agency would not consider leasing such property on a short-term basis. The net effect would be a loss of income to the State of Idaho and the wasting of usable assets.

I would urge that Section 148 be amended so that this agency can continue to realize maximum revenue for the taxpayer.

Sincerely yours,

E. DEAN TISDALE,
Acting Director.

STATE OF NEW MEXICO,
TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT,
Santa Fe, NM, August 28, 1984.

Senator ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STAFFORD: We learned recently that the House has passed the Surface Transportation Assistance Act (H.R. 5504) with major modifications regarding relocation payments. The revision to the Act is directed at public bodies who receive funds under the Act and who receive rental income from any type of structure owned by a private entity and located on property owned by the public body. The amendment provides that the public body (1) may not remove the structure unless it is directly necessitated by the operation, maintenance, or construction of the transportation system, and unless the removal is expressly authorized by State statute and is in accordance with the terms of the rental agreement, and (2) shall pay the owner of the property relocation assistance upon removal. Our understanding is that the change in the legislation was introduced with two intentions: to prevent arbitrary and capricious actions by State officials regarding rental property contracts and to encourage States to receive income from legitimate business sources such as rental property. We are in agreement with both of these points. However, we have determined that the amendment, as written, would probably hamper development of the very business opportunities it is seeking to promote and would thus have an adverse impact on Federally funded transportation projects in the State of New Mexico.

Over the past few years, transportation providers throughout the country have engaged in a variety of business ventures in an effort to create new financing mechanisms for public transportation. Many of these projects have hinged on the theory that public investments can produce income if the benefits are not given away or ignored altogether, as has been done in the past. A number of public entities have entered into successful joint development projects, wherein public investments were used to stimulate private development, in order to provide benefits to both public and private parties and achieve results which would not have taken place without the cooperation. Some of these projects have been quite complex. Other income producing projects have involved only simple rental agreements. The key point is that these joint development projects and other methods of creating income from public investments are still evolving. Their potential as revenue producers has not been fully explored and we have certainly not even scratched the surface of opportunities in New Mexico. Presumably as public transportation develops in New Mexico the transportation industry will contribute much to urban infrastructure development and will have the potential to be a prime beneficiary of future projects of this type. The amendment, as it is proposed, places a contingency on public entities entering contractual agreements which puts them at a disadvantage. Public entities will face uncertain, and possibly unreasonable, costs if conditions change and it becomes necessary to modify or terminate agreements. Essentially this amendment asks the public sector to bear a greater share of the risk than the private sector where contractual agreements are made. Thus, the amendment is likely to stimulate caution rather than innovation in financing of public transportation.

With regard to the issue of preventing arbitrary and capricious actions by State officials, illegal displacement of a lessee from state property can be contested by the issue in court as a contractual violation. It is unnecessary as a provision of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act.

It would be unfortunate if this amendment passes. We are, therefore, asking for your support in defeating this measure if it appears in the Senate bill and as it goes to the Conference Committee.

If you have questions regarding our position, please contact my office. We appreciate your support.

Sincerely,

JUDITH M. ESPINOSA,
Secretary.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION,
Salem, OR, September 10, 1984.

Hon. ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, Senate Dirksen Office Building, Washington, DC.

We wish to call your attention to Section 148 of the House-passed Surface Transportation Act (H.R. 5504) which interferes with each state's right to hold and manage its highway right-of-way.

This provision prohibits state transportation agencies from displacing privately-owned rental structures (including buildings and billboards) from public highway properties unless relocation assistance is paid or certain other conditions are met. Currently, relocation payments are made only on the initial acquisition of rights-of-way. Payments are not required under subsequent contracts between the state and private lessees; the state has the option to terminate a lease per the terms of its contract with the lessee.

If enacted, the provisions of Section 148 would impair existing lease contracts by providing unjustified windfall compensation for lessees. Therefore, we ask your support in ensuring that this provision is not included in the Senate Highway Bill (S 2527).

FRED D. MILLER, Director.

IN TRIBUTE TO SANDFORD ZEE PERSONS

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, when I learned of the recent death of Sandford Zee Persons, I experienced a sense of real personal loss.

At the time of his death, Sandy Persons was director of development for the World Federalists Association. Earlier, he was vice president of that organization.

My first opportunity to work closely with Sandy came while he was with Members of Congress for Peace Through Law. He joined MCPL in 1969 and became its executive director in 1971. Sandy was very proud that MCPL was the first bicameral, bipartisan organization of its type on Capitol Hill. He left MCPL in 1978 to become involved in fundraising for the World Federalists Association.

A native of Aurora, NY, Sandy was in the Navy and the Marines in World War II, serving in the Pacific. He was graduated from Yale University in 1947. He was involved in regional activities of the World Federalists before coming to Washington in 1959.

In all the years in which I knew him, Sandy Persons never wavered from his steadfast commitment to strengthened international institutions. He did all that he could to help Members of Congress appreciate the value of the United Nations and the ways in which it might be made better and more effective.

A man of boundless enthusiasm and energy, he brought a wit and charm to his work. A number of Senators and Members of the House grew to have enormous respect and liking for Sandy Persons.

Earlier, this year, Sandy was of great help to me as I prepared Senate Concurrent Resolution 125, the common security resolution. I introduced that resolution on June 19 with six other cosponsors.

The resolution recalls the groundwork for arms control laid so carefully in 1961 in the McCloy-Zorin agreement on the "Joint Statement of Agreed Principles for Disarmament Negotiations." That agreement specified that the goal of negotiations is to achieve agreement on a program that will ensure that disarmament is general and complete and that disarmament is accomplished by reliable procedures for the peaceful settlement of disputes and effective arrangements for the maintenance of peace.

Sandy and I agreed that the McCloy-Zorin principles could have validity today in helping us get back on a course toward disarmament and in strengthening the peacekeeping capabilities of the United Nations. Sandy worked very hard to help gain understanding of and support for the resolution.

In his work on the common security resolution and in his other efforts over the years, Sandy never sought personal acclaim. His interest was not in his own benefit, but that of his fellow citizens. Throughout his life, Sandy did what he could to make the world better, and that was a great deal, indeed. We shall miss him.

Thank you, Mr. President.

NICARAGUA'S ACCEPTANCE OF THE DRAFT CONTADORA TREATY

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, there is cause for great concern today about the prospects for peace in Central America if recent reports in the press are accurately reflecting the views of the administration regarding Nicaragua and the Contadora process. I am, of course, referring to articles which reported that officials of the Department of State responded negatively to the Nicaraguan Government's announcement on September 21 that it would accept the draft treaty produced by the Contadora nations after almost 2 years of laborious and painstaking work with the five Central American nations. According to the reports, administration officials said that the negative response was based in part on concerns that the Sandinistas would benefit from a public relations coup because it would seem to put the Nicaraguans on the side of peace while the United States would be put on the defensive and that it would raise questions about the continuing hostility of the United States toward the Nicaraguans.

If the reports are true, it raises serious questions about the actual desire of the administration to see a successful Contadora peace process. Furthermore, it reinforces the belief, held by many, that the administration is only paying lip service to Contadora, not really giving its full support, and thus dooming it to failure. It seems that administration officials in a clear miscalculation, perhaps clouded by a politically colored haze, did not believe the Sandinistas would agree to sign the draft treaty. The Nicaraguans obviously believe Contadora is in their best national interests, but this point seems to have been missed by some administration officials.

In past months, the administration has assured Members of Congress and the American public that it strongly supports the Contadora process and that Nicaragua should also support it by abiding by provisions that were being molded into a final treaty. Now, instead of hailing the Nicaraguan decision to accept the draft Contadora proposal, instead of calling it a major step toward peace in the region, instead of expressing gratification that the hard work of Mexico, Panama, Venezuela, and Colombia—the Contadora nations—is finally bearing fruit, the administration calls Nicaragua's announcement a publicity ploy.

The Nicaraguan announcement should have brought great joy to Washington because of what the Nicaraguans have accepted. The text of the draft treaty has not been made public but reportedly, according to diplomats and others close to the process, it would require that the signatory nations offer amnesty to political dissidents, hold impartial elections, and end support for groups fighting to overthrow other governments. The important question of verification is yet to be resolved, but the United States should be elated that the democracy provisions are obligatory provisions of the draft treaty. The agreement, according to reports, additionally calls for the closing of all foreign military bases in Central America and would ban future construction of foreign bases; it would start a process to reduce and eventually eliminate foreign military advisers. Reportedly, it sets limits on the size of armies and on the quality and quantity of their arms. It also provides for a moratorium on the import of heavy arms until permanent limits are set. Furthermore, it also calls for an end to all international military maneuvers within 30 days of the signing of the agreement.

The administration's negative reaction to the Nicaraguan decision must have the Sandinista leadership and our friends in the area thoroughly confused and perplexed. The U.S. administration vigorously pressed for democracy provisions, and in the five meetings with the Nicaraguans urged that Nicaragua accept the Contadora proposals. Now when Nicaragua announces that it will accept the draft treaty the administration charges that it is a publicity stunt.

I believe that there is still on opportunity for the administration to clarify its policy toward the Nicaraguan acceptance of the Contadora treaty. It is time for the more reasoned officials in the Department of State and elsewhere in the administration to prevail in the cause of peace in Central America. The Contadora process which could be on the eve of the major breakthrough that so many in this region of the world awaited with so much hope, needs a vigorous boost from the U.S. Government. Anything less, could very well signal the end of perhaps the last chance for peace in the region. As it was recognized from the very beginning, if the United States does not support Contadora, if the United States does not really want a Contadora treaty, there is no chance in the world that the Contadora peace process would produce anything but a meaningless pile of papers.

HOSPITAL MEDICARE REIMBURSEMENT WAGE INDEX FORMULA

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, 2 years ago the Congress established a new system for reimbursing hospitals for medicare treatments. The reimbursement formula was created by the Department of Health and Human Services, Health Care Financing Administration [HCFA]. In establishing the system the Congress recognized that the reimbursement rates for medicare treatment must be adjusted to account for differences between labor costs in urban and rural areas.

Unfortunately, the Health Care Financing Administration approved regulations creating the reimbursement wage index formula which penalize many small and rural hospitals across the Midwest. The HCFA formula ignores the fact that many smaller and rural hospitals employ part-time workers to help hold down operating costs. By ignoring the cost-control efforts of these hospitals, HCFA penalizes them through the wage index used to determine hospital reimbursement for medicare treatments.

The current reimbursement formula discriminates against hospitals which employ large numbers of part-time employees. The reimbursement formula uses the total number of employees divided by the total wages paid to determine the medicare reimbursement to hospitals. The formula does not take into account that a large force of part-time employees reduces the hospital reimbursement, but not the cost of the medicare treatment. As a result rural and small hospitals are short changed in their reimbursement.

In response to the efforts of this Senator and others, HCFA established a task force to study this matter and Nebraska was fortunate to have two representatives on this task force. In addition, section 2316 of the Deficit Reduction Act specifically directed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop a new wage index which considers the use of part-time employees. Mr. President, this flagrant disregard for the law and will of the Congress simply must stop.

Despite the specific direction from Congress and the work of the task force, HCFA has failed to revise the wage index formula. The formula was not fair to many Midwest rural hospitals when it was created and it is not fair today. If it means enacting further legislation to correct the wage index problem then we Midwest Senators should seriously consider that avenue before any hospitals are backed up against the financial wall.

The Hospital Associations of Nebraska, Iowa, and Kansas held a series of press conferences in Omaha, Des Moines, and Topeka on Monday to bring this important matter to the attention of the public. I could not attend those press conferences to emphasize the seriousness of the situation, but I will make their case for them here on the Senate floor.

The Midwest hospital officials have been protesting about the index for months. HCFA has stated they need to collect more information before they have a completely accurate picture of the problem. Harlan Heald, acting president of the Nebraska Hospital Association has estimated that Nebraska hospitals alone could lose about $9 million over 4 years under the current reimbursement formula.

The current wage index problem is also a matter of critical concern to citizens who live in the Midwestern rural areas. These hospitals have worked in good faith to comply with the reimbursement formula and we must ensure that they are reimbursed in a fair and equitable amount. Many of the elderly must drive miles to obtain hospital care, and the unfair wage index formula, if not corrected, could force them to drive even farther.

I urge my colleagues to contact Secretary of Health and Human Services about this matter, to encourage her to comply with the original congressional directive to establish a new wage index which does not penalize Midwestern hospitals.

I ask unanimous consent that the following be printed in the RECORD: a letter from Senators DOLE, KASSEBAUM, GRASSLEY, JEPSEN, ZORINSKY, and myself to Secretary Heckler; a letter from myself to Harlan Heald, acting president of the Nebraska Hospital Association; the September 24, 1984, Omaha World Herald story entitled "Hospital Groups Rap Medicare Wage Index"; and the Omaha World Herald story entitled "Agency Trying To Get Pay Data From Hospitals."

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE, SCIENCE, AND TRANSPORTATION,
Washington, DC, September 24, 1984.

Hon. MARGARET M. HECKLER,
Secretary, Department of Health and Human Services, Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY HECKLER: We are writing to urge your prompt action in adjusting the hospital area wage index under the Medicare prospective payment system. This is a matter of critical importance to many hospitals in our states, particularly those located in rural areas.

We were disappointed that the final regulations dealing with fiscal year 1985 prospective payment rates did not include revisions in the wage index to correct the inequities experienced by hospitals which utilize a high proportion of part-time employees. There is broad recognition of the deficiencies of the Bureau of Labor Statistics wage index now being used, particularly as it relates to regional variations in part-time employment. Above average use of part-time rather than full-time personnel is common among small, rural hospitals as they make reasonable attempts to deal with decreased utilization.

The hospitals of our states have acknowledged the need for Medicare reimbursement reform and have worked in good faith to promote the goals of the new prospective payment system. The ultimate success of the program relies heavily, however, on its equitable application. Small, rural hospitals literally cannot afford further delay in obtaining necessary adjustments based on a realistic acknowledgement of their full-time/part-time personnel mix.

With these concerns in mind, we respectfully request that you make every effort to complete the work underway within the Department on this matter so that appropriate adjustments can be made.

Warmest regards,

Senators Bob Dole, Nancy Landon Kassebaum, Charles E. Grassley, J. James Exon, Roger W. Jepsen, and Edward Zorinsky.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, September 21, 1984.

Mr. HARLAN M. HEALD,
Nebraska Hospital Association, Lincoln, NE.

DEAR MR. HEALD: Thank you for your letter of September 19 regarding the press conferences on the "wage index" problem.

As you know, the Senate is in the last few days of this legislative session so I regret that I will not be able to attend the Omaha press conference. Nevertheless, I commend you for your efforts to bring this important matter to the attention of the public, and I will continue my efforts in Washington, D.C., to resolve this problem.

The "wage index" problem is a matter of great importance to a number of hospitals in Nebraska. When the Congress approved the new prospective payment system for hospitals, we recognized that the reimbursement rates under Medicare should be adjusted to account for differences between labor costs in urban and rural areas. The distinction between urban and rural areas is useful and reflects legitimate differences in the costs of operating hospitals.

Unfortunately, the Health Care Financing Administration has adopted regulations which effectively penalize a number of Nebraska hospitals for using part-time employees. In response to the concerns of hospitals across the Midwest, HCFA established a task force to study the matter and Nebraska was fortunate to have two representatives on that task force. Despite the work of this task force and the specific direction of Congress to do so, HCFA has failed to revise the "wage index" provisions to correct the inequities that exist.

The small, rural hospitals of Nebraska cannot afford further delay on the part of the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Thank you again for letting me know about your plans for the three regional press conferences. Please assure the members of the Association that I will continue my efforts to resolve this problem.

With best wishes.

Cordially,

J. JAMES EXON,
U.S. Senator.

ORGANIZATIONS SEE BIG LOSS: HOSPITAL GROUPS RAP MEDICARE WAGE INDEX

(By Mary McGrath)

Three Midwestern hospital associations Monday called on the federal government to correct a wage index that they say will cause hospitals in Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas to lose an estimated $36 million in four years.

Officials of the Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas Hospital Associations were flying to Des Moines, Topeka and Omaha Monday for press conferences on the matter.

At issue is the area wage index used in computing payments under Medicare's new prospective payment system for hospitals. A three-year phase-in of the system began Oct. 1, 1983.

Congress had directed that the wage index be changed by Oct. 1, but it now appears that it will not be, the hospital officials said.

Midwestern hospitals have been protesting about the index for months because they say it pegs local wage rates too low, reducing Medicare payments.

$9 MILLION LOSS

Harlan Heald, the Nebraska association's acting president, said a rough estimate is that Nebraska hospitals would lose $9 million over four years. He and others were interviewed in advance of the press conferences.

Robert Cottrell is head of the Ogallala Community Hospital and chairman of the Nebraska Hospital Association board. He said the Ogallala hospital would lose $97,350 in revenue if the index is not changed. That would be about 4 percent of its anticipated gross income.

Kansas Hospital Association officials estimate the impact there at $12 million, based on a study the association did.

Iowa officials projected a loss of $15 million. Both the Nebraska and Iowa figures were arrived at by working from the data developed in Kansas, officials said.

NEBRASKA AMONG LOWEST

Officials said reduced Medicare payments can be expected to force hospitals to charge other patients more and, in some cases, to borrow money or ask for more support from local government.

Donald Dunn, president of the Des Moines-based Iowa Hospital Association, said the wage index plus additional strain on some hospitals—especially in rural areas—that are struggling to adjust to reduced use of hospitals.

Rural hospitals typically have a large percentage of elderly patients covered by Medicare.

Midwestern hospital officials maintain that the wage index does not take into account the number of part-time employees used in this region.

The wage index for rural Nebraska, for example, was the lowest among all the states. Only Puerto Rico was lower.

Heald said that a year ago, about 30 to 35 percent of Nebraska hospital employees were part-timers, and the percentage probably is higher now.

He said that if the wage index is adjusted, hospitals in all parts of Nebraska stand to gain.

Hospitals last year asked their congressional delegations to change the wage index.

EXON-DOLE PROPOSAL

Sens. J. J. Exon, D-Neb., and Robert Dole, R-Kans., co-sponsored a measure that directed the Department of Health and Human Services to change the index and adjust hospital payments retroactively.

"Everyone agreed that the index wasn't fair," Cottrell said.

"But the Health Care Financing Administration has failed to keep its promise to correct the flaws within the area wage index by Oct. 1, 1984," he said.

"We do not advocate special treatment for Midwestern hosptials. We do demand that the Department of Health and Human Services be fair," he said.

He said the three state associations are calling on department Secretary Margaret Heckler to make the change.

The associations' officials also called on President Reagan to instruct Mrs. Heckler to change the wage index if the Department of Health and Human Services does not act.

Association officials also are seeking help from the American Hospital Association.

Others scheduled to attend the afternoon press conference at Eppley Airfield in Omaha were LeRoy Rheault, head of Good Samaritan Hospital in Kearney; Jon L. Jensen of Maquoketa, board chairman of the Iowa Hospital Association; Don Wilson of Topeka and Sister Elizabeth Stover of Concordia, president and board chairman of the Kansas Hospital Association.

AGENCY TRYING TO GET PAY DATA FROM HOSPITALS

(By Mary Kay Quinlan)

WASHINGTON.—Midlands congressmen say they have been trying for a year to get the Department of Health and Human Services to change a Medicare reimbursement formula that rural hospitals say is unfair.

But so far, congressional staff members said, the department's Health Care Financing Administration has not set a deadline for modifying the payment rules.

A spokesman for the Health Care Financing Administration said the agency is trying to gather the data necessary to make the change rural hospitals are seeking but has not gathered enough "to really come up with a completely accurate picture."

This week, department Secretary Margaret Heckler will receive letters signed by about two dozen senators and House members from rural states, including the entire Nebraska delegation, urging a prompt resolution to the issue.

"This is a matter of critical importance to many hospitals in our states," the six senators from Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas said in their letter to Mrs. Heckler Monday.

"Small rural hospitals literally cannot afford further delay in obtaining necessary adjustments" in the wage index that affects how much hospitals are paid for treating Medicare patients, they added.

TAUKE LETTER

In the House, a letter circulated by Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, which will go to Mrs. Heckler later this week, expressed concern that additional delays could endanger improvements made in recent years in rural health care.

"Our rural hospitals cannot wait for studies and possible relief in the future," it said. "It will come too late, if at all, to save them."

Tauke's letter had 16 co-signers by Monday morning, including all three Nebraska House members and western Iowa Rep. Berkley Bedell.

Department officials acknowledged the need for a revised wage index since last year, but members of Congress who have been following the issue say the department has been dragging its feet.

Aides to Nebraska and Iowa congressmen said the department indicated early this year it would incorporate the wage index changes when it issued new Medicare reimbursement regulations for the 1985 fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1.

In addition, a deficit reduction act passed in June instructed the department to study and develop a new wage index and report the results within 30 days.

The new Medicare regulations were issued late last month without the wage index changes rural hospitals sought.

BENDING OVER BACKWARD

John Kittrell, spokesman for the Health Care Financing Administration, said the agency has sought certified salary data from every hospital in the Medicare program and to date has received responses from 80 percent of them.

"We don't feel like that's enough to issue a new index," he said, adding:

"We're bending over backwards to call the ones we haven't heard from. We want it (the new index) to be just as accurate as possible."

Kittrell said he did not know when the new index would be finished.

Whenever it is, he added, the law requires it to be retroactive to Oct, 1, 1983, when the new Medicare payment system took effect.

SMOKING PREVENTION HEALTH AND EDUCATION ACT OF 1983

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I would like to express my strong support for the Smoking Prevention Health and Education Act of 1983, S. 772 and to urge the Senate leadership to schedule floor consideration of this measure or the House-passed counterpart, H.R. 3979, prior to the adjournment of the 98th Congress.

These measures reflect a true compromise in the best possible sense, serving the public interest by resolving differences between the health community, the tobacco industry, and the advertising industry. Both bills properly address the concerns of the health community by requiring stronger, more detailed, and more varied warnings than have ever been required in our Nation's history of dealing with this issue. These warnings are infinitely stronger than any others ever adopted since the first Surgeon General's warning was issued in 1964. The health community worked with great skill and balance in contributing to this compromise. They deserve special recognition for their efforts.

While these strong warnings, which I sincerely hope will become law before this body adjourns, require a rotational system in order to accommodate the large volume of information required, it is the clear intent of the legislation to permit the tobacco and advertising industries the flexibility in developing rotational programs that will facilitate its implementation without placing an undue burden on their ability to operate freely in the marketplace.

I have long admired the creative skills of the professional practitioners of the advertising media both in the marketplace and in the time and money so freely dedicated to using those skills in the public interest through public service advertising campaigns. I have had long professional experience with the outdoor advertising industry. I am pleased that those who worked diligently to bring this compromise to fruition apparently recognized the need to allow all those media involved sufficient freedom to adopt systems consistent with the individual technical constraints each separate medium faces in the day-to-day mechanics of practicing their craft.

Finally, the two bills allow the tobacco industry to continue to employ hundreds of thousands of farmers and workers who depend on it for their livelihood. It is worth noting here that many individuals both within and representing the tobacco industry put forth a prodigious good faith effort, often at great personal sacrifice, to enable all of the diverse parties involved to come to a mutually acceptable agreement. These sacrifices made by the tobacco industry and its representatives were reflected in their relinquishing long established marketing practices.

I commend the tobacco industry for their farsighted accommodation, the health community for their diligence, and the advertising industry for their assistance in bringing such important legislation to this point.

Again, I urge the Senate leadership to schedule floor action on this measure prior to the adjournment of the 98th Congress and likewise, urge my colleagues to join me in support of its passage.

A MOMENT OF TRUTH FOR NICARAGUA

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it is a critical moment in the history of Nicaragua. For the Sandinistas, it is a moment of testing and truth. Many people are asking: "Is there room for real democracy and genuinely free elections in Nicaragua, or are the promises of the revolution only words, as the Reagan administration has claimed?" For the opposition forces inside Nicaragua, it is a moment of great challenge and opportunity. Many people are asking, "Do the opposition forces dare to enter these elections and compete for the office of President with a serious candidate and a serious campaign, or are they so afraid of legitimating the elections by their participation—and perhaps of legitimating a Sandinista electoral victory—that they decline to participate?"

There is good news, and there is bad news.

The good news is that there is still hope. For one thing, the Nicaraguan Government just announced its intention of signing the Contadora agreement, thereby publicly committing itself to national reconciliation and free elections. For another, the opposition forces have finally united behind a nationally respected and popular candidate in Arturo Cruz. He is still negotiating with the Nicaraguan Government in an effort, he says, to obtain guarantees that the election will be truly free and that the rules for the campaign will be genuinely fair. He still has hope that the Sandinistas will recognize that an election without his participation cannot make the same claims to legitimacy as would an election with his participation. He still has hope that the Sandinistas will agree to some basic ground rules, and that they will agree to postpone the day of the election to allow him and his coalition to run a vigorous and unfettered national campaign.

But there is bad news about this election, too. This is to be found in the report from Robert Leiken in his recent article, "Nicaragua's Untold Stories," in this week's issue of the New Republic. Mr. Leiken is a distinguished observer of events in Central America, and he has a reputation for balance and objectivity. He is the editor of an important collection of essays, "Central America: Anatomy of Conflict" and now works as a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Mr. Leiken visited Nicaragua with his brother, an American labor activist, and came back with the news that it is hard for an opposition candidate to run a campaign for president in Nicaragua today. He described a rally organized by Arturo Cruz's supporters in Chinandega. Despite the fact that Chinandega is "historically the heart of Sandinista organizing efforts and support," thousands of Nicaraguans turned out to hear what Arturo Cruz had to say, only to run into the disruptions of the government-organized turbas. According to Leiken:

When Cruz began to speak, dozens of turbas armed with sticks, stones, and machetes surrounded the field. They came in on what appeared to be army trucks chanting, "Power to the people." They proceeded to break the windows and puncture the tires of demostrators' cars. The police seemed to make no serious effort to restrain them. When the turbas attacked the demonstrators themselves, opposition youths dispersed, only to return wielding their own sticks and stones. Outnumbered, the turbas were routed.

Leiken goes on to say:

What happened at Chinandega strongly suggests that neither a genuine election nor a genuine campaign can take place.

Leiken's conclusions are disheartening. He states that:

The Sandinistas find themselves in a quandary. Will they back down and permit Cruz to run under reasonable conditions, or will they go ahead with a discredited election? Thus far at least, the Sandinistas seem unwilling to pay the price of submitting their rule to a popular test.

But it is too early to tell yet what will happen in Nicaragua. If one thing is certain, it is that the forces of democracy are bubbling within that troubled society. It may be true, as Bob Leiken says, that "Authentic elections may be the last chance to avert full-scale civil war." But it is no less true that authentic elections could also bring about a final and lasting peace. The die has not yet been cast.

It is clear that the Sandinistas have already taken some specific and significant steps in the direction of democracy in Nicaragua, but it is also clear that they have not gone far enough yet. We can only hope that the Sandinistas will recognize that the path toward peace inside Nicaragua really does depend ultimately upon a genuinely open political process, and that the revolution for which they fought so long and so hard will only be strengthened if the people of Nicaragua are given a real chance freely and openly to choose their own leaders.

I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Leiken's article be inserted in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NICARAGUA'S UNTOLD STORIES

(By Robert S. Leiken)

The 72-year-old señora lives in a solid stone house constructed by the Sandinista government. Her son, German Pomares, was a founder of the Sandinista National Liberation Front (F.S.L.N.) who perished leading the final offensive against Somoza in 1979. Set off by a well-kept garden from the shacks of the cotton field workers of El Viejo, Mrs. Pomares's home appears comfortable. But inside, the mother of the nationally revered martyr sleeps on a cot covered with rags, and she hobbles through bare, unfurnished rooms. She lives on a pension equivalent to $10 a month. She has made four trips to the local hospital, but has yet to succeed in getting a doctor's appointment. Three times she has requested an audience with Comandante Tomas Borge, now the sole surviving founder of the F.S.L.N. Each time, her son's old comrade has refused to receive her.

For one who has sympathized with the Sandinistas, it is painful to look into the house they are building, but it is unwise not to. I spent ten days in Nicaragua in August, accompanied by my brother, a trade unionist from Boston. It was my sixth visit since the revolution, and my longest since 1981. I have testified in Congress against aid to the contras and have supported (and continue to support) negotiations to end the civil war in El Salvador. Yet each succeeding trip to Nicaragua drains my initial reservoir of sympathy for the Sandinistas. Last year I wrote in my introduction to a book treated by the press as the "Democratic alternative to the Kissinger Report" that the Sandinistas' "failure to preserve the revolutionary alliance with the middle class and small producers as well as sectarian political and cultural policies [had] polarized the country, led to disinvestment, falling productivity and wages, labor discontent, and an agrarian crisis." This visit convinced me that the situation is far worse than I had thought, and disabused me of some of the remaining myths about the Sandinista revolution.

Everywhere we went we confronted the disparity between these myths and the unpleasant truth. The Sandinistas blame Nicaragua's economic crisis on the contra war and U.S. economic sanctions. Yet the standard of living in Nicaragua was deteriorating well before the U.S.-backed contras turned to economic sabotage in the spring of 1983. A December 1981 internal staff memorandum of the International Monetary Fund found that real wages had fallen 71 percent since July 1979. They have continued to decline in succeeding years. And even with the U.S. "economic boycott," over 25 percent of Nicaragua's exports still go to the United States, not much less than under Somoza. Nicaragua can no longer sell sugar at subsidized prices to the United States, but what it has lost in this market it has sold to Iran at prices above those of the world market. The war and U.S. sanctions have compounded a mess created by the Sandinistas themselves.

Nicaraguans themselves do not seem to accept Sandinista claims that Yanqui aggression is responsible for the general scarcity of consumer goods. Peasants are obligated to sell their goods to the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, and contend that its prices are too low to enable them to make ends meet. A large portion of the peasantry is now producing only for its own consumption, and the resulting shortages have dramatically driven up prices. The marketplace, once the bustling center of Nicaraguan life, is now a daunting experience for buyers and sellers alike. As shoppers make the rounds looking for rice, beans, milk, toilet paper, soap, or light bulbs, the shopkeepers' constant reply is "No hay" (There isn't any). For anyone unable to afford the inflated prices or without the foreign exchange to shop at the new foreign currency stores, Eastern European-style queuing is now routine.

One of the most depressing aspects of our trip was to hear from so many that their lives are worse today than they were at the time of Somoza. Before the revolution Nicaraguans ate well by Central American standards. Thanks to the country's fertile soil and its small population, even poor Nicaraguans were accustomed to beef and chicken. Now consumer goods available to the masses in other Central American countries are no longer obtainable. Barefoot children are hardly uncommon in the region, but I had never seen so many completely naked. As we encountered them, their distended stomachs displaying the telltale signs of malnutrition, Nicaraguans would bitterly recall the government slogan, "Los niños son los mimados de la revolucion" ("Children are the spoiled ones of the revolution").

The shortage of basic necessities is also breeding pervasive corruption. When we asked a rual storekeeper why he was able to sell Coca-Cola while many restaurants in Managua were not, he said that he had obtained the soft drink with a bribe. We later met Ramiro, a Coca-Cola deliveryman in León and a former member of the F.S.L.N., hitchhiking home from the city of Chinandega. He was returning from his five-hour weekly excursion after work to procure the three bottles of milk his children need. The milk cost him 150 cordobas, 30 percent of his weekly wages. (The official exchange rate is 28 cordobas to the dollar; the real, or black market, exchange rate is 250 to 1.) To get the money, he told us, he accepts bribes from some of his customers for extra cases of Coke. "This system is corrupting me against my will," he said.

Ramiro's desperate measures hardly merit censure. But others, especially high-ranking Sandinistas, are turning big profits from the scarcity. Members of a leather workers cooperative in Masaya told us that they are officially allotted 10,000 meters of leather a month; they receive between 5,000 and 7,000 meters. The cooperatives' Sandinista directors sell the remainder in Managua's Eastern Market and pocket the money. It is now a general practice for coordinators of the neighborhood Sandinista Defense Committees (C.D.S.) to sell part of the provisions allotted to them by the government on the private market. The people are then informed that provisions have run out.

In the village of El Transito, two hours northwest of Managua, most of the people belonged to the C.D.S. at the outset of the revolution. Now there is but one member, the coordinator, formerly the village's leading Somocista. (The transformation of Somocistas into Sandinistas and of Sandinistas into oppositionists is very common. In every town we visited we were told that former Somoza officials are now running C.D.S.'s.) The coordinator enriches himself by selling C.D.S. foodstuffs and supplies in the Eastern Market. As we passed his house, we were able to peer through the window and see him standing there in his dark glasses, isolated and reviled.

The life-styles of the new rich contrast vividly with that of the rest of the country, and with official rhetoric. A Sandinista nomenklatura has emerged. Party members shop at hard-currency stores, dine at luxury restaurants restricted to party officials, and vacation in the mansions of the Somoza dynasty, labeled "protocol houses." Vans pull up daily at government and party offices, to deliver ham, lobster, and other delicacies unavailable elsewhere. In a private state dining room, I ate a sumptuous meal with a comandante at a long table, attended by five servants. The image of the protruding stomachs of the "spoiled ones of the revolution" intruded while we consumed our lemon meringue pie.

Intellectuals and former officials claim the decadence is endemic in upper government and party echelons. A former Sandinista diplomat recounted tales of high jinks and extravagance by Sandinista officials on foreign junkets, and women state employees complained of the same sexual harassment and blackmail that is common elsewhere in Central America. The swinging Sandinista leadership cynically presents an image of revolutionary asceticism to the outside world while being addicted to the very vices that it routinely denounces in "degenerate bourgeois society."

The widespread corruption from the lowest to the highest levels of government makes it hard for Nicaraguans to accept the notion that their problems originate from abroad, or that they should endure further sacrifices "to confront the imperialist enemy." A jobless worker in the Indian town of Monimbo complained, "The C.D.S. insists that we unscrew the street lights to conserve energy in the fight against imperialism. People are falling in holes while the Sandinistas get rich on our misery. What are their sacrifices?"

Those Sandinistas who have refused to be corrupted recognize that their dreams have turned into a nightmare. One government official, a good friend, told me, "We have given birth to a freak. But we must keep him alive." Yet what is to be done when the freak becomes a menace to its people and neighbors? There is a general impression among those in the United States properly aghast at the C.I.A. mining of ports and U.S. support for the professional torturers among the contras that the Sandinistas are the victims, not the victimizers. Inside Nicaragua, however, the image is reversed.

The word Nicaraguans employ the most frequently to describe the Sandinista government is engaño (hoax or trick). In the city of Chinandega, we talked with transport workers from an opposition union who on their own time and with their union dues had painted road signs to make the city safer for driving. The Sandinista government took credit for the improvement. The national literacy campaign is one of the most vaunted achievements of the revolution, praised even by many of the government's critics. Yet two "graduates" of the literacy program in a peasant village told us they could not read their diplomas. We couldn't find one student from the campaign there or in the neighboring village who had learned to read. The campaign did somewhat better in the larger cities such as León, where, we were told, some had learned to read in follow-up courses. But most had forgotten the little they had learned, and at best could now only sign their name for election registration.

The most outrageous engaño occurred during Pope John Paul II's visit to Managua in March 1983. According to Sandinista accounts, the Pope's mass had been "spontaneously" interrupted by the crowd, offended by the Pope's failure to heed the request of mourning mothers who wanted him to pray for their sons killed in the battle against the contras. Two former government officials, who are still Sandinista supporters, told us a different story. They had been appalled at the interruptions made by cadre from the Sandinista women's organization, furnished with microphones and loudspeakers. After the Pope left, the crowd departed in disgust and the Sandinista leadership was left awkwardly standing on the platform. The two officials, depressed by the spectacle, retired to a bar located next to the offices of the F.S.L.N. radio station. They overheard a group of Sandinista radio employees at an adjoining table bragging about how they had played pre-recorded tapes of crowds chanting Sandinista slogans into the sound system.

The Sandinista engaño has been most successful among the resident foreign press. Journalists familiar with the atrocities of the right-wing tyrannies of Central America wish to believe, quite understandably, that the Sandinistas present an alternative. In today's Nicaragua it is easy to confuse desire with reality. The resident press also frequently merges with the larger population of "internationalists," a term which embraces all those foreigners expressing solidarity with the Sandinistas, from Bulgarian and Cuban apparatchiks to idealistic North Americans and West Europeans. It is the general feeling among Nicaraguans that the foreign press in Managua strongly sympathizes with the government, and that it is dangerous to speak openly with them. Disaffected Sandinista intellectuals, friends of friends, who poured their hearts out to me in Managua were afraid to meet with reporters from the U.S. press. We spoke with a resident of Monimbo, where a spontaneous insurrection had ignited the revolution against Somoza in February 1978. We had spent an evening together a year before with a mutual friend, yet initially he was still distrustful. He told us that the revolution had produced "many advances for the people"; two hours later, he was saying, "Monimbo appears to be sleeping, the way it was during the time of Somoza, but the people are united. One day soon they will stand up again."

One of the most common means of sustaining the myth of popular support is the Sandinistas' use of the rationing system as a lever. In numerous villages and cities, we learned that ration cards are confiscated for nonattendance at Sandinista meetings. In Masaya we were told that before one of the "Face-the-People" meetings (in which comandantes meet with local residents) the ration cards of the members of cooperatives were collected; their return was made conditional on attendance. At one such meeting in Chinandega, Ortega branded talk of inflation "a counterrevoluntionary plot." A pound of beans could still be purchased for five cordobas, he claimed. A man in the audience stood up and shouted, "Comandante, here's ten cordobas. Please get me a pound of beans." According to his neighbors, he was imprisoned later that day.

Although Nicaraguans still for the most part bow to government pressure, they do so sullenly and without conviction. We witnessed two Sandinista demonstrations, one in Masaya and the other in Chinandega, two historically pro-Sandinista cities. The Chinanadega rally, held at 10 on a Wednesday morning, celebrated the fifth anniversary of the literacy campaign. It was attended entirely by students obligated to go by school authorities. As they marched through the streets chanting slogans distributed to them on small pieces of paper by their Sandinista instructions, pedestrians did not so much as turn their heads. None of the presumably grateful, presumably literate, people came to greet the comandante sent from Managua.

In Masaya the demonstration did not even benefit from student participation. As we approached the gathering in the fading afternoon, a large group of students stood on the steps of the Catholic school. They had refused to join the demonstration because the Sandinistas had removed several of their Catholic teachers. The small group of demonstrators had glazed looks in their eyes as the last speeches wound down. I asked a campesino in attendance whether any of the comandantes had come. He answered, "I don't know. I slept through it."

The Nicaraguan populace has been saturated with Sandinista bombast which issues from radio, television, newspapers, local and national political meetings, and block committees, and which is propagated in the schools, the factories, and the cooperatives. The people resist in different ways: with the indifference and boredom we saw in Chinandega and Masaya; with a resurgence in religious feelings which has filled churches and Catholic schools; with suspiciousness and bitter humor.

Jokes and wisecracks against the Sandinistas are proliferating. The two pro-Sandinista newspapers, Barricada and Nuervo Diaro, are referred to as Burricada (as in bore) and Nuevo Diablo. The F.S.L.N. is "the Somocista National Liberation Front." "Why do people prefer Tona [one of the two Nicaraguan beers]? Because the other, La Victoria, is bitter." Suspicions of the government are so deep that families of the war dead no longer believe that the government coffins shipped back from the front contain the bodies of their sons. (The coffins are sealed as a matter of policy.) People believe, improbably, that the coffins hold rocks or banana tree trunks. In Monimbo we were told that when a family and friends tried to open a coffin with a hammer and chisel, they were carried off by the police.

Nor is popular discontent restricted to these forms of passive resistance. Sympathy with the contras is becoming more open and more pervasive. I was stunned to hear peasants refer to the contras as "Los Muchachos," the boys—the admiring term used to describe the Sandinistas when they were battling the National Guard. It was apparent that many Nicaraguans are listening to the "Fifteenth of September," the contra radio station. It must be noted, however, that the contras do not operate in the areas we visited, and sympathy toward them may well be proportionate to absence of direct contact.

Draft resistance has become a mass movement in Nicaragua. The government passed legislation last September under which Nicaraguan men between the ages of 16 and 40 can be drafted for two years. When we were in Nicaragua, four hundred women gathered outside the draft board in La Paz Centro, a trading town thirty-five miles northwest of Managua, to protest forced recruitment of their sons. The demonstration was the latest in a string of anti-draft demonstrations in cities and towns throughout Nicaragua. New York Times correspondent Stephen Kinzer, one of the few resident reporters to sniff out the engaño of Sandinista policies, reported on June 26 that "draft evasion is widespread," and found that high school attendance in six major provincial capitals had declined by as much as 40 percent. A student in León said that his high school class of forty-five had fallen to fourteen during the past year. Honduran researchers say Nicaraguan draft evaders pay 25,000 cordobas to be transported across the border, part of the money going to Nicaraguan Army officials in bribes. The demand is so great that border smugglers are now requiring groups no smaller than five. Draft resistance strikes a powerful blow at the myth of widespread popular support for the government. Young people have historically been the mainstay of Sandinista support.

Perhaps the most illuminating political event in the five years of Sandinista rule was a rally held for opposition presidential candidate Arturo Cruz in Chinandega on August 5. On that Sunday morning, Sandinista chicanery, censored domestic and lackadaisical international press coverage, and the growing vigor of the opposition converged.

Chinandega, a city of approximately 60,000, was historically the heart of Sandinista organizing efforts and suppport. These efforts radiated out to the surrounding cotton and sugar fields, to the country's two largest sugar refineries nearby, to the stevedores at Corinto, Nicaragua's largest port, and down to León, another center of anti-Somoza resistance. One would have expected that here the opposition would be weakest, the government strongest.

The Chinandega demonstration was the last series of six held in support of Cruz. Each rally had been larger than the last. The organizers were denied access to Sandinista-controlled TV stations. They were able to place an ad on the one local non-Sandinista radio station, but they relied chiefly on two vehicles with loudspeakers, and on word-of-mouth. Two days before the rally three "angels," as members of the state security are commonly known, called on the organizers of the demonstration and accused them of being C.I.A. agents. The turbas divinas, "divine mobs" of Sandinista supporters, circled their houses at night beating sticks against cans and chanting until the small hours of the morning. (Somoza's version of the turbas—the Nicolasa—used to employ the very same method against the opposition.) Meanwhile, Sandinista newspapers and television branded the opposition as consisting of contras and agents of American imperialism, and announced that further "aggressions" by them would not be permitted. Local authorities implied that the demonstration would be declared illegal. The day before the rally, Daniel Ortega, the head of the Sandinista government and the Sandinista presidential candidate, spoke to two hundred youths in El Viejo, a village three miles away. El Viejo's residents later claimed that the youths had been incited against the demonstration's leaders.

Fearing an attack by the turbas, organizers did not put up the banners or placards until early on the morning of the demonstration. But as they were working, fifty turbas burst into the soccer field, tearing down the banners and dispersing the organizers. They returned later during the day to try to repair the damage.

We spoke with two organizers—middle-class, professional women who had belonged to the F.S.L.N. before the revolution. (According to one, "the F.S.L.N. says that the opposition is Somocista. But most of the old Somocistas are working with the government. The opposition has remained the same. It is the F.S.L.N. that has changed.") They told us that after the turbas' nighttime serenading, they went to complain to the offices of the party representative, the chief of police, and the chief of state security, and to the Sandinistas. They were assured that the turbas would be controlled and that the demonstration would not be obstructed. After the early-morning attack, the two women went to the house of the local party leader. The door was open, and they entered. In the next room they heard the turbas informing him of the success of their mission.

There is no question that many who wished to go to the Cruz rally stayed at home. On the day of the rally, local authorities impeded traffic from outlying areas into Chinandega. As Cruz marched through the city, many people opened their doors, gave him the "V" for victory sign, and then ducked back into their homes to avoid the ever-present eyes of the C.D.S. One woman said she did not go to the demonstration because she lived too close to the Sandinista youth office. She told of others who received threatening phone calls. Two weeks after the demonstration, a gas station attendant in Managua told us he had gone to the rally and that three friends who had accompanied him were in jail.

As might be expected, estimates of the turnout vary. Opposition figures soared as high as 20,000; local newsmen said 7,000. Given Sandinista efforts to reduce attendance, even 7,000 seems an impressive number, especially since three months before, the F.S.L.N. only managed to get 2,500 to Chinandega for the country's principal May Day rally. NBC taped the entire Cruz demonstration. Should this tape ever be shown publicly, experts will be able to make an accurate judgment about the number of demonstrators. When I viewed the tape it was evident that these thousands of demonstrators were hardly "bourgeoisie," as the Sandinistas claimed. They were overwhelmingly workers, peasants, and young people. I learned later that workers had hired their own trucks to come from the San Antonio Refinery and from the port of Corinto. They chanted slogans like "El frente y Somoza son la misma cosa." ("The Sandinistas and Somoza are the same thing.")

When Cruz began to speak, dozens of turbas armed with sticks, stones, and machetes surrounded the field. They came on what appeared to be army trucks chanting, "Power to the people." They proceeded to break the windows and puncture the tires of demonstrators' cars. The police seemed to make no serious effort to restrain them. When the turbas attacked the demonstrators themselves, opposition youths dispersed, only to return wielding their own sticks and stones. Outnumbered, the turbas were routed.

The almost complete absence of foreign and domestic press coverage enabled Sandinista officials to characterize the demonstration their own way. We encountered a Sandinista official drunk at mid-day on the streets of El Viejo. He told us that the demonstration had taken place at the private home of a bourgeoisie and was attended only by a handful of plutocrats. In Managua, the Sandinistas told us that there had been several hundred demonstrators. The following day the Nicaraguan press carried no mention of the events except for one photograph in the official newspaper Barricada which purported to show the turbas attacked by "fascist" demonstrators. La Prensa had devoted several articles and photographs to the demonstration and the clashes, but these were all censored, and the paper did not appear. This was the very day that Daniel Ortega had announce the lifting of press censorship.

The demonstrations for Cruz's candidacy tested the popular mood and the prospects for "the first free elections in Nicaragua," as the Sandinistas' sogan puts it. Among the conditions that Cruz and his supporters have laid down as indispensable for participation are guarantees of freedom of movement, assembly, and equal access to the press and television; sufficient time to campaign; international observers; and, most importantly, guarantees that if he won the election he would be allowed to take office. What happened at Chinandega strongly suggests that neither a genuine election nor a genuine campaign can take place.

Chinandega also exposed the Sandinistas' electoral stratagem. Their decision to hold elections in November was based on a rudimentary political calculation. They judged that the external legitimacy provided by elections would more than compensate for their internal cost. They knew that power does not often change hands in Central America through elections. Somoza's elections had proven that, and the Sandinistas are in a far better position to control elections than Somoza ever was.

Yet their calculations were wrong on two counts. First, they failed to account for the Nicaraguan people. High-level Sandinista officials to whom I have spoken seem to live, along with their international supporters, in a dream world. They deem that the "anti-imperialist sentiments" of the Nicaraguan people allow them to bear any sacrifice even when their "anti-imperialist" leaders bear none. They receive favorable reports from lower-level cadre whose jobs depends on the perception of success. The Sandinistas knew that after five years of enforced political paralysis, the opposition was poorly organized, divided, and amateurish. The spontaneous popular reception for Cruz took them by surprise. Second, they failed to recognize the degree to which they have alienated progressive opinion in Latin America and Western Europe. Cruz's recent highly successful trip to Costa Rica, Venezuela, and Colombia, and his support from European Social Democrats like Spanish Socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, has confounded the F.S.L.N.'s electoral plans.

Thus the Sandinistas find themselves in a quandary. Will they back down and permit Cruz to run under reasonable conditions, or will they go ahead with a discredited election? Thus far at least, the Sandinistas seem unwilling to pay the price of submitting their rule to a popular test. One Sandinista official, whom I have always considered a moderate, told me privately that they would prefer a U.S. intervention because it would "vastly accelerate the Latin American revolution against U.S. imperialism." He told me that the Nicaraguan Army would immediately invade Honduras and Costa Rica and be greeted as "liberators" by the people.

One can only hope that cooler Sandinista heads will prevail. Authentic elections may be the last chance to avert full-scale civil war. If democratic channels cannot be opened, the civilian opposition will be forced to link up with the armed opposition—which is exactly what happened in the 1970s in El Salvador after fraudulent elections. The United States, which has a monstrous record in Nicaragua, can do something to help. What is needed now most urgently is a bipartisan effort in support of authentic elections in Nicaragua.

As we pulled out of Managua in the fading light of a Sunday afternoon, we found ourselves directly behind an army convoy made up of about twenty vehicles. But unlike the army convoys I have seen in El Salvador, Honduras, and elsewhere, it would not permit traffic to pass. A large vehicle with a blinking light occupied the left lane, forcing vehicles coming toward us off the road. A soldier with a machine gun was poised on the rear truck. It took us four hours to cover the fifty miles to León. It was a grueling microcosm of Nicaragua today: the Sandinistas in the "vanguard" preventing the normal flow of traffic, whether out of real fear, paranoia, or bullying. Behind them the rest of the population followed, inconvenienced, irritated, and enduring another pointless "sacrifice" for the Sandinistas' militarism. Our inconvenience was only four hours: the Nicaraguan people experience this twenty-four hours a day. Their patience has worn thin.

LABOR UNDER SIEGE

(By Sam Leiken)

In the last several years, a number of union friends of mine have returned from Sandinista-sponsored tours of Nicaragua with enthusiastic reports of the achievements of the revolution. I visited Nicaragua myself this summer, meeting with members of both the official Sandinista labor federation and the independent unions. I didn't expect to discover a workers' paradise in this underdeveloped and crisis-ridden region, or to see workers running the factories. But I did hope to find signs of progress toward empowering the workers and peasants. Instead, I saw a labor movement battling a "Socialist" government which resists worker demands with tactics ranging from state-controlled unions to spurious arrests and violent goon squads.

In the 1970s labor was united against the Somoza regime, and workers expected that it would remain united to rebuild the country in the aftermath of Somoza's fall. But after assuming power, the Sandinistas sought a large measure of control over the workers by enrolling all Nicaraguan unions in the Central Sandinista de Trabajadores (C.S.T.) In 1980 the C.S.T. joined the World Federation of Trade Unions, headquartered in Prague, "The F.S.L.N. wanted to impose a central union, not build one," one opposition labor leader told me.

When centralizing efforts failed, the Sandinistas used state power to penalize unions unwilling to affiliate with them, to organize disruptive factions, and ultimately to jail opposition union leaders. I was told of death threats, beatings, police raids on union headquarters, military conscription of union dissidents, and blacklisting. Opposition leaders are now reluctant to use the recently restored right to strike for fear of being charged with "economic sabotage" and "abetting imperialism."

In talking with truckers from the port city of Corinto who had voted to disaffiliate their local from C.S.T. and to join the independent C.U.S., which is associated with the A.F.L.-C.I.O. through the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. Soon thereafter, the local's office was attacked by police and turbas. Later some had their drivers' licenses revoked, and a half-dozen union leaders were jailed. In another incident a leader of the other independent union, the C.T.N., said he had been beaten and his nose broken by turbas at the Managua airport in full view of military and civil police.

The Sandinistas have also alienated workers in their own unions, which has led to increasing numbers of wildcat strikes. Several years ago, when the Sandinistas nationalized the German Pomares sugar works, they ousted the independent union. Then, to ensure a docile new leadership, they stacked the vote by trucking in illiterate cane cutters. This summer workers at the refinery defied their leaders: they struck after the union allowed management to cut back worker access to the company store's superior goods and low prices.

While we were in Managua there was a wildcat sit-in at the government-owned Victoria Brewery. Truck drivers there earn 3,000 cordobas a month. Rents average 1,000 a month, and a pair of pants costs 1,000. One deliveryman told me, "We've had the same salaries for the last five years and now hunger has made us explode." The Victoria workers knew that to return to work without a contract can spell defeat. Forced to go back on the job, they effected a slowdown as a way to sustain their leverage.

The official F.S.L.N. newspaper, Barricada, carried a single article on the Victoria "labor dispute." It quoted Sandinista union leaders as saying that they offered "full support to the workers," but also said that they were urging them to return to work immediately. In contrast, La Prensa carried a front-page picture of 200 Coca-Cola drivers parading their trucks in solidarity with the Victoria workers. I was able to confirm La Prensa's report that solidarity brigades were sent by the competing brewery Tona, La Milca fruit punch, Pepsi-Cola, and Standard Steel. Several of these unions also have announced impending strikes.

The dissident labor leaders I met were plainspoken, accustomed to dealing with concrete facts. The C.S.T. official I spoke with talked grandly about how the Sandinistas reorganized Nicaragua's tiny, undeveloped labor unions "by industrial branch." Yet he was at a loss to explain why they had abolished the Nicaraguan equivalent of the U.S. National Labor Relations Board (Tribunales de Trabajo).

He often contradicted what the workers had told me. The workers at the San Antonio sugar refinery said that they had launched a wildcat strike last February to uphold a wage agreement reached between workers and management. According to the workers, the labor minister, backed by the C.S.T. leadership, disallowed the labor contract because its wages exceeded government guidelines. The C.S.T. official claimed that the labor minister had rejected the contract because its wages were too low, and even credited the C.S.T with leading the strike to raise wages. He went on to dismiss the Victoria wildcatters as "backward" and "disobedient." He saw his role not as a representative of the workers, but as their "intermediary" with the employer.

Numerous dissident union leaders described their situation as closely resembling that of the Solidarity movement. One leader, comparing Nicaragua to Poland, told me: "We are both small countries and have suffered many invasions. We both experience long lines and scarcity while many of our products are shipped off to the Soviet bloc. We are Catholic countries with close ties between the unions and the church. We live under regimes where citizens can be jailed at will. And both governments brand independent unions 'anti-Socialist agents of imperialism.'" Listening, I found myself wishing that some of my fellow union activists had come with me to Nicaragua. They could have been as shocked and disappointed at the repressiveness of this "government of workers and peasants" as I was.

THE CRUZ ALTERNATIVE

(By Joshua Muravchik)

The last best hope for a peaceful and humane resolution to Nicaragua's recent agonies may be slipping away. The hope arises from the government's plan to hold national elections on November 4 and the unprecedented cooperation, in response to that plan, that has been achieved among various elements of the opposition.

Three centrist political parties, two labor federations, and the organization representing businessmen and professionals banded together to form the Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinator, known as the "Coordinadora." It chose Arturo Cruz as its presidential candidate, and announced it would not participate in the elections unless the government consented to a "national dialogue" about the terms of the elections and their aftermath.

The Sandinista government originally refused this demand, citing one of the Coordinadora's conditions for the talks: that representatives of the anti-Sandinista guerrillas also be included. But in August that demand was dropped. Both principal rebel groups—the Frente Democratico Nicaraguense (F.D.N.), and the Alianza Revolucionario Democratico (ARDE) have pledged to lay down their arms if an agreement is reached through the dialogue.

Shorn of the demand for including the rebels in the national dialogue, the nine-point program of the Coordinadora is so manifestly reasonable that the Sandinista government has had trouble justifying its resistance. But thus far it has shown no signs of moving toward an agreement, indeed, it has underscored its tough stance by depriving the three parties that belong to the Coordinadora of their legal standing as political parties.

But the opposition believes that the last word has yet to be heard, and Cruz and his colleagues are hoping to bring international pressure to bear on the Sandinistas. They recently visited five other Latin American countries and were received by the President of each. They are also looking for support from the United States and from Europe. Their immediate demand is for a postponement of the elections so that fair terms can be negotiated.

The Coordinadora program rests on the simple premise that there are elections and there are "elections." It embodies two goals. The first is to win assurances that the elections themselves will be fair and free. The second, more far-reaching, goal is summed-up by Cruz in the phrase, "respect for the results of the election."

To secure the first, Cruz and his colleagues are calling for international oversight of the elections by either the O.A.S. or the Contadora group, or by representatives of the Socialist International or other Latin American states agreeable to both the opposition and the Sandinistas. They have requested that all polling places be organized so that citizens do not have to cast their ballots, as Cruz puts it, "under the eyes and ears of the so-called 'Committees for the Defense of the Revolution,'" the Sandinistas' internal surveillance network. In addition, the Coordinadora seeks guarantees of freedom of expression, information, and movement, an end to censorship of the press, freedom of assembly, and equal access to the airwaves.

The Coordinadora's second set of conditions focuses on what will follow the elections and poses perhaps an even more important test of the Sandinistas' willingness to share power with the Nicaraguan people. "Basically," says Cruz, "it's the separation of party and state. What if the opposition wins the elections? We have to be sure that we have the capacity to govern. If you have the army as it is now, an instrument of the Sandinistas, how can you expect that?" Cruz is referring to the fact that Nicaragua's overgrown army is officially the army of the Sandinista Party. If Cruz is elected President, will the army then belong to the opposition? An analogous situation applies in other crucial institutions such as the militia, the police, and television.

In a fair election, the Sandinistas might find Cruz a formidable adversary. Against him they would have difficulty sustaining the argument that opposition to them is tantamount to "counterrevolution" and the posthumous restoration of Somocismo. Cruz himself served two prison terms under the Somozas, and was one of a group of prominent citizens, called "The Twelve," whose public alliance with the Sandinistas was crucial to the overthrow of Somoza. He served as head of the Central Bank during the early months of the revolutionary government. After Alfonso Robelo and Violeta Chamorro, the two original non-Sandinista members of the revolutionary junta, resigned from it in protest, Cruz accepted a seat on it in their place, thereby demonstrating this willingness to walk the extra mile with the Sandinistas. That was something he demonstrated a second time by agreeing to come to Washington as ambassador. For most of a year he labored to secure U.S. acceptance of the revolution even while his own differences with the Sandinista government were widening.

The Coordinadora's platform aims not at repealing the revolution, but at fulfilling its original promises. Cruz says: "We want the revolution to really go to the three parameters on which it is predicated—nonalignment, mixed economy, and pluralism."

The touchstone of Cruz' policy of nonalignment would be a strong focus on relations with the rest of Central America. He twits the Sandinistas for pursuing an ideological foreign policy that has engaged Nicaragua in unlikely causes ("It was not until the Sandinistas came to power that we heard of the Frente Polisario in North Africa"), and that has left it as entangled as ever in its relations with the United States. He would "demilitarize Nicaragua completely," leaving only a police force. "For the protection of the country against aggression, we would do as the Costa Ricans do, invoke the Rio Treaty of collective security."

The Coordinadora's case is a good one, and it deserves more attention from North Americans than it has gotten. Not only does it offer a basis for bringing peace to Nicaragua, it also can be the basis for a cease-fire in the battle within the United States over policy toward Nicaragua. Indeed, one reason for the lack of attention to the Coordinadora's struggle may be that elections are approaching in North America too, and all political factions here are looking to sharpen their differences with their opponents. The Coordinadora's stance offers neither hawks nor doves much that they can disagree with or disagree about.

But the United States now has a moment of opportunity in Nicaragua, and it will not wait for the U.S. elections to pass. Those who have been advocating a more conciliatory U.S. policy towards Nicaragua ought to wield the stick, pressing the Sandinistas to meet the demands of the Coordinadora. Those who have supported aid to the Contra rebels ought to proffer the carrot—an end to that support if the Sandinistas agree to genuine dialogue resulting in free elections.

The Sandinistas now have a power, the kind that grows out of the barrel of a gun. In the end, they may decline to put it at risk. But they can't have it both ways. An election without the participation of the Coordinadora would be an empty exercise conferring no legitimacy on its predictable victors. This is a message that the Sandinistas ought to be hearing over and over again from those in Latin America, Western Europe, and the United States, of whatever political stripe, who hope for a peaceful resolution to Nicaragua's turmoils.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the hour of 11:15 a.m. having arrived, the Senate will now resume consideration of the pending business, S. 2527, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2527) to approve the Interstate and Interstate Substitute Cost Estimate, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purpose.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I send to the desk a cloture motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, hereby move to bring to a close debate on S. 2527, a bill to approve the Interstate and Interstate Substitute Cost Estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

Senators Howard Baker, Ted Stevens, Steve Symms, Jennings Randolph, Jeremiah Denton, Slade Gorton, Dave Durenberger, Mark Andrews, Larry Pressler, Lloyd Bentsen, Max Baucus, Richard G. Lugar, Paul Trible, Dan Quayle, John Warner, Bill Cohen, John H. Chafee, Don Nickles, Robert Stafford, James Abdnor, and John Danforth.

SENATE SCHEDULE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I had hoped not to be remembered in my final 10 days of service to the Senate as the leader who filed the most cloture motions in the shortest period of time, but I may have that dubious reputation before I leave here.

But in all fairness, I must say I do not know any other way to get things going. We are up against a series of controversial issues and the choice—the alternative—is to do nothing. I am not willing to do that. So I guess I apologize to the Senate. I am not sure I do. But I guess I apologize for proceeding on the cloture path so many times. But I do wish to offer this by way of explanation.

Mr. President, since this cloture vote will not occur until Thursday, may I remind Senators of the announcement that was made on yesterday; that is, because Wednesday, sundown, until Thursday, sundown, which we interpret to mean from 6 o'clock Wednesday until 6 o'clock Thursday, no votes will occur in the Senate although we will be in session. Any votes that are ordered will be stacked to occur after 6 p.m. on Thursday. Mr. President, that poses a dilemma for the cloture situation because otherwise, rule XXII would require us to have a vote. But in extremis, I would ask the Senate to come in at 5 o'clock on Thursday so we could have a vote at 6 o'clock on Thursday, but that is not my preference. My preference would be to gain consent to set the cloture vote on Thursday at some time after 6 p.m.

The reason, Mr. President, is that we desperately need both today, Wednesday, and Thursday to do other business. Since the cloture vote is now assured, it would be my hope that shortly we would go back to the Labor-HHS appropriations bill, to be followed perhaps by the Interior appropriations bill, and then other matters, such as conference reports. I am thinking particularly of the budget conference report which may be available before very long.

Mr. President, I will not now ask the Senate to go to Labor-HHS. But shortly, I will do that. But I wish to consult with the minority leader and the managers of both the appropriations bill and the managers of this bill before final arrangement is made. But that is the situation as I see it at the moment.

Once, again, in brief summary, cloture has been filed on the highway bill, and that vote will occur after 6 o'clock on Thursday. It is the hope of the leadership that we will go now to other matters, including the Labor-HHS appropriations bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

FEDERAL-AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his efforts here on our behalf to move toward passage of the highway bill. I am pleased that we finally now are beginning consideration of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1984; that is, S. 2527. I might just say that the major purpose of this legislation is not to approve an interstate cost estimate and an interstate substitute cost estimate for an 18-month period. In addition, S. 2527 contains a provision that would permit the Department of Transportation to administratively release these interstate funds in the future. So the Congress will not find itself in the same dilemma that it is in now trying to pass a routine highway matter that is tied up for all sorts of other reasons—some germane to the highway program and some only germane to the highways of a specific State or congressional district in the Nation—and where the Federal Government is trying to decide where to spend the highway dollars as opposed to having the State departments of transportation make those decisions as has always worked so well in the past with our Federal highway program. But what is at stake for my colleagues right now is—and I think we should all understand—there is nearly $5.3 billion in interstate construction funds, and close to $800 million for the interstate substitute highway projects. Until the Congress acts, over $6 billion is effectively tied up here in Washington while the States—which should have had this money months ago—will start to suffer and some of them are already suffering but the suffering will rapidly come. The motorists of the United States are also being penalized as their highway user tax moneys languish in the highway trust fund instead of being put to work constructing and repairing our Nation's roads, which is what the money was raised for in the first place. It is interesting to note, Mr. President, that the Federal Aid Highway Program is about the only thing the Federal Government does that I know of where they pay for it in advance; that is, every time we buy a gallon of gas we pay our Federal fuel taxes, our State fuel taxes, and in the case of the Federal fuel tax the money goes into the highway trust fund, and it is appropriated out to the respective States, and pays for the projects as they are built and constructed.

So it is not something that is a deficit-ridden program. It has worked very well.

Let me quickly say that despite the very serious ICE and ISCE problem, there is enormous progress being made in the improvement, rehabilitation, and construction of highway and bridge projects across the country. Thanks to the nickel-a-gallon Federal gasoline tax authorized in the Surface Transportation Act of 1982, States have been able to obligate a record $12.8 billion of Federal aid highway funds during fiscal year 1983. According to the Secretary of Transportation, Elizabeth Dole, during the calendar year 1983, the level of highway construction activities jumped more than 73 percent and the number of bridge projects increased by 56 percent. Secretary Dole recently said:

> The signing of the STAA into law by President Reagan on January 6, 1983, underscores this Administration's commitment to reverse the decline and decay of much of our nation's infrastructure over the past decade. The increased levels in federal funding through FY 1986 permitted by the STAA provide a firm financial foundation to support one of the largest rehabilitative public works programs in U.S. history.

It is also worth noting that there have been some beneficial employment effects of the Surface Transportation Act. Estimates show that for every $1 billion, the Federal assistance for highways results in about 32,000 onsite and offsite construction jobs plus about 30,000 jobs for the spending of wages and profits. Approximately 300,000 additional construction jobs were created in 1983 alone as a result of the Surface Transportation Act.

I might point out that those are the jobs you can see. There is another factor; that the money was allocated from other areas, and it may be that the overall impact may not be as great as many people think. I, for one, do not like to view the highway program as a jobs program, but it is an essential transportation program to provide the opportunity for people to move commerce and move themselves from one place to the other in this great land of ours.

Mr. STAFFORD. Would my distinguished friend yield very briefly?

Mr. SYMMS. Yes; I would be happy to yield to my distinguished chairman.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, I think we lose sight quite frequently of the fact that when the Interstate Highway System was originally conceived not only was it deemed to be extremely important for the movement of people and commerce in this country, but one of the basic reasons for undertaking its construction was the national defense aspects of the Interstate Highway System.

It still is very important to us, not only from a commercial standpoint, and the movement of our people from one part of the country to another, but from a security standpoint for this great Nation. I apologize to the manager of the bill for interrupting. But I think it is very important that we keep that in mind as well as the commercial side of this great network we now have in this country.

Mr. SYMMS. My distinguished chairman I think makes a very important point. He need not apologize for making that point to all of our colleagues.

I might just continue on, Mr. President, to point out that earlier this year Congress agreed on compromise legislation, H.R. 4957, which contained a 6-month ICE and ISCE approval which was signed into law, Public Law 98-229, on March 9, 1984. States are still waiting for approval of the remaining 18 months' worth of interstate construction and interstate transfer funds. To win passage of just a 6-month bill involved a difficult, laborious process, and I anticipate that considerable effort will be required if S. 2527 is to pass. Our primary responsibility, however, is to approve an ICE and ISCE for 18 months. Controversial policy changes, large new authorizations, and other contentious issues will slow our progress in releasing the interstate moneys which all the States need badly, particularly in preparation for the 1985 construction season.

The committee has had many requests for the funding of demonstration projects. H.R. 5504, the transportation legislation passed by the House, has between 40 and 50 special demonstration projects at an immediate cost of over one-half billion dollars. And if all these projects are ultimately completed with Federal funds, the potential Federal liability will be several billion dollars. This will bankrupt the highway trust fund in the near future.

Mr. President, a demonstration project is a way for the States or for individual Congressmen or Senators to be able to go around the process that has worked so well in the Federal highway program where the Federal Government has a formula which appropriates the money to the States. The State Governors, the departments of transportation, highway boards, and so forth make the decision on how those dollars are spent, which projects have priority, and so forth.

What has happened in the last 10-year period is that each year more and more people keep offering demonstration projects.

To illustrate this point somewhat facetiously, several months ago I introduced S. 2718 to try to illustrate the point that the large number of requests will result in either: First, the bankruptcy of the highway trust fund; second, tax increases; or third, a substantial cut in the regular categorical program. If full funding would be provided for all the requests made by both House and Senate members, the gasoline tax would have to be increased by at least 4 cents per gallon. I do not believe a majority of the Congress is prepared to vote for such an increase anytime soon.

The Federal-aid highway program has worked best when projects are selected according to priorities set by State and local officials. I do not believe it would benefit the highway program if the large Federal-aid categories—including interstate construction and 4R, primary, bridge, urban, and rural—were substantially reduced or eliminated in order to accommodate more demonstration projects chosen by Congress.

If that is the way the Congress is going to decide to go in the future, then I think there will be many of us in this body and in the other body who would make the decision that we would be better off to return the entire responsibility back to the States. That, again, would lose some of the point that Senator STAFFORD just made with respect to the coordination for national defense of our highway system. But I think at some point, if Congress is going to try to determine where every project goes by who has the most votes around here, we cannot run a good, efficient highway program that takes into consideration all the commercial and defense interests in the United States.

After lengthy discussions the committee agreed to a compromise which provides that the Federal contribution to any special projects will be limited to $12.5 million or 50 percent of the project cost, whichever is less. This will help to ensure that such projects have high priority in the State, and will also help limit the drain on the highway trust fund.

Mr. President, I think this is a good compromise. It was this Senator's idea that we do this. I think it will help dramatize what has been happening to the highway program and help people make the decision on which projects in their State should have the highest priority and help the States decide which ones they want to spend their money on. It will reduce the liability to the trust fund. We can keep the categorical programs funded at the maximum level, which I think is the best way to run the highway program.

The Secretary of Transportation has also expressed concern on behalf of the administration that a number of provisions including any new authorizations could result in a Presidential veto of this legislation. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this letter be included in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION,
Washington, DC, May 8, 1984.

Hon. ROBERT T. STAFFORD,
Chairman, Committee on Environment and Public Works, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Your Committee will be considering legislation soon to approve the cost estimates for the highway and transit programs, S. 2527. I would like to make our position very clear. We support approval of the cost estimates. However, this approval is the only legislation that is desired by the Administration. There are no other program changes that are necessary at this time.

The 1982 Surface Transportation Assistance Act that you helped author is a monumental piece of legislation that should be allowed to operate this year without further change. The bill being considered could become a vehicle for amendments that would increase the cost of completing the Interstate system by over $2.2 billion; increase transit spending by over $900 million; including over $500 million of narrow, special interest provisions; place the solvency of the Highway Trust Fund in question; and make basic unnecessary changes to the transit program. Because some of the projects would require Federal funding beyond that provided in the bill, we estimate that the total cost to the United States from these changes could exceed $4 billion.

This Administration is not willing to allow special interests to distort national program needs and to dictate how the money collected from highway users across the country is going to be spent. Enactment of any legislation that adds to the cost of the Interstate system, revises existing programs, creates new authorizations or earmarks existing authorizations would not be in accord with the program of the President. Consequently, the President's senior advisors and I would recommend that he veto the bill should it be adopted in this form.

I hope that we can reach an agreement on a bill that merely approves the cost estimates so that state and local governments do not suffer funding problems as they did earlier this year.

Sincerely,

ELIZABETH HANFORD DOLE.

Mr. SYMMS. Secretary Dole has warned that projects and other changes being proposed to the Federal-aid highway and transit programs already exceed $4 billion in new authorizations. Even with a 50-percent increase in highway user fees coming into the highway trust fund under the 1982 Act, there is no way the trust fund can provide an additional $4 billion without jeopardizing the trust fund's solvency and integrity. It is futile for Congress to pass legislation which undermines the trust fund, enlarges the national budget deficit and forces a Presidential veto.

On June 6, the Environment and Public Works Committee reported S. 2527, which I believe takes a responsible approach in addressing vital national transportation needs and a limited number of specific concerns. At the same time, Senate Joint Resolution 312 was reported by the committee; it contains only the 18-month ICE-ISCE approval and the provision permitting the Secretary of Transportation to administratively proceed to apportion the funds each October 1. There is a commitment among committee members to moving S. 2527, but if irreconcilable differences develop, the clean bill will be available for consideration.

Mr. President, I compliment Senator STAFFORD for his efforts because without his leadership we would not be able to accomplish this two-pronged attack.

I see the distinguished senior Senator from West Virginia, the ranking member, on the floor. I would like to add him to that list of bouquets, as well as the distinguished Senator from Texas, [Senator BENTSEN].

These two provisions are absolutely essential if progress is to continue on completing the Interstate System. If there continues to be a delay in releasing the interstate construction funds and the ICE approval continues to be held hostage, support for completing the Interstate System as currently envisioned may erode substantially. Therefore, I believe the provision for the administrative release of these funds in the future is particularly important. The Senate carried out its responsibility by passing a 2-year ICE and ISCE last fall when the interstate funds should have been released to the States.

Federal-aid highway funds are limited in spite of the large increase in uses fees in 1982. Highway construction and rehabilitation needs still far outstrip Federal resources. The committee has continued to look for ways to stretch scarce Federal dollars. Not only must State and local governments continue their participation as partners in the highway program, but the private sector must also be encouraged to invest in transportation facilities which will enhance economic development.

Several sections in S. 2527 accomplish that goal. First, States will be asked to contribute a match for certain emergency relief projects. Initial emergency work done within 30 days of the disaster declaration will be funded with 100 percent Federal funds. Long-term repair and replacement of facilities will require a State match. This State match requirement will apply only to disasters which occur after the date of enactment of this legislation.

A large percentage of deficient bridges are off the Federal-aid system. Tennessee has carried out a demonstration project over the past 2 years that has proven to be an effective approach to repairing deficient off-system bridges. Tennessee was able to replace or repair 700 small off-system bridges in 1983 and is in the process of doing 500 more this year. This program has been effective in leveraging additional State and local funds for bridge repair. Because of the program's success, S. 2527 has expanded its availability to any State who wishes to participate.

Section 112 removes Federal regulation and review of toll increases on certain toll bridges. Currently there is no consistency in determining which bridges are federally regulated. These bridges were all constructed without Federal-aid funds. Section 112 will result in savings in time and administrative costs for both toll authorities and the Federal Government while at the same time protecting the public from unreasonable toll increases.

Section 115 provides an incentive to the private sector to invest in transportation facilities. Under current law, if right-of-way for a highway facility is donated by a landowner the value is credited according to the matching share of the project. For example, if it is a primary system project, 75 percent would be credited to the Federal share and 25 percent to the State share. Section 115 permits 100 percent of the donated land value to be credited to the State share. I believe this will encourage further private sector investment in transportation facilities, which are so badly needed.

Mr. President, the STAA of 1982 directed the Federal Highway Administration to develop a new formula for the allocation of forest highway funds. This new formula was to look more closely at the actual transportation use of these highways and their construction and rehabilitation needs. FHWA was required to gather a substantial amount of new data in order to implement such a formula and has not yet completed the required rulemaking process.

Because neither the Congress nor the affected States have had an opportunity to review or comment on the new data and proposed formula, section 130 directs FHWA to allocate fiscal year 1985 and 1986 forest highway funds partially on the old formula and partially on the proposed formula. I believe this is a reasonable compromise for all affected States until the rulemaking process can be completed.

Finally, during committee consideration of S. 2527, a number of Senators expressed concern over any changes in the interstate 4R formula. Federal-aid highway formulas were the subject of lengthy debates during the consideration of the STAA of 1982. A compromise agreement was reached at that time which preserved a viable highway program for all States. I believe those formulas should remain in place during the authorization period of that act. The Department of Transportation has completed a study on the interstate 4R formula which concludes that the existing 4R formula strongly correlates with the criteria of need, national benefit, and national defense and no argument can be made for a change at this time. I believe any changes at this time could jeopardize the timely release of the interstate funds.

Mr. President, I said this earlier, but I want to repeat it: I want to express my appreciation to the distinguished Senator from Vermont [Mr. STAFFORD], the chairman of the committee; the distinguished Senator from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH], ranking minority member of the committee; and the distinguished Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN], the very able ranking minority member on the Transportation Subcommittee. I appreciate their large contributions and support in bringing S. 2527 to the floor.

I hope, Mr. President, that we here in the Senate can set aside other interests that we have, whether it be the civil rights bill or adding on special amendments which add heavy cost to this legislation and get it in a position where it may threaten a veto, or whatever the issue is, and move forward with this important piece of legislation. It is important to all of our constituents, all across this great land of ours, and it needs to be passed as soon as possible.

If we reach the point where we cannot get passage of it, this Senator is willing to wait, but I think all Senators will recognize that by January or February, they are going to certainly be hearing from their State departments of transportation. It would be much better to pass this legislation now, get it signed into law, and get an orderly process of the allocation and appropriation of these highway funds out to the States so that we can have a good use of the dollars to build the Nation's highways which are needed so badly.

Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Vermont.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. President, first, let me express my gratitude to the able manager of the bill for his work in behalf of the Public Works Committee and for his distinguished service in behalf of this legislation, Senator SYMMS of Idaho. He has done a yeoman's job.

Mr. President, the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (STAA of 1982) provided authorizations for the Federal-Aid Highway Program through fiscal year 1986. This legislation was a major undertaking. In fact, it consumed a good deal of the lame duck session in 1982, my colleagues will recall. It included significant policy changes and increased the program's level of authorization from $8 billion in fiscal 1982 to over $12 billion in fiscal 1983. The STAA of 1982 set an obligation ceiling of $13.550 billion for fiscal 1985.

In addition, the STAA of 1982 for the first time provided a secure source of funding for the Mass Transit Program by establishing the mass transit trust fund. The revenue produced by 1 cent of the gasoline tax accrues to this fund for mass transit projects.

I will say parenthetically that the mass transit problems, the fund, and the program are under the jurisdiction of another committee of the Senate and not the Environment and Public Works Committee.

The purpose of the STAA of 1982 was to provide a secure, long-term source of funding so the States could efficiently begin to address the massive rehabilitation and reconstruction needs of the deteriorating highways and bridges throughout the country, and so they could continue to make substantial progress on completing the Interstate Highway System.

It will avail us very little in this country, I say to my colleagues, if, after having made the enormous investment we have in the Interstate System, the primary and secondary federally aided systems of this country if we let them deteriorate to nothing more than potholes, worn out bridges, unsafe bridges, and the like.

31-059 O-87-23 (Pt. 19)

However, this second objective has not been met. The STAA of 1982 continued to require congressional approval of an Interstate cost estimate (ICE) every 2 years before Interstate construction funds could be apportioned to the States. It also included a new requirement for congressional approval of an interstate substitute cost estimate (ISCE) every 2 years before the interstate substitute funds could be released to the States. I note that you will frequently hear the words "ICE" for Interstate cost estimate and Interstate substitute cost estimate, known as ISCE. I note that for the benefit of those who are listening and are not part of the staff or the membership of the Senate.

The committee was concerned that these funds be released in a timely manner and reported H.R. 3103 in September of last year. This bill contained a 2-year ICE and ISCE approval and was subsequently approved by the Senate. Because of controversial issues attached to this legislation on the House side, no agreement was reached on H.R. 3103. Finally on March 9, 1984 a compromise bill was passed which made available one-half of the Interstate construction and substitute funds to the States.

While $2.6 billion has been released, an additional $2.1 billion which should have been apportioned October 1, 1983 still has not been released. In addition, S. 2527 provides for the release of approximately $4.9 billion on October 1, 1984 for the next fiscal year. It is extremely important that these funds are released as soon as possible and that there are no further disruptions in this program.

Like my distinguished friend [Mr. SYMMS] I urge Members of the Senate, my colleagues who may be listening, to have in mind that here are $7 billion that ought to be available to the States on October 1 of this year that will not go out and each State will not get its share of that money unless we can get this bill passed. It is for that reason that we urge our colleagues to show restraint in offering amendments which will load down this bill or which will involve it in controversy so that we cannot pass it.

Mr. MATHIAS. Would the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. STAFFORD. Without losing my right to the floor, I will.

Mr. MATHIAS. Where is the bill?

Mr. STAFFORD. I say to my distinguished colleague that the bill is right here. If our colleagues will listen to the pleas of Senator SYMMS and myself, we shall pass it.

Mr. MATHIAS. I shall listen.

Mr. STAFFORD. You will have a good chance.

The Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works reported S. 2527 on June 6. This bill contains an 18-month ICE and ISCE approval. Even more importantly, it provides for the administrative release of these funds in the future if Congress does not act in a timely fahion. This will ensure that the Interstate program will not experience the delay and disruption that has occurred during the past year.

The Secretary of Transportation is directed to apportion Interstate construction and substitute funds on October 1. If Congress has not yet approved an ICE and ISCE, the Secretary will make appropriate adjustments and administratively apportion these funds.

This does not preclude Congress from acting at any time and it does not diminish Congress' oversight responsibility for this program.

The process will continue to work as it has in the past. The States will be required to submit an updated ICE and ISCE every 2 years to the Secretary. The Secretary must submit them to Congress by January 1. Congress has from January 1 to October 1 to review the ICE and ISCE and make any changes it desires. Congress could also choose to act after October 1 after the funds had been apportioned if it so desired. This process will ensure the completion of the Interstate System and end the holding hostage of these funds which has threatened that completion for all of this past year.

The committee has received many requests for new authorizations that would fund specific highway projects. The STAA of 1982 increased highway user fees significantly and enabled us to increase the funding level of the Federal-aid highway program dramatically. However, the increased revenues coming into the Highway Trust Fund cannot sustain the level the program is authorized to reach by fiscal 1986. Large new authorizations at this time will jeopardize the solvency of the Highway Trust Fund. They will hasten the day when either user fees will have to be increased again or the regular Federal-aid categories will have to be reduced. Finally, it creates an expectation that the Federal Government will fund projects beyond the regular Federal-aid program if they do not have a high enough priority within the State to be funded under a State's regular transportation plan.

Putting it only a little differently, having once been the Governor of my State, where too many demonstration projects appear, they can easily disrupt the orderly progress of road repair and construction in a State.

After a lengthy debate, the committee reached a compromise on demonstration projects by requiring that the Federal share of such projects be limited to 50 percent of total project cost or $12.5 million, whichever is less. While all these projects have merit and are urgently needed in their specific localities, the Federal-Aid Highway Program has worked at its best when priorities were determined by the State in consultation with local officials.

It is the intention of the Senator from Vermont as chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee to continue his remarks at a later time because the most able and beloved ranking member of our committee, a chairman under whom I learned what little I know running a committee, is in the Chamber and I should like at this point, Mr. President, to yield to the most distinguished and able Senator from West Virginia [Mr. RANDOLPH].

Mr. RANDOLPH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I am very grateful, of course, for the reference of our able chairman to the work that I have been able to accomplish standing side by side with the Senator from Vermont, the Senator who is chairman of our subcommittee [Mr. SYMMS], and of course the ranking minority member of the Transportation Subcommittee [Mr. BENTSEN].

We are all believers—I use the word "believers" advisedly—not only that we pass this legislation but stress that it is absolutely in the national interest, to move forward with this transportation program which benefits all America.

The Committee on Environment and Public Works through its members brings to the Senate S. 2527, the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1984, which provides the approval for the release of Interstate construction funds that were authorized by the Surface Transportation Act of 2 years ago, 1982. Mr. SYMMS well knows and has said effectively that the Interstate construction program was first authorized in 1956. It is now winding—in West Virginia we have winding roads—to an end. Over the last 10 months a major stumbling block to the orderly completion of the Interstate System has risen dealing with eligibility for the controversial urban segment. Earlier this year, the Congress did approve the release of approximately half of the fiscal year 1984 funds.

It is important, Mr. President, to note that the States have now used up this authority and need more money to continue construction of vital projects in this country. Under the terms of this legislation, approval is provided for the remaining 1984 funds and all of those funds due to become available on October 1, 1984, for the fiscal year of 1985.

Mr. President, approximately $5 billion of Interstate construction funds would be released for these crucial and critical construction projects. Additionally, necessary funds for the Interstate substitute highway program would be available to the country.

While the States have been able to carry out a highway program in fiscal year 1984 very near the obligation ceiling that was provided, this level of acitivity cannot be acheived in the next fiscal year unless previously authorized funds are made available for apportionment by this pending legislation. That is the only way the money can be spent.

Mr. President, I can think of no more vital projects than those on the Federal-Aid Highway Program at this closing moment of this Congress. This Interstate construction effort, with its 42,500 miles of system, is nearly complete. We must complete it so that the valuable resources of our land can move from the farms, the factories, and the fields to the consuming public. Funds currently used for Interstate construction can then be used for other worthwhile and required projects. Delays such as those imposed over the prior 10 months are totally unreasonable and contrary to the longstanding effort in the Senate for the completion of this national network necessary highways.

Mr. President, perhaps the most important change made in S. 2527 regards the future approval of cost estimates releasing authorized interstate construction funds. The bill directs the Secretary of Transportation to release such funds if the Congress has not acted by October 1 with respect to an ICE submitted under the authority of title 23, United States Code. The States would continue to update the interstate cost estimate and submit it to the Secretary for transmission to Congress, which could make changes if it found such to be necessary. I believe that action of this type is in the best interest of our ongoing Federal-Aid Highway Program and recommend it to my colleagues.

This legislation also addresses another major problem with respect to the overall Federal-Aid Highway System. For a number of years, the Congress has been asked to approve demonstration projects to resolve pressing transportation problems of a local nature. While I believe demonstration projects serve a useful purpose, the action in the House of Representatives this year to authorize nearly 60 projects of this type at 100-percent Federal funding is counterproductive. The legislation before us today, while approving several demonstration projects, limits the scope of those projects to work which can be accomplished for $25 million and requires that 50 percent of the funds be provided by the State in which the project is to be located. Adoption of this provision by the Senate will be useful as we continue to meet our transportation needs in a fiscally responsible manner. This action will assure that a project is a priority and not divert needed highway trust fund moneys away from the categories of assistance provided under our Federal-Aid Highway Program.

Mr. President, the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1984 also addresses several small problems which have occurred with respect to highway transportation. Each of these additional provisions contained in the legislation are important, and I commend them to my colleagues. However, it cannot be overstated that the primary need for this legislation is to release the interstate construction and interstate substitution highway construction funds. The Senate must pass this legislation so that a conference may occur with the House of Representatives on this important matter.

Mr. BRADLEY. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to my friend from New Jersey.

Mr. SYMMS addressed the Chair.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

Mr. SYMMS. Will the Senator from West Virginia yield?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the Senator as the chairman.

Mr. SYMMS. I compliment the Senator from West Virginia for his outstanding remarks and his outstanding contribution to this country in the past 40 to 50 years. I think it is worthy to note that in 1937 the Senator from West Virginia introduced the forerunner to what is now the Federal Highway Interstate System. It is worthy to note that he has made a contribution to Senator STAFFORD, to myself, and others on the committee. We have a committee which with respect to highways is very bipartisan. I think the Senator should be complimented for that.

Mr. President, does the distinguished Senator from West Virginia have the floor?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Yes he does.

Mr. SYMMS. I seek the floor when the distinguished Senator——

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, who has the floor?

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from West Virginia has the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from West Virginia has the floor.

Mr. SYMMS. I say to my colleague from West Virginia, I hope he will not yield for any purposes other than debate.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to my leader.

Mr. BYRD. Without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I do so.

Mr. BYRD. And for the purpose not of my asking a question?

Mr. RANDOLPH. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, we are not going to handle this floor like Mr. SYMMS is suggesting, with all due respect to him. He cannot specify to whom Mr. RANDOLPH may yield. He should not attempt to get Mr. RANDOLPH to give assurance that he will not yield to so-and-so. That is not following the rule.

So I want to wash the page out, start all over, and not have my colleague under an obligation to yield to so-and-so and not to yield to so-and-so.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. Randolph has the floor.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unamimous consent that the Senator from West Virginia may yield to me without losing his right to the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I yield to the majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I was not in the Chamber when all this started, but I have a good way to get a clean sheet of paper and start from scratch.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess until 2 p.m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, does Mr. Randolph have any problem with that request?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I have no problem with that.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. Randolph has the floor and did not necessarily yield for a unanimous-consent request. If he has no problem with it, I have no problem.

Mr. RANDOLPH. No problem. I thank the two leaders.

Mr. BRADLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. BRADLEY. I have no objection. Mr. President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the current time, the senior Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BRADLEY. Did the Chair recognize the Senator from New Jersey?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A unanimous-consent request is pending. The Senator is speaking with respect to the objection. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I reserve the right to object.

Is it the intention of the majority leader, when we return to this piece of legislation, that the question pending will be the first committee amendment?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, that would be the normal course of affairs, yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, is it also the majority leader's intention, after calling for the recess, to go into recess until 2 o'clock this afternoon?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we will be in recess, as we almost always are on Tuesday. The reason for that is not to interrupt this colloquy but to provide a time for Members on both sides of the aisle to attend caucuses of their parties.

At 2 o'clock, when we return and the Senate resumes the session, the first thing to do will be to comply with the resolution adopted by the Senate to have the official photograph taken of the Senate in session. That will be at 2 o'clock. The National Geographic Society is setting up to do that.

Immediately after that, the Senate will resume consideration of the highway bill. However, as I announced earlier this morning, it is the intention of the leadership on this side, at that point, to ask the Senate to return to the consideration of the Labor-HHS appropriations bill.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 2 P.M.

Thereupon, at 12:03 p.m., the Senate recessed until 2 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the President pro tempore.

OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPH OF THE SENATE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be in order. Senators will take their seats.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY] is necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. HART] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum is present.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I would ask Senators to take their seats so that we can comply with the provisions of the resolution recently passed by the Senate to take the official photograph. It will just take a moment. I urge Senators to take their seats at this time.

Mr. President, there are a number of vacant chairs and I hope that Members are here and take their seats.

May I say that I have been advised by the photographers for National Georgraphic and our own photographers that there will be more than one picture. The cameras are in this corner. I suggest that those of us on this side may turn around and look at the camera. Those on the Democratic side will be more favorably situated. [Laughter.]

I would point out to the Senator from Louisiana that if we had TV in the Senate, it would be like this all the time. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I understand that all are present and in their seats who are going to be present and in their seats. I am going to take my seat now and I would encourage the photographers to proceed, if they know how.

(At this point, the official Senate photograph was taken.)

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LUGAR). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS UNTIL 2:35 P.M.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I am advised that it will take about 10 or 15 minutes to restore the Chamber.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now stand in recess for 15 minutes.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 2:20 p.m., recessed until 2:35 p.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer [Mr. LUGAR].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have consulted with the minority leader, the two managers, and a number of other Senators, as well as having announced this beforehand. I had hoped that at this point, Mr. President, to be able to gain unanimous consent to adopt the committee amendments as original text for the purpose of further proceeding, and then go to the Labor HHS appropriations bill. This is more complicated than appeared on the surface.

I have suggested to those directly involved that instead we resume Labor-HHS, by unanimous consent to temporarily lay aside the highway bill, and that during the consideration of the Labor-HHS bill, if unanimous-consent agreement can be worked out on the treatment of the committee amendments as well as with other Senators who may have amendments, as well as a time certain to vote on cloture, which must be set as well, we can interrupt the Labor-HHS bill in order to do that. It seems to me it would be poor use of the Senate's time now to stay on the highway bill or in a quorum call while we try to work it out.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now temporarily law aside the pending highway bill and proceed to the consideration of Calendar Order No. 1161, H.R. 6028.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it may be that both cloakrooms will have to do a little checking on that. While the request is pending, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, there is now a request pending, I believe.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I reserved the right to object. I have communicated with Senators who are not on the floor. I am in a position now to withdraw my reservation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LABOR-HHS-EDUCATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, 1985

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the pending business.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 6028) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the remaining committee amendment.

The text of the committee amendment follows:

On page 38, line 19, after "term,", insert "or except for such medical procedures necessary for the victims of rape or incest".

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I do not intend to take the time of my colleagues, particularly this late in the session, to debate once again the pros and cons of abortion generally, and Federal funding for abortion in particular. This body and all interested parties outside this body well know my position on this issue. I oppose abortion in any form, any procedure.

The specific issue before us, funding for abortion in the event of rape or incest, is not a new issue. Since I have served in this body, the Congress of the United States has consistently gone on record against such exceptions. It is because I am convinced that this Congress, in the final resolution of this appropriations bill or the continuing resolution, will once again be on record against these exceptions, that I will not seek a record vote on this committee amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I rise to explain and support the pending committee amendment, which modifies the existing prohibition on Federal abortion funding under medicaid, to allow women pregnant because of rape or incest to obtain an abortion funding. This amendment was approved by the Committee on Appropriations by a 15 to 11 vote.

At the outset, Mr. President, I would like to review the legislative history of this matter for my colleagues. Over the years, the Congress has passed various versions of medicaid abortion restrictions. At various points we have adopted exceptions to the language "none of the fund appropriated under this act shall be used to perform abortions" for situations where the mother's life was endangered, where severe and long-lasting health damage to the mother would result, where an ectopic pregnancy is diagnosed, and in cases of rape or incest. Since 1981, however, the Congress has enacted the strictest form of the Hyde amendment, exempting life-threatening abortions. In fact, Mr. President, we actually had a bill come over to the Senate from the House prohibiting abortions even in that extreme case.

Mr. President, in the opinion of this Senator, I would prefer that there be no restrictions on medicaid abortion. Abortion is a legal medical procedure in the United States, and to deny such a procedure to a poor women is available to a more affluent one is clearly discriminatory. What the Congress has been arguing about over the last 11 years is the degree of the discrimination we will be enacting into law.

Mr. President, what current law says is that a poor woman, who becomes pregnant as a result of rape or incest, is not eligible for a medicaid abortion. How in the name of conscience we can deny such funding is beyond this Senator. I would like to invite the opponents of this amendment to go to a clinic and tell a poor, single mother that because of her economic status, that she must continue a pregnancy which resulted from a rape.

We talk a lot these days about concern for the victims of crime. And we have passed legislation year after year that says that if you are poor and pregnant because of a rape or incest, you are on your own. I cannot conceive of a person in our society more deserving of our special care. Instead, we tell women in this grave situation: "Don't come to us with your problem."

Mr. President, in my mind this is one of the most self-evident propositions that could be presented on this floor: Should an indigent rape or incest victim be entitled to Federal funds to terminate that pregnancy. The opponents of the amendment may contend that this will create a loophole, through which women will expand the number of federally funded abortions. It is nothing short of preposterous to suggest that women are going to come forth en mass to lie about the fact that they have been raped or are the victim of incest. It is estimated that between 50 to 90 percent of the women who are actually raped or sexually abused by relatives cannot even bring themselves to come forward to tell the truth about what has happened to them. Some may argue that a "reporting requirement" is necessary to control abuses. In so doing, they would cut off services to that 50 to 90 percent of women in this situation who do not currently report these crimes. Some may even be so brazen as the Secretary of HHS, who suggested that we should not provide these benefits because of the "time-consuming administrative burden" this amendment would place on the bureaucrats at HHS. How anyone can equate the pain and suffering of these women with the need to reduce Government paperwork is beyond my comprehension or concept of morality.

Mr. President, I do not feel this matter requires much further debate. I hope my colleagues will vote to approve the pending committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

● Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, the amendment the Senate just approved would allow the expenditure of Federal funds to pay for abortions for predominantly poor women in cases of rape and incest—not just when life of the mother is threatened, as is the case in current law.

The major concern with the current policy, as defined by Congress through the current Labor, HHS appropriation bill, is that it restricts medicaid recipients' access to abortion for those women who have been raped or are the victims of incest. Approximately 22 million Americans are eligible for medicaid services. By arbitrarily restricting abortion services for medically dependent poor women, we have singled out a particularly vulnerable group in our society.

Of the 500,000 women in the medicaid program who find themselves facing unintended pregnancies only a small fraction are pregnant as the result of rape or incest. And those cases of rape and incest are the only ones we are addressing today.

Not only must these women and, in some cases, young girls, suffer the trauma and brutality of rape or incest or both, but there is an additional trauma of having difficulty gaining access to legal and safe abortion services. The average $200 cost of a first-trimester abortion is approximately two-thirds of the average monthly welfare payment for a family of four, and it is twice the monthly welfare payment for a single individual on public assistance.

Most abortion providers require that their charges be paid with cash in advance. Women who must delay the medical procedure until they have raised the necessary funds further jeopardize their health. After the eighth week of pregnancy, each week of delay increases the risk of serious medical complications and the risk of death.

I understand that there are those who are opposed to abortion on principle, under any circumstances. I believe, however, the real issue before us today is protecting those who are innocent victims of rape and incest, and who feel compelled to seek an abortion which is their legal right under the law.

Mr. President, the plain fact is that access restrictions to abortion have not had the effect intended. It is known that just as women resorted to illegal or self-induced abortions before 1973, women today who are denied the financial means to safe and legally available abortion assistance still resort to dangerous methods to terminate their pregnancies. The result is often severe complications that further threaten the health of the women involved, or even result in death.

I am pleased that my colleagues have supported this amendment.●

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further amendments?

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4395

(Purpose: To delete language limiting travel expenses and motor vehicles for the office of the Secretary of Health and Human Services)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] proposes an amendment numbered 4395.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HELMS. I object, Mr. President, I want to hear what the amendment is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will continue reading the amendment.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, may we have order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk is now reading the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

The assistant legislative clerk continued to read as follows:

On page 34, on line 20 after the word "therein" strike through line 25;

On page 35, strike lines 1 through 7 ending with the word "Secretary"

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Secretary of the Senate proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I believe other Senators wish to confer.

The Secretary of the Senate continued with the call of the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, this amendment deletes language that limited travel expenses and motor vehicles for the office of the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Due to actions taken by the Secretary, this language is no longer necessary.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, we have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Regular order, Mr. President.

FEDERAL AID HIGHWAY ACT OF 1984

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Regular order is S. 2527. The clerk will state the bill.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 2527) to approve the Interstate and Interstate Substitute Cost Estimates, to amend title 23 of the United States Code, and for other purposes.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading be dispensed with.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I object. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bill.

The Secretary of the Senate proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, what is the pending question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is the first committee amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4396

(Purpose: To clarify the application of title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1978, the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, and title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the committee amendment and ask that it be stated.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask for recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. BRADLEY] proposes an amendment numbered 4396.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. HATCH. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The clerk will continue to read the amendment.

The Secretary of the Senate continued to read the amendment.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the first committee amendment add the following:

TITLE —CIVIL RIGHTS ACT OF 1984

SHORT TITLE

SEC. . This title may be cited as the "Civil Rights Act of 1984".

PROHIBITION OF SEX DISCRIMINATION

SEC. . (a)(1) The matter preceding clause (1) of section 901(a) of the Education Amendments of 1972 (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Act") is amended—

(A) by striking out "in" the second time it appears;

(B) by striking out "the benefits of" and inserting in lieu thereof "benefits"; and

(C) by striking out "under any education program or activity receiving" and inserting in lieu thereof "by any education recipient of".

(2) Section 901(a)(3) of the Act is amended by inserting "or recipient" after "institution".

(b) Section 901(c) of the Act is amended by inserting "(1)" after the subsection designation and by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(2) For the purpose of this title, the term 'recipient' shall not be construed to include any entity which would not have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984, nor to exclude any entity which would have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984.

"(3)(A) For the purpose of this title, except as provided in subparagraph (B), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a State or to a political subdivision, a department, agency, or other such component part of the State or political subdivision that—

"(i) does not have as its primary function the performance of any of the purposes for which such assistance was extended; and shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(ii) is not extended such assistance,

"(B) If all or a portion of Federal financial assistance is extended to a State or political subdivision without restriction, such assistance shall be presumed to have been extended to the entire State or subdivision unless as to the department, agency, or other such component part where discrimination is alleged, the State or political subdivision demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that no Federal financial assistance was in fact extended to such department, agency, or other component part.

"(4)(A) For the purposes of this title, except as provided in subparagraphs (B) and (C), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a private corporation or partnership that has more than one establishment, an establishment that is not extended such assistance shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(B) If Federal financial assistance is extended to a private corporation or partnership without restriction, the entire corporation or partnership is covered in its entirety.

"(C) To the extent the provisions of subparagraph (A) constitute a limitation on coverage, subparagraph (A) shall not apply to corporations and partnerships whether profit or nonprofit engaged in education, health care, or social services.".

(c)(1) The first sentence of section 902 of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "to any education program or activity" and inserting in lieu thereof "for education"; and

(B) by striking out "such program or activity" and inserting in lieu thereof "recipients".

(2) The third sentence of section 902 of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "under such program or activity";

(B) by striking out "to whom" each time it appears in clause (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "to which" each such time;

(C) by striking out "program, or part thereof, in which" and inserting in lieu thereof "assistance which supports"; and

(D) by striking out "has been so found" and inserting in lieu thereof "so found".

(3) Section 902 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purpose of clause (1) of the third sentence, Federal financial assistance does not support noncompliance by or with respect to a part of a recipient solely because the receipt of such assistance by the recipient enables the recipient to make other resources of the recipient available to that part.".

(4) Section 903 is amended by striking out "1002" and inserting in lieu thereof "902".

NONDISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF HANDICAPPING CONDITION

SEC. . (a) Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Act") is amended—

(1) by striking out "his" and inserting in lieu thereof "such individual's";

(2) by striking out "in" the third time it appears;

(3) by striking out "the benefits of" and inserting in lieu thereof "benefits";

(4) by striking out "under any program or activity receiving" and inserting in lieu thereof "by any recipient of"; and

(5) by striking out "under any program or activity conducted".

(b) Section 504 of the Act is further amended by inserting "(a)" after the section designation and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsections:

"(b) For the purpose of this section, the term 'recipient' shall not be construed to include any entity which would not have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this section in effect on February 27, 1984, nor to exclude any entity which would have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this section in effect on February 27, 1984.

"(c)(1) For the purpose of this section, except as provided in paragraph (2), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a State or to a political subdivision, a department, agency, or other such component part of the State or political subdivision that—

"(A) does not have as its primary function the peformance of any of the purposes for which such assistance was extended; and shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(B) is not extended such assistance,

"(2) If all or a portion of Federal financial assistance is extended to a State or to a political subdivision without restriction, such assistance shall be presumed to have been extended to the entire State or subdivision unless as to the department, agency, or other such component part where discrimination is alleged, the State or political subdivision demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that no Federal financial assistance was in fact extended to such department, agency, or other component part.

"(d)(1) For the purposes of this section, except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a private corporation or partnership that has more than one establishment, an establishment that is not extended such assistance shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(2) If Federal financial assistance is extended to a private corporation or partnership without restriction, the entire corporation or partnership is covered in its entirety.

"(3) To the extent the provisions of paragraph (1) constitute a limitation on coverage, paragraph (1) shall not apply to corporations and partnerships whether profit or nonprofit engaged in education, health care, or social services.".

(c) Section 505 (a)(2) of the Act is amended by inserting ", as amended," after "1964".

PROHIBITION OF AGE DISCRIMINATION

SEC. . (a) Section 302 of the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 (hereafter in this section referred to as the "Act") is amended—

(1) by striking out "in programs or activities receiving" and inserting in lieu thereof "by recipients of "; and

(2) by striking out "programs or activities receiving funds under the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 (31 U.S.C. 1221 et seq.)" and inserting in lieu thereof "recipients of funds under chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code".

(b) Section 303 of the Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "in" the second time it appears;

(2) by striking out "the benefits of" and inserting in lieu thereof "benefits"; and

(3) by striking out "under, any program or activity receiving" and inserting in lieu thereof "by any recipient of".

(c)(1) Section 304(a)(4) of the Act is amended by striking out "to any program or activity".

(2) Section 304(b)(1) of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out ", in the program or activity involved";

(B) by striking out "operation" in clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "operations of the recipient"; and

(C) by striking out "of such program or activity" in clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "in furtherance of which the Federal financial assistance is used".

(3) Section 304(c)(1) of the Act is amended by striking out "any program or activity receiving".

(d)(1) Section 305(a)(1) of the Act is amended by striking out "under the program or activity involved".

(2)(A) The second sentence of section 305(b) of the Act is amended by striking out "the particular program or activity, or part of such program or activity, with respect to which such finding has been made" and inserting in lieu thereof "assistance which supports the noncompliance so found".

(B) The third sentence of such section is amended to read as follows: "No such termination or refusal shall be based in whole or in part on any finding with respect to any noncompliance which is not supported by such assistance.".

(C) Section 305(b) of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purpose of the third sentence of this subsection, Federal financial assistance does not support noncompliance by or with respect to a part of a recipient solely because the receipt of such assistance by the recipient enables the recipient to make other resources of the recipient available to that part.".

(3) Section 305(e)(1) of the Act is amended by striking out "Act by any program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance" and inserting in lieu thereof "title".

(e) Section 309 of the Act is amended by—

(1) by inserting "(a)" after the section designation; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(b) The term 'recipient' shall not be construed to include an entity which would not have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984, nor to exclude any entity which would have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984.

"(c)(1) For the purpose of this title, except as provided in paragraph (2), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a State or to a political subdivision, a department, agency, or other such component part of the State or political subdivision that—

"(A) does not have as its primary function the performance of any of the purposes for which such assistance was extended; and shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(B) is not extended such assistance,

"(2) If all or a portion of Federal financial assistance is extended to a State or to a political subdivision without restriction, such assistance shall be presumed to have been extended to the entire State or subdivision unless as to the department, agency, or other such component part where discrimination is alleged, the State or political subdivision demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that no Federal financial assistance was in fact extended to such department, agency, or other component part.

"(d)(1) For the purposes of this title, except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a private corporation or partnership that has more than one establishment, an establishment that is not extended such assistance shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(2) If Federal financial assistance is extended to a private corporation or partnership without restriction, the entire corporation or partnership is covered in its entirety.

"(3) To the extent the provisions of paragraph (1) constitute a limitation on coverage, paragraph (1) shall not apply to corporations and partnerships whether profit or nonprofit engaged in education, health care, or social services.".

NONDISCRIMINATION BY RECIPIENTS OF FEDERAL FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. . (a) Section 601 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (herafter in this section referred to as the "Act") is amended—

(1) by striking out "in" the second time it appears;

(2) by striking out "the benefits of" and inserting in lieu thereof "benefits"; and

(3) by striking out "under any program or activity receiving" and inserting in lieu thereof "by any recipient of".

(b)(1) The first sentence of section 602 of the Act is amended by striking out "program or activity" each time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "recipient" each such time.

(2) The third sentence of section 602 of the Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "under such program or activity" in clause (1);

(B) by striking out "to whom" each time it appears in clause (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "to which" each such time;

(C) by striking out "program, or part thereof, in which" in clause (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "assistance which supports"; and

(D) by striking out "has been so found" in clause (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "so found".

(3) Section 602 of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "For the purpose of clause (1) of the third sentence, Federal financial assistance does not support noncompliance by or with respect to a part of a recipient solely because the receipt of such assistance by the recipient enables the recipient to make other resources of the recipient available to such part.".

(c) Title VI of the Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 606. (a) For the purpose of this title, the term 'recipient' shall not be construed to include any entity which would not have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984, nor to exclude any entity which would have been a recipient under agency regulations implementing this title in effect on February 27, 1984.

"(b)(1) For the purpose of this title, except as provided in paragraph (2), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a State or to a political subdivision, a department, agency, or other such component part of the State or political subdivision that—

"(A) does not have as its primary function the performance of any of the purposes for which such assistance was extended; and

"(B) is not extended such assistance,

shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(2) If all or a portion of Federal financial assistance is extended to a State or to a political subdivision without restriction, such assistance shall be presumed to have been extended to the entire State or subdivision unless as to the department, agency, or other such component part where discrimination is alleged, the State or political subdivision demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that no Federal financial assistance was in fact extended to such department, agency, or other component part.

"(C)(1) For the purposes of this title, except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), in the case of Federal financial assistance extended to a private corporation or partnership that has more than one establishment, an establishment that is not extended such assistance shall not be deemed a recipient.

"(2) If Federal financial assistance is extended to a private corporation or partnership without restriction, the entire corporation or partnership is covered in its entirety.

"(3) To the extent the provisions of paragraph (1) constitute a limitation on coverage, paragraph (1) shall not apply to corporations and partnerships whether profit or nonprofit engaged in education, health care, or social services.".

PROVISION WITH RESPECT TO REVENUE SHARING

SEC. . Nothing in this Act or in the amendment made by this Act shall be construed to supersede the provisions of chapter 67 of title 31, United States Code, relating to revenue sharing.

LABOR-HHS-EDUCATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, 1985

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar Order No. 1161, H.R. 6028.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. BRADLEY. Reserving the right to object, I send a cloture petition to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not a unanimous-consent request. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 6028) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and related agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1985, and for other purposes.

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill, for at least the second consecutive year, reflects a strong expression of support for our Nation's education programs. I am especially pleased that the levels included for the Department of Education represent approximately a $2.3 billion or a 14-percent increase over the previous year.

Earlier this year, Mr. President, the Senate demonstrated its commitment to increasing education funding when it considered a budget plan which would have placed a freeze on all nondefense discretionary programs. Yet the Senate voted to except from such a freeze education and health research when it adopted the amendment offered by myself and Senator STAFFORD. The full amount allowed for in that budget plan is reflected in our total for this measure.

Last year, you will recall that our efforts on the fiscal year 1984 spending bill resulted in a significant increase in discretionary education programs over the previous year and budget request. And yet our efforts resulted in our obtaining the President's signature on this measure, which was the first time in 5 years that such a feat was possible. We have every expectation that we will again have a signed bill.

The amount in this bill for education represents the highest spending level ever provided by any Congress. Education highlights in the bill include:

Compensatory education for the disadvantaged: $3.7 billion.

Student financial assistance: $4.5 billion.

Handicapped and rehabilitation services: $2.6 billion.

Libraries: $150 million.

Higher education: $449 million.

Math/Science program: $200 million.

Impact aid: $695 million.

Chapter 2 block grant: $532 million.

Guaranteed student loans: $3.079 billion.

Bilingual education: $142 million.

Vocational and adult education: $831 million.

Furthermore, Mr. President, the education levels reflected in the Senate version of the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill, when compared with comparable programs, exceeds the House passed bill by more than $170 million and the administration's request by more than $2.2 billion.

I might add that our recommendations reflect the assumptions that the estimated shortfall for the Pell grant program for fiscal years 1983 and 1984 will be dealt with but providing for that shortfall will come neither at the expense of individual students nor our overall appropriations for fiscal year 1985. This clearly is not a fiscal year 1985 problem and should not be treated as such.

Mr. President, there have been many outspoken critics of the Federal role in education and a call for less, not more, spending at the Federal level. Such critics are quick to blame all of the problems plaguing the Nation's schools on the Federal Government. To such naysayers I would only point out that the Federal role in education is a relatively recent one but has made all the difference in the lives of those who have been the direct recipients of such assistance: the handicapped, economically disadvantaged, language minorities, racial minorities, adult illiterates, and the list goes on. For most of us recognize that the Federal Government's involvement has been one of last resort to provide access to the type of quality education which the States have been either unwilling or simply unable to provide. I am convinced that, absent Federal leadership on their behalf, the handicapped children of this Nation would remain warehoused and forever separated from the mainstream of society. And how many of the Nation's 12.2 million college students would receive their education without the current mix of grants and loans available?

Mr. President, while the amounts for education might seem to some like a great sum, let me remind my colleagues that today the Federal Government provides only about 9 percent of spending for education at all levels. Thus the lion's share of funding and the setting of policy remain the responsibility of State and local governments and academia.

I am proud of this bill, Mr. President, because it does not shortchange our Nation's young people and I am pleased that it has the support of our committee members on both sides of the aisle. Federal funding for education has made all the difference in the lives of those served and, as long as I serve as chairman of this subcommittee, this commitment will not only continue but expand to meet any genuine need.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I should like to engage in a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the Labor-HHS-Education Appropriation Subcommittee with respect to the Institutional Aid programs, title III of the Higher Education Act of 1965. Is it correct that the committee has provided an additional $13,584,000 over the fiscal year 1984 appropriation?

Mr. WICKER. Yes; last year's total appropriation was $134,416,000. The proposed fiscal year 1985 total is $148 million.

Mr. BRADLEY. I also understand that, of the additional $13,584,000, $5 million is to be set aside under part A, the strengthening program, to support approximately 20 grants to those institutions which predominantly serve our Nation's Hispanic, Native American, Virgin Island, and Native American Pacific Island students.

Mr. WEICKER. That is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. I further understand that the $148 million provided by the committee would support some 287 grants under part A, including 60 to 70 new renewable grants for strengthening activities.

Mr. WEICKER. That is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. I thank the subcommittee chairman for this information.

Mr. President, several colleges in New Jersey have applied several times for title III grants and have been turned down. I am hopeful that the increase in funding that is included in this year's bill will be sufficient to enable more colleges in New Jersey to secure funding.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I believe it is necessary to clarify the legislative history with respect to the appropriations bill we are considering today. On June 29, 1984, the Senate Committee on Appropriations reported an original bill, S. 2836 Senate Report 98-544, making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies. At the time of reporting that legislation, the committee also authorized us to offer committee amendments to any House-passed bill which we might subsequently receive. Thus, H.R. 6028 has been printed to reflect the action of the Appropriations Committee on S. 2836. The amendments of the committee which have been considered merely reflect our earlier committee consideration. Because the two bills are identical in substance, the report of the committee on S. 2836 also governs the intent of the Appropriations Committee with respect to the amendments offered by the committee to H.R. 6028. We, therefore, expect that the departments and agencies funded by this legislation will follow the guidance of the committee as provided in Senate Report 98-544.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, in the fiscal year 1984 Labor-HHS appropriations bill Congress included a provision authorizing the Department of Education to settle outstanding loans under the College Housing Loan Program by negotiating a discount of the total due to the Department. This amendment provided authority for such settlements until October 1, 1984. This year's bill contains an extension of that language until October 1, 1985. This extension is necessary to permit the processing of settlement applications which might otherwise not be completed by October 1, 1984, which result from the Department's untoward delay in promulgating the regulations necessary to implement this discount authority.

As the author and sponsor of that provision, I would like to clarify with the chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education the intent of this provision.

First, it is our intent that the discounting authority apply to all schools with outstanding college housing loans, including those schools with loans that are in default. This provision was designed to permit those institutions with defaulted loans to pay them off in full through discounting the entire amount of the outstanding loans, including those portions of both principal and interest which are in default. To do otherwise would in most cases defeat the purpose of the amendment which is to settle outstanding loans and benefit the Government by removing defaulted loans which it is subsidizing off its books and to permit the institutions to pay off loans which they might otherwise not be able to pay off in full.

As an example let me talk about the institution in my State which will be affected by this provision. Alaska Pacific University, which reopened the defunct and closed Alaska Methodist University in 1977, inherited two loans of approximately $1.5 million, both of which were in default with approximately $1 million in defaulted principal and interest. It was and is now possible for the university to bring that loan current by repaying all the delinquent interest and principal in a lump sum. However, if that amount were discounted along with the remaining amount of principal, it is possible that the university would be able to pay the entire sum and retire the loan. This would benefit the university by retiring a large debt from its operations, and would benefit the Government by removing a loan from its books which it is now carrying at market rates, even though the loan was originally issued at 3 percent interest.

This approach makes commercial sense. When I was practicing law, I regularly settled outstanding debts for clients by an agreement in which a part of the outstanding debt was discounted in return for a full payoff of the remainder. Both parties benefited and this practice happens every day in the commercial world.

I also want to make clear that I believe the Department's practice of agreeing to a full payoff amount and scheduling that payoff over a period of time which will make the payoff financially bearable to the institution is acceptable. The whole point of the amendment is to benefit both parties; the institution by permitting it to pay back its loan at a discount, and the Government by removing from its loan portfolio defaulted and other loans which it is currently subsidizing at market rates. The Department of Education should work with institutions to determine what arrangement will permit the institutions, including those in default, to pay off their loans, as well as exercising its authority to collect discounted funds. Both goals are important or the authorization will not work.

Mr. WEICKER. I agree with the Senator from Alaska. The intent of this provision is to benefit both the Government and the institutions.

Mr. STEVENS. I also note that the committee report language on the provision when originally enacted makes clear that the Department should permit repayment at less than fair market value in instances in which it would otherwise risk default on the loan. This would seem to apply specifically to those institutions already in default.

Quite simply, accepting less than fair market value, including less than the amount which might otherwise be required for repayment, makes sense for these defaulted schools and is consistent with the intent of the discount authority. It is better to clear these defaulted loans off Government books than to continue to subsidize these loans at less than market rates. The Department has the authority to accept less than fair market value and it should do so to get these defaulted loans off the books.

Mr. WEICKER. I agree with the Senator from Alaska and urge the Department to remember that it has this authority.

Mr. RUDMAN. Mr. President, there is a small matter with regard to the management of the Low Income Energy Assistance Program which I would like to clarify with the managers of the bill. It is my understanding that a small amount of the program's funds are available for use by the Department for grants to improve State and local management of the Energy Assistance Program. The expectation is that funds will also be used to share the experience States have acquired over the past 4 years, to demonstrate how the best ideas and management techniques may be used in other States, and to evaluate and disseminate information which helps stretch the shrinking energy assistance dollar.

Mr. WEICKER. That is exactly right. This program has spent nearly $6 billion in the 50 States in the past 3 years, yet there has been no Federal effort to strengthen program delivery mechanisms and to disseminate the results and the experiences of the States in running the program. One of the strengths of the block grant system is that we have 51 laboratories out there from which the best ideas can be drawn and distilled.

Mr. RUDMAN. To further clarify our intention, am I correct in assuming that in fiscal 1985 up to $300,000 will be spent for such grants and technical assistance?

Mr. WEICKER. That is also correct. This figure is, of course, a small fraction of 1 percent of program resources. In addition, the Department is now estimating it may realize as much as half that amount in administrative savings which it could contribute to this longer term purpose of making more effective use of energy assistance funds.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I rise in support of the pending Labor-HHS-Education appopriations bill.

Three years ago under the auspices of ACTION Director Tom Pauken, ACTION established the Vietnam Veterans Leadership Program [VVLP]. VVLP volunteers work at senior levels in business and government in their communities to build and maintain coordinated, communitywide efforts to help solve problems faced by other Vietnam veterans. The VVLP has established volunteer programs in 50 communities nationwide, and has built a network of over 5,000 volunteers. As one who has long supported veterans employment programs, I wholeheartedly endorse the VVLP.

The VVLP has addressed the problems of unemployment and underemployment and the negative stereotype that diminishes the veteran's sense of self-worth and impairs employment opportunities. In the past year, the VVLP—in conjunction with partnerships data net [PDN]—has acquired all the necessary resources to implement a computerized national job bank and career assessment system for veterans. PDN is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization whose mission is to facilitate and implement partnerships between the public and private sector addressing areas of national concern. PDN was organized in part by the White House Office of Private Sector Initiatives. Its membership includes the National Association of Manufacturers, the National Association of Associations, and the Young Presidents Organization, as well as Federal, State and local governments, and civic and community organizations.

The Job Bank System will maintain lists of available unemployed and underemployed veterans, job and training vacancies, and will provide an expeditious means of matching the qualifications of veterans with employer requirements and job opportunities. The system will link the VVLP network with vast private sector resources. In addition, the system can serve as a prototype for the national job bank authorized by the Job Training Partnership Act, and would involve thousands of veterans in providing employment and other volunteer assistance to the many constituents served by ACTION.

As intended, direct ACTION financial support for the VVLP ends October 1, 1984. The majority of VVLP's will continue with private sector funding to serve their fellow veterans as well as their communities. However, the VVLP currently needs $160,000 in startup costs to have the computer system on line in 4 months.

There are indications that the Department of Labor and the Veterans' Administration may well be able to make use of this system in their attempts to improve veterans' employment opportunities. Also, 15 to 20 States have indicated an interest in participating in the Job Bank System.

I should like to inquire of the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee [Mr. WEICKER] whether a portion of the $1,984,000 in ACTION citizen participation and volunteer demonstration program funds—Title I, part C—appropriated under this act might be used to develop the computerized job bank network such as proposed by the VVLP and PDN?

Mr. WEICKER. I thank the Senator from South Dakota, who is one of only two Senators who served in the military in Vietnam, for his interest and support of this legislation. While the Appropriations Committee cannot endorse a specific proposal, the development of a demonstration national job bank network involving volunteer citizen participation such as you describe may be possible.

I would expect ACTION to take reasonable and appropriate steps to ensure that the positive gains in employment and the volunteer networks created by the VVLP are not lost during their transition to private sector funding. I also encourage ACTION to explore the use of computer data bases and computerized networks as a means of enhancing and expanding its volunteer programs and services.

PROPOSED NATIONAL CENTER ON LOW-VISION CARE AND REHABILITATION

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, as the Senate considers the fiscal year 1985 appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies, I would like to note a matter of particular significance to partially sighted persons.

As a result of the efforts of my colleague from California who serves on the House Appropriations Committee [Mr. ROYBAL], and another California colleague of ours with a great interest in the area of low-vision problems [Mr. LEVINE], the House Appropriations Committee, on page 115 of its report accompanying the House version of this bill—House Report No. 98-911—stated its expectation that the National Institute for Handicapped Research [NIHR] will give consideration to funding a national center for partially sighted persons. As the House Committee's report language notes, there is a critical need for a comprehensive rehabilitation center on law-vision care that can provide a broad range of services and serve as a national information clearinghouse with referral and technical assistance capabilities. The report goes on to point out that creation of such a center would provide valuable assistance to service providers and researchers as well as to partially sighted individuals.

Currently, there are only seven comprehensive low-vision rehabilitation centers nationwide, three that serve partially sighted persons of all ages and four whose client population is limited to veterans.

The comprehensive low-vision centers are unique in that they provide not only low-vision care, but a wide range of services designed to meet the special needs of persons with partial sight. These other services include psychological counseling, educational, vocational, recreational, and social services designed to enable partially sighted persons to live and function independently, as well as information and referral services regarding economic and other assistance available to these individuals.

These services to partially sighted persons are a tremendous departure from past efforts, which have tended to lump partially sighted individuals with those who are completely blind.

The establishment of national centers to spur the development of more low-vision rehabilitation centers could be of great value to partially sighted individuals, who can be trained to use their remaining eyesight, rather than be rehabilitated as though they had no functional eyesight whatever.

In addition to these client services, a comprehensive center would collect and analyze patient data that would advance our knowledge in the low-vision area and provide the basis for future research. The center would also provide information about the special needs and capabilities of those with low vision to professionals and others who desire more information about persons who are partially sighted. Finally, the center would serve as a source of advice, guidance, and assistance to other agencies and institutions seeking to establish and operate low-vision facilities.

Mr. President, I want to emphasize my strong support for this effort and my deep appreciation to my California colleagues, Representatives ROYBAL and LEVINE, for their work in including in the House committee report the language for NIHR to consider funding a center for partially sighted persons. I am pleased to add my voice to theirs in support of this very promising, useful concept.

AMENDMENT NO. 4395

Mr. WEICKER. Does the distinguished Senator from Texas have an amendment?

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, in replying to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will try to clarify the situation. We have not yet agreed to the amendment 4395, which is the pending business before the Senate. The question is on agreeing to the amendment 4395.

Mr. WEICKER. Parliamentary inquiry. The amendment vis-a-vis the funds dealing with the Office of the Secretary of Health, that is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. This is the amendment dealing with the Secretary's funds. Is there objection?

Mr. HELMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HELMS. May I ask the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, this amendment is related to the Secretary's expenses only?

Mr. WEICKER. That is correct.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4395) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, we are minutes away from concluding the very important work that has been done by the subcommittee, the committee, and the Senate as a whole on this appropriations bill. I do not think there is a Senator in this Chamber the bill has not touched upon, indeed that we have not tried to accommodate. There are probably more positive features in this legislation than anything we have discussed for a long time. I hope that literally within a matter of a few minutes we can get to final passage. I urge, if anybody does have an amendment, please be prepared to offer it.

I also implore my colleagues not to try to use this as a vehicle for some other objective. Again, this is a request. But in terms of education, health, science, and the many who need our special care, this is their bill—the powerless, if you will, or those to whom the future truly belongs.

I hope we can enact it in a short period of time. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Texas.

AMENDMENT NO 4397

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an amendment I send to the desk and ask for its immediate considerations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mr. BENTSEN] proposes an amendment numbered 4397.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 45, line 13, before the period insert the following: "Provided further, That of the funds available under section 7 of said Act, $1,000,000 shall be for reconstruction of a school in Motley County, Texas."

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, this particular amendment has been reviewed by the manager for the majority and the manager for the minority. It is my understanding they have no objection to the amendment. It involves $1 million under section 7 of the bill. It results from destruction of the school at Matador, TX. That is a school of some 252 students in a town of less than 1,000 people. They did not have adequate insurance. Those 252 students are now attending school in basements of churches, and they do not have the funds to rebuild the school. I urge very strongly that the amendment be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must mention that the amendment amends a part of the bill previously amended. It would require unanimous consent for consideration of this amendment.

Mr. BENTSEN. I appreciate the admonition, the advice, and the concern of the Presiding Officer. I ask unanimous consent consideration of this amendment be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I urge passage of the amendment. This is a matter that affects only a few people, but it affects them rather totally in that they have no place to go to school.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

The amendment (No. 4397) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4398

(Purpose: To add funds for research and other activities relating to the cause, prevention, and treatment of acquired immune deficiency syndrome)

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mr. CRANSTON], for himself, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. RIEGLE, proposes an amendment numbered 4398.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 20, line 16, strike out "$402,730,000, of which $1,810,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$413,930,000, of which $6,310,000".

On page 20, line 22, strike out "4,383" and insert in lieu thereof "4,400".

On page 22, line 5, strike out "$372,485,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$375,091,000".

On page 24, line 18, strike out "$933,857,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$934,679,000".

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I send this amendment to the desk on behalf of myself and Senators MOYNIHAN, KENNEDY, and RIEGLE.

Mr. President, our amendment to the pending measure, the fiscal year 1985 Labor-HHS-Education appropriations bill, would provide additional funds for AIDS research and public health programs consistent with the May 25, 1984, recommendations of the Assistant Secretary for Health, Dr. Edward N. Brandt, Jr. These funds—a total of $14.628 million above the amounts requested by the administration for the National Institutes of Health, the Center for Disease Control, and the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration—are urgently needed to ensure that every scientific effort that is practical and reasonable is made toward finding a cure for AIDS and preventing the further spread of this tragic disease.

Specifically our amendment would increase the appropriations to CDC by $11.2 million, to the National Institutes of Allergy and Infectious Diseases of NIH by $2.606 million, and to ADAMHA by $822,000. With respect to CDC, our amendment would add, for AIDS-related purposes, 17 FTE's to its personnel authorization in the bill, and $4.5 million of the $11.2 million add-on would, in accordance with Dr. Brandt's recommendation for expanding viral disease laboratory space, be allotted to construction.

In addition, I am very pleased to note that in a colloquy last Friday, September 21, printed on page S 11698 of the RECORD, the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies [Mr. WEICKER] assured me that, of the NIH appropriations in this bill as reported by the Senate committee, at least $15.431 million more than the administration proposed in its NIH budget for AIDS research would actually be expended for AIDS research. The $14.628 million add-on in our amendment would thus increase the total additional amount for AIDS activities in this bill to $30.059 million above the total amount in the administration's budget, $54 million, producing a total of over $84 million for Federal AIDS activities in fiscal year 1985.

Mr. President, real progress has already been made in our fight against AIDS, but we still have a long way to go before this health crisis is behind us. Most important, the discovery this past spring of the probable cause of AIDS, the HTLV-III virus, opens the possibility that a vaccine may be developed in the near future. We must step up our research program now to take full advantage of that discovery and to maintain the momentum in our efforts to conquer this disease.

Tragically, the number of AIDS cases continues to rise at an alarming rate. As of August 17, 1984, according to CDC, there were 5,785 cases and a mortality rate of 46 percent in the United States. Over 1,600 new cases have been reported since Dr. Brandt presented his recommendations in May. The number of cases has tripled over the last year. Some epidemiologists estimate that the caseload may actually be 10 or more times higher than what is reported by CDC because of the narrow definition CDC uses to identify AIDS cases.

Mr. President, one of the continuing concerns abut the Federal response to the AIDS health crisis has been the lack of a master plan of attack—an evaluation of the work already underway and a systematic approach to planning and funding further areas of investigation. When Secretary of Health and Human Services Margaret Heckler announced the discovery of the probably AIDS virus last April, the Department initiated such an evaluation of its AIDS research and public health needs.

After the Public Health Service completed that study, Dr. Brandt on May 25 presented Secretary Heckler with a detailed budget outlining the funds needed by each agency of the Public Health Service for AIDS research and public health projects. This document, which I will ask to be inserted in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks, provides an analysis of the Federal AIDS programs together with specific budget and research requirements.

For fiscal year 1984, Dr. Brandt proposed $20.076 million and 4 FTE's to supplement the fiscal year 1984 AIDS budget of $47.595 million. For fiscal year 1985, he recommended $35.809 million and 37 FTE's over the administration's fiscal year 1985 budget request of $54 million. Dr. Brandt justified these additional funds as necessary in order to seize the opportunities to detect, prevent, and treat AIDS that have been made possible by the discovery of, and the development of the means to mass produce, the virus HTLV-III and by the development of a blood test for AIDS.

Despite the fact that Dr. Brandt's request for additional AIDS funding was prepared in advance of House and Senate action on the fiscal year 1984 supplemental and fiscal year 1985 appropriations bills, this funding proposal was never transmitted to the Congress. Consequently, the fiscal year 1984 supplemental appropriations measure as enacted included none of the additional funding proposed by Dr. Brandt except for $9.475 million in additional funding for AIDS research and public health projects—$6.55 million for NIH, $1.75 million for CDC, and $1.175 million for ADAMHA. Neither the House-passed nor Senate-reported fiscal year 1985 appropriations bills earmarked funds for AIDS in addition to those requested by the administration—other than $3.35 million in House-passed version of the Labor-HHS-Education appropriations act for CDC-supported AIDS work.

Dr. Brandt, in his capacity as Assistant Secretary for Health, is the highest ranking expert in the Federal Government for assessing the overall needs of the Federal AIDS research program. In his budget recommendations, Dr. Brandt outlined in specific detail the projects needed to be developed and expanded, and he identified the agencies—the NIH, CDC, ADAMHA, and the Food and Drug Administration—most able to carry out the projects and the specific funding requirements for each project. I believe that we should accept Dr. Brandt's evaluation and heed his recommendations.

Mr. President, in the September 12 "Dear Colleague" letter that Senators MOYNIHAN, KENNEDY, and I sent to each of them to state and explain our original proposal, we set forth our initial intention to add $46.41 million in fiscal year 1985 appropriations and 41 FTE's for AIDS research and public health projects. This amount reflected Dr. Brandt's recommendations for fiscal year 1984 supplemental and fiscal year 1985 funding combined, minus the $9.475 million appropriated in the fiscal year 1984 supplemental.

Following discussions with the very able Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] and based on information from appropriate agency personnel, our amendment has been reduced by certain amounts based on the understanding that it is not necessary to provide add-ons at those levels in order to provide adequate funding for AIDS activities in fiscal year 1985. First, as I noted earlier, we now understand that at least $15.431 million more for AIDS research than the $45.663 million the administration proposed in its budget for NIH will be used for AIDS.

Second, Dr. Brandt recommended that $13.101 million be appropriated to NIH for AIDS research in the fiscal year 1984 supplemental, both to develop new studies and to expand existing programs. Of that $13.101 million, half—$6.55 million—was appropriated in the fiscal year 1984 Supplemental Appropriation Act, Public Law 98-390, allowing for the development of some, but not all, of the projects suggested by Dr. Brandt. A substantial portion of the amount recommended for fiscal year 1985 was proposed to fund the continuation in fiscal year 1985 of efforts that would have begun in fiscal year 1984 had the full amount of his proposed supplemental funding been appropriated. Since it was not, it is now our understanding that it would be duplicative to provide additional fiscal year 1985 NIH funding in amounts equal to the total of the $6.551 million recommended but not appropriated for fiscal year 1984 and the full fiscal year 1985 requested amount. In order to avoid such duplication, and taking into account the additional $15.431 million in fiscal year 1985 funding already available in the pending measure for NIH AIDS activities, our amendment includes for the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases at NIH a $2.606 million add-on for AIDS.

Third, our amendment now includes for CDC only the funds Dr. Brandt recommended for fiscal year 1985. Of the additional $3.2 million recommended by Dr. Brandt for fiscal year 1984 appropriations, $1.75 million was actually appropriated. As in the case of NIH, a portion of the amount he recommended for fiscal year 1985 was proposed to fund the continuation in fiscal year 1985 of efforts that would have been begun in fiscal year 1984 had the full amount of his proposed supplemental funding been appropriated. Since the full amount recommended for the fiscal year 1984 supplemental was not appropriated, it would again be duplicative to provide fiscal year 1985 appropriations comprising both the $1.45 million proposed by Dr. Brandt but not appropriated for fiscal year 1984 for CDC and the amount, $11.2 million, he proposed for CDC for fiscal year 1985. Thus, our amendment includes for CDC only the $11.2 million—and 17 FTEs—that Dr. Brandt proposed for fiscal year 1985.

Finally, it has proven impossible to work out an agreement to include in an amendment to this bill any funding for the Food and Drug Administration. Dr. Brandt recommended a total of $8.35 million—$2.6 million in the fiscal year 1984 supplemental and $5.75 million in fiscal year 1985—for FDA activities related to AIDS. However, funding for the FDA is within the jurisdiction of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Agricuture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies, and that agency's funding thus is normally handled in the appropriations bill reported by that subcommittee. For these reasons, we were unable to gain agreement to all the needed FDA funds in this appropriations act, and we felt that we should secure those funds that could be supported by the Appropriations Committee at this time.

Nevertheless, the FDA should be and will be heavily involved in dealing with the AIDS crisis. At such time as vaccines or drugs for treating AIDS are developed, the FDA will be responsible for licensing and approving these products. In order to evaluate these drugs, the FDA will need to develop screening tests using state-of-the-art technologies and high-containment facilities. Thus, it is essential that the FDA keep peace in its efforts on AIDS with the accelerated investigations at other agencies to prepare for and facilities the development of therapies for AIDS.

It is my intention to continue to pursue this matter with a new toward ensuring that an additional $8.35 million is available for FDA AIDS activities in fiscal year 1985—possibly through the continuing resolution for fiscal year 1985 or an fiscal year 1985 supplemental appropriations measure.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, this is no time to lessen our commitment or to slow our support for finding a means to treat and ultimately to prevent AIDS. Support for basic research and the new information it provides gives new hope to patients and their families. Identifying the HTLV-III virus as the probable cause of AIDS brings us much closer to developing an effective vaccine and therapy for AIDS. I am advised by AIDS experts that, with the use of genetic engineering techniques, it is possible that our scientists could develop an AIDS vaccine within a year.

Helping to ensure these results is extremely not just to control the tragedy of this disease but also to stop the prejudice and hysteria that the growing threat of AIDS has brought about. Patients with AIDS, whether they be homosexual or bisexual men, drug abusers, children, or recipients of blood transfusions, have too often been stigmatized and confronted with rejection by their families, isolation from their communities, eviction from their homes, and misunderstanding even by the health-care workers they depend on for care.

If we do not face the AIDS crisis head-on and with full support, we will continue to face ever more damaging and dangerous hysteria—and we'll count the costs of delay both in lives lost and damage to our society.

Mr. President, I urge all of my colleagues to support this vitally important amendment. I believe the amendment is acceptable to the committee, and I thank the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee for his courtesy and consideration.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD Dr. Brandt's memorandum of May 25, 1984, to Secretary Heckler.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES,
May 25, 1984.

From: Edward N. Brandt, Jr., M.D., Assistant Secretary for Health.

Subject: Proposed fiscal year 1984 supplemental and fiscal year 1985 amendment for Acquired Immuno-deficiency Syndrome.

For nearly three years the Public Health Service has led the fight against the relatively new but extremely serious public health problem known as Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome or AIDS. As a result of the efforts of many people within the PHS and scientists in laboratories throughout the world you were recently able to report some significant breakthroughs. These include the discovery of the virus HTLV-III, the probable cause of AIDS, the development of a process to mass-produce this virus and that of a blood test for AIDS.

These exciting discoveries bring us much closer to the detection, prevention and treatment of AIDS. There is much left to do. As of April 23, the date on which you announced the AIDS virus discovery, there had been reported a total of 4,177 cases of AIDS with 1,807 deaths in 45 States, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico. This represents a mortality rate of 43 percent which is clearly unacceptable. In order to seize the opportunities which the recent breakthroughs have provided us we will need additional funds both for the remainder of this fiscal year and for FY 1985. Although I realize that general policy would discourage supplemental and amendment requests at this time, I believe that the unique situation with respect to AIDS justifies our forwarding the requests at this time.

Attached is a table summarizing the additional funds needed. For Fiscal Year 1984 we are requesting a supplemental appropriation of $20,076,000 and 4 FTEs and for Fiscal Year 1985 we are asking for an additional amount of $35,809,000 and 37 FTEs. Summaries of the needs of the four PHS agencies involved and justifications for the additional funds requested are also attached.

I ask your favorable consideration of the PHS proposals and respectfully request you forward it to the Office of Management and Budget.

Attachment.

On April 23, 1984, Secretary Heckler announced that the probable cause of AIDS has been found and a new process developed to mass produce the virus. Isolation of the probable etiologic agent of AIDS will greatly assist prevention efforts because for the first time it affords the opportunity to characterize the agent in detail and understand its behavior.

AIDS projects currently underway will be expanded and refined and new projects will be initiated in the areas of laboratory investigations, surveillance, and epidemiologic studies. Special emphasis will be placed on technology transfer and information dissemination, and programs on disease prevention and control will accelerate rapidly.

Now that the probable etiologic agent of AIDS has been identified, other urgent questions need to be answered. Information will be required on the pathogenesis of the disease, the possible contribution of other agents, and the nature and the natural history of the HTLV-III virus. The isolation of the etiologic agent should now make it possible to identify transmitters, develop and evaluate the usefulness of specific diagnostic and screening tests for AIDS in donors and plasma, therapeutic measures, and biological products and the knowledge to use them appropriately to the medical and public health communities. Laboratory and epidemiologic studies based upon these specific tests should further and more precisely define the modes of AIDS transmission and lead to implementation of strategies to interrupt and control the disease. For the first time, it will be possible to establish that controls are truly uninfected with AIDS agents.

Laboratory technology which resulted in the isolation of the AIDS agent will make it possible to isolate other previously unknown related agents. Characterization of these agents and determination of their clinical and epidemiologic significance will be important.

ADDITIONAL AIDS RESOURCE NEEDS (SUPPLEMENTAL REQUEST)

Project	Pos./FTE	Funds
Fiscal year 1984
1. Improve laboratory diagnosis of retroviruses, determine their pathogenetic mechanisms, institute technology transfers and initiate basic studies for vaccine development	3.38/1.25	$1,700,000
2. Determine the prevalence of retrovirus antibody and viremia in various populations, including homosexual men, IV drug users, Haitians, hemophiliacs, and volunteer blood donors in the United States. Lymphadenopathy syndrome cases will be included		130,000
3. Expand investigation of transfusion-associated cases/donors	3.75/1.5	468,700
4. Expand international epidemiologic investigations (Zaire, other)	1.56/.63	245,400
5. Expand epidemiologic studies of AIDS in families to include additional study sites and pediatric cases	.31/.12	187,300
6. Expand laboratory data acquisition, analysis, presentation, retrieval and storage of AIDS patient materials		31,250
7. Improve diagnosis and treatment of opportunistic infections: a. Bacterial (including M. avium, M.tb, Legionella); b. Parasitic (including pneumocystis carinii, Cryptosporidium); c. Viral (including Herpes viruses); d. Mycotic (including Candida, Aspergillus, Cryptococcus)		437,350

CENTERS FOR DISEASE CONTROL—ALCOHOL, DRUG ABUSE, AND MENTAL HEALTH ADMINISTRATION—ADDITIONAL AIDS RESOURCES FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984 AND 1985

AIDS SUPPLEMENTAL FISCAL YEAR 1984

The Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration is requesting a supplemental appropriation in FY 1984 to support research on the psychological and behavioral factors related to AIDS victims and the relationship of AIDS to drug use. These studies will require the following additional amounts in FY 1984:

National Institute of Mental Health	$375,000
National Institute on Drug Abuse	800,000
Total	1,175,000

Some of the research investigations to be supported include the following:

National Institute of Mental Health

Research studies aimed at increasing knowledge about the psychological and behavioral factors which increase vulnerability among at-risk populations and AIDS patients; psychoimmunologic and neuroendocrinologic studies examining the effects of stress on the immune system.

Retrospective and prospective studies focusing on psychosocial and behavioral factors associated with the development of symptomatic mental health reaction in AIDS patients and members of high risk groups. Included in this area are:

Risk-assessment studies to refine procedures for differentiating which individuals with AIDS or in high risk populations are likely to experience emotional disturbance or psychological dysfunction.

Studies examining the relationship between social, behavioral, and psychological factors and the course and prognosis of the illness.

Funds would also be used to supplement large scale prospective cohort studies now being funded by NCI or NIAID to obtain psychosocial and behavioral data relative to AIDS patients or populations at high risk for AIDS.

National Institute on Drug Abuse

The study initiated in FY 1983 will be expanded to include a second component of 200 homosexual AIDS patients who do or do not use drugs. The researchers will investigate the casual or modifying relationship of drug use among homosexuals in the development of AIDS.

The second year of this study was to include two additional substudies: (1) a group of 40 drug-users who are imprisioned on various charges and who acquire AIDS. Detailed questionaires on lifestyle and drug-use, medical histories, immunologic function, and other predictive factors will be measured. This group is unique in that they did not seek out treatment and may have unique variables—types of drug used, disease acquired, extent of disease; and (2) a followup study designed based on the cohort studies of the drug abuse populations. These studies will focus on changes in the individual's health to see what relationships exist between AIDS and immunological status, virological profile, drug abuse life style or other identified factors. These will include a proportionate representation of the above studied group.

A study to examine the influence of marijuana components on both hormonal and cellular immune response in vivo and in vitro. For example, antibody formation by immune splenocytes of skin graft reactions, lymphocyte blastogenic responses, and lymphokine production.

A study of the effects of narcotics on the immune system. This group is investigating the ability of lymphocytes of addicts as compared to normal subjects to form rosettes, the extent and duration of any alteration, mechanism of this effect and any genetic factors involved. This is an attempt to determine immunological changes resulting from narcotic and other drug use.

The overall objective of another application will be to assess the potential immunosuppressive effects of marijuana smoke through measures of dose-related increases in susceptibility to microbial infection and tumor growth in rats receiving marijuana smoke. Resistance to systematic as well as to localized infections will be assessed.

A proposed case-comparison study of AIDS patients with a history of intravenous heroin and cocaine use is ready to begin this summer. The purpose of this study is to attempt to quantify the risk factors associated with needle-sharing and AIDS. In addition, an attempt will be made to quantify the risk factor of the spouse and children living with needle-sharers. Physical examination and immunochemistries will be used to assess health changes during the study.

A comparative registry analysis from Treatment Outcome Prospective Study (TOPS), the Bronx, and New York City to determine the presence of previously treated methadone clients among the patients listed in the AIDS registries currently maintained by New York City, other States and CDC will be attempted. This analysis will provide a preliminary determination of the association between long-term heroin and other parenteral drug use with the appearance of AIDS.

The next followup wave of TOPS provides an opportunity to conduct immunochemistry and clinical chemistry studies on patients with varying drug use patterns is geographically disparate cities. This study will be the first nationally based study to determine normative values for the more recently developed virological studies like HTLV among drug abusers. Attempts will be made to correlate the findings of this study with the clustering of AIDS in certain portions of the country. In addition, the presence and recurrence of other viral infections like herpes can be analyzed in terms of drug use patterns. The hypothesis that several of the psychoactive substances may have immunosuppressive effects can be tested in a naturalistic setting.

AIDS AMENDMENT FISCAL YEAR 1985

The Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration is requesting a budget amendment in FY 1985 to continue efforts begun in FY 1984 that were made possible by the proposed supplemental. The amounts requested are as follows:

National Institute of Mental Health	$425,000
National Institute on Drug Abuse	397,000
Total	$822,000

The activities are described below:

National Institute of Mental Health: Continuation cost of work begun in 1984.

National Institute on Drug Abuse: Continuation cost of work begun in 1984.

FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION FISCAL YEAR 1984 AND 1985 SUPPLEMENTAL FUNDING FOR AIDS ACTIVITIES

Given FDA's fundamental authorities for licensing biological products and approving new drugs, as well as responsibility for assuring the safety of the national blood supply, there is no question that the agency will be heavily involved in dealing with AIDS for a long time, regardless of the precise nature of the drugs and vaccines that are eventually developed. It will be necessary to grow sufficient quantities of the virus and pursue a number of approaches involving both monoclonal antibody and rcombinant DNA technology. Methods and animal models for evaluting candidate vaccines as well as diagnostic tests must be developed. Subsequently possible vaccines and treatment, will be evaluated, screening tests developed and refined, and standards set for licensing the products that will be developed. At the same time, in order to facilitate development and approval of these products, the FDA must continue research on the immunological factors involved and stay abreast of the research conducted both within and outside the government.

The FDA request includes different levels of funding in FY 1984, FY 1985, and FY 1986. The requested Supplemental Appropriation in FY 1984 is for $2,600,000 for the facility renovations and equipment necessary to expand AIDS work. The provision of these funds in FY 1984 will enable the agency to begin immediately to prepare the necessary high-containment laboratories. However, if these funds cannot be made available by July 1, 1984, the request would have to be revised to include this amount in FY 1985, since the funds could not be obligated by the end of FY 1984. The intent is to renovate several current animal rooms in Building 29A on the NIH campus into high-containment rooms needed for the AIDS work. This would require the agency to move existing animals out and contract for the maintenance of these animals.

The FY 1985 request totals $5,750,000. Of this amount $2,500,000 consists of one-time costs. The amount of $2,000,000 is for contracts to assess the impact on the national blood supply if those who are screened as positive for the AIDS agent are excluded from further donation, and to assess the past and current exposure to the AIDS agent by hemophiliacs who receive Anti-Hemophiliac Factor made from pooled plasma. The other $500,000 is for the one-time cost of moving the animals out of the space to be renovated in Building 29A and establishing a new location for them.

In addition to the one-time investment, the continuing needs are estimated at $3,250,000 the amount needed to meet operating needs for FY 1985. This amount would support 11 professional scientists using the IPA mechanism, 20 FTE staff years, and the cost of contracting for the animal support currently located in the space to be used for the AIDS work. While it is intended to use the IPA route as much as possible, 20 FTEs will be needed for technical and other support staff. This is essential because it is believed that 11 is probably the maximum number of IPAs which could be recruited, with the balance of the staff to be government employees.

Food and Drug Administration: Sumary of increased resources necessary for work on AIDS

Fiscal year 1984 supplemental:
Facility renovations	$950,000
Equipment	1,650,000
Total	[1] 2,600,000
Fiscal year 1985 budget amendment:
Contracts relating to the safety of the national blood supply and protection of hemophiliacs	2,000,000
Contract for maintenance of animals currently located in the space to be renovated for AIDS work	1,150,000
Professional scientists under IPA's	1,100,000
Intramural FTEs (20)	1,500,000
Total	5,750,000
Fiscal year 1986 impact:
Contract for maintenance of animals	650,000
Scientists under IPA's	1,100,000
Intramural FTEs (20)	1,500,000
Total	3,250,000

[1] This request is contingent on fiscal year 1984 funds being made available by July 1, 1984 if the funds are to be obligated by Sept. 30, 1984. If funding cannot become available by July 1, this amount of $2,600,000 would have to be added to the fiscal year 1985 request.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF HEALTH—ADDITIONAL AIDS RESOURCES—AIDS AMENDMENT FISCAL YEAR 1985

The NIH is requesting a budget amendment for FY 1985 to continue the efforts begun in FY 1984 that were made possible by the proposed supplemental and to initiate some new effort. The amounts requested are as follows:

National Cancer Institute	$7,900,000
National Institute of Dental Research	295,000
National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases	8,942,000
Division of Research Resources	900,000
Total NIH	18,037,000

The activities of the various Institutes are described below.

NATIONAL CANCER INSTITUTE

Continuation costs of work begun in 1984.

Expanded effort in blood testing, HTLV III production, vaccine development, and SAIDS research.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF DENTAL RESEARCH

Continuation costs of work begun in 1984.

Expanded effort made possible by major equipment purchases.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF ALLERGY AND INFECTIOUS DISEASES

Continuation costs of efforts initiated in 1984.

Evaluation of immune abnormalities in AIDS through the analysis of cell surface markers and correlative studies of cell activation and function,

Extension of ongoing study at NIH in epidemic cities to study possible HTLV III infections in health care workers.

Collaborative therapy trials of AIDS using standard protocols and the central data analysis center:

Clinical study on the use of alpha interferon for treating pre-AIDS and/or preventing development of AIDS.

DIVISION OF RESEARCH RESOURCES

Continuation costs of efforts initiated in 1984 at the Regional Primate Research Centers.

NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH—AIDS SUPPLEMENTAL, FISCAL YEAR 1984

The NIH is requesting additional funds in FY 1984 to support expanded research made possible by the isolation of a new human retrovirus described as the probable causative factor of AIDS. This breakthrough has provided us with the knowledge to increase our efforts against AIDS, efforts that will require the following additional accounts in FY 1984:

National Cancer Institute	$3,900,000
National Institute of Dental Research	81,000
National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases	8,330,000
Division of Research Resources	790,000
Total HIH	13,101,000

Some of the areas that have opened as avenues for increased efforts are described below, by Institute.

NATIONAL CANCER INSTITUTE

Further work on human cell lines that produce large amounts of HTLV III, including further development needed to mass-produce the material necessary for blood screening tests.

Development of rapid immunological assays to detect infection.

Accelerated efforts to produce a vaccine to prevent AIDS and to develop other ways to halt its development.

Expand search for a safe, effective therapy for AIDS and its related diseases.

Expansion of a contract that provides the prime source for HTLV III production, the entire early scale-up fermentation, and the transfer after exponential expansion into the for-profit sector for testing blood for antibodies.

Maintenance of production of HTLV III for primate models and vaccine development.

Supplementation of existing grants, particularly studies involving simian AIDS.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF DENTAL RESEARCH

Expanded investigations concerning the role of monocyte abnormalities in AIDS.

Studies on the epidemiology, transmission, and possible etiologic agent of AIDS in Zaire.

Modification and expansion of contracts dealing with specimen storage and distribution.

Development of a laboratory for the growth and study of a unique fungus, Thermoascus crustaceus, which has been found in the blood of some AIDS patients.

Expanded, studies of cryptosporidiosis, a serious opportunistic infection seen in AIDS patients and one that is now poorly understood, difficult to diagnose, and has no suitable treatment.

Research on the severe and even life-threatening diarrhea that affects AIDS patients.

Development of surrogate tests, particularly interferon production, to predict AIDS.

Expanded efforts in studies on the immunological defects in AIDS.

Additional AIDS public education programs in several major metropolitan cities throughout the United States where AIDS is statistically emerging.

Studies of Salmonella sepsis, and related infectious complications in AIDS patients.

DIVISION OF RESEARCH RESOURCES

Epidemiological studies at the Regional Primate Research Centers, using methods, similar to those employed with AIDS patients, to detect the virus in the primate colonies.

Development of an antiserum to permit rapid, reliable, field detection of SAIDS and SAIDS-carriers in the Centers' primate colonies.

Tests of the pathogenicity of retrovirus strains associated with human leukemia and AIDS.

Development of a vaccine to immunize nonhuman primates against AIDS.

Searches into the mechanisms of best immune defense against opportunistic organisms that colonize the oral cavity.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF ALLERGY AND INFECTIOUS DISEASES

Investigations of polyamine inhibitors to attempt to control cytomegalovirus infections in AIDS, since other virus infections may be co-factors that allow the HTLV III virus to express itself clinically.

Research on seven specific opportunistic microorganisms as they relate to the life-threatening infections in AIDS patients, including basic biology of the organisms, mechanisms of pathogenesis, virulence factors, immunogens and immunopathology, immunotherapy, and immune prophylaxis.

Implementation of a multi-institutional clinical trial of Dapsone in AIDS patients with Pneumocystis carinii pneumonia; Dapsone is a drug licensed for use against leprosy and certain skin conditions, and which has been found to be effective in rats against P. carinii pneumonia.

New studies on the biology, pathogenesis, and prevalence of Cryptosporidium; analysis of human cytomegalovirus; herpes simplex virus and leukocyte interactions in AIDS; and the antimicrobial susceptibility of P. carinii.

Testing among potential AIDS victims (identified under an on-going contract) for exposure and response to the newly reported HTLV III agent.

Investigations of immune derangements in drug addicted parents and their children.

Injection of HTLV-III virus and Lymphadenopathy Associated Virus (LAV) into chimpanzees in attempts to produce AIDS in experimental; animals.

Establishment of a laboratory to culture candidate AIDS retrovirus.

Establishment of a vaccine development facility to produce candidate vaccines using the techniques of oligonucleotide and peptide synthesis as well as insertional cloning procedures in vaccinia virus.

Development of a new chimpanzee facility to study the transmission of HTLV III and to establish a model for protection as well as a model to investigate factors that produce susceptibility such as T helper cell activation.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, last April I rose in this Chamber to introduce legislation to help combat the disease known as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS. At that time, the disease was spreading and provoking near hysteria in some parts of the country. Today, the Nation has reason for more hope, as it was announced earlier this year that the cause of this modern plague had been isolated. But the war is not won; the outbreak continues to spread, the mortality rate continues to climb, and the statistics are even more horrible.

In March 1983, some 1,279 cases of AIDS has been reported in the United States, with 485 deaths—a mortality rate of 37.9 percent. Today, 5,694 adult cases have been reported to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, with 2,695 deaths—a mortality rate of 45 percent. Sixty-nine cases have been reported among children below the age of 12, and 47 of them have died. Their mortality rate is a staggering 68 percent. These few figures bluntly state the case; we are dealing with one of the most lethal epidemic outbreaks of this century.

Despite the best efforts of health officials, the disease has spread. Although the States of New York, California, and Florida continue to report the preponderance of cases, the number of new cases occurring in New York has actually declined by almost one-fifth while the national total has risen. In March 1983, 36 States had reported outbreaks of AIDS. Today, 45 States have done so, as well as the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Yet, while all are appalled at the incidence of AIDS, there is cause for cautious optimism and a renewed commitment to fighting this disease. In April, Secretary of Health and Human Services Heckler announced that researchers had isolated the virus HTLV-III as a probable cause of AIDS, and had made breakthroughs in developing a means to mass-produce the virus as well as a blood test for AIDS. The Department of HHS undertook a comprehensive study of AIDS research already underway and of that needed in the future.

Assistant Secretary of Health, Dr. Edward Brandt, issued the Department's evaluation on May 25, 1984. Conceding that the astronomical mortality rate for AIDS is unacceptable, Dr. Brandt requested additional appropriations of $57.9 million through fiscal years 1984 and 1985, for continued treatment of and further research into AIDS.

These are the funds our amendment seeks to secure today. Dr. Brandt's initial request has been reduced significantly, to reflect appropriations in the fiscal 1985 budget and the fiscal 1984 continuing resolution. The amendment, therefore, would appropriate an additional $14.628 million to continue the important and fruitful work to cure this disease.

Our amendment would fund programs at the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration to improve laboratory diagnoses, conduct studies on AIDS outbreaks in the United States and around the world, expand investigation of transfusion-associated cases and cases involving other identifiable demographic groups, and improve the AIDS reporting network to isolate new outbreaks.

Perhaps of equal importance, support or further research for a cure for AIDS will quiet much of the anxiety and fear which has gripped areas of the country where this disease has been found. Members of the most common AIDS victim groups—most notably homosexuals, hemophiliacs, and Haitian immigrants—have been victims of additional discrimination and often of rejection and misunderstanding by their families and friends. Because AIDS has been associated with some blood transfusions, many patients have approached this procedure with additional apprehension. The disease itself can be eliminated only when a cure or treatment is developed, but public fears can be lessened by our willingness to continue support for AIDS research.

As a cosponsor of this amendment, and a sponsor of three pieces of legislation to provide funds for AIDS research and expedite the process for securing public emergency research funds, I have become familiar with the horror and devastation this disease brings. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment to provide additional funds for AIDS research, meet the request of the Department of Health and Human Services and to respond to the thousands of AIDS victims and potential victims.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it gives me great pleasure to rise in support of the amendment to the appropriations bill offered by my distinguished colleague from California. With this amendment he has given the Senate an opportunity to fund research into AIDS and AIDS-related diseases at the level requested by the administration's own Assistant Secretary for Health, Dr. Edward Brandt. The number of patients suffering from the acquired immune deficiency syndrome continues to increase at an alarming rate. Although the NIH has identified the virus responsible for the disease, we still do not have effective means of prevention or treatment. Many centers of research across the Nation are geared into intensive round-the-clock labors to find the necessary solutions. These dedicated scientists and technicians must be allowed to continue their work at the levels proposed by the Assistant Secretary for Health. The funding level proposed by the administration is totally inadequate.

Senator CRANSTON and I have had a longstanding interest in the problems of patients with AIDS. We have seen its destructive powers. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the Senator from California and I, in a colloquy last Friday, stated our concerns for adequate funding for AIDS research. I remain committed to the goal of finding the means to treat and ultimately prevent this devastating disease. I am, therefore, prepared to accept this amendment which adds $11.2 million to the Centers for Disease Control, $2,606,000 to the National Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and $822,000 for the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration. These funds are to be used to intensify the efforts being made in AIDS research and surveillance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HECHT). The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4398) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4399

(Purpose: To preserve the right of schoolchildren to engage in voluntary school prayer)

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. HELMS] proposes an amendment numbered 4399:

At an appropriate place in the bill add the following: "None of the funds appropriated under the act shall be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.".

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, this amendment simply restores the language on voluntary school prayer which has been in the Labor-HHS-Education and related agencies appropriations since its adoption in 1980 for fiscal year 1981.

When the committee amendments were adopted en bloc on Friday, September 21, the school prayer provision, originally authored in the House by Representative ROBERT S. WALKER, was struck out.

The pending amendment simply restores the Walker language, which, in my opinion, the Senate will not strike on a recorded vote. It provides:

None of the funds appropriated under the act shall be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the letter from Representative WALKER relating to this amendment.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, September 25, 1984.

DEAR SENATOR: As the original House sponsor of the voluntary school prayer language in question, I wanted to take this opportunity to express my support for its inclusion and retention in the appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education for fiscal year 1985.

The language first became law in 1980 and has been a part of every Labor/HHS/Education bill and Continuing Resolution since then. It has consistently been adopted in the House by overwhelming margins, reflecting the broad support that the language commands here in the House. Currently, it is the only statutory provision now on the books protecting individual students' right to voluntarily pray in school. I am very hopeful that the Senate, in its wisdom and as it has in the past, will retain this language.

Cordially,

ROBERT S. WALKER.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is not a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a rollcall vote take place on the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object——

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I withdraw my request. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. [Mr. HECHT]. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily set aside so that I may offer an amendment. In doing so, I want it understood that I have cleared this matter with the Senator from North Carolina and told him that the amendment I am about to offer has no impact whatsoever on the pending issue. I have discussed the matter with the managers of the bill. The amendment I am about to offer is a very modest increase of $4 million having to do with orphan drugs.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, would the Senator add to his unanimous-consent request the right of the Senator from Utah to present an amendment which will be accepted by the managers of the bill immediately following the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. METZENBAUM. If the managers will tell me that is acceptable.

Mr. WEICKER. That is acceptable.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the minority manager has stepped out of the Chamber.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah withhold that? The manager on the minority side is not in the Chamber.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Ohio may go forward with his amendment and I intend to do the same thing for the Senator from Utah.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to temporarily set aside the pending amendment in order that I may offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4400

(Purpose: to increase funding for the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development)

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. METZENBAUM] proposes an amendment numbered 4400.

On page 22, line 14, strike "312,100,000." and insert in lieu thereof "316,100,000, of which $4,000,000 shall be available for Orphan Drug Research and Development Grants.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, the authorizing committee has provided $4 million for this which makes it possible for the $4 million to be included in the appropriations bill. I think it is very important to provide something for the Orphan Drug Research and Development Grant Program. I appreciate the fact that the managers of the bill have indicated they are in a position to accept it.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I accept the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4400) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I would make a similar unanimous-consent request as the Senator from Ohio so that I may present a noncontroversial amendment which the managers of the bill have agreed to.

Mr. President, let me withhold my request.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I think I know what the amendment is. Mr. WEICKER has informed me. I have no reason to think that Mr. PROXMIRE would object to the amendment.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the distinguished minority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request? Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4401

(Purpose: To provide an additional $500,000 for Special Olympics, Inc., for the 1985 International Winter Special Olympics Games in Park City, Utah, under the "special demonstration programs for severely disabled" section of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH] proposes an amendment numbered 4401.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 46, line 7, strike out "$1,252,765,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,253,265,000."

On page 6, line 11, strike out "and".

On page 46, line 13, before the period insert a comma and the following: "and $500,000 shall be available under section 311 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 for Special Olympics, Inc., for the 1985 International Winter Special Olympics Games in Park City, Utah".

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this amendment adds $500,000 to the level of the Labor, Education, HHS appropriations for the 1985 International Winter Special Olympic Games. This event will be hosted by Special Olympics, Inc., in Park City and Salt Lake City, UT, on March 24 through March 29, 1985.

Special Olympics was created in 1968 by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation. It has now become the largest international program of sports training and athletic competition for mentally retarded children and adults. Sports and recreation provide an avenue for physical, social, and psychological development for handicapped persons. In the past, mentally retarded individuals have been told, "You can't do it." But Special Olympics says, "You can do it. All you need is a chance."

The Special Olympics Winter Sports Program began with ice skating as its official sport in 1972. Soon training programs in Alpine (downhill) and Nordic (cross country) skiing were added to the program. By 1977, winter sports training and competition had grown and developed enough so that the first International Winter Special Olympics could be conducted at Steamboat Springs, CO.

This year, Park City and Salt Lake City, UT, will host the 1985 Internatinal Winter Special Olympic Games for 750 participants from the United States and 15 other countries. Competitions will include Alpine skiing—giant slalom, slalom, and downhill—cross country skiing—100 meter sprint, 1 kilometer race, and 3 kilometer race—and ice skating—50 meter, 100 meter race, 400 meter race, and figure skating.

Even though 750 participants will be eligible for competition at the 1985 International Winter Special Olympics Games, some of the potential athletes will not be given the chance to compete because of financial constraints. This is why we are requesting a one-time congressional appropriation. The funds will help defray the cost of meals, lodging, transportation, and other services necessary for the handicapped athletes to participate in the games.

In the past, the State governments such as New York, Michigan, and Louisiana have provided State funds to support International Special Olympic Games. While the State of Utah plans to provide some funds for the 1985 International Games, the amount will be limited because of the small size of the overall State budget. Utah also is a State having a small population and few headquarters for major corporations. Consequently, it is difficult for my State to raise the entire $1.9 million required for the 1985 games from private sources. However, corporations and civic organizations will be providing substantial contributions to the games including some $2 million of inkind services and supplies. It is also important to recognize that the 1985 International Games are being conducted on a limited budget with only five paid staff members. The other members of the games committee are serving without compensation. More than 2,000 volunteers will be providing their time and services free of charge. Game officials from the U.S. Skiing and Skating Associations will be donating their professional services.

I urge my colleagues to support this appropriation. Without some Federal assistance many handicapped Olympian athletes would otherwise not be given a chance to demonstrate that "they can do it."

Mr. President, I submit that this is one of the greatest things that happens in this world. Any of us who have had any connection with Special Olympics, I think, have become instantaneous supporters of the Special Olympics.

At this time, I ask the manager of the bill if he would be willing to accept my amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I commend the distinguished Senator from Utah for his amendment. I agree with him that that is one of the great events which takes place in this country. This particular Special Olympics is of an international nature, not just one of those which takes place every year in the United States. I would say probably the best way I could get money for the retarded people would be if every Member of the Senate would attend the Special Olympics. I think I could set almost any figure at all for the endeavor involved there, because it really brings out the best in all of us.

I am not just talking about money. I am talking about a one-for-one participation. I know many of the organizations, the ones that go one for one with the Special Olympics—I know the Jaycees do in the State of Connecticut. I know many of them give their time to this event. This is a great event to have in the United States, bringing athletes from all over the world.

I see the money spent around here, and I see $500,000 for this all-important event; believe me, there is no difficulty in supporting it. I know this opinion is shared by all Members, including the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. PROXMIRE]. I certainly support the amendment.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the Senator. This event, for the athletes, will be one of the highlights of their lives and this will certainly be one of the highlights among events in the United States. I share the Senator's feeling for all the athletes. I know he is the leader in the Senate, if not the whole Congress, in handicapped issues. He has taught me things about this subject, both as a member of the Labor-HHS Committee and as chairman of the committee.

I personally am in his debt because he has helped me understand these problems.

With that, Mr. President, I move the amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I say before the amendment is moved, this was a worthwhile bill prior to the adoption of this amendment. Now it is of such excellence and such compassion that I urgently enlist the aid of the distinguished Senator from Utah in seeing to its passage at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I think he will have that. I move the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4401) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATCH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I want to point out to my colleagues what will be involved if indeed we go to the continuing resolution rather than to pass this bill as we now have it before us.

As to the Department of Labor, the Job Corps, there is a $34 million difference between this bill and the House continuing resolution. And without these funds, program quality would suffer by increasing the size of the classes, and caseloads of counselors and supervisors; 2,400 enrollees would be cut.

Community service employment for older Americans, $17 million would be denied as between this bill and the House continuing resolution. The addition of 3,400 jobs for the low-income elderly would be denied.

Health and Human Services, maternal and child health, the House continuing resolution is $79 million below the bill on the floor here in the Senate. Services for crippled children, the provision of newborn genetic screening, sudden infant death services, lead poisoning prevention services, and prenatal medical services are, among others, provided through allocations to the States. And those allocations would be reduced by $79 million. These are the people who would suffer by virtue of accepting the House continuing resolution compared to the Senate bill.

Community health services, $8,650,000 below the Senate bill. Essential prevention-oriented primary care services for the medically underserved populations provided for more than 4,700,000 people in 1974. The Senate mark would permit service to be provided to another 350,000. That would be denied if we go to the continuing resolution.

Health Resources and Services Administration. We could train 1,100 new doctors in family medicine, including geriatrics.

We could support 1,700 more residents in general internal medicine and pediatrics than were funded in 1984.

The Senate bill calls for the establishment of 24 new geriatric academic administrative units in universities, specifically to train doctors in all aspects of geriatric medicine. That is not included in the House continuing resolution.

We could provide for 9 new area health education center projects which, added to the 10 continuation projects, would cover 19 States with a geographic area of 420 counties and a total population of 41 million people in primarily rural areas who lack adequate health services. That is not in the House continuing resolution. It is in the Senate bill.

Four thousand two hundred more disadvantaged students would be able to receive financial assistance to become health professionals; 3,000 more students would be able to receive advanced nurse training; 1,000 more students would be able to enroll in the professional nurse traineeship program under the Senate bill; 160 more people would receive traineeships in order to assist them to become nurse anesthetists.

The Senate bill provides $5 million to establish the Center for Nursing Research. No funds were provided in 1984 to support programs on educational and clinical nursing research, training, and information dissemination.

Head Start: The Senate bill is $79,309,000 more than the House continuing resolution. These funds would permit enrolling 32,000 more children in Head Start; denial of this money would require a cut of 1,000 children below the level currently served.

Nutrition for the elderly, $15,301,000 less than the House continuing resolution. The average number of meals per day served to needy elderly persons could be increased by 32,000. Without these funds, the current level of 806,000 average daily meals could not be sustained due to the impact of inflation.

Low-income energy assistance with winter coming on, $65 million more than the House continuing resolution. These funds represent a 3-percent increase over last year's level, in order to offset rising energy costs. Without these funds, fewer low-income people will be provided assistance in meeting fuel bills this winter. These additional funds would serve an estimated 300,000 households.

Refugee-targeted assistance, $27,500,000. Targeted assistance funds would be limited to $50 million, a one-third reduction from fiscal year 1984. Targeted assistance funds serve localities highly impacted by heavy concentrations of refugees.

Community services block grant, $20,272,000 more than the House continuing resolution. It is estimated an additional 1.1 million impoverished people would be served with the higher amount in the Senate bill; 40 new community action agencies would be open to provide antipoverty programs in unserved areas.

Compensatory education for the disadvantaged: $16.6 million more in the Senate bill than the House continuing resolution, and the lower House amount results in approximately 22,000 fewer migrant children, and 12,000 fewer handicapped children in State institutions being served.

Libraries: $63 million. The House bill provides no increase in public library service, and completely eliminates Federal matching funds for library construction renovation. The Senate bill includes math-science funds, $200 million; includes desegregation assistance, $75 million; includes the Special Olympics as presented by the distinguished Senator from Utah. These are all in the Senate bill.

I think maybe this is the place to draw the line on the issue that has brought us to this impasse. Once again, we have a prayer-in-school amendment. If everybody wants to go ahead and pray that things are going to work out all right for the poor, for the homeless, for the diseased, and for the retarded, go ahead and do so. I am sure it has its effect. But I suggest that a few dollars are necessary to accomplish the ends of giving them a better life, hope for the future, and, indeed, in many cases, life itself.

That is what this bill is about. It is the United States of America speaking from its heart to those who need our special care, to the smallest, and to the least powerful of our citizens—the least powerful in the sense of their physical condition, mental condition, economics, or whatever. Prayer is a powerful thing, and we all believe in it. Let each one do his own thing, but that is not going to help these people. What is needed is dollars. What is needed is programs, and what is needed is people committed to their neighbor.

In the some 25 days of hearings that took place, I wish all of you could have shared those moments with the committee and with those persons afflicted with certain diseases knowing that their only hope for life for either themselves—because many of them spoke for themselves—or for their children, or loved ones—lay with the United States of America with its National Institutes of Health, and with the various programs going on in the universities of this Nation. God, how hard it is to fight for a few pennies for life in this Nation compared to the billions we spend on destruction. But now we come down to the ultimate—pray your way out of it.

This is one of the finest work products to come out of this body in this session in terms of the hope that it delivers to so many, whether the hope is in terms of an education, or whether the hope is the financial help necessary to achieve that education.

I mention in here the fact that this bill calls for the establishment of 24 new geriatric academic administrative units in the universities. Do you realize at the present time in this Nation we only have two such units in our universities that are dedicated to geriatrics? Do you understand the rapid multiplication that is going on right now as to our elderly population, and that we are totally unprepared for it? Only 2 out of the some 123 university medical complexes are devoted to the specialty of geriatrics. I hope, again, staff will provide me with the exact figures as to what is happening to the elderly population in the United States by the year 2000, and the year 2010. The figures are staggering. We can all sit there and admire our parents, and those growing old around us. But I suggest to you again we had better do something instead of either packing them off to nursing homes or telling them to get down on their knees and say a prayer. It seems to me we can do something. That is what this bill provides for. I think many of us felt there was something special to the bill in the sense it was not just appropriating money the old way, but again foreseeing the complexities of the future, and preparing in terms of the elderly of this Nation.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WEICKER. Yes, I yield to the distinguished Senator.

Mr. HATCH. I thank my friend.

THE SCHOOL PRAYER AMENDMENT

I can appreciate the problems that he has because it is an important bill. As chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, I have great personal interest in everything associated with this bill. I point out to my dear friend and colleague that we have had the debate on school prayer. He won that particular debate earlier in the year. But all the amendment of the distinguished Senator from North Carolina—in fact, let me read it. It is very simple. It has been in this Labor-HHS bill since 1980, as I recall. It is known as the Walker amendment added in the House. As I understand it, it is in the House bill. All it says is:

None of the funds appropriated under this act shall be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.

To me, that is a harmless amendment. It is an amendment that just acknowledges we do not want any of the money in this bill going for the purpose or used for the purpose of preventing voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools. Everybody's rights are protected. If anybody wants to bring litigation, if some child prays in public school voluntarily, they can do that. I think this amendment should be accepted. It has been in the bill.

We have a letter from ROBERT WALKER, the Congressman who is the author of this bill.

He just says:

DEAR SENATORS: As the original House sponsor of the voluntary school prayer language in question, I wanted to take this opportunity to express my support for its inclusion and retention in the appropriations bill for the Department of Labor, Health, and Human Services and Education for fiscal year 1985.

The language first became law in 1980, and has been a part of every Labor-HHS-Eduction bill and continuing resolution since then. It has consistently been adopted in the House by overwhelming margins reflecting broad support that the language commands here in the House.

Currently, it is the only statutory provision now on the books protecting individual student rights to voluntarily pray in school. I am very hopeful that the Senate in its wisdom, and as it has in the past, will retain this language.

I suggest to my dear friend that this language does not cause any disruptions. It does not hurt anybody. It does not cause any problems with discrimination. All it does is say none of these funds shall be used to prevent voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools. I think that the House is going to insist on this amendment being in there.

I would like not to have this bill held up because of that language which really is not going to make any difference one way or the other. It is an acknowledgment that we believe children can voluntarily pray or meditate if they want to. And it does not have any force or effect with regard to school prayer.

So I hate to see this bill held up because of this amendment. But perhaps I missed something and perhaps I do not fully understand what the distinguished Senator from Connecticut is saying. But I do understand how deeply he feels about this issue having spent lots of time with him in the past. So I just say that, I hope that we can accept this amendment, and move on from there.

Mr. WEICKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. WEICKER. In response to the distinguished Senator from Utah, two things. First of all, we debated this matter as a freestanding issue, and it did not get the required number of votes for an amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. WEICKER. Yes.

Mr. HATCH. We did not debate this matter. We debated a full prayer amendment. I understand what you are saying. I am just saying this is completely different, and I do not think it gets into that full-fledged constitutional debate we were in before. That was a constitutional amendment.

Mr. WEICKER. I say to the distinguished Senator from Utah, any way you want to cut it or define it, we are talking about school prayer and we are talking about programs. That is what the amendment says, to prevent the implementation of programs, voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.

To change a word here and add a word there, it walks like a duck, it quacks like a duck, it looks like a duck, so it is a duck. But how unfortunate that having lost the freestanding debate we now have to piggyback on the backs of the sick and the elderly and the young. Now it is being piggybacked on this bill. They lose on the debate, the proponents of what is being offered here, and now they try to put it on a bill so nobody will dare kill the bill.

Well, I am the one, along with Senator PROXMIRE and the other members of the committee, who spent the best part of a year devoting our time to those who are requesting and have the right to expect the assistance of their government.

And now these people are being denied that assistance in terms of an amendment which was all prayer in school.

Mr. HELMS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. WEICKER. Not now; I will be glad to yield after I complete my remarks.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. WEICKER. I will be glad to debate with the Senator from North Carolina any time.

The fact is that in 1980 or whenever this language was first put on, it was innocuous. Nobody dreamed that the issue would arrive in the proportions which we see today in this Nation. Nobody dreamed of that. It was innocuous language, no harm could come of it.

There were those who thought there was a problem here, constitutionally.

It was not until the political season and with those running for the highest office in the land that finally the issue manifested itself in terms of personalities. All of a sudden the whole country became involved with it.

So as it is presented on the Senate floor in the year 1984, more specifically in September 1984, 1½ months before an election, it is no longer innocuous, because it has tremendous implications and ramifications due to the debate that is the background of what is being proposed here on the floor.

Programs, programs; it seems to me as soon as you have programs of prayer, voluntary or otherwise, you are in violation of the first amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

I might add, so that nobody feels we are blind on this issue, I have a second-degree amendment waiting here which specifically would eliminate those words that say "the implementation of programs of" and insert "individual," so that in effect it would read: "No funds appropriated under this act may be used to prevent individual prayer and meditation in the public schools."

That is unacceptable. But that does not violate the Constitution. All it does is restate the law as it is, but there is no violation. Everybody. pray—indeed, the Government should not use its funds to prevent any person, any individual, from praying.

No; with the word "program" in this amendment, there you are with organized prayer in the school.

Do I want to see a year's work go down the drain? No; but this issue, too, is important. The shame of putting it on this bill, No. 1, that is not my shame.

I have just sent word to the Appropriations Committee which is reviewing the continuing resolution to incorporate all that has been done so far by the committee and by the Senate into the continuing resolution. I realize it will probably be postponed a day or two because probably the same group will try to put a prayer amendment on the continuing resolution, and I will have to fight that.

I suppose what bothers me the most, as it does everybody else, is that the people who will suffer are not the ones who can afford to suffer in this country. But that was not my choice. I did not pose the issue. And, yes; there is something very special and just as valuable to each one of us as human beings in the concepts of the Constitution of the United States. It is not an antibiotic, it is not a teacher's lesson, it is not a roof over your head, it is not a job. But it is also important. Too many people in this country have glossed over it for too long, and that is why we are in our present straits. So if the problem does have to be dramatized, let it be dramatized, and on this bill.

Let us understand what it is that is going to be lost and who is going to suffer for this political dialog, for this philosophical dialog.

I cannot believe that anybody in ignorance or homeless or in suffering is going to be very appreciative of the Senate of the United States or their Government. As much as I believe in the value of prayer, and I do, there is no better example, insofar as doing that which is Caesar's business—that is the business of this body, the business of Government, the secular business of the United States. That is our job.

I am not here, and neither are any of my colleagues, to take up on the Senate floor on Tuesday afternoon what the rabbi or the priest did not do on Saturday or Sunday. That is their job.

So I would hope that we could get on to the business of the legislation before us and the Senate bill, which is so far superior, thanks to all of you in this Chamber, so far superior to what it is the House has devised. But let us address ourselves to our responsibility in this area. That, believe me, is the proper business, not the amendment before us.

I have no desire—let me put it this way—to get into the long constitutional debates. We have been all through this, ad nauseam. It is a big issue out there. I am sure there are those on both sides of the aisle who would love to stick their opponents with voting against this amendment in an election year. "You voted against prayers in school." It will work both ways. Wait and see. That is maybe what someone wants to achieve out here, a political end to embarrass somebody else.

Let me say it loud and clear, not for the purpose of the Members of this body, as they know the Constitution as well as I do, but to remind the American people of article 6. No religious test—no religious test—shall be required for the holding of office. So regardless of how anybody votes on this amendment, disregard it. Indeed, if anybody does try to embarrass anyone else, they are the ones who should be voted out of office for engaging in that kind of demagogery.

If there are those who want this for political purposes, all the more reason why the vote should take place. I might add I do not want to hear it said of the Senator from Connecticut, "You are not running for election, so you do not care." I was running for election in 1982 and I took the same position in 1982 that I am taking now.

I think the time has come to knock it off. This whole religious debate has gone way beyond its bounds, as it always does. The political parties, the political arena, the Senate of the United States are no different from our own homes and our own social gatherings. These are conversations best left alone. It is up to each one of us in the United States of America to find our own way to the Creator.

We do not need any help from government, we do not need any programs of prayer in schools, we do not need any U.S. Senators or candidates moralizing for the rest of the Nation. I know, thanks to the decisions of the Supreme Court, that my children are far more tolerant religiously and racially than I or my generation were. That is what counts in the United States of America. That is progress.

No; I do not yearn for the good old days when you knew exactly who was who in your class and whom they worshiped or why. I do not yearn for that at all, nor for the embarrassment caused by those who were not Protestant, because most of the prayers were Protestant. I do not yearn for that at all.

I am so proud of where we are today and where our children are. They judge each other on the basis of the worth that is inside, not on the basis of the institution one belongs to or the color of the skin. That is where the Constitution works where, indeed, many of our faiths have failed.

I am not here to get into a preaching dialog this afternoon. I know that what is embodied in this bill best exemplifies everything I was taught in my particular faith and I know that it can come to pass if this bill is passed, and it will not if it does not.

Talk to me about what it is that we believe in, what it is that is espoused by whatever faith we belong to—principles of belief of all religions in this Nation that have been furthered by exactly what this Government does and what, more particularly, it does in this bill. I could not necessarily say the same thing for the DOD bill and other bills. This bill is the manifestation, in my particular instance, of what I believe in insofar as my fellow man is concerned.

As I said, the weakness of this cause is best exemplified by piggybacking this proposition on this legislation, on the backs of these people, and on the fulfillment or nonfulfillment of their lives. So, Mr. President, I hope that when we pass this legislation, as I hope we will—and the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. McCLURE] is here and is prepared to come to the floor to offer an amendment or another matter—I am quite satisfied to go through this debate for the next several days if that is what is required. I think everybody had forcefully and well stated their points of view.

I am not saying that mine is the right point of view when it comes to prayer. It is what I believe in, but I am not saying it is the right point of view. But this is the right bill in terms of what it does. That is my concern here this afternoon.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside in order that I might present an amendment on behalf of the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. McCLURE] for consideration by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4403

(Purpose: To fund the unfunded liability within personnel retirement systems of five State Employment Security Agencies)

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I send an amendment by Senator McCLURE to the desk and ask that it be immediately considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. WEICKER] for Mr. McCLURE, proposes an amendment numbered 4403.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 5, line 6, strike "$2,422,598,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$2,426,365,000"

On page 5, line 13, after the comma, add the following: "and of which, not to exceed $3,767,000 which shall be available only for amortization payments to States which had independent retirement plans in their State Employment Service Agencies,"

Mr. McCLURE. Mr. President, this amendment to the Labor Department section of the bill will assure continued stability of the retirement systems in five State Employment Service Agencies. The five States involved are Idaho, Utah, North Dakota, Nebraska, and Oklahoma. The number of State employees affected totals over 3,000.

Prior to 1980, these five States had a separate retirement system for their State Employment Service Agencies. The separate systems were established at the urging of the Department of Labor around 1958. Although the Department originally supported the independent systems, the Department later told the States it was unfair and the SESA employees should be brought under each of the broader State employee retirement systems.

The States agreed and, operating in good faith, closed each of their special systems for SESA workers. The Department of Labor, in turn, agreed to amortize the liabilities over a period of 30 years and to publish regulations setting out agreements with these States. These agreements have not been published and these States are facing severe cutbacks in current employment services to cover these extraordinary retirement benefit costs.

It appears that DOL, for whatever reason, has abandoned plans to work with the States. The present value of the unfunded liability over 30 years currently totals approximately $113 million.

The amendment I am offering simply provides money for the unfunded liability for fiscal year 1985. The five States involved are facing the very real possibility of having to cut employment services in order to pay unfunded retirement benefits. This amendment gives us the time to work out a solution with the Department of Labor before these cuts become necessary.

Mr. President, I fully expect the Department to include in its fiscal year 1986 budget requests sufficient funds to fully amortize these payments on a 30-year schedule.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I recommend we accept the amendment. Apparently an inequity has been caused by the importunings of the Federal Government which resulted in an unfunded liability within personnel retirement systems of five State Employment Security agencies. It is clearly a situation demanding equity, and I concur in the argument of the distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. McCLURE] and ask that the amendment be adopted.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I have had an opportunity to review the amendment and discuss it with staff, and I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4403) was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

(Mr. HECHT assumed the chair.)

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DENTON. Mr. President, I regret that the Senator from Connecticut has left the floor. However, for my other colleagues—and if he is within range of my voice, for him—I should like to offer a very few remarks on some of the statements he has made regarding voluntary school prayer and the amendment now before the Senate.

It is redundant to point out that the amendment has been law since 1980, and the letter to various Senators from Representative WALKER makes that clear.

I read the letter:

DEAR SENATOR: As the orignial House sponsor of the voluntary school prayer language in question, I wanted to take this opportunity to express my support for its inclusion and retention in the appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education for fiscal year 1985.

The language first became law in 1980 and has been a part of every Labor-HHS/Education bill and Continuing Resolution since then. It has consistently been adopted in the House by overwhelming margins, reflecting the broad support that the language commands here in the House. Currently, it is the only statutory provision now on the books protecting individual students' right to voluntary pray in school. I am very hopeful that the Senate, in its wisdom and as it has in the past, will retain this language.

Cordially,

ROBERT S. WALKER.

I believe that the distinguished Senator from North Carolina has already asked that the letter be printed in the RECORD. However, I thought its text relevant enough to make it explicit at this point.

I will address a few more remarks and some representations which have been made against the amendment.

It has been said that the amendment would permit programs of prayer in schools, and that is represented as being against the law and against the interests of the country. I point out that we have this year passed the equal access amendment, by which provisions we can have, as a result of that act, voluntary prayer in schools, outside of school time and with other restrictions. But with respect to the amendment offered by the Senator from North Carolina, which has been law all along, we now have a simple case of legislation which complements the equal access legislation and extends protection of students against being prohibited by Federal funds which would disrupt their student aided voluntary prayer meeting, if that is what they chose to do with equal access; and I am confident that in many cases that will be the choice.

I just wanted to clarify those two points.

I find it mysterious as to the object of the representations. Whose interests are being served by not adopting this amendment?

I have in my hand a UPI release of September 17, 1984, which appeared nationwide. This is an article which appeared in a newspaper in Alabama. There was a poll of 5,000 students; 2,300 filled out the questionnaire. These were honor students in the high schools of today. The poll was taken by the publication known as "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

The relevant response from them on the matter of school prayer was that 79 percent believe that prayer should either be allowed or required in public schools.

The votes on the equal access bill in the Senate and the House were both overwhelming.

So I do not know what will is being expressed or what interest is being forwarded by the position taken by my friend from Connecticut, and I would find it abhorrent were we to stall on such a routine and appropriate measure.

I ask my colleagues that we regard it properly and vote and move on.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the UPI article to which I referred.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Times (AL) Daily, Sept. 17, 1984]

SURVEY SHOWS TOP STUDENTS WANT ABORTION BAN, PRAYER

NEW YORK.—A majority of top achieving high school students favor school prayer and support a constitutional ban on abortion, a survey showed Sunday.

And, 63 percent of the honor students said they would vote for President Reagan while 28 percent backed Walter Mondale.

The publishers of "Who's Who Among American High School Students" sent questionnaires to 5,000 of the 375,000 students listed in the directory; 2,300 students filled out the questionnaires.

Fifty-seven percent of the students said they supported a constitutional amendment either banning all abortions or banning abortion except in specified circumstances. Fifty-four percent believe abortion violates the right to life of the unborn child.

Seventy-nine percent believe prayer should either be allowed or required in public schools. Half did not think prayer in public schools violates separation of church and state; 16 percent did.

The report—"15th Annual Survey of High Achievers Views on Education, Cheating, Social Issues, Religion"—is the second based on data collected in the survey taken last spring.

The first, put out in the summer, told about views on drugs, alcohol, politics, nuclear war, draft registration.

On drugs, 86 percent said they had never tried marijuana; 98 percent had not tried cocaine or other drugs such as angel dust or LSD. On alcohol, 3 percent said they had never consumed enough to get drunk; 8 percent said they have from four to six drinks when imbibing.

Twenty-three percent said they drink beer occasionally and 32 percent, wine.

Other highlights from the report on education, cheating, social issues, religion: 51 percent said school is the major source of information about sex, birth control and VD; 34 percent said they learned most about sex from friends. Fifty-one percent said they can ask their parents anything about sex and will get open and honest answers. Eighty-two percent said they never had intercourse. If they had sex, 52 percent said they use birth control every time; 25 percent, occasionally; 18 percent, never.

Fifty-eight percent believe the parents of unwed teenage males as well as pregnant females should be notified before abortions are performed.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4399

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, for those who are not as familiar with Senate procedures and tendencies as we are here on the floor, the last hour and a half seems like wasted time and motion. But I can assure Members, and others who may be hearing me, that it was not, is not, and has produced what I believe is a good result. The whole question of prayer, voluntary prayer in public institutions and schools, has been a matter near and dear to my heart for a long time, and to the heart of my father-in-law before that. Senator Dirksen, I guess, was the original author of the first proposed prayer amendment. But, Mr. President, it would appear to me that there is the basis for a meeting of the minds on this issue. I have no illusions about this being the last time this issue will be fought, nor even on this bill, because surely this issue will be dealt with in conference.

The House, I am told, in their bill does have a provision either identical to, or similar to, the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina.

So in the final analysis, Mr. President, this, like all bills, will be shaped and formed in conference, and then submitted to the two Houses for their consideration. With that in mind, it has been my privilege to discuss this matter with the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee; with the managers; Senator WEICKER; the author of the amendment, Senator HELMS, and I hope that we have a way to resolve this issue.

I will yield now, Mr. President. I believe Senator HELMS may wish to speak, and then I hope that we can pursue a course of action that will lead us to a resolution of this issue on this bill, permit us to go forward, and pass this appropriations bill in a relatively short period of time.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. HELMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the distinguished majority leader, as always, has stated the situation accurately. This Senator has no desire whatsoever to delay the work of the Senate, and I am a little surprised, to be honest about it, that there has been a delay on this provision which has been a matter of law since 1980. Furthermore, I have no doubt whatsoever that my original amendment, which is now pending, would be approved by this body.

True enough, a constitutional amendment relating to school prayer did not receive sufficient votes to be approved. A two-thirds vote, of course, is required for a constitutional amendment. But as I recall, the votes in favor of the constitutional amendment were 55 or 56. I do not recall precisely the vote. But in any case, the majority leader has far too many problems for me to add to them in terms of delaying the work of the Senate.

I must say that I do not believe it can be contended that I have delayed the work of the Senate because I was prepared to vote an hour and a half ago on the pending amendment. But in any case, I think it is time to move along.

In that regard, I have to do a couple of things. One, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays on the amendment be vitiated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

Second, I want to propose a modification of my amendment. I have that right, of course, inasmuch as the yeas and nays have been vitiated. I would propose that we alter the amendment slightly by striking the words "the implementation of programs of" and insert the word "individual". I send that modification to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 4399), as modified, follows:

At an appropriate place in the bill add the following: "None of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be used to prevent individual voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools.".

Mr. HELMS. I ask the distinguished manager of the bill, Mr. WEICKER, and also the very able chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Mr. HATFIELD, if they feel that this modification will be satisfactory to them.

Mr. WEICKER. In response to the distinguished Senator from North Carolina, I have no problems insofar as the modification is concerned to emphasize the right of the individual to pray, and that is something that I have always believed in as strongly as he has. I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, in response to the Senator from North Carolina, I commend him for modifying the amendment in terms of getting us on with the bill. The chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. WEICKER] has acquiesced to this. It has met his criteria that he has spoken of frequently, that an individual has the right of freedom of prayer. Whether it should be written into law is subject to argumentation among lawyers.

I commend both Senators because I believe we have resolved the issue in this modifications. I commend the Senator from North Carolina for his willingness to move, at the same time being firm with his principles and views he has expressed many times about voluntary prayer in the schools.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. HELMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I again thank the distinguished Senator from Oregon. Just before we vote on the amendment, and I am perfectly willing to accept a voice vote, let me say that I do not believe that I am giving away the store with this modification. I think I know what is going to happen in conference, with the help of the able Congressman from Pennsylvania, Mr. WALKER, and other Members from both the House and Senate sides. I reiterate that I want to be helpful to the leadership in moving along the work of the Senate. There is very little point in our sitting around for hours at a time while a quorum call drones on. With that, Mr. President, I urge adoption of the amendment, as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

The amendment (No. 4399), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I support the fiscal year 1985 Department of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies appropriation bill as reported by the committee.

I would like to commend the chairman of the full committee, Senator HATFIELD, and the chairman of the subcommittee, Senator WEICKER, and the other members of the Appropriations Committee for their work on this bill. For the second year in a row, they have reported a bill which provides significant increases in many domestic programs for the elderly, the poor, the young, and the handicapped.

This bill as reported provides $94.3 billion in budget authority and $80.7 billion in outlays for fiscal year 1985 for the important activities of the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. Agencies such as ACTION, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and the National Labor Relations Board are also funded in the bill.

After adjustments for possible later requirements, the Labor-HHS bill provides $32.5 billion in budget authority for discretionary programs. This nondefense discretionary spending level is consistent with the guidance given to the subcommittee by the full Senate Appropriations Committee on June 14, 1984. Mr. President, I will ask unanimous consent that a table showing this relationship be inserted into the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

Any amendments not contemplated that add additional discretionary spending could result in the bill exceeding this guidance level, threatening the enactment of this important bill.

Again, Mr. President, I support this bill as reported by the committee and commend the committee for this product.

I ask unanimous consent that the table to which I earlier referred be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE EFFECT OF THE HYDE AMENDMENT ON TREATMENTS FOR VICTIMS OF RAPE

● Mr. JOHNSTON. For several years, the Hyde amendment has permitted medicaid funding of abortions only "where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term." However, the Appropriations Committee in June approved an amendment, offered by Senator WEICKER, to add an additional exception "for medical procedures necessary for victims of rape or incest." The term "medical procedures" is understood to include abortions.

Now, I have recently been advised that there are other medical procedures, which are widely available, which are virtually always effective if they are administered within a few days to victims of sexual assault. Among these procedures is the drug known as DES [diethylstilbestrol]. I have further been advised that the Hyde amendment—even without the Weicker amendment for rape and incest—in no way prevents Federal funding for administration of DES or other procedures employed within a few days of a sexual assault.

I would like to know if this is true. Does the language of the Hyde amendment which is current law—containing only the life-of-the-mother exception—allow funding of DES treatments or other treatments administered within a few days of a sexual assault?●

● Mr. DENTON. The answer is yes. Until 1981, the Hyde amendment, as enacted, contained the phrase, "nor are payments prohibited for drugs or devices to prevent implantation of the fertilized ovum, or for medical procedures necessary for the termination of an ectopic pregnancy."

That clause was dropped in 1981 without controversy, simply because it was unnecessary. The Hyde amendment was never intended to impede funding of medical procedures for ectopic—or tubal—pregnancies. Indeed, none of the antiabortion constitutional amendments or statutes which have been proposed would affect such procedures, which are not abortions, and which were never regarded as abortions under the antiabortion laws which were in effect in the States until 1973.

Likewise, the Hyde amendment has never been interpreted to prevent Federal funding of drugs or devices which prevent the implantation of the fertilized ovum in the uterus, which generally occurs within 8 days of fertilization. I understand that intrauterine devices, for example, sometimes work by preventing implantation, rather than by preventing fertilization. I do not intend to embark upon a discussion of whether or not that is a proper or desirable mechanism for birth control; I merely make the point that the Hyde amendment has never been, and is not now, construed to interfere with Federal payments for such anti-implantation drugs or devices.

Thus, the Hyde amendment which is current law, which contains only the life-of-the-mother exception, does permit funding of the various treatments administered to a rape victim within a few days of the assault, including treatment with DES. There are actually several types of procedures which are employed in this situation, some of which prevent conception fertilization—some of which prevent implantation, and some of which may work in either manner depending on the time that they are administered to a woman. But all may be funded under the Hyde amendment. This is beyond dispute.

If administered promptly—within 72 hours of the sexual assault—DES treatment is virtually 100-percent effective. A study of 1,000 rape victims who were promptly treated with DES found zero pregnancies [L. Kuchera, "Postcoital Contraception with Diethylstilbesterol," Journal of the American Medical Association, Oct. 25, 1971]. Dr. Philip Corfman, Director of the Center for Population Research of the National Center of Child Health and Development, testified before a Judiciary Subcommittee in 1975 that "according to data from Ann Arbor, when DES is taken according to direction there are essentially no failures."

Even without any treatment, the chances of a single sexual assault resulting in pregnancy are low—certainly no more than 2 percent, probably much less.

By the way, there has been considerable publicity regarding cases in which women took DES, and subsequently gave birth to daughters who years later developed vaginal cancer. It appears that DES can cause female fetuses to become susceptible to this form of cancer, but ony if the drug is taken when the pregnancy is well advanced—more than 70 days after the conception of a female child. This is an important consideration with respect to certain medical uses of DES, but it is not a concern pertinent to the use of DES in the treatment of rape victims.

So, the Weicker language is not necessary to fund emergency treatment for rape victims. The provisions of the Hyde amendment apply only after the point of implantation.

The Weicker language would result in funding of surgical abortions on women, at any stage of pregnancy, who say that their pregnancy resulted from sexual assault. Such a loophole would encourage fraudulent claims, thus increasing skepticism regarding claims of sexual assault among law enforcement personnel, medical personnel, and jurors—to the detriment of genuine rape victims, and to the advantage of their assailants. I think it is far better to encourage prompt medical treatment of genuine victims of sexual assault, rather than to open up a loophole and invitation to fraud.●

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I have been involved in efforts to provide the necessary funding for the final year of the biomedical sciences program.

This program was initiated as a 5-year national demonstration program to identify low-income, disadvantaged, minority students in secondary school who indicated an affinity for math, science, and the biomedical sciences and to provide them with intensive support, counseling, and instruction through the secondary school years and the first year of college.

The program was proceeding apace, with great success, until fiscal year 1983, when it was made a part of the chapter 2 block grants. The Secretary of Education had no funds for continuation of the program in discretionary account.

The chairman of the Labor, HHS Subcommittee on Appropriations, Senator WEICKER, graciously agreed to the request from me and six of our colleagues on the Appropriations Committee to include report language in the 1983 supplemental appropriations bill and the fiscal year 1984 regular Labor-HHS appropriations bill urging the Secretary to continue funding this program due to its success. Unfortunately, our encouragement did not help Secretary Bell locate the funds to continue the program; 12 institutions of higher education were home to these demonstration projects; 6 urban sites and 6 rural. One of these institutions, Jackson State University, is in my State of Mississippi. Jackson State has kept my office appraised of its work with the biomedical sciences program. I am convinced that Jackson State's efforts have made a great deal of difference to many of Mississippi's disadvantaged students, and I am still very interested in seeing the program brought to a successful conclusion.

It is not too late to fulfill the Government's commitment to these students. The program needs $1 million to close out successfully the projects at all 12 schools. Is it possible to earmark funds for completion of these 12 projects under the Secretary's special programs and populations discretionary fund?

Mr. WEICKER. As you know, this program was block granted in 1981. There are many who believe that perhaps this program should never have been included in the chapter 2 block grant. I have encouraged these Senators to discuss the matter with the distinguished chairman of the authorizing committee rather than rely on appropriations language to change the statute. In the meantime, however, in order to assist these projects so that they may continue operating, we have urged the Secretary through appropriations report language to fund them to the greatest extent possible within his discretionary fund.

Mr. COCHRAN. I thank the Senator. I hope that the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee will consider even stronger language in the report of the managers of the conference committee. We have urged the Secretary to consider our request for funding to no avail. I think our language must clearly direct him to fund these 12 school's biomedical science programs at a minimum level of $1 million for the project to be completed.

The support is there, Mr. President. In both the House and the Senate, bipartisan groups have coalesced in support of the biomedical sciences program asking for adequate completion funding. I have worked closely with my colleague from New York, Senator MOYNIHAN, in trying to find a way to achieve closeout funding this fiscal year. Many other of our colleagues have worked on this effort in the past year. I hope that we can again count on the good efforts of Chairman WEICKER to help us convince Secretary Bell to provide these final funds.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I would like to thank Senator WEICKER for permitting me to speak to a matter of some importance. I originally had planned to offer an amendment to the Labor-HHS appropriations bill, specifically earmarking $1 million for the Biomedical Sciences Demonstration Program. This is a program about which I feel very strongly. It identifies minority and disadvantaged high school students who have an affinity for math, science, and the biomedical sciences. They receive intensive counseling in their academic subjects and other assistance. This help has proven critical to ensuring that they complete high school and pursue a higher education. These students often are the first member of their families to go on to college. These are the students about which we talked when we approved the new math-science legislation; the students we talk about when we say that we would like more minority students to go on to medical and dental school and graduate education.

New York University was one of the 12 universities originally selected for this national demonstration program. This program has been highly successful. It is a high priority for New York University and for its president, John Brademas.

Funding for the last year of this demonstration program is essential. These students now are entering college, and we must take every step possible to see that they remain in school and pursue careers in the sciences and health fields.

I have decided not to pursue an amendment to the bill because of the gracious agreement reached between the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. WEICKER, with Senator COCHRAN directing the Secretary of Education to utilize $1 million of his discretionary funds to see the participating universities in the demonstration program through the final year. As the chairman of the subcommittee knows, in two previous appropriations bills, the Appropriations Committees in the House and in the Senate strongly encouraged the Secretary to proceed with the demonstration program; regrettably he did not.

I applaud the support of the subcommittee chairman and Senator COCHRAN for this program, and their willingness to now direct the Secretary to provide us with the critical support needed for the final year of the program.

Mr. President, I have prepared some additional remarks on this worthy program, and have received a fine letter from John Brademas, president of New York University, on this matter. I ask unanimous consent that my remarks and president Brademas' letter be printed in the RECORD.

The information follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN

MR. PRESIDENT: The Biomedical Sciences Program, established as a five-year national demonstration project in 1980, serves talented low-income and minority high school students with interests in mathematics, science, and the biomedical sciences. Administered through 12 colleges and universities at six rural and six urban project sites (New York University, Jackson State University, University of Alabama, Emory University, University of South Carolina, Temple University, Michigan State, University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, University of Northern Iowa, University of New Mexico-Albuquerque, California State University-LA, Pan American University, Texas) the program provides additional instruction, counseling and support services for these students through their first year of college. Participating students have received up to 220 hours a year of after-school instruction throughout their secondary educations.

In 1981, provisions of the Omnibus Education Reconciliation Act of 1981, the Biomedical Sciences Program was placed under Chapter 2 of the education block grant. At that time, however, Congress also provided an additional appropriation for the program of $2,886,000 for one year, FY 1982.

Separate funding for the biomedical sciences demonstration project ended after this appropriation. The colleges and universities involved in the project sought funding from the block grant, but almost all state-level discretionary monies already were committed for administration or funding of state-wide programs. Block grant assistance was not forthcoming.

Recognizing the serious funding problem and the vital importance of the program, Congress included language in two separate laws, the FY 1983 Supplemental Appropriations Bill and the FY 1984 Department of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education and Related Agencies Appropriations Bill, urging the Secretary of Education to use a portion of his Chapter 2 discretionary funds to help finance the fourth year of the demonstration project. I joined 15 members of the Senate and 32 members of the House in writing the Secretary of Education last September, requesting him to fund the program.

In October, the Secretary responded to our request with a letter indicating that despite the urging of Congress, no funds would be made available for the Biomedical Sciences Program.

Under the Continuing Resolution for fiscal year 1984, $28.224 million is available for the Discretionary Fund. At this level, we plan to continue support for many of the projects funded in fiscal year 1983, giving special emphasis to activities that follow-up on the recommendations of the Commission on Excellence. Because the Discretionary Fund is specifically earmarked in bill language and limited by statute to six percent of the funds appropriated for Chapter 2, reprogramming cannot be used to increase funding. Congressional action would be required.

As you know, Biomedical Sciences was one of the programs selected by the Congress to be consolidated into the Chapter 2 State block grant program. More recently, through report language, the Congress has expressed interest in continued funding for Biomedical Sciences projects. However, no additional funds for this purpose have been appropriated, and as indicated above, there are many competing demands for our limited discretionary funds.

I am pleased that the Secretary of Education recognizes the need to implement the many recommendations of the National Commission on Excellence in Education—and I would note that many of that report's most urgent recommendations already are embodied in the operation of the Biomedical Sciences Program. More than 25 years ago, with the launch of the Russian satellite Sputnik, this nation awoke to our critical reliance on science and technological innovation. That reliance, if anything, has increased in the quarter century since; inexplicably, our ability to meet the increased demands has not. The National Commission on Excellence in Education found a steady decline in the science achievement scores of high school students since 1969. Between 1975 and 1980, the numbers of remedial mathematics courses at public four-year colleges increased by 72 percent and now account for fully one-quarter of all college mathematics courses. Clearly, we cannot hope to maintain our technological excellence when a significant portion of our college population—not high school, but college students—cannot solve basic mathematical problems.

The Commission recommended increased training in science and mathematics and increased assistance to disadvantaged and minority students who so often fail to receive proper instruction. This, I would note, is just what the Biomedical Sciences Program supports. The program also anticipated the Commission's proposals for a longer school day and an extended school year, as well as the Commission's recommendations for increased partnership between secondary schools and colleges and universities.

The overall purpose of the program, which is to encourage economically disadvantaged, minority students to study biomedical sciences at the postsecondary level, should be a national priority. Although their numbers have increased some in recent years, students from disadvantaged backgrounds remain underrepresented in the biomedical sciences fields—chemistry, biology, medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, optometry, podiatry, pharmacy and public health. We most assuredly should strengthen and improve our present efforts to expand career opportunities for such students in the scientific and health professions.

As the five-year demonstration project in the biomedical sciences enters its final year, we must find the funds to assess the project. The preliminary evidence is very promising; the pilot projects had a remarkable 79 percent student retention rate over the first three years, far better even than the program's original guidelines. As these students enter the fifth year of the program, funding will be needed to fulfill our commitment to them and allow a study of the project's success. Without such funding, there will be no record and evaluation of the program's outcome. How, then, can we proceed?

If we in Congress are sincere about meeting the challenge set forth by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, there are few better ways to demonstrate this commitment than to fund the completion of the Biomedical Sciences Program. By directing the Secretary of Education to allocate $1 million from his Special Programs and Populations Discretionary Fund for this program, we promote excellence in mathematics and the sciences. Moreover, we ensure the completion of a well-conceived experiment designed to improve the education of talented, disadvantaged students.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY,
OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
New York, NY, September 14, 1984.

Hon. DANIEL PATRICK MOYNIHAN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR PAT: I am writing to express my concern over the future of the Biomedical Sciences Program, once a categorical program of the Department of Education and now part of block grants to the states. Our experience with this program at New York University strongly indicates the merit of universities cooperating with secondary schools to develop the talents of minority and low-income students in science and mathematics.

This project was initiated as a five-year national demonstration program, with awards made to twelve universities, providing intensive support, counseling and instruction on an after-school basis to students from 9th grade through the first year of college. In many of its aspects, the program addressed concerns of the National Commission on Excellence in Education. The design was not simply one of career awareness in biomedical sciences, but offered substantial training in science and mathematics, as well as in English. One reason for the program's success has been the combining of academic learning with demanding practical work experiences in community health agencies, hospitals, and medical research settings. Emphasis on school-to-work transitions seems to heighten motivation and make pertinent the study of mathematics, science, and the development of computer literacy.

The program, nationwide, was implemented in both urban and rural areas, reaching into all corners of the country and drawing upon the talent of a broad cross-section of young Americans. The racial-ethnic composition of the national project was 58 percent Black, 21 percent Hispanic, 14 percent White, 4 percent Asian, and 3 percent native American. Here at New York University, Black and Hispanic students also formed the largest groupings, but first generation and new immigrant Asians comprised a third major category of those we served. Here, as at other institutions, attrition in the program has been far below expectations, averaging only 7.5 percent per year.

The first group of New York University Biomedical Sciences Program students is now entering college. Current indications are that 27 percent entered Ivy League schools; 13 percent went to M.I.T.; 3 percent to other engineering and technical schools; 23 percent City and State Universities; and 15 percent remained at New York University, their "alma mater." Of these students, 47 percent state career objectives in medicine, and 13 percent in other health professions. Moreover, 24 percent who decided against biomedical careers have indicated they will declare college majors in mathematics, engineering, chemistry, and other important areas of national need.

The Biomedical Sciences program has been unable to secure funding through the block grants. I believe that one reason for this difficulty is the problematic nature of being an after-school secondary education level program situated in institutions of post-secondary education. Unlike elementary and secondary schools, universities have negligible representation in local block grant decision making.

A fifth year of funding for this program is, I believe, strongly merited in order to follow through on this effort to serve the needs of some of America's most talented, yet neediest young people.

With warm personal regards.

Sincerely,

JOHN BRADEMAS.

THE SEOG FORMULA—H.R. 6028

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the distinguished manager of the bill, my good friend from Connecticut, yield for a comment regarding the supplemental educational opportunity grant [SEOG] program?

Mr. WEICKER. I would be pleased to yield to my friend from Vermont.

Mr. STAFFORD. I am extremely pleased to note the Appropriations Committee has seen fit to include language on pages 43 and 44 of the bill, which will govern the allocation of SEOG funds to States and institutions. Without such language, for which credit is due particularly to the distinguished chairman of the committee and subcommittee, Senators HATFIELD and WEICKER, and to Senators RUDMAN and SPECTER, there would be massive shifts in SEOG allocations among institutions, shifts which were never intended when the Higher Education Act was reauthorized in 1980. For example, although the committee has rightly seen fit to increase fiscal year 1985 funding for the SEOG program by $25 million above the fiscal year 1984 level, the University of Vermont would lose $263,000, virtually 20 percent of its fiscal year 1984 allocation, were the hold-harmless language not included. Other colleges in my State would be similarly harmed: Norwich University would lose $81,000; Castleton State College would lose $50,000; Champlain College would lose $45,000; St. Michael's College would lose $46,000; and Johnson State College would lose $36,000.

These are funds which institutions use to afford financially needy students the opportunity to attend college. Their loss would severely limit these opportunities. I understand that without the hold-harmless language students in certain institutions in Connecticut would also lose important Federal student aid in the form of SEOG.

Mr. WEICKER. The Senator is correct. A number of institutions in my own State and many other States would stand to lose a significant portion of funds without such language. Our language is in no way an attempt to change the statute. Rather, we seek to minimize the disruption which is certain to occur by allowing the statutory formula to be applied this year. We expect that this matter will be dealt with appropriately when the Higher Education Act is reauthorized next year.

Mr. STAFFORD. I appreciate the interest of the Senator from Connecticut and that of his colleagues on the Appropriations Committee on this matter. Let me say that, when Congress adopted the 1980 Higher Education Amendments, we intended that incremental appropriations above $370 million, which was then the level of SEOG, would be distributed among all institutions, although certain institutions which has participated in the program from its inception would receive a substantially lesser share, and in some cases no share, of any increment. Congress never intended that institutions would be penalized and lose funds, and the language in H.R. 6028 ensures that students attending these institutions will be treated equitably.

When the Education Subcommittee, of which I am chairman, considers the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act early next year, I assure the Senator, who is also a member of that subcommittee, that the restructuring of the SEOG allocation formula will be among our principal priorities. In the meantime, I appreciate the Appropriations Committee's recognition of the need to rectify for fiscal year 1985 the anomaly in the SEOG formula, and I urge my colleagues on the conference committee to strongly advocate the Senator's position on the formula.

Mr. WEICKER. I thank the Senator for his interest, which I share, in the SEOG formula matter, and assure him that I will make every effort to uphold the Senate position in conference with the House.

● Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I am going to vote no on this bill because once again we find ourselves acting in a piecemeal fashion on a spending measure that will increase the Federal deficit without acting to reduce that deficit.

This bill is more than was requested by the House or the administration. Even though the programs are important to me, and I support most, if not all, of its provisions. Doing something about spending is equally important.

I proposed a budget freeze and will offer it again to the Senate for consideration. I will continue to offer it until we face up to the fact that we need to do something to reduce these staggering deficits.

For that reason, this may be the most appropriate place for me to once again make the point that we must freeze spending and come up with a rational plan to reduce the deficit.●

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I am pleased today to support S. 2836, the Department of Labor, Health and Human Services and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill for 1985. I would like to commend my colleagues on the Appropriations Committee for their diligent efforts to secure adequate funding for the wide range of programs designed to improve the health and well-being of all Americans.

In particular, I am pleased to note that S. 2836 includes a significant increase in funds for the National Institutes of Health; collectively, the Institutes will receive $687 million more than last year. In addition, $124 million more is appropriated in the area of health care delivery and assistance, which supports such activities as migrant health programs, black lung clinics and community health centers. S. 2836 also includes $41 million more for nurse practitioners, physician's assistants and health administration programs. Of this amount, $3 million will fund critical projects in high priority underserved areas that will increase health promotion, disease prevention and rural health care services. All of these funds will continue and protect the important Federal investment in research, manpower, and the training of medical professionals. Mr. President, I cannot imagine a better use of tax dollars.

Let us look at the potential benefits to be gained from these national investments. We have all seen, indeed many of us have benefited personally from the Federal research initiatives of the past few decades. To give one example, in the 10 years between 1972 and 1982, life expectancy increased 2.6 years for an average 35-year-old in the United States. This increase from 72.4 years to 75 years in so short a time—an increase largely attributable to our all-out effort to reduce the incidence and death rate from heart disease—is a remarkable achievement.

Surely if we targeted the same investment in research dollars toward the many chronic diseases that affect the elderly, such as Alzheimer's disease we could achieve comparable results. Last year, the Senate Special Committee on Aging held a hearing to review the status of scientific research and medical care for persons afflicted with Alzheimer's. I was surprised to find such a clear example of penny-wise but pound-foolish spending. At that time, we were spending less than one-half of one-tenth of 1 percent of the amount for research on Alzheimer's than we were spending on care for victims of this tragic disease.

To help correct this imbalance, last year I joined several of my colleagues in requesting additional funds for Alzheimer's research. As a result, the National Institutes of Health received a total of $31.5 million for research in Alzheimer's disease, including 3.5 million to establish up to five regional research centers.

Earlier this year, I learned that the National Institute of Aging had received 22 applications for Alzheimer's disease research centers but would be able to grant only four awards by the end of the 1984 fiscal year. Consequently, I wrote a letter to Senator WEICKER, the chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services and Education, to urge an additional $5 million allocation for five more Alzheimer's research centers. I am pleased that the committee responded favorably to this request by adopting an amendment offered by Senator HATFIELD to appropriate additional funds for the new centers.

With passage of this appropriation bill, total Federal expenditures for Alzheimer's research will increase significantly from $37 million in fiscal year 1984 to $56.5 million in 1985. The scientific community has begun to uncover promising leads in connection with Alzheimer's disease. By appropriating adequate resources for this and other chronic diseases, we may soon learn to prevent, cure, or treat these devastating diseases that affect the elderly.

But the vast knowledge we gain from research will not be of much use if we do not put it into practice. I am speaking of adequate training and manpower. Mr. President, today our health professionals are simply not adequately trained to meet the health care needs of the elderly population.

A few staggering facts will illustrate what I believe to be the inadequacy of geriatric medical training. First, we have 127 medical schools in this country, but only 15 of these schools require their students to take courses in geriatric care. Second, these 127 schools are affiliated with 417 teaching hospitals, but only six are affiliated with teaching nursing homes. Third, in 1981, for every one pediatrician there were 1,400 children. By contrast, for every one geriatrician, there were over 37,000 older people. Fourth, in a 1981 survey of physicians, fewer than 700 out of 480,000 physicians claimed to have any expertise in geriatric medicine.

All these figures add up to one untenable conclusion: Physicians and other health professionals are simply ill-prepared to provide the kind of specialized care that the graying America does and will need. For example, in a recent survey conducted in my home State of Pennsylvania, it was found that three out of five physicians knew very little about the specific effects of prescription drugs on their elderly patients. Tragically, we know that the lack of geriatric training can lead to drug misuse, misdiagnosis, and even death.

Mr. President, the problems that we experience today in caring for older Americans will reach crisis proportions with the unprecedented growth of the elderly population. By 1990, the population aged 65 and over will be 25-percent greater than it was in 1980. This group will grow yet another 10 percent by the turn of the century. If we are unable to meet the elderly's health needs today, as I believe to be the case, surely the situation will be much worse in 10 to 15 years.

Earlier this year, we received additional evidence concerning this problem when the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services issued its report on Education and Training in Geriatrics and Gerontology. This report confirms that there is an enormous shortage of health personnel who are trained in geriatrics and gerontology to meet the needs of a burgeoning elderly population.

Firmly believing that we cannot afford to wait any longer to set forth an agenda to ensure quality health care for all older Americans, last week I introduced S. 3009, the Geriatric Manpower Act of 1984. The purpose of this bill is to improve substantially Federal support for geriatric training and education programs. To achieve this end, the legislation authorizes a nearly threefold increase in funds over a 5-year period to get this major Federal initiative underway. These supplemental moneys will increase funding for existing programs within the Administration on Aging, the National Institute on Aging, the National Institute of Mental Health and the Health Resources and Services Administration. I urge my colleagues to join me in support of S. 3009.

The Labor-HHS appropriations bill represents a significant and bold step in the right direction and I commend my distinguished colleagues on the Appropriations Committee. I particularly applaud the work of Senator WEICKER and Senator HATFIELD for their tireless efforts on behalf of the millions of senior citizens who depend on this bill. From this point, however, we must look to the future. It is my hope that we can continue to work together and agree on a far-reaching plan that will benefit present and future generations of Americans.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, the appropriations bill before us today represents programs of compassion, programs to overcome many of the social, economic, physical, and educational barriers to independence and full functioning in our society. They represent our hope for conquering disease, for employability, for self-reliance for those with physical or mental handicaps, for aging with dignity.

Perhaps no one feels more deeply than Chairman HATFIELD that spending in these areas is necessary and highly cost effective as we endeavor to create a better, healthier existence for the present and future generations.

There is no doubt that the fiscal year 1985 Labor-HHS-Education and related agencies bill would not reflect the increased levels we have been able to achieve were it not for the consistent and active support of our distinguished chairman, Senator HATFIELD.

The fact that we are able to include sufficient increases in education and health programs is largely due to his early leadership both on the Senate budget resolution, which excepted from a discretionary spending freeze education and health programs, and in our committee's deliberations.

I am particularly proud of my association with a chairman who knows full well that true national security is meaningless without a healthier, educated and self-sufficient citizenry.

Mr. President, I think the greatest tribute I can give Senator HATFIELD right now is when we get to a lot of firing phases just to keep quiet and get final passage of a bill. That is the greatest compliment one can give to someone of the stature of Senator HATFIELD, his compassion and abilities.

Mr. President, I want to pay the highest compliment to my distinguished ranking minority Member, Senator PROXMIRE. This bill has been the product of 26 days of public hearings with testimony from literally hundreds of witnesses. Nearly every day, Senator PROXMIRE sat with me laboring diligently, lending his insight and expertise. This legislation would not have been possible without his cooperation and support. Indeed, it has been my privilege to serve with the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. President, I am ready for final passage.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on passage of the bill before the Senate at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further amendments?

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum called be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I have no further amendments on this side. I am advised there are no other amendments on the other side. I think we are prepared to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further amendments to be proposed? If not, the question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill, as amended, pass?

The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Kansas [Mr. DOLE], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. EAST], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HUMPHREY], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY], and the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WALLOP] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Illinois [Mr. PERCY] would vote "yea."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. LONG], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SARBANES] are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. PELL] would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DANFORTH). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 71, nays 20—as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 251 Leg.]

So the bill (H.R. 6028), as amended, was passed.

Mr. WEICKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. PROXMIRE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WEICKER. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair be authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Chair appointed Mr. WEICKER, Mr. HATFIELD, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. RUDMAN, Mr. SPECTER, Mr. MCCLURE, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. STENNIS, Mr. PROXMIRE, Mr. BYRD, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. EAGLETON, Mr. CHILES, Mr. BURDICK, and Mr. INOUYE conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I congratulate the distinguished managers of this bill. It is one of the regular appropriations bills and was handled in good order and to a successful conclusion, and I am pleased that we have reached this result.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I also want to commend the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, HHS, Education, and Related Agencies, Mr. WEICKER, and the ranking minority member, Mr. PROXMIRE, for their diligence, fairness, and very effective management of the bill. In previous years, there have been serious difficulties in getting this bill through the Senate, and I applaud them for their success this year.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it had been the hope of the leadership on this side that we could now go to the Interior appropriations bill. It is now 6:20 p.m., and it does not appear possible to clear that bill to be taken up tonight. It will be the intention of the leadership to take up that bill the first thing in the morning.

I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period for the transaction of routine morning business until 6:30 p.m., in which Senators may speak for not more than 2 minutes each, except the two leaders, against whom no time limitations shall apply.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRODUCT LIABILITY LEGISLATION

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I wish to address a few words to the majority leader. I understand that he has indicated that he wants the Senate to consider S. 44, the product liability bill. I rise to inform the majority leader [Mr. BAKER], along with all my colleagues, that it will take a substantial amount of the Senate's time to consider that particular measure. It is controversial in many ways, and I know that a number of Senators will have much to say on both sides of the controversies, and will have corrections and countercorrections to propose.

I shall offer a very lengthy and complex substitute amendment whch incorporates the law of California as a replacement for the Commerce Committee's language, which would, in turn, supplant the common law of each of the 50 States.

The amendment will be difficult for Senators to study because to do so will first require a thorough knowledge of California's common law on intricate points of evidence, proximate cause, legal cause, and various instructions to the jury. But, aided by ample memorandums prepared by astute California practitioners, I shall be able to educate my colleagues thoroughly in these arcane points of California's common law, including its case-by-case development, so that, in the event my amendment should be adopted by the Senate and become the law of the land, every Senator will be able to explain to the State bar association, the State judges, and the State legislature the new Federal law which would replace their own State's common law and statutes on product liability.

I trust the able majority leader, who is a skilled member of the bar, will appreciate the signal service I hope to be able to perform for the benefit of our colleagues.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I come from a part of the country that is sometimes accused of having an accented manner or method of speech, although I do not think so. For instance, I told President Carter at one time that of all the Presidents I had served in my time as Senator, he had no accent that I could tell.

But maybe coming from an area of the country where we do have an accent some people claim to need to interpret, maybe I should admit right here on the floor of the Senate that I am an expert at interpreting California language and dialect. For those who do not know what Senator CRANSTON said, I believe he said he is going to filibuster that bill to death. If I understood him correctly, I accept his admonition and understand his point of view.

I shall consult and commune and confer with those who are greatly interested in that matter, but I must say that I announced today to our caucus and indicated to the minority leader before the caucus began on both sides of the aisle that it was the intention of the leadership on this side of the aisle to try to get to the product liability bill next week.

I shall take account of the admonitions offered by the Senator from California. I am sure he will gird his loins and prepare for battle at the time that that occurs. I shall watch with great interest.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased the leader from Tennessee can understand the Senator from California and his language.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator from California for his excellent statement.
